Jury determines whether participation voluntary. — When a witness testifies that the witness was forced to accompany the defendants out of fear of one or both of the defendant's, it is for the jury to determine whether the witness is an accomplice. Milton v. State, 248 Ga. 192, 282 S.E.2d 90 (1981); Jones v. State, 268 Ga. 12, 483 S.E.2d 871 (1997).

Instruction to jury on status as accomplice is expression of opinion of guilt. — To be accomplices of each other, both the defendant and the state's witness must have been involved in the criminal enterprise. One cannot be the "accomplice" of an innocent man. It therefore constitutes an expression of opinion by the court as to the guilt of the accused to instruct the jury that a witness who testified as to the defendant's guilt and admitted the witness's participation in the crime would be an accomplice of the accused. Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981).

Instruction on slight evidence. — Judge should not charge the jury as matter of law that slight evidence is sufficient to corroborate the testimony of an accomplice; but as a matter of fact slight evidence is sufficient, if it is satisfactory to the minds of the jury. Smith v. State, 189 Ga. 169, 5 S.E.2d 762 (1939).

Trial court's pattern charge that "slight evidence" connecting the defendant to the crime may have been sufficient to support the testimony of an accomplice stated the law accurately. Richardson v. State, 277 Ga. App. 429, 626 S.E.2d 518 (2006).

Sufficiency of corroboration of accomplice's testimony is a question for the jury. Powers v. State, 44 Ga. 209 (1871); Ransone v. Christian, 56 Ga. 351 (1876); Bell v. State, 73 Ga. 572 (1884); Evans v. State, 78 Ga. 351 (1886); Sikes v. State, 105 Ga. 592, 31 S.E. 567 (1898); Parham v. State, 3 Ga. App. 468, 60 S.E. 123 (1908); Gilbert v. State, 27 Ga. App. 604, 109 S.E. 697 (1921); Sheppard v. State, 44 Ga. App. 481, 162 S.E. 413 (1931);

Hargett v. State, 55 Ga. App. 192, 189 S.E. 675 (1937); Garner v. State, 72 Ga. App. 819, 35 S.E.2d 317 (1945); Waldrop v. State, 221 Ga. 319, 144 S.E.2d 372 (1965); Sutton v. State, 223 Ga. 313, 154 S.E.2d 578 (1967); Lindsey v. State, 227 Ga. 48, 178 S.E.2d 848 (1970); Pitts v. State, 128 Ga. App. 434, 197 S.E.2d 495 (1973); Smith v. State, 236 Ga. 12, 222 S.E.2d 308, cert. denied, 428 U.S. 910, 96 S. Ct. 3224, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1219 (1976); Birt v. State, 236 Ga. 815, 225 S.E.2d 248, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1029, 97 S. Ct. 654, 50 L. Ed. 2d 632 (1976); Jones v. State, 139 Ga. App. 643, 229 S.E.2d 121 (1976); Green v. State, 139 Ga. App. 652, 229 S.E.2d 129 (1976); Davis v. State, 154 Ga. App. 803, 269 S.E.2d 874 (1980); Smith v. State, 154 Ga. App. 741, 270 S.E.2d 5 (1980); Cody v. State, 195 Ga. App. 318, 393 S.E.2d 692 (1990).

Jury must infer guilt. — Sufficiency of circumstances proved to corroborate the accomplice is entirely a matter for the jury, provided the circumstances proved, independently of the testimony of the accomplice, lead to the inference that the defendant is guilty, and in some way connect the defendant with the guilty act. Potts v. State, 86 Ga. App. 779, 72 S.E.2d 553 (1952); Mears v. State, 98 Ga. App. 576, 106 S.E.2d 854 (1958).

Slight evidence to support jury's determination. — Extent of corroboration is a question to be determined by the jury; it may be strong, or it may be slight, but in each case it must be of such character as to satisfy the minds of the jury as to the connection of the accused with the criminal enterprise. Sheppard v. State, 44 Ga. App. 481, 162 S.E. 413 (1931); Walker v. State, 57 Ga. App. 868, 197 S.E. 67 (1938); Smith v. State, 189 Ga. 169, 5 S.E.2d 762 (1939); Newman v. State, 63 Ga. App. 417, 11 S.E.2d 248 (1940); Mitchell v. State, 202 Ga. 247, 42 S.E.2d 767 (1947); Blakely v. State, 78 Ga. App. 282, 50 S.E.2d 762 (1948); Croker v. State, 101 Ga. App. 742, 115 S.E.2d 413 (1960); Park v. State, 224 Ga. 467, 162 S.E.2d 359, cert. denied, 393 U.S. 980, 89 S. Ct. 449, 21 L. Ed. 2d 441 (1968); Quaid v. State, 132 Ga. App. 478, 208 S.E.2d 336 (1974); Townsend v. State, 141 Ga. App. 743, 234 S.E.2d 368 (1977); Smith v. State, 238 Ga. 640, 235 S.E.2d 17 (1977); Alderman v. State, 241 Ga. 496, 246 S.E.2d 642, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1978);

Haynes v. State, 149 Ga. App. 179, 253 S.E.2d 851 (1979); Butler v. State, 150 Ga. App. 751, 258 S.E.2d 691 (1979); Williams v. State, 153 Ga. App. 421, 265 S.E.2d 341 (1980); Cole v. State, 156 Ga. App. 288, 274 S.E.2d 685 (1980); Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 418, 314 S.E.2d 210 (1984).

Jury to decide sufficiency of corroborating evidence. — Sufficiency of corroborating evidence is peculiarly a matter for the jury to determine. If the verdict is founded on slight evidence of corroboration connecting a defendant with the crime, the verdict is legally sufficient. Bradford v. State, 262 Ga. 512, 421 S.E.2d 523 (1992); Klinect v. State, 269 Ga. 570, 501 S.E.2d 810 (1998); Pinkins v. State, 243 Ga. App. 737, 534 S.E.2d 192 (2000).

Failure to charge statute. — When a person accused of perjury is on trial, the judge should instruct the jury that, before the jury would be authorized to convict the accused, the charge must be established by the testimony of two witnesses or by one witness and corroborating circumstances. However, the failure so to charge could not be harmful to the cause of the defendant, since the defendant introduced no evidence, and two or more witnesses for the plaintiff testified positively to each of the material allegations in the indictment. Oxford v. State, 40 Ga. App. 511, 150 S.E. 466 (1929).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

RES IPSA LOQUITUR

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Presumption that allows, but does not require, the trier of fact to infer the elemental fact from proof by the prosecutor of the basic one and that places no burden of any kind on the defendant is not inherently unconstitutional, but is to be tested by a "rational connection" test asking if the ultimate fact to be presumed is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact. Whisenhunt v. State, 152 Ga. App. 829, 264 S.E.2d 271 (1979), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 886, 101 S. Ct. 241, 66 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1980).

Admissibility. — When facts are such that the jury may or may not make an inference pertinent to the issue, the facts are such that the jury ought to be permitted to hear the facts. Brand v. State, 154 Ga. App. 781, 270 S.E.2d 206 (1980).

When facts are such that the jury, if permitted to hear the facts, may or may not make an inference pertinent to the issue, according to the view which the jury may take of the facts, in connection with the other facts in evidence, the facts are such that the jury ought to be permitted to hear those facts. Johnson v. State, 148 Ga. App. 702, 252 S.E.2d 205 (1979).

Inference of guilt. — When there is some evidence from which the guilt of one accused of a crime can be legitimately inferred, it is entirely within the province of the jury to draw that inference. Johnson v. State, 148 Ga. App. 702, 252 S.E.2d 205 (1979).

Effect of positive and uncontradicted evidence. — Finding of fact which may be inferred but is not demanded by circumstantial evidence has no probative value against positive and uncontradicted evidence that no such fact exists. Backus v. Ray Jones, Inc., 150 Ga. App. 753, 258 S.E.2d 693 (1979).

Directed verdict properly denied. — In a medical malpractice action, the issue of reliance by a patient on a hospital to provide needed services and personnel was subject to proof by circumstantial evidence; thus, denial of a directed verdict in favor of the hospital was not error. Doctors Hosp. v. Bonner, 195 Ga. App. 152, 392 S.E.2d 897 (1990).

Flight is always a circumstance which may be shown and which the jury is authorized to take into account in determining guilt or innocence of an accused. Johnson v. State, 148 Ga. App. 702, 252 S.E.2d 205 (1979).

Jury was authorized to believe that defendant's attempts to flee when confronted by firefighters constituted circumstantial evidence of guilt. Williams v. State, 273 Ga. App. 213, 614 S.E.2d 834 (2005).

Evidence of a refusal to submit to a blood-alcohol test is circumstantial evidence.

— There was ample evidence to support the defendant's DUI conviction, after the arresting officer testified that the officer smelled alcohol as the officer approached the defendant's van, that the defendant's eyes were red, glassy, and "hazed over," that the defendant's speech was slower than normal, and that the defendant performed poorly on sobriety field tests, and the defendant's failure to submit to breath tests was circumstantial evidence of defendant's intoxication. Lucas v. State, 234 Ga. App. 534, 507 S.E.2d 253 (1998).

Doctrine of presumption of continuity. — Whether the doctrine of presumption of continuity — a state of things once existing is presumed to continue until a change occurs — holds true in a particular case is a question for jury determination. Mattison v. Travelers Indem. Co., 157 Ga. App. 372, 277 S.E.2d 746 (1981).

Permissive inference almost identical to presumption of fact. — No reversible error occurred when a trial court charged the jury in language of permissive inference rather than presumption of fact. A thin line exists at best between a permissible inference of fact and a rebuttable presumption of fact. Pouncey v. Adams, 206 Ga. App. 126, 424 S.E.2d 376 (1992).

Summary judgment determines only whether material fact exists. — On summary judgment, a trial court determines only whether a material issue of fact exists, and such determination does not include "the discovery of the truth of such fact" or permit frustration of a plaintiff's constitutional right to a trial by jury "by inferring with the existence of other facts" from predicate evidence. Bruno's Food Stores, Inc. v. Taylor, 228 Ga. App. 439, 491 S.E.2d 881 (1997).

Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is embraced in this statute and the doctrine's application authorized by statute. Macon Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Chancey, 216 Ga. 61, 114 S.E.2d 517 (1960); Hospital Auth. v. Eason, 222 Ga. 536, 150 S.E.2d 812 (1966) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-9).

Elements of doctrine. — In a tort action for personal injuries, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur applies when the following elements are present: (1) the injury must be of a kind which ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence; (2) the injury must be caused by an agency or instrumentality within the exclusive control of the defendant; (3) the injury must not have been due to any voluntary action or contribution on the part of the plaintiff; and (4) the injury must have occurred absent an intervening cause which could have produced the injury. Kicklighter v. Nails by Jannee, Inc., 616 F.2d 734 (5th Cir. 1980).

Application of doctrine. — When an event is unusual and extraordinary in nature, and there is nothing to indicate an external cause, but the peculiar character of the accident is sufficient within itself to indicate that the event must have been brought about by negligence on the part of someone, and when the most reasonable and probable inference which can be rationally drawn from the happening of such an event is that it would not and could not have taken place, had not the person charged with furnishing or maintaining the instrumentality causing the accident been guilty of the particular acts or omissions set forth by the plaintiff as constituting the actual cause, then the jury is authorized to apply the rule of evidence known as the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur in determining whether or not the accident must have been thus occasioned. Chenall v. Palmer Brick Co., 117 Ga. 106, 43 S.E. 443 (1903); Sinkovitz v. Peters Land Co., 5 Ga. App. 788, 64 S.E. 93 (1909); Bonita Theatre v. Bridges, 31 Ga. App. 798, 122 S.E. 255 (1924); Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Shipp, 41 Ga. App. 705, 154 S.E. 385 (1930); Macon Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Crane, 55 Ga. App. 573, 190 S.E. 879 (1937); Macon Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Chancey, 216 Ga. 61, 114 S.E.2d 517 (1960); Hall v. Chastain, 246 Ga. 782, 273 S.E.2d 12 (1980).

Trial court committed reversible error, entitling the plaintiffs in a personal injury suit to a new trial after a verdict in favor of the defense was returned, by refusing to charge the jury on the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur; here, the plaintiffs established the three elements necessary for the doctrine to apply, namely: that a 15-ton machine rolling off a trailer without explanation and crushing a car was an extraordinary event; that the defendant driver admitted that trailers do not ordinarily roll over and that the defendant driver was in exclusive control of the truck and trailer; and that the defendant driver testified twice that the plaintiffs did nothing to cause the accident. Doyle v. RST Constr. Specialty, Inc., 286 Ga. App. 53, 648 S.E.2d 664 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 860 (Ga. 2007).

Doctrine applied with caution. — Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, when applicable, should be applied with caution, and should be drawn by the jury only in extreme cases. Sinkovitz v. Peters Land Co., 5 Ga. App. 788, 64 S.E. 93 (1909); Miller v. Gerber Prods. Co., 207 Ga. 385, 62 S.E.2d 174 (1950).

Rule of evidence. — Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is simply a rule of circumstantial evidence which permits an inference to be drawn from proved facts. Cochrell v. Langley Mfg. Co., 5 Ga. App. 317, 63 S.E. 244 (1908); Armour & Co. v. Gulley, 61 Ga. App. 414, 6 S.E.2d 165 (1939); White v. Executive Comm. of Baptist Convention, 65 Ga. App. 840, 16 S.E.2d 605 (1941); Clayton Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Coleman, 68 Ga. App. 302, 22 S.E.2d 768 (1942); Dalton Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Watkins, 70 Ga. App. 790, 29 S.E.2d 281 (1944); Miller v. Gerber Prods. Co., 207 Ga. 385, 62 S.E.2d 174 (1950).

Presumption of negligence not raised. — Application of the rule of res ipsa loquitur does not raise a presumption of negligence, unless it is to the extent of getting a case to a jury only, but authorizes a jury in the jury's discretion to infer negligence. Wimpy v. Rogers, 58 Ga. App. 67, 197 S.E. 656 (1938).

Mere inference. — Res ipsa loquitur creates a mere inference of fact and not a presumption of truth. DeVane v. Smith, 154 Ga. App. 442, 268 S.E.2d 711 (1980).

Inference is slight. — Maxim res ipsa loquitur is applied with caution in every case and when applied, the inference is only prima facie, is generally slight, and is easily overcome. White v. Executive Comm. of Baptist Convention, 65 Ga. App. 840, 16 S.E.2d 605 (1941).

Exclusion of other hypotheses. — In the application of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine, if in the opinion of the jury the most reasonable and most probable inference which can be drawn from the nature and character of an extraordinary event is that it would not and could not have happened had not the defendant been guilty of the particular conduct charged, then there has been an exclusion in their minds of every other reasonable hypothesis, not by evidence, but by virtue of the peculiar nature and character of the event speaking for itself. Macon Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Chancey, 216 Ga. 561, 114 S.E.2d 517 (1960).

Negligence of defendant. — Before the doctrine can be applied, the act must speak not only of negligence but of negligence on the part of the defendant. Payne v. Rome Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 10 Ga. App. 762, 73 S.E. 1087 (1912).

Probability of defendant's negligence. — In order to invoke a theory of res ipsa loquitur, the plaintiff must prove "control" by evidence sufficient to permit a finding that there is a greater probability that the injury was the result of defendant's negligence than some other cause. Fender v. Colonial Stores, Inc., 138 Ga. App. 31, 225 S.E.2d 691 (1976).

No evidence of external cause. — Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is applicable only in the absence of evidence as to an external cause of injury. Stanfield v. Gardner, 56 Ga. App. 634, 193 S.E. 375 (1937); Floyd v. Swift & Co., 59 Ga. App. 154, 200 S.E. 531 (1938).

Conclusions must be clear. — When "the thing itself speaks" or "the obvious is self-evident," the obvious must be clearly seen, and what is spoken must be plain. If two images appear, or the statement spoken is ambiguous, before a legal verdict can be predicated thereon, the conclusions claimed must more clearly appear or be understood than any other or inconsistent theory. Armour & Co. v. Gulley, 61 Ga. App. 414, 6 S.E.2d 165 (1939); White v. Executive Comm. of Baptist Convention, 65 Ga. App. 840, 16 S.E.2d 605 (1941); Miller v. Gerber Prods. Co., 207 Ga. 385, 62 S.E.2d 174 (1950).

Inference of fact. — When something unusual happens with respect to a defendant's property, over which defendant has control, and by such extraordinary occurrence a plaintiff is injured, an inference may in some case arise from an unexplained occurrence which has worked an injury to another that the defendant who had in charge the instrumentality which was the direct cause of the injury was guilty of negligence, which inference of negligence may or may not be drawn by the jury but, like the facts of negligence or no negligence, the inference which the jury may be authorized to draw is peculiarly an inference of fact, and it is not an inference of law. And, if from the facts an inference of negligence arises, it may be rebutted by the defendant, like any other inference arising from the proof submitted. Georgia Power Co. v. Stonecypher, 47 Ga. App. 386, 170 S.E. 530 (1933).

Inference authorized but not required. — While negligence is never presumed from the mere fact of injury, the manner of the occurrence of the injury complained of, or the attendant circumstances, may sometimes well warrant an inference of negligence, such inference being one which the jury is authorized to draw, and not an inference which the jury is compelled to draw. Gainesville Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Stewart, 51 Ga. App. 102, 179 S.E. 734 (1935); Macon Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Chancey, 216 Ga. 61, 114 S.E.2d 517 (1960).

Inference based on proven facts. — Before the jury could arrive at the ultimate fact by inference of the existence of other facts, the facts inferred must be reasonably and logically consequent upon proven facts; the jury cannot assume the ultimate fact merely from other facts which are based upon an inference rather than upon proof. Miller v. Gerber Prods. Co., 207 Ga. 385, 62 S.E.2d 174 (1950); Hospital Auth. v. Eason, 222 Ga. 536, 150 S.E.2d 812 (1966).

Inference based on circumstantial evidence. — When the inference of negligence is dependent upon circumstantial evidence, and direct unambiguous testimony shows that the defendant was without negligence, a verdict for the plaintiff is unauthorized. Miller v. Gerber Prods. Co., 207 Ga. 385, 62 S.E.2d 174 (1950).

Inference based on inference. — Proof of plaintiff's case resting upon inferences made from inferences is insufficient when the inference is too remote. Spruell v. Georgia Automatic Gas Appliance Co., 84 Ga. App. 657, 67 S.E.2d 178 (1951).

Intervening cause. — When there is some intervention or intermediary cause which produces or could produce the injury complained of, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is not applicable. Floyd v. Swift & Co., 59 Ga. App. 154, 200 S.E. 531 (1938); Miller v. Gerber Prods. Co., 207 Ga. 385, 62 S.E.2d 174 (1950); Rupek v. Pig'n Whistle, Inc., 94 Ga. App. 404, 94 S.E.2d 747 (1956).

Fact of injury. — Mere fact of injury does not call for the application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur. Stansfield v. Gardner, 56 Ga. App. 634, 193 S.E. 375 (1937).

Question for jury. — Maxim res ipsa loquitur is of limited application, and the process by which it is to be determined whether the physical facts and circumstances accompanying an injury are such that the act may be said itself to speak the negligence of the defendant is to be worked out by the jury, and not by the court. Chenall v. Palmer Brick Co., 117 Ga. 106, 43 S.E. 443 (1903); Sinkovitz v. Peters Land Co., 5 Ga. App. 788, 64 S.E. 93 (1909); Bonita Theatre v. Bridges, 31 Ga. App. 798, 122 S.E. 255 (1924); Dawson v. American Heritage Life Ins. Co., 121 Ga. App. 266, 173 S.E.2d 424 (1970).

Conclusions beyond evidence. — In construing and applying testimony, reasonable inferences and deductions may be made, and conclusions may be reached that lie quite beyond the mere letter of the evidence. Armour & Co. v. Guley, 61 Ga. App. 414, 6 S.E.2d 165 (1939).

Shifting of burden. — If the extraordinary character of the occurrence is sufficient to raise an inference of the negligence alleged, a prima facie case is established, and the burden of disproving negligence is cast upon the defendant, to disprove negligence upon the defendant's part. Sinkovitz v. Peters Land Co., 5 Ga. App. 788, 64 S.E. 93 (1909); Macon Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Crane, 55 Ga. App. 573, 190 S.E. 879 (1937).

Burden of proof not shifted. — Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is merely a rule of evidence permitting the jury to draw the inference of negligence and does not have the effect of shifting the burden of proof. DeVane v. Smith, 154 Ga. App. 442, 268 S.E.2d 711 (1980).

Rebuttal by defendant. — An inference of negligence may be rebutted by the defendant like any other presumption arising from proofs submitted. Chenall v. Palmer Brick Co., 117 Ga. 106, 43 S.E. 443 (1903).

Motion for nonsuit should not be granted when there is any evidence tending to sustain the plaintiff's action, or when the jury can fairly infer from the evidence a state of facts favorable to the plaintiff. Mason v. Hall, 72 Ga. App. 867, 35 S.E.2d 478 (1945).

Specific applications. — Doctrine of res ipsa loquitur has been applied in the following cases: Chenall v. Palmer Brick Co., 117 Ga. 106, 43 S.E. 443 (1903) (unexplained falling of brick arch); Rivers v. State, 118 Ga. 42, 44 S.E. 859 (1903) (purpose for leasing house); McDonnell v. Central of Ga. Ry., 118 Ga. 86, 44 S.E. 840 (1903) (explosion of boilers); Seaboard Air-Line Ry. v. Bishop, 132 Ga. 71, 63 S.E. 1103 (1909) (projecting nail); Payne v. Rome Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 10 Ga. App. 762, 73 S.E. 1087 (1912) (explosion of bottle); McPherson v. Capuano & Co., 31 Ga. App. 82, 121 S.E. 580 (1923) (illness following eating in restaurant); Eckerd-Walton, Inc. v. Adams, 126 Ga. App. 210, 190 S.E.2d 490 (1972) (driving car through wall of building); Parrish v. State, 182 Ga. App. 247, 355 S.E.2d 682 (1987) (destruction of marijuana plants).

Proof insufficient. — Mere proof that a hospital bed was on fire, from undetermined origin, was not sufficient to invoke res ipsa loquitur. Hospital Auth. v. Eason, 222 Ga. 536, 150 S.E.2d 812 (1966).

Presumptions are either of law or of fact. Presumptions of law are conclusions and inferences which the law draws from given facts. Presumptions of fact are exclusively questions for the jury, to be decided by the ordinary test of human experience. (Orig. General Consideration

Constitutionality. — Presumption that allows, but does not require, the trier of fact to infer the elemental fact from proof by the prosecutor of the basic one and that places no burden of any kind on the defendant is not inherently unconstitutional, but is to be tested by a "rational connection" test asking if the ultimate fact to be presumed is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact. Whisenhunt v. State, 152 Ga. App. 829, 264 S.E.2d 271 (1979), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 886, 101 S. Ct. 241, 66 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1980).

For a statutory presumption to pass constitutional muster, it must be shown with “substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend.” Benham v. Edwards, 501 F. Supp. 1050 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff’d in part and vacated in part on other grounds, 678 F.2d 511 (5th Cir. 1982), vacated, 463 U.S. 1222, 103 S. Ct. 3565, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1406 (1983) (remanded for further consideration in light of Jones v. United States, 463 U.S. 354, 103 S. Ct. 3043, 77 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1983)).

Discussion of relationship of presumptions to due process. — See Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

Presumption is an inference as to the existence of a fact not actually known arising from its necessary or usual connection with others which are known. Ivey v. State, 23 Ga. 576 (1857).

Presumptions of fact are different from presumptions of law. Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff’d in part and rev’d in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971).

Presumptions of law and fact distinguished. — Presumptions of fact are founded on actual probability, but it is impossible to sustain the doctrine of presumptions of law on the theory that they rest on a probability of fact. Morris v. State, 47 Ga. App. 792, 171 S.E. 555 (1933).

Presumption of fact is same as inference. Carpenter v. State, 140 Ga. App. 368, 231 S.E.2d 97 (1976).

Permissive inference almost identical to presumption of fact. — No reversible error occurred when a trial court charged the jury in language of permissive inference rather than presumption of fact. A thin line exists at best between a permissible inference of fact and a rebuttable presumption of fact. Pouncey v. Adams, 206 Ga. App. 126, 424 S.E.2d 376 (1992).

Inference drawn by common sense. — Presumptions of fact are inferences as to the existence of some fact drawn from the existence of some other fact, inferences which common sense draws from circumstances usually occurring in such cases. Morris v. State, 47 Ga. App. 792, 171 S.E. 555 (1933).

Derivation of presumptions of law. — Presumptions of law are inferences or positions established for the most part, by the common law, but occasionally by statute, which are obligatory alike on judges and juries. Morris v. State, 47 Ga. App. 792, 171 S.E. 555 (1933).

Function of presumption of law. — Presumptions of law are rules which, in certain cases, either forbid or dispense with any further inquiry. Morris v. State, 47 Ga. App. 792, 171 S.E. 555 (1933).

If presumption is mandatory, it is irrelevant whether other evidence is in the record in addition to basic facts from which presumption is drawn. Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

When ultimate fact is element of crime charged, it may not rest on mandatory presumption. This is true in a case where presumption is the only proof of ultimate fact, and it is true in a case where there is additional proof of ultimate fact apart from presumption. Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

Reliance on permissive presumption in criminal case. — If the prosecution relies on permissive presumption as evidence of defendant’s guilt, but offers other evidence of defendant’s guilt, it may rely on all of evidence in the record to meet the standard of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. There need be only substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend. Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

When permissive presumption is sole and sufficient basis for finding of guilt, it is not enough that presumption meets “more-likely-than-not” test. The presumed fact must follow from proved fact beyond a reasonable doubt in such cases. Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

Court or jury drawing inference. — When there is a legal presumption, the law does the reasoning, and draws the inference; when presumptions of fact are involved, the jury is left to do the reasoning, and to make an inference or not as the jury believe the premises warrant. Mitchell v. Mayor of Rome, 49 Ga. 19, 15 Am. R. 669 (1873); Jenkins v. Jenkins, 83 Ga. 283, 9 S.E. 541, 20 Am. St. R. 316 (1889).

Unrebutted presumption prevails. — While a legal presumption is only prima facie true and may be rebutted, if it is not rebutted the law draws the conclusion. Good

v. Tuggle, 52 Ga. App. 510, 183 S.E. 850 (1936); Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971); Strother Ford, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank, 132 Ga. App. 268, 208 S.E.2d 25 (1974).

Testimony outweighs presumption. — Bare presumptions of law give way to testimony, which may shift the burden of proof or of proceeding to the opposite party, who is not then entitled to prevail upon the presumption alone. Jarvis v. State, 71 Ga. App. 617, 31 S.E.2d 673 (1944).

Presumption yields to direct evidence. — Prima facie presumption that negotiable paper is issued for a valuable consideration yields to direct, uncontradicted, and unimpeached evidence that there was in fact no consideration. Goldstein v. Drexler, 102 Ga. App. 90, 115 S.E.2d 744 (1960).

Presumption of fact for jury. — Presumptions of fact are exclusively questions for the jury. Kinnebrew v. State, 80 Ga. 232, 5 S.E. 56 (1887); Templeton v. Kennesaw Life & Accident Ins. Co., 216 Ga. 770, 119 S.E.2d 549 (1961); Belch v. Gulf Life Ins. Co., 219 Ga. 823, 136 S.E.2d 351 (1964).

Choice among inferences. — When a given state of facts bears several different interpretations, it is the function of the jury to say which one of the facts should be adopted, but when only one reasonable inference can be drawn therefrom, the question resolves itself into one of law, and may be determined by the court. Callaway v. Barmore, 32 Ga. App. 665, 124 S.E. 382 (1924).

Rebuttal for jury. — Whether a presumption has been successfully rebutted with testimony is ordinarily a question for the jury. Jarvis v. State, 71 Ga. App. 617, 31 S.E.2d 673 (1944).

Jury determination of rebutted presumption. — Pest Masters, Inc. v. Callaway, 133 Ga. App. 123, 210 S.E.2d 243 (1974) is overruled to the extent it holds that "the facts arising from presumption, although rebutted by uncontradicted evidence, must be determined by a jury." Allen Kane's Major Dodge, Inc. v. Barnes, 243 Ga. 776, 257 S.E.2d 186,

Presumptions in civil cases have an effect at two stages during a jury trial: when a party moves for a directed verdict; and when the trial court instructs the jury. Under Georgia law, a rebuttable presumption of law generally does not vanish when the opposing party introduces evidence contrary to the presumption, and it does not matter how much counter evidence the opponent has presented to rebut the presumed fact, the presumption remains alive through jury instructions and can only disappear if the jury decides to discount it. Beach v. Lipham, 276 Ga. 302, 578 S.E.2d 402 (2003).

Rebuttal of valid marriage presumption. — Presumption as to the validity of a marriage can only be negated by disproving every reasonable possibility. State Hwy. Bd. v. Lewis, 46 Ga. App. 162, 167 S.E. 219 (1932).

Verdict not disturbed. — When there is proof of facts or circumstances to support the presumption, and the evidence as a whole is conflicting, a verdict in favor of either party will not be disturbed upon general grounds. Jarvis v. State, 71 Ga. App. 617, 31 S.E.2d 673 (1944).

Specific Presumptions

No presumption of marriage. — There is no presumption of law or fact that a given person is married or single. Neil v. State, 117 Ga. 14, 43 S.E. 435 (1903).

Doctrine of presumption of continuity. — Whether the doctrine of presumption of continuity — a state of things once existing is presumed to continue until a change occurs — holds true in a particular case is a question for jury determination. Mattison v. Trav- elers Indem. Co., 157 Ga. App. 372, 277 S.E.2d 746 (1981).

Continuation of marriage. — Marriage once shown to exist, nothing more appearing, is presumed to continue in existence until rebutted by proof of the marriage's dissolution. Walker v. Hall, 123 Ga. App. 457, 181 S.E.2d 508 (1971).

Dissolution of first marriage. — When a second marriage by a person is established, and it is shown that he or she had previously married another person, who was living at the time of the second marriage, the presumption is that the first marriage had been dissolved by a decree of divorce, and the burden is upon the person attacking the validity of the second marriage to show that a divorce had not been granted. State Hwy. Bd. v. Lewis, 46 Ga. App. 162, 167 S.E. 219 (1932).

Presumption of death. — When a person moves from this state to a point in another state, and, upon inquiry at such point in the other state, ascertains that the person has been gone and is unaccounted for and unheard of for the past seven years or longer, the presumption of the continuance of life ceases, and a legal presumption as to the person's death at the end of the seven years arises. Goode v. Tuggle, 52 Ga. App. 510, 183 S.E. 850 (1936).

Presumption against suicide. — While proof of death alone, no other facts appearing, is sufficient to raise a presumption against suicide, it is necessary that not only death be shown, but also that death be caused by violent and external means in order to raise a presumption of accidental death. Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971).

Qualification of officer. — When it appears from the minutes of the court that a named person was selected as bailiff, a presumption arises that the person was duly sworn and qualified to act in that capacity. Zeigler v. State, 2 Ga. App. 632, 58 S.E. 1066 (1907). See also Bird v. State, 53 Ga. 602 (1875).

Duties of officers. — All officers are presumed to have properly discharged their sworn official duties. Kirk v. State, 73 Ga. 620

(1884); Nixon v. Lehman, 137 Ga. 516, 73 S.E. 747 (1912); Alston v. Mobley, 42 Ga. App. 98, 155 S.E. 81 (1930); Jarrett v. City of Boston, 209 Ga. 530, 74 S.E.2d 549 (1953).

Officer within authority. — It will be presumed that an officer has not exceeded the officer's authority, unless some showing to the contrary is made. Jones v. McCrary, 123 Ga. 282, 51 S.E. 349 (1905); Jarrett v. City of Boston, 209 Ga. 530, 74 S.E.2d 549 (1953).

Genuineness of deed. — Deed attested by three witnesses, one of whom is an officer authorized by law to attest deeds, and recorded is admissible in evidence without further proof of the deed's execution, and all presumptions are in favor of its genuineness. Guthrie v. Gaskins, 171 Ga. 303, 155 S.E. 185 (1930).

Honesty. — Law presumes all men honest in their dealings. Eaves v. Fears, 131 Ga. 820, 64 S.E. 269 (1909).

Physical and mental soundness. — There is a general presumption that the ordinary human facilities are possessed by every individual and in the absence of proof the law presumes soundness both as to mental and bodily functions. Holcombe v. State, 5 Ga. App. 47, 62 S.E. 647 (1908).

Legality of warrant. — Nothing to the contrary appearing, the presumption is that the warrant was regularly and legally issued. Hilburn v. State, 121 Ga. 344, 49 S.E. 318 (1904).

Indictment not presumed lawful. — Indictment will not be presumed regularly returned into court when no return was entered on minutes at term indictment was found. Bowen v. State, 81 Ga. 482, 8 S.E. 736 (1889).

Interlineations proper. — Interlineations appearing in an accusation will be presumed to have been made at the proper time and by the proper authority. Crawford v. State, 4 Ga. App. 789, 62 S.E. 501 (1908).

Influence of juror. — When a juror overhears remarks prejudicial to the accused, the juror is presumed to be influenced thereby. Downer v. State, 10 Ga. App. 827, 74 S.E. 301 (1912).

Stolen goods. — Unsatisfactorily explained possession of stolen goods raises a presumption of guilt against their possessor. This presumption, however, is one of fact, and not of law. Holliday v. State, 23 Ga. App. 400, 98 S.E. 386 (1919); Morris v. State, 47

Ga. App. 792, 171 S.E. 555 (1933); Stevenson v. State, 143 Ga. App. 813, 240 S.E.2d 123 (1977).

Recent unexplained possession of stolen goods is a circumstance sufficient to authorize a jury to find that the accused is guilty as charged (assuming other elements of the crime are proved) but it does not create a presumption of law against the accused, and it is not of itself necessarily proof of the accused's guilt. Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

While it is the rule that recent unexplained possession of stolen property permits the jury to infer that the accused committed the theft, it should be emphasized that recent unexplained possession creates only a permissible inference of guilt of a "presumption of fact" in terms of O.C.G.A. § 24-4-20 which the jury may or may not draw. Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

To convict accused under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-20, the state must prove that: (1) goods in accused's possession were recently stolen; and (2) someone committed the crime. Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

Theft. — Nearer the possession to the time of theft, the stronger will be the inference of guilt; and question of result of lapse of time is for jury. Williamson v. State, 248

Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512 (1981).

Confinement to chain gang lawful. — When a person is confined to the chain gang, the presumption is that the person is lawfully confined there. Williford v. State, 121 Ga. 173, 48 S.E. 962 (1904).

Medical negligence and due care pattern jury instructions. — Although the presumption of due care pattern jury instructions was a correct statement of the law, in discussing the presumption that health care professionals exercise due care, the pattern jury instruction needs to explain more clearly the presumption's relationship to the plaintiff's burden of proof and the defendant's standard of care. The jury needs to be instructed that: (1) the law presumes that physicians or other medical professionals perform medical services in an ordinarily skillful manner; (2) the person claiming an injury may overcome this legal presumption by introducing evidence that the physician did not treat the patient in an ordinarily skillful manner; (3) expert medical testimony is required to overcome the presumption; and (4) the plaintiff's burden in proving the physician's lack of due care and skill is by the preponderance of the evidence. These suggested changes are intended to uphold the tradition of having physicians judged by their peers while ensuring that jurors are instructed that the due-care presumption does not change the plaintiff's burden of proof in medical negligence cases. Beach v. Lipham, 276 Ga. 302, 578 S.E.2d 402 (2003).

General Consideration

Constitutionality. — For a statutory presumption to pass constitutional muster, it must be shown with substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend. Benham v. Edwards, 501 F. Supp. 1050 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd in part and vacated in part on other grounds, 678 F.2d 511 (5th Cir. 1982), vacated, 463 U.S. 1222, 103 S. Ct. 3565, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1406 (1983) (remanded for further consideration in light of Jones v. United States, 463 U.S. 354, 103 S. Ct. 3043, 77 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1983)).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21 is not violative of the due process and equal protection guarantees of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Evans v. State, 159 Ga. App. 776, 285 S.E.2d 235 (1981).

Presumption of negligence against a railroad company, when property is injured by the running of its trains, is a disputable presumption, and may be rebutted like other such presumptions. Savannah, Florida & Western Ry. v. Gray, 77 Ga. 440, 3 S.E. 158 (1886).

Presumption of valuable consideration yields to direct evidence. — Prima facie presumption that negotiable paper is issued for a valuable consideration yields to direct, uncontradicted and unimpeached evidence that there was in fact no consideration. In such a case, the plaintiff could not recover on the presumption alone, but would have to carry the whole case by virtue of a preponderance of the evidence. Goldstein v. Drexler, 102 Ga. App. 90, 115 S.E.2d 744 (1960).

Instruction on presumption of intended consequences. — No unconstitutional shift of the burden of persuasion occurs when court's instruction on presumption of intended consequences is given with an instruction that a person is not presumed to act with criminal intent and that the presumption of intended consequence may be rebutted. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 494, 277 S.E.2d 781 (1981).

When uncontradicted and unimpeached evidence is produced as to the real facts, any inference to the contrary disappears, and does not create a conflict in the evidence so as to require its submission to a jury. International Computer Group, Inc. v. Data Gen. Corp., 159 Ga. App. 169, 283 S.E.2d 12 (1981).

Performance of official and social duties. — Unless and until there be facts or circumstances to indicate to the contrary, it will be presumed that every person obeys the mandates of law and performs all of the person's official and social duties. Strother Ford, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank, 132 Ga. App. 268, 208 S.E.2d 25 (1974).

Jury determination of rebutted presumption. — Presumptions in civil cases have an effect at two stages during a jury trial; when a party moves for a directed verdict; and when the trial court instructs the jury. Under Georgia law, a rebuttable presumption of law generally does not vanish when the opposing party introduces evidence contrary to the presumption, and it does not matter how much counter evidence the opponent has presented to rebut the presumed fact; the presumption remains alive through jury instructions and can only disappear if the jury decides to discount the presumption. Beach v. Lipham, 276 Ga. 302, 578 S.E.2d 402 (2003).

Most rational hypothesis. — Presumption of law is merely a circumstantial inference selected by the law as the most rational hypothesis from given facts, and may or may not be rebutted according to the quality of evidence introduced. Jefferson Std. Life Ins. Co. v. Bentley, 55 Ga. App. 272, 190 S.E. 50 (1937); Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971).

Presumption yields to proved facts. — Presumption of law yields to direct, positive, and uncontradicted evidence, i.e., it gives way to proved facts. Jefferson Std. Life Ins. Co. v. Bentley, 55 Ga. App. 272, 190 S.E. 50 (1937); Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971).

Presumption of continuity. — Under the doctrine known as the presumption of continuity, a status, when proved to exist, will be presumed to have continued to exist. Strother Ford, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank, 132 Ga. App. 268, 208 S.E.2d 25 (1974).

Presumption of demand for possession yields to direct evidence. — While the defendant may not deny in the defendant's counter-affidavit that a demand for possession had been made upon the defendant by the plaintiff prior to the issuance of the dispossessory warrant, and defendant's failure to do so raises a presumption of law that such a demand was made, still such presumption must give way to the direct and positive testimony of the defendant on the trial that no demand was made upon the defendant for possession by anyone prior to the issuance of the dispossessory warrant. Bare presumptions of law give way to testimony, which may shift the burden of proof or of proceeding to the opposite party, and one is then not entitled to prevail upon the presumption alone. Ginn v. Johnson, 74 Ga. App. 35, 38 S.E.2d 753 (1946).

Medical negligence and due care pattern jury instructions. — Although the presumption of due care pattern jury instructions was a correct statement of the law in discussing the presumption that health care professionals exercise due care, the pattern jury instruction needs to explain more clearly the presumption's relationship to the plaintiff's burden of proof and the defendant's standard of care. The jury needs to be instructed that: (1) the law presumes that physicians or other medical professionals perform medical services in an ordinarily skillful manner; (2) the person claiming an injury may overcome this legal presumption by introducing evidence that the physician did not treat the patient in an ordinarily skillful manner; (3) expert medical testimony is required to overcome the presumption; and (4) the plaintiff's burden in proving the physician's lack of due care and skill is by the preponderance of the evidence. These suggested changes are intended to uphold the tradition of having physicians judged by their peers while ensuring that jurors are instructed that the due-care presumption does not change the plaintiff's burden of proof in medical negligence cases. Beach v. Lipham, 276 Ga. 302, 578 S.E.2d 402 (2003).

Innocence. — Every person charged with crime is presumed innocent until proven guilty by competent evidence. Thigpen v. State, 11 Ga. App. 846, 76 S.E. 596 (1912).

Continuity of domicile. — Until evidence is introduced to the contrary, it is presumed that a person has not changed the person's residence or domicile. Strother Ford, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank, 132 Ga. App. 268, 208 S.E.2d 25 (1974).

Life. — One of the presumptions of law in this state is “continuance of life for seven years.” Poole v. State, 22 Ga. App. 248, 95 S.E. 935 (1918); Gantt v. American Nat'l Ins. Co., 173 Ga. 323, 160 S.E. 345 (1931).

Presumption of life not statutory. — There is no express statutory provision in this state making absence from the state for seven years the ground of the presumption of death. The only provision in the Code with reference of such presumption is this statute. There being no statutory provision, therefore, making mere absence from the state the ground of the presumption, the common-law rule must be applied, which is as ruled in Hansen v. Owens, 132 Ga. 648, 64 S.E. 800 (1909). Rudolph v. Brown, 150 Ga. 147, 103 S.E. 251 (1920) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21).

Presumption of continuation of life ends.

— Presumption of the duration of life, with respect to people of whom no account can be given, ends at the expiration of seven years from the time when the people were last known to be living. Doe v. Roe, 1 Ga. 538 (1846); Doe v. Roe & Benson, 26 Ga. 582 (1858); Executors of Adams v. Administrator of Jones, 39 Ga. 479 (1869). See also Poole v. State, 22 Ga. App. 248, 95 S.E. 935 (1918); Gantt v. American Nat'l Ins. Co., 41 Ga. App. 627, 154 S.E. 213 (1930), rev'd on other grounds, 173 Ga. 323, 160 S.E. 345 (1931); Pilgrim Health & Life Ins. Co. v. Shows, 60 Ga. App. 872, 5 S.E.2d 585 (1939).

Death occurring after seven years. — In the absence of facts or circumstances tending to establish the date of death, death is presumed to have occurred at the expiration of the seven years. Gantt v. American Nat'l Ins. Co., 173 Ga. 323, 160 S.E. 345 (1931); Gantt v. American Nat'l Ins. Co., 53 Ga. App. 425, 186 S.E. 458 (1936); Pfenning v. Life Ins. Co. of Va., 60 Ga. App. 706, 4 S.E.2d 682 (1939); Payne v. Home Sav. Bank, 193 Ga. 406, 18 S.E.2d 770 (1942); Georgia Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Bloodworth, 120 Ga. App. 313, 170 S.E.2d 433 (1969).

Time of death must be proved. — Presumption of law relates only to the fact of death; the time of death, whenever it is material, must be a subject of distinct proof. Gantt v. American Nat'l Ins. Co., 41 Ga. App. 627, 154 S.E. 213 (1930), rev'd on other grounds, 173 Ga. 323, 160 S.E. 345 (1931).

Presumption of death established by probate court. — Order of probate court under O.C.G.A. § 53-9-2 establishing presumption of death of insured constituted a rebuttable presumption of law in later case involving action on life insurance policy. Ritter v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 538 F. Supp. 398 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Presumption of death of one moving to another state. — In order to raise a presumption of the death of a person who moves from this state to a named point in another state, inquiry must be made at the last known domicile of the absentee at which the absentee resided in the other state; and it must be shown, by those who would be most likely to hear from the absentee, that the absentee was absent and unheard of in the last place of residence for seven years. Rudolph v. Brown, 150 Ga. 147, 103 S.E. 251 (1920); National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Hankerson, 49 Ga. App. 350, 175 S.E. 590 (1934); Pilgrim Health & Life Ins. Co. v. Shows, 60 Ga. App. 872, 5 S.E.2d 585 (1939).

Evidence of absence of person from one's original place of residence will not raise the presumption of death, when it appears that the person has moved to another place and there located. National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Hankerson, 49 Ga. App. 350, 175 S.E. 590 (1934).

Issue of life or death for jury. — When the presumption from absence is relied upon to show death, the issue as to life or death would be for the jury when the evidence tending to rebut the legal presumption is merely circumstantial, or when, notwithstanding direct or circumstantial rebuttal evidence, the bare legal presumption of death is itself supported by direct or circumstantial proof. But the mere legal presumption is completely overcome by positive, uncontradicted evidence that the person is in fact alive, and even by competent proof of the person's existence within the seven-year period. National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Hankerson, 49 Ga. App. 350, 175 S.E. 590 (1934).

No presumption of survival. — When a family was absent for over seven years there would be no presumption that a husband survived his wife and daughter, or that he had no other children whom he survived. Cock v. Lipsey, 148 Ga. 322, 96 S.E. 628 (1918).

Insanity

Presumption of insanity not unconstitutionally irrebuttable. — Construction of presumptions in O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21 did not create a de facto irrebuttable (and, therefore, unconstitutional) presumption of insanity because the fact-finders duty not to disregard expert testimony applies to cases presuming sanity or insanity, and the court's standard of review and the findings and conclusions required for that review, ensure that the presumption of insanity cannot be applied irrebuttably. Nagel v. State, 262 Ga. 888, 427 S.E.2d 490 (1993).

Presumption of continuing insanity applies prospectively to future acts of the defendant, not retroactively to past behavior. Vanderpool v. State, 244 Ga. App. 804, 536 S.E.2d 821 (2000), cert denied, 532 U.S. 996, 121 S. Ct. 1658, 149 L. Ed. 2d 640 (2001).

To be constitutionally committed, the insanity-acquittee is entitled, as matter of equal protection, to a judicial determination which attains a greater degree of certainty than that generated by a scientifically unsupported presumption of insanity. Benham v. Edwards, 501 F. Supp. 1050 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd in part and vacated in part on other grounds, 678 F.2d 511 (5th Cir. 1982), vacated, 463 U.S. 1222, 103 S. Ct. 3565, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1406 (1983) (remanded for further consideration in light of Jones v. United States, 463 U.S. 354, 103 S. Ct. 3043, 77 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1983)).

Presumption of continuation of a mental state comports with due process, because it is rational to assume that, once a mental state is proven to exist, that mental state continues to do so in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Continuation of mental condition. — Mental condition, once proved to exist, is presumed to continue. Carter v. State, 225 Ga. 310, 168 S.E.2d 158 (1969); Boyd v. State, 207 Ga. 567, 63 S.E.2d 394 (1951), overruled on other grounds, 234 Ga. 608, 216 S.E.2d 855 (1975).

Continuation of insanity. — There is a presumption of continuation of insanity, once insanity is proved to exist. Dicken v. Johnson, 7 Ga. 484 (1849); Terry v. Buffington, 11 Ga. 337, 56 Am. Dec. 423 (1852); Stanfield v. Hursey, 36 Ga. App. 394, 136 S.E. 826 (1927).

Defendant failed to carry the defendant's burden of showing by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant was sane after the defendant was found not guilty by reason of insanity on two stalking charges and was ordered into a civil commitment to a mental health facility; the verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity established both that the defendant committed the criminal offense and that the defendant did so because of a mental illness, and once the defendant was ruled insane, a presumption existed under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21 that the insanity existed thereafter, and the defendant put on very little evidence to the contrary. Bonney v. State, 295 Ga. App. 706, 673 S.E.2d 102 (2009).

Insanity of insanity-acquittee. — When there has been a previous adjudication finding a defendant not guilty by reason of defendant's insanity, a presumption of such insanity exists at the commencement of a hearing to secure defendant's release. Pennewell v. State, 148 Ga. App. 611, 251 S.E.2d 832 (1979); Clark v. State, 245 Ga. 629, 266 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Presumption of continued insanity for release applications. — In deciding applications for release, the court may rely on the presumption of continued insanity and is not bound by the opinions of either lay or expert witnesses. Gross v. State, 210 Ga. App. 125, 435 S.E.2d 496 (1993).

Effect of release. — An administrative release cancels the continuing presumption of insanity, although the prior adjudication is evidence tending to show mental condition and can be considered by the fact-finder to rebut the presumption of sanity. Gilbert v. State, 235 Ga. 501, 220 S.E.2d 262 (1975).

Denial of release held proper. — Rational trier of fact could have found that appellant failed to prove by a preponderance of evidence that the appellant was no longer insane and should be released from civil commitment since experts testified that appellant became violently “psychotic” when the appellant engaged in substance abuse and that, although appellant might not exhibit violently “psychotic” behavior so long as the appellant underwent the regimen of “forced abstinence” in a hospital setting, there was nothing to show that, once released from that setting and regimen, the appellant would not again engage in substance abuse and commit yet another violent “psychotic” act. Nagel v. State, 264 Ga. 150, 442 S.E.2d 446 (1994).

Sanity after release from mental institution. — Presumption of sanity prevails even after a commitment to a mental institution if the accused has been released from that institution. Durham v. State, 239 Ga. 697, 238 S.E.2d 334 (1977).

Rebuttal not automatic. — Presentation of evidence to the contrary does not automatically dissipate the presumption of sanity which exists by law. Moses v. State, 245 Ga. 180, 263 S.E.2d 916, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 849, 101 S. Ct. 138, 66 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Nagel v. State, 262 Ga. 888, 427 S.E.2d 490 (1993).

Court may presume insanity despite witnesses' opinions. — Superior court, in deciding applications for release of a person committed upon a plea of insanity, may rely on the presumption of continued insanity and is not bound by the opinions of either lay or expert witnesses. The court also may take judicial notice of the evidence at trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(e). Butler v. State, 258 Ga. 344, 369 S.E.2d 252 (1988).

Verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity reflects two crucial factual determinations. First, such verdict indicates a determination beyond reasonable doubt by a finder of fact that defendant committed the crime in question. Secondly, this verdict indicates finding that it has been demonstrated by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant, at the time the criminal act was committed, met the criteria for civil commitment. Under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21, this mental state is presumed to continue so that the burden of proof in a release proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 rests on the insanity acquittee. Whitfield v. State, 158 Ga. App. 660, 281 S.E.2d 643 (1981).

Marriage

Continuation of marriage. — Marriage once shown to exist, nothing more appearing, is presumed to continue in existence until rebutted by proof of the marriage's dissolution. Walker v. Hall, 123 Ga. App. 457, 181 S.E.2d 508 (1971).

Prior marriage dissolved by death. — Presumption that a first marriage was dissolved by death prevails whether the time elapsing between the date the former spouse was last heard of and the second marriage was ten months or ten years. Longstreet v. Longstreet, 205 Ga. 255, 53 S.E.2d 480 (1949).

Ownership by husband. — Husband is recognized by law as the head of his family and where he and wife reside together, the legal presumption is that the house and all the household effects, belong to the husband as the head of the family; this presumption of course is rebuttable. Kreutz v. State, 53 Ga. App. 219, 185 S.E. 371 (1936).

Conflicting presumptions. — When the presumption of the validity of a marriage conflicts with the presumption of the continued life of a former spouse of one of the parties, if neither is aided by proof of facts or circumstances corroborating it, the presumption of the validity of the second marriage will prevail over the presumption of the continuance of life of the former spouse. Longstreet v. Longstreet, 205 Ga. 255, 53 S.E.2d 480 (1949); Baker v. Musa, 170 Ga. App. 77, 316 S.E.2d 178 (1984).

Officers

Officer's duties. — All officers are presumed to have properly discharged their sworn official duties. Kirk v. State, 73 Ga. 620 (1884); Brantley v. Thompson, 216 Ga. 164, 115 S.E.2d 533 (1960).

If a party has evidence in his power and within his reach by which he may repel a claim or charge against him but omits to produce it, or if he has more certain and satisfactory evidence in his power but relies on that which is of a weaker and inferior nature, a presumption arises that the charge or claim against him is well founded; but this presumption may be rebutted. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION ILLUSTRATIONS

In general. — When a party has evidence within the party's power or control by which the party may rebut a claim against the party and fails to produce that evidence, a presumption arises that the evidence would be unfavorable or harmful to the party failing to produce the evidence. Maloy v. Dixon, 127 Ga. App. 151, 193 S.E.2d 19 (1972).

Rebuttable presumption in O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 applies when both parties fail to produce evidence as conclusive and satisfactory as appears to be within their respective control. Eddie Parker Interests, Inc. v. Booth, 160 Ga. App. 15, 285 S.E.2d 753 (1981).

Constitutionality. — Statute violates the fundamental principle of criminal law that the guilt of the accused must be shown by competent evidence before a conviction can be legally had. Sokolic v. State, 228 Ga. 788,

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 is violative of a defendant's right to be convicted by evidence establishing guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Radford v. State, 251 Ga. 50, 302 S.E.2d 555 (1983).

Test for constitutionality. — For a statutory presumption to pass constitutional muster, it must be shown with "substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend." Benham v. Edwards, 501 F. Supp. 1050 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd in part and vacated in part on other grounds, 678 F.2d 511 (5th Cir. 1982), vacated, 463 U.S. 1222, 103 S. Ct. 3565, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1406 (1983) (remanded for further consideration in light of Jones v. United States, 463 U.S. 354, 103 S. Ct. 3043, 77 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1983)).

inal case. — See Harper v. State, 129 Ga. 770, 59 S.E. 792 (1907); Davis v. State, 4 Ga. App. 441, 61 S.E. 843 (1908); Mills v. State, 133 Ga. 155, 65 S.E. 368 (1909); Wilson v. State, 8 Ga. App. 8, 205 S.E.2d 126 (1974); Peters v. State, 131 Ga. App. 513, 206 S.E.2d 623 (1974); Perryman v. State, 139 Ga. App. 655, 229 S.E.2d 131 (1976); Joseph v. State, 149 Ga. App. 296, 254 S.E.2d 383 (1979); Brown v. State, 150 Ga. App. 831, 258 S.E.2d 641 (1979); Tiller v. State, 159 Ga. App. 557, 284 S.E.2d 63 (1981); Radford v. State, 251 Ga. 50, 302 S.E.2d 555 (1983); Drummond v. State, 173 Ga. App. 337, 326 S.E.2d 787 (1985); Jacobs v. State, 201 Ga. App. 57, 410 S.E.2d 320 (1991); Clayton v. State, 203 Ga. App. 843, 418 S.E.2d 610, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 418 S.E.2d 610 (1992); Williams v. State, 239 Ga. App. 30, 521 S.E.2d 27 (1999).

Charge on spoliation of evidence based upon O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 is not appropriate in a criminal case; thus, the trial court did not err in not giving such a charge. Doyal v. State, 287 Ga. App. 667, 653 S.E.2d 52 (2007).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 not applicable in criminal case. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 addressing the State's failure to preserve a child molestation victim's pajamas, because the trial court stated it would not have given the charge if requested, and § 24-4-22 was not appropriate in a criminal case. Cline v. State, 300 Ga. App. 615, 685 S.E.2d 501 (2009).

Jury may not be charged on failure to produce evidence in criminal case but may draw conclusion therefrom. — While the jury may not be instructed to infer that if the defendant had evidence by which defendant might repel or rebut the charge against the defendant and failed to introduce the evidence the presumption arises that the defendant is guilty, the jury may be apprised of the facts from which it arrives at the same conclusion. Pritchard v. State, 160 Ga. App. 105, 286 S.E.2d 338 (1981).

Intention of legislature was to penalize either party by a presumption of fact against either party for withholding evidence within their power to produce, and relying on evidence of a weaker nature. Fields v. Yellow Cab Co., 80 Ga. App. 569, 56 S.E.2d 845 (1949).

Limited application. — It may be conceded that this principle cannot be safely given as a charge except in a very limited class of cases, but it cannot be said to be improper in all cases. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934).

Application in divorce case as to financial worth. — In divorce case when one of the issues in the case is the financial worth of the defendant, when the plaintiff introduced documentary evidence showing that the defendant received about $24,000 in cash from a certain business venture and the defendant did not offer any written evidence to substantiate defendant's contention that only a small portion of the sum received was profit, there is no error in charging on the presumption arising from failure to produce evidence, or the strongest evidence. West v. West, 199 Ga. 378, 34 S.E.2d 545 (1945).

Presumption of fact. — Presumption against a party withholding or suppressing evidence within the party's control or reach is not one of law, but of fact and it can be rebutted. Savannah, Florida & Western Ry. v. Gray, 77 Ga. 440, 3 S.E. 158 (1886); Brothers v. Horne, 140 Ga. 617, 79 S.E. 468 (1913); Cocroft v. Cocroft, 158 Ga. 714, 124 S.E. 346 (1924); Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934); Burns v. Colonial Stores, Inc., 90 Ga. App. 492, 83 S.E.2d 259 (1954); Independent Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Craton, 102 Ga. App. 78, 115 S.E.2d 636 (1960); Gulf Life Ins. Co. v. Belch, 108 Ga. App. 480, 133 S.E.2d 622 (1963), rev'd on other grounds, 219 Ga. 823, 136 S.E.2d 351 (1964); Glynn Plymouth, Inc. v. Davis, 120 Ga. App. 475, 170 S.E.2d 848 (1969), aff'd, 226 Ga. 221, 173 S.E.2d 691 (1970).

Burden of proof irrelevant. — Statute applies irrespective of the burden of proof. Shiver & Barnett v. Firemens Ins. Co., 60 Ga.

App. 57, 2 S.E.2d 760 (1939) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

No evidence held back. — When it does not appear that the party holds back evidence within the party's power to produce the non-production of more full and definite evidence than the party presents raises no presumption against the party and it is error to charge this statute. Schnell v. Toomer, 56 Ga. 168 (1876); Western & A.R.R. v. Morrison, 102 Ga. 319, 29 S.E. 104, 66 Am. St. R. 173, 40 L.R.A. 84 (1897); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Bernstein, 113 Ga. 175, 38 S.E. 394 (1901); Shields v. Georgia Ry. & Elec. Co., 1 Ga. App. 97, 57 S.E. 980 (1907); Alabama Great Southern Ry. v. Hamby, 56 Ga. App. 215, 192 S.E. 467 (1937); Howard v. Obie, 190 Ga. 394, 9 S.E.2d 666 (1940); Brosnan v. Long, 75 Ga. App. 837, 44 S.E.2d 809 (1947); Maloy v. Dixon, 127 Ga. App. 151, 193 S.E.2d 19 (1972) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Proving assertions without calling other witness. — No presumption will ever arise prejudicial to the party failing to produce the witness, provided the jury is satisfied from the evidence before the jury that the party who had such witness accessible has nevertheless proved the party's claim or established the party's defense. Weinkle & Sons v. Brunswick & W.R.R., 107 Ga. 367, 33 S.E. 471 (1899), overruled on other grounds, 238 Ga. 559, 234 S.E.2d 24 (1977); Howard v. Obie, 190 Ga. 394, 9 S.E.2d 666 (1940).

Proving a negative. — When the means of proving a negative are not within the power of one of the parties, but all the proof on the subject is within the control of the other, who, if the negative is not true, can disprove it at once, the truth of the negative averment can be presumed from the fact that the party who has within the party's power proof (if such exists) that the negative is not true still withholds or does not produce such proof. Hyer v. Holmes & Co., 12 Ga. App. 837, 79 S.E. 58 (1913); Mayo v. Owen, 208 Ga. 483, 67 S.E.2d 709 (1951).

All witnesses need not testify. — It never was the intention of the provisions of this statute to require that all witnesses to a scene of a collision, the nature of which is in question, should be summoned and used as witnesses. Fields v. Yellow Cab Co., 80 Ga. App. 569, 56 S.E.2d 845 (1949) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 does not require a party actually to produce all possible witnesses, but merely provides that an adverse presumption may arise from a failure to so produce. Jacobs v. State, 201 Ga. App. 57, 410 S.E.2d 320 (1991).

If all witnesses not produced. — Party is not required to produce all witnesses; a party may rest one's case upon one witness, though another be accessible, but that party subjects oneself to presumption arising from failure to so produce. Shiver & Barnett v. Firemens Ins. Co., 60 Ga. App. 57, 2 S.E.2d 760 (1939); Trammell v. Williams, 97 Ga. App. 31, 101 S.E.2d 887 (1958).

Calling one of two witnesses. — Fact that a party called only one of two witnesses who had an equal opportunity to know the facts which it was sought to establish did not authorize an inference that the other witness would have testified differently, or warrant an instruction of this statute to the jury. Bank of Emanuel v. Smith, 32 Ga. App. 606, 124 S.E. 114 (1924) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Evidence under power and control of party. — Charging this statute was error since there was nothing to show that the absent witness was in any way under the power and control of the defendant, or that as a witness, if the witness were accessible at all, the witness was not as much so to the plaintiff as to the defendant. Anderson v. Southern Ry., 107 Ga. 500, 33 S.E. 644 (1899); Brothers v. Horne, 140 Ga. 617, 79 S.E. 468 (1913); Cocroft v. Cocroft, 158 Ga. 714, 124 S.E. 346 (1924); Trammell v. Atlanta Coach Co., 51 Ga. App. 705, 181 S.E. 315 (1935); Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co. v. Atlanta Taxicabs, Inc., 104 Ga. App. 89, 121 S.E.2d 175 (1961) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Witness accessible to both parties. — When witness was present at the trial, equally accessible to both parties, it was error for the judge to give in charge this statute. Bank of Emanuel v. Smith, 32 Ga. App. 606, 124 S.E. 114 (1924) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Examining physician is equally available as a witness to both parties; no presumption could arise against either party for failure to produce the physician as a witness. Bradford v. Parrish, 111 Ga. App. 167, 141 S.E.2d 125 (1965).

Failure of both parties to produce evidence. — When both parties fail to produce as conclusive and satisfactory evidence as appears to be within their respective control, the charge of this statute is appropriate. Davidson v. Consolidated Quarries Corp., 99 Ga. App. 359, 108 S.E.2d 495 (1959) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Failure of defendant to appear in court and the failure to offer evidence raise a presumption against the defendant that the charges against the defendant are true. Mitchell v. Hayden, Stone, Inc., 225 Ga. 711, 171 S.E.2d 280 (1969).

Failure of party to testify. — Provisions of this statute are not applicable to the failure of a party defendant to testify at the party's trial. Ramirez v. Mansour, 104 Ga. App. 651, 122 S.E.2d 594 (1961); Maloy v. Dixon, 127 Ga. App. 151, 193 S.E.2d 19 (1972) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Failure to testify at former trial. — It is admissible to show that the defendant, since deceased, who was present at a former trial and competent as a witness, failed to testify concerning the transaction in issue, of which the defendant had peculiar knowledge; the bona fides of which was attacked by the plaintiffs. Wood v. Wilson, 145 Ga. 256, 88 S.E. 980 (1916).

Documentary evidence. — Statute applies equally to documentary evidence. Oliver v. Fair Jewelers, Inc., 104 Ga. App. 392, 121 S.E.2d 787 (1961) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Medical exam under court order. — Statutory presumption arising from failure to produce evidence is not applicable in a personal injury action when there can be no additional medical evidence available until after an examination is had under court order. Bradford v. Parrish, 111 Ga. App. 167, 141 S.E.2d 125 (1965).

Refusal to submit to physical examination. — Evidence that the plaintiff in a case of personal injury, refused to allow a physical examination is admissible. City of Cedartown v. Brooks, 2 Ga. App. 583, 59 S.E. 836 (1907).

Failure to produce testimony is badge of fraud, since the bona fides of the transaction is in issue, and witnesses who ought to be able to explain the transaction are in reach. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934); State Banking Co. v. Miller, 185 Ga. 653, 196 S.E. 47 (1938).

Spoliation of evidence raises a presumption against the spoliator. Glynn Plymouth, Inc. v. Davis, 120 Ga. App. 475, 170 S.E.2d 848 (1969), aff'd, 226 Ga. 221, 173 S.E.2d 691 (1970).

Destruction of evidence. — When a party has destroyed evidence which may be material to ensuing litigation, the trial judge may be authorized to dismiss the case or prevent the party's expert witness from testifying in any respect about the evidence. Chapman v. Auto Owners Ins. Co., 220 Ga. App. 539, 469 S.E.2d 783 (1996).

Argument to jury. — Failure to produce witnesses who are accessible to a party will authorize counsel of the opposite party to argue before the jury that, if they are in doubt as to the truth of the transaction, they would be authorized to infer that, if the absent witnesses had testified, the testimony would have been prejudicial to the party who might most easily have produced them. City of Atlanta v. Feeney, 42 Ga. App. 135, 155 S.E. 370 (1930); Howard v. Obie, 190 Ga. 394, 9 S.E.2d 666 (1940).

Comment on defendant's failure to produce evidence is not a comment on the defendant's failure to testify as prohibited by this statute. Wood v. State, 234 Ga. 758, 218 S.E.2d 47 (1975) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Comment on failure to present certain witnesses. — Defense counsel in a criminal case is not barred from commenting, when appropriate, on the failure of the opposing side to present certain witnesses; while no legal presumption may arise from such failure, it is proper for counsel to draw an inference of fact from such failure and comment on such failure to the jury when there is competent evidence before the jury that the missing witness has knowledge of material and relevant facts. Morgan v. State, 267 Ga. 203, 476 S.E.2d 747 (1996).

Evidentiary value. — Fact that the accused has failed to produce evidence has some evidentiary value and counsel can comment on it to the jury. Hunt v. State, 81 Ga. 140, 7 S.E. 142 (1888); Morgan v. State, 124 Ga. 442, 52 S.E. 748 (1905); Saffold v. State, 11 Ga. App. 329, 75 S.E. 338 (1912).

Question for jury. — It was not error for court to charge that if either party in this case had in the party's power or control any evidence that would have illustrated any issue in the case and such party failed to produce that evidence, the jury might infer it would have been against the party so failing to produce it, in the event the jury saw fit to do so; the charge left it for the jury to determine whether or not there existed a state of facts from which the presumption would arise and did not have the effect of invading the province of the jury. Beardsley v. Suburban Coach Co., 83 Ga. App. 381, 63 S.E.2d 911 (1951).

Charge demanding inference. — When a stated set of circumstances will demand a particular inference, it is not error for the court to instruct the jury to that effect, provided the question of whether the circumstances do in fact exist is left open for determination by the jury. Cotton States Fertilizer Co. v. Childs, 179 Ga. 23, 174 S.E. 708 (1934); Shiver & Barnett v. Firemens Ins. Co., 60 Ga. App. 57, 2 S.E.2d 760 (1939).

Harmless error. — When this statute was not applicable to the facts of a case, the court did not err in failing to give the statute in a charge to the jury. Especially is this true when there was no written request so to the charge. Shields v. Georgia Ry. & Elec. Co., 1 Ga. App. 172, 57 S.E. 980 (1907) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Although the statute is charged in a case where it is not applicable, in absence of harm or injury to one side, the charge would not require a reversal. Goldstein v. Ipswich Hosiery Co., 104 Ga. App. 500, 122 S.E.2d 339 (1961) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Defendant admitted liability and did not produce the accident report and pictures of the truck involved; since the withheld evidence went to liability and not damages, any error in giving a "withheld evidence" charge to the jury was harmless. AT Sys. Southeast, Inc. v. Carnes, 272 Ga. App. 671, 613 S.E.2d 150 (2005).

Exclusion of explanation harmless error. — Party should be permitted to explain the absence of witnesses which the evidence shows have knowledge of facts material to the case, so as to avoid the application of this statute, but the exclusion of testimony of explanation, if error, is harmless error, since the evidence of such witness or witnesses would be merely cumulative of the testimony of the complaining party, and which testimony the verdict of the jury shows the jury accepted. Gray v. General Fin. Corp., 108 Ga. App. 586, 134 S.E.2d 58 (1963) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

When husband of plaintiff was in court, summoned there by the plaintiff, and it appeared that he knew a great deal about the infirmities of his wife before the crash which was the subject of the suit, and about her condition after such collision, there was sufficient evidence to authorize a charge setting forth the principles of law set forth in this statute. Price v. Whitley Constr. Co., 91 Ga. App. 257, 85 S.E.2d 528 (1954) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Since appellant father had knowledge of his own financial situation and of the needs of his son, who was living with him at that time, his failure to produce evidence of such to refute or amplify the appellee's showing, raised a rebuttable presumption that the appellee's showing was accurate. Ritchea v.

When eyewitness to homicide, and to the vital incidents and circumstances leading up thereto, was present in court, and the plaintiff nevertheless relied entirely upon evidence of a weaker and inferior nature, consisting of secondary evidence in the form of testimony as to the declarations made by the defendant, and which were not altogether certain or clear as to their proper import, the court was altogether justified in giving in charge the principle of law set forth by this statute. Blanchard v. Ogletree, 41 Ga. App. 4, 152 S.E. 116 (1929) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22).

Written offer. — When plaintiff failed to introduce in evidence written offer in plaintiff's possession to buy defendant's property, but instead relied on oral testimony to prove such offer, the court erred in refusing defendant's instruction on drawing adverse inference on party's omission to produce evidence within the defendant's reach to repel charge against the defendant. Steinmetz v. Draper-Owens Co., 71 Ga. App. 814, 32 S.E.2d 417 (1944).

Destruction of driver's log book raised a presumption against truck company-employer that driver was compelled to drive with insufficient rest. J.B. Hunt Transport, Inc. v. Bentley, 207 Ga. App. 250, 427 S.E.2d 499 (1992).

Witnesses listed on indictment. — When the state called as witnesses seven of the 11 persons whose names appeared on the indictment, and there was nothing in the record which disclosed that the other four witnessed the homicide or that those witnesses were present at the trial or even accessible to the state, no presumption unfavorable to the state would arise from a failure to introduce those individuals as witnesses. Lucear v. State, 221 Ga. 572, 146 S.E.2d 316 (1965).

Inability to question defense witnesses precludes judgment. — In a negligence action, the court erred in granting summary judgment before the plaintiff was able to question two key defense witnesses who avoided plaintiff's discovery attempts, but who filed affidavits in support of the defendant's motion. This judgment deprived the plaintiff of an opportunity to develop proof which may have well given rise to triable issues of fact, and also overlooked the rule that, when a party fails to produce evidence, the charge or claim against the party is presumed to be well founded. Shipley v. Handicaps Mobility Sys., 222 Ga. App. 101, 473 S.E.2d 533 (1996).

In petition for custody, former husband's evidence charging the wife with misconduct and illicit relations with a named individual did not require the wife to procure from such individual a statement that the charge was not true. Waller v. Waller, 202 Ga. 535, 43 S.E.2d 535 (1947).

In a products liability action, because defendant manufacturer failed to produce evidence as required under the notice to produce, it was not improper to allow the jury to make an adverse inference from the defendant's apparent initial attempt to hide evidence or avoid discovery. Uniroyal Goodrich Tire Co. v. Ford, 218 Ga. App. 248, 461 S.E.2d 877 (1995), aff'd, 276 Ga. 226, 476 S.E.2d 565 (1996).

In a medical malpractice action, the court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury with regard to spoliation of evidence by the defendant physician since it was undisputed that the physician's chart was missing vital signs data for the 15-minute period during which the physician was attempting to provide the plaintiff's decedent with oxygen and that a monitor recorded this information, but the plaintiff did not point to any evidence which suggested what might have been proven with the missing data and, when questioned at trial, the plaintiff's medical expert acknowledged that when the expert reviewed the case and developed an opinion, the expert did not have any problem with the defendant's charting. Johnson v. Riverdale Anesthesia Assocs., P.C., 249 Ga. App. 152, 547 S.E.2d 347 (2001), aff'd, 275 Ga. 240, 563 S.E.2d 431, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 383 (2002).

In a Dram Shop Act suit, given proof of spoliation under O.C.G.A. § 24-2-22, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to an injured party's guardian as the tavern's manager was aware of the potential for litigation and failed to preserve whatever videotaped evidence might have been captured as to whether one of the tavern's intoxicated patron's would soon be driving; hence, a rebuttable presumption arose against the tavern that the evidence destroyed would have been harmful to the tavern, rendering summary judgment inappropriate. Baxley v. Hakiel Indus., 282 Ga. 312, 647 S.E.2d 29 (2007).

Workers' compensation. — When an employer in a workers' compensation action offers no evidence, and testimony of the employee further shows that the employer's doctors examined the employee and were fully conversant with the employee's physical condition, the presumption arises that if the employer had produced the doctors as witnesses, the doctors' testimony would have corroborated that of the employee. GMC v. Craig, 91 Ga. App. 239, 85 S.E.2d 441 (1954).

When the defendant offered no testimony in defendant's own behalf in a worker's compensation case and failed to produce defendant's employment records although the plaintiff had issued a subpoena in an effort to obtain those records, a presumption adverse to the defendant is authorized. Hearing v. Johnson, 105 Ga. App. 408, 124 S.E.2d 655 (1962).

Material witness in slip and fall case. — In a slip and fall case, after the defendant submitted an affidavit stating the store policy on sweeping, but did not submit affidavits from the employees who actually carried out the purported inspections and sweeping on the date in question, O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 allows an inference to be drawn that the employees' testimony would show that the employees did have actual or constructive knowledge of the hazard but negligently refused to remove the hazard. Straughter v. J.H. Harvey Co., 232 Ga. App. 29, 500 S.E.2d 353 (1998).

Recording over videotape justified sanction. — In a premises liability case brought by a customer against a retailer, the trial court did not exceed the court's authority in excluding testimony about a videotape sought to be admitted by the retailer that would have purportedly contradicted the customer's and the customer's parent's recollections of what had been recorded with regard to the customer being carjacked and shot in the retailer's parking lot as the retailer was on notice, or should have been aware, that the customer was contemplating litigation based on correspondence to the retailer. The retailer knew of the importance of the tape, which depicted the robbery; failed to follow the retailer's own policy as to retaining tapes for seven years; and the trial court was within the court's discretion to have been "disturbed" that the retailer destroyed the tape by having other recordings made on top of the recording of the incident. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Lee, 290 Ga. App. 541, 659 S.E.2d 905 (2008).

E-mail equally available to both parties. — Permittee alleged the Environmental Protection Division of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources (EPD) violated O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 by intentionally destroying email correspondence between the permittee and EPD which was favorable to the former. As the permittee was equally in a position to produce the evidence since the alleged email exchange took place between the permittee and EPD, it was not prejudiced as a result of the alleged destruction of the evidence. Agri-Cycle LLC v. Couch, 284 Ga. 90,

Failure to report elevator accident. — Trial court erred in granting a directed verdict to a landlord in tenants' claims that the tenants were injured in a malfunctioning elevator. The landlord failed to report the incident and inspect the elevator as required by O.C.G.A. § 8-2-106, giving rise to the spoliation presumption under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 that the evidence would have favored the tenants. Beach v. B.F. Saul Prop. Co., No. A09A1770, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 347 (Mar. 30, 2010).

Charging this O.C.G.A. § 24-4-22 authorized in the following cases. — See Fountain v. Fuller E. Callaway Co., 144 Ga. 550, 87 S.E. 651 (1916); Cocroft v. Cocroft, 158 Ga. 714, 124 S.E. 346 (1924); Layfield v. O'Neill, 37 Ga. App. 265, 139 S.E. 924 (1927); Murray v. Fitzgerald Convenient Ctrs., Inc., 239 Ga. App. 799, 521 S.E.2d 915 (1999).

24-4-23. Presumption from failure to answer business letter.

In the ordinary course of business, when good faith requires an answer, it is the duty of the party receiving a letter from another to answer within a reasonable time. Otherwise he is presumed to admit the propriety of the acts mentioned in the letter of his correspondent and to adopt them. (Civil Code 1895, § 5155; Civil Code 1910, § 5741; Code 1933, § 38-120.)

History of Code section. — This Code section is derived from the decisions in McLendon v. Wilson, Callaway & Co., 52 Ga.

42 (1874) and Bray & Bro. v. Gunn, 53 Ga. 144 (1874).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — For a statutory presumption to pass constitutional muster, it must be shown with “substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend.” Benham v. Edwards, 501 F. Supp. 1050 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd in part and vacated in part on other grounds, 678 F.2d 511 (5th Cir. 1982), vacated, 463 U.S. 1222, 103 S. Ct. 3565, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1406 (1983) (remanded for further consideration in light of Jones v. United States, 463 U.S. 354, 103 S. Ct. 3043, 77 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1983)).

Principle of former Code 1933, § 38-120 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-23) was the same as that expressed more generally in former Code 1933, § 38-409 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-36): “acquiescence or silence, when the circumstances require an answer or denial or other conduct, may amount to an admission.” Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Shalloway, 151 F.2d 548 (5th Cir. 1945).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-23 is applicable only when two parties have carried on mutual correspondence in reference to a particular matter, and one of the parties has written a letter to the other making statements concerning a subject of which the latter has knowledge, and which the latter would naturally deny if true. Defendants may not rely upon their unilateral actions to establish a mutual correspondence. Smith v. Freeport Kaolin Co., 687 F. Supp. 1550 (M.D. Ga. 1988).

Question is whether the evidence shows a due course of business as to warrant the application of O.C.G.A. § 24-4-23; the phrase “due course of business” has been construed to apply to those cases where two parties have carried on a mutual correspondence in reference to a particular matter, and one of the parties has written a letter concerning a matter which the other would naturally deny if not true. Godwin v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. App. 523, 500 S.E.2d 49 (1998).

Rebuttable presumption of fact. — Presumption of this statute is not an irrebuttable presumption of law, but one of fact, and the failure to reply is subject to explanation. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Shalloway, 151 F.2d 548 (5th Cir. 1945); Whitaker v. Paden, 78 Ga. App. 145, 50 S.E.2d 774 (1948); Georgia Health Care, Inc. v. Loeb, 151 Ga. App. 350, 259 S.E.2d 734 (1979) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-23).

Presumption arising from a failure to answer a letter is not a presumption of law, but one of fact, and subject to explanation. Godwin v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. App. 523, 500 S.E.2d 49 (1998).

Excuses for not answering. — Fact that plaintiff failed to answer a letter written to plaintiff by agent of an insurance company being in evidence, it was competent for plaintiff to explain why plaintiff did not answer, though a part of the explanation was that plaintiff's counsel advised plaintiff not to answer. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Sheppard, 85 Ga. 751, 12 S.E. 18 (1890).

An exchange of several letters is not always necessary to establish mutual correspondence; thus, plaintiff contractor's letter which mentioned outstanding invoices and which followed two letters from defendant concerning problems with contractor's product and requesting service was sent in the ordinary course of business and a charge under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-23 was warranted. Crotts Enters., Inc. v. John Payne Co., 219 Ga. App. 173, 464 S.E.2d 844 (1995).

Silence regarding terms of agreement. — Physician had a duty and obligation to respond to limitations on the physician's privileges set forth in an agreement with a hospital, and where the physician silently exercised the privileges for several years, the physician waived the physician's right to insist on compliance with other procedural requirements pertaining to the physician's termination. St. Mary's Hosp. v. Cohen, 216 Ga. App. 761, 456 S.E.2d 79 (1995).

Construction of lease agreement. — When a lessee informs the lessor, by means of three annual letters, of the construction the lessee is placing on a provision of the lease agreement, and receives no reply from the lessor, the lessor is precluded from relying on a different interpretation, since it is incumbent upon the lessor to advise the lessee that the lessor disagrees with the lessee's construction of the agreement. Wiggins v. Engelhard Minerals & Chems. Corp., 328 F. Supp. 33 (M.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 443 F.2d 1358 (5th Cir. 1971).

Letter memorializing a conversation, to which recipient failed to respond, was admissible as an admission by silence. — Trial court did not err in allowing an attorney to read a letter memorializing a conversation between him and a decedent because the out-of-court statement of the decedent referenced in the letter was admissible as an admission by silence of the executor when the attorney mailed a package containing closing documents to the executor, including a receipt the decedent had executed, and the executor mailed a check to the attorney based on the erroneous assumption that the executor needed to do so in order to pay off the advance that had been received and was referenced in the receipt; the attorney mailed the letter to the executor, returned the check, and set forth the conversation with the decedent concerning the intent behind the receipt, and the executor's failure to respond could be construed as an acquiescence to the construction of the receipt set forth in the letter. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 300 Ga. App. 703, 686 S.E.2d 324 (2009).

Instructions. — It was not error for the court to fail to give in charge to the jury the provisions of this statute, there having been no timely written request of such instructions. White Crown Fruit Jar Co. v. Cox Co., 19 Ga. App. 195, 91 S.E. 245 (1917) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-23).

Trial court properly charged a jury regarding the O.C.G.A. § 24-3-36 evidentiary presumption arising from a limited liability company's (LLC's) agent's failure to reply to a corporation's invoices because the LLC admitted receiving some of the corporation's goods and services, only disputing the amount due, and the failure to respond to an invoice was not a declaration against the LLC's interest pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 10-6-64; in addition, the charge was supported by O.C.G.A. § 24-4-23. Forrest Cambridge Apts., LLC v. Redi-Floors, Inc., 295 Ga. App. 840, 673 S.E.2d 318 (2009).

24-4-23.1. Presumption of payment of check.

(a) As used in this Code section:

(1) “Bank” means any person engaged in the business of banking and includes, in addition to a commercial bank, a savings and loan association, savings bank, or credit union.

(2) “Check” means a draft, other than a documentary draft, payable on demand and drawn on a bank, even though it is described by another term, such as “share draft” or “negotiable order of withdrawal.”

(b) In any dispute concerning payment by means of a check, a copy of the check produced in accordance with Code Section 24-5-26, together with the original bank statement that reflects payment of the check by the bank on which it was drawn or a copy thereof produced in the same manner, creates a presumption that the check has been paid. (Code 1981, § 24-4-23.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1996, p. 1306, § 16; Ga. L. 2010, p. 878, § 24/HB 1387.)

24-4-23.2. Occupancy of railroad right of way.

In any action to establish a right, title, or interest in or to real property that is a part of a railroad right of way, including a right of ingress or egress, where such action is based upon occupancy of the railroad right of way by a person or entity other than the railroad corporation or railroad company, there shall be a presumption that any such occupancy of the railroad right of way is with the permission of the railroad corporation or railroad company. Such presumption may be rebutted. (Code 1981, § 24-4-23.2, enacted by Ga. L. 2008, p. 210, § 2/HB 1283.)

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2008, p. 210, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: “(a) The General Assembly finds that the railroads and their rights of way in Georgia:

“(1) Are essential to the continued viability of this state;

“(2) Are valuable resources which must be preserved and protected;

“(3) Are essential for the economic growth and development of this state;

“(4) Provide a necessary means of transporting raw materials, agricultural products, other finished products, and consumer goods and are also essential for the safe passage of hazardous materials;

“(5) Relieve congestion on the highways and keep dangerous products and materials off our highways;

“(6) Are vital for national defense and national security; and “(7) Provide the most energy efficient means of transportation through this state, thus minimizing air pollution and fuel consumption.

“(b) The purpose of this Act is to protect the rights of way of railroads from loss by claims of adverse possession or other claims by prescription and to recognize the dimensions of these rights of way as they were identified and defined nearly 100 years ago.”

24-4-24. Estoppels defined; enumeration generally.

(a) Conclusive presumptions of law are termed estoppels; averments to the contrary of such presumptions shall not be allowed. Estoppels are not generally favored.

(b) Estoppels include presumptions in favor of:

(1) A record or judgment unreversed;

(2) The proper conduct of courts and judicial officers acting within their legitimate spheres;

(3) The proper conduct of other officers of the law after the lapse of time has rendered it dangerous to open the investigation of their acts in regard to mere formalities of the law;

(4) Ancient deeds and other instruments more than 30 years old, when they come from proper custody and possession has been held in accordance with them;

(5) Recitals in deeds, except payment of purchase money, as against a grantor, sui juris, acting in his own right, and his privies in estate, blood, and in law;

(6) A landlord's title as against his tenant in possession;

(7) Solemn admissions made in judicio;

(8) Admissions upon which other parties have acted, either to their own injury or to the benefit of the persons making the admissions.

Estoppels also include all similar cases where it would be more unjust and productive of evil to hear the truth than to forbear investigation. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3676; Code 1868, § 3700; Code 1873, § 3753; Code 1882, § 3753; Civil Code 1895, § 5150; Civil Code 1910, § 5736; Code 1933, § 38-114.)

An estoppel is a preclusion in law, which prevents a person from alleging or denying a fact, in consequence of the person's own previous act, allegation, or denial of a contrary tenor. Davis v. Collier & Beers, 13 Ga. 485 (1853).

Presumptions of law are sometimes conclusive, and an averment to the contrary will not be allowed. These are termed estoppels. Hood v. Duren, 33 Ga. App. 203, 125 S.E. 787 (1924).

Difference between waiver and estoppel is slight but there is a difference. Boston Ins. Co. v. Barnes, 120 Ga. App. 585, 171 S.E.2d 626 (1969).

Estoppels rarely resorted to. — Estoppels are never resorted to, except when it would be more unjust and more productive of evil to hear the truth than to forbear the investigation. Patterson v. Collier, 75 Ga. 419, 54 Am. R. 472 (1885); Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Atlantic & Gulf Shipping Co., 51 Ga. App. 904, 181 S.E. 310 (1935); Hollins v. State, 133 Ga. App. 183, 210 S.E.2d 354 (1974).

Estoppels are not favored. Wilkinson &

Wilson v. Thigpen, 71 Ga. 497 (1883); Corporation of Royal Exch. Assurance v. Franklin, 158 Ga. 644, 124 S.E. 172, 38 A.L.R. 626 (1924); Hood v. Duren, 33 Ga. App. 203, 125 S.E. 787 (1924).

Essential ingredient of estoppel is detriment or prejudice to one who asserts the estoppel. There must be inducement to change one's position for the worse. United States v. Ferguson, 409 F. Supp. 393 (S.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 529 F.2d 999 (5th Cir. 1976).

Reliance by invoking party. — In order to create an estoppel as authorized, the evidence must show that the party relying on such estoppel acted on the conduct of the opposite party to the relying party's detriment. Swift & Co. v. Hall, 94 Ga. App. 239, 94 S.E.2d 145 (1956); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Penrow, 142 Ga. App. 463, 236 S.E.2d 275 (1977).

Representation inducing injury. — An estoppel arises when one makes representations to another concerning a matter, about which the other acts to one's injury or to the benefit of the person making the representations. Gostin v. Scott, 80 Ga. App. 630, 56 S.E.2d 778 (1949); Usry v. Hadden, 87 Ga.

App. 710, 75 S.E.2d 275 (1953); Walker v. Sutton, 222 Ga. App. 638, 476 S.E.2d 34 (1996).

Good faith and reasonable diligence. — Since the whole doctrine of estoppel is a creature of equity and governed by equitable principles, it necessarily follows that the party who claims the benefit of an estoppel must not only have been free from fraud in the transaction, but must have acted with good faith and reasonable diligence; otherwise, no equity will arise in that party's favor. Bachrodt Realty Corp. v. Walker, 237 Ga. 696, 229 S.E.2d 455 (1976).

Strangers not bound. — Estoppels must be mutual. Strangers can neither take advantage of, nor be bound by an estoppel. Its binding effect is between the immediate parties, their privies in blood, in law and by estate. Howard v. Perkins, 229 Ga. 279, 191 S.E.2d 46 (1972).

Legislative act. — Party is not estopped from denying any fact which is recited in a legislative act. Dougherty v. Bethune, 7 Ga. 90 (1849); Thornton v. Lane, 11 Ga. 459 (1852).

Unconstitutional act. — As between individuals, when no question of the general welfare of society or public policy is involved, the principle of estoppel runs throughout the law. Although an act be unconstitutional and void, it will operate as an estoppel upon the party applying for the estoppel, and procuring the estoppel's passage and accepting the estoppel's benefits. Christopher v. Christopher, 198 Ga. 361, 31 S.E.2d 818 (1944).

Statute of frauds. — Summary judgment in favor of a psychiatrist in a consultant's breach of an oral contract claim was proper as the oral assumption by the psychiatrist of the debts of the medical practice that the psychiatrist purchased, including the consultant's fees, was barred by the Statute of Frauds, O.C.G.A. § 13-5-30(2), because it was not in writing; further, as it was conceded that the agreement was secondary in nature and not an original undertaking, claims that it was established pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-4-24 lacked merit. Grumet v. Bunt, 279 Ga. App. 728, 632 S.E.2d 486 (2006).

Waiver or estoppel defense is not available in a case involving only violations of Georgia and/or federal securities laws. Jones v. Miles, 656 F.2d 103 (5th Cir. 1981).

Estoppel by Judgment

Scope of estoppel. — Doctrine of estoppel by judgment is applied only as to such matters within the scope of the pleadings in the previous litigation as necessarily had to be adjudicated in order for the previous judgment or decree to be rendered, or as to such matters within the scope of the pleadings as might or might not have been adjudicated, but which are shown by aliunde proof to have been actually litigated and determined. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 190 Ga. 229, 9 S.E.2d 70 (1940); Mimms v. Sisk Decorating Co., 156 Ga. App. 572, 275 S.E.2d 148 (1980).

An estoppel by judgment occurs only as to such matters as were necessarily or actually adjudicated in the former litigation. Greyhound Lines v. Cobb County, 523 F. Supp. 422 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 681 F.2d 1327 (11th Cir. 1982).

Res judicata and estoppel distinguished.

— Under the doctrine of res judicata, whenever there has been a judgment by a court of competent jurisdiction in a former litigation between the same parties, based upon the same cause of action as a pending litigation, the litigants are bound to the extent of all matters put in issue or which under the rules of law might have been put in issue by the pleadings in the previous litigation. A somewhat different rule applies in regard to the doctrine of estoppel by judgment since the latter doctrine has reference to previous litigation between the same parties based upon a different cause of action. In the latter case, there is an estoppel by judgment only as to such matters as were necessarily or actually adjudicated in the former litigation; that is to say, there is an estoppel by judgment only as to such matters within the scope of the previous pleadings as necessarily had to be adjudicated in order for the previous judgment to be rendered, or as to such matters, within the scope of those pleadings, as might or might not have been adjudicated, but which are shown by aliunde proof to have been actually litigated and determined. Harvey v. Wright, 80 Ga. App. 232, 55 S.E.2d 835 (1949).

To whom applicable. — Estoppels apply only as between parties and privies to the suit or litigation. Wilkinson & Wilson v. Thigpen, 71 Ga. 497 (1883).

Not binding on nonparty. — One who was physically present at a trial, but took no part therein, was not bound by a judgment in a case to which one was not a party. Calhoun v. Williamson, 76 Ga. App. 91, 45 S.E.2d 87 (1947).

Validity of conviction and sentence. — There is a presumption in favor of the validity of a conviction and sentence imposed upon the accused and the burden of overcoming that presumption in a habeas corpus proceeding is on the accused. Cobb v. Dutton, 222 Ga. 11, 148 S.E.2d 399 (1966); Dutton v. Parker, 222 Ga. 532, 150 S.E.2d 833 (1966); Dutton v. Morris, 222 Ga. 595, 151 S.E.2d 125 (1966); Beavers v. Smith, 227 Ga. 344, 180 S.E.2d 717 (1971); Smith v. Brown, 228 Ga. 584, 187 S.E.2d 142 (1972); Brown v. Holland, 228 Ga. 628, 187 S.E.2d 246 (1972); Burton v. Caldwell, 228 Ga. 795, 187 S.E.2d 900 (1972); Caldwell v. Beard, 232 Ga. 701, 208 S.E.2d 564 (1974).

Absence of transcript on appeal. — When the defendant does not request that the transcript of evidence of the trial be sent up on appeal, the verdict and judgment are presumed to be valid. Hiller v. Culbreth, 139 Ga. App. 351, 228 S.E.2d 374 (1976).

Criminal defendant's absence during trial. — Defendant's testimony that defendant was not present during defendant's trial but was in the judge's office was not sufficient to overcome the presumption in favor of the conviction as the able counsel representing the defendant may have with defendant's consent or in defendant's presence waived defendant's presence in the courtroom, which the defendant could have done; or the prisoner may have voluntarily absented oneself from the courtroom during the trial, in which case the defendant would not be allowed to take advantage of defendant's own laches. Dutton v. Morris, 222 Ga. 595, 151 S.E.2d 125 (1966).

Burden of proof in habeas corpus proceeding. — Presumption can no longer be indulged that since there is a presumption in favor of the validity of a sentence, especially when based on a plea of guilty, the burden of overcoming this is upon the prisoner. Purvis v. Connell, 227 Ga. 764, 182 S.E.2d 892 (1971).

Burden of proof. — When a judgment is relied on to establish an estoppel, the burden is on the party relying on the former judgment to prove that the judgment is valid, and that the particular matter in controversy was necessarily or actually determined in the former litigation. Hunter v. Associated Mtg. Cos., 183 Ga. 506, 188 S.E. 700 (1936); Gormley v. Cleaveland, 187 Ga. 457, 200 S.E. 793 (1939); South Am. Managers, Inc. v. Reeves, 220 Ga. 493, 140 S.E.2d 201 (1965); Allen v. Smith, 223 Ga. 265, 154 S.E.2d 605 (1967).

Admissibility of decree. — When a decree is offered in evidence to establish any particular state of facts, or as an adjudication upon the subject matter, such decree is admissible only when accompanied by the entire record of the suit in which the decree was rendered. Holcombe v. Jones, 197 Ga. 825, 30 S.E.2d 903 (1944).

Recital in final order. — When the final order upon an appraiser's return recites that notice has been published "as required by law," and the entire record with respect to the year's support is on its face full and complete, the recital must be accepted as true, in the absence of aliunde evidence conclusively showing that it is in fact untrue. Southern Oldsmobile Co. v. Baker, 25 Ga. App. 580, 103 S.E. 826 (1920).

Consent decree. — Decree made with the consent and at the instance of a party cannot be set aside by the party by bill of review, unless, by clerical error something has been inserted therein as by consent which had not been consented to. Murphy v. Mayor of Savannah, 73 Ga. 263 (1884).

Mandamus order. — Under the doctrine of estoppel by judgment, a mandamus order requiring the defendants to issue to the plaintiff a permit to operate taxicabs, which on review by the Supreme Court was affirmed, is conclusive against the defendants in a subsequent proceeding for contempt. Settle v. McWhorter, 203 Ga. 93, 45 S.E.2d 210 (1947).

Workers' compensation. — Doctrines of res judicata and estoppel by judgment are applicable to awards of the State Board of Workers' Compensation on all questions of fact in matters in which the board has jurisdiction. Mimms v. Sisk Decorating Co., 156 Ga. App. 572, 275 S.E.2d 148 (1980).

Rescission of contract of sale. — When the petition under consideration in the second suit arising from the same occurrence has already been held by the Court of Appeals on a previous appeal to state a cause of action for rescission of a contract of sale of a car based upon the fraud and deceit of the defendant, which judgment was not vacated, reversed, or modified and when the contents of the petition in the second suit are substantially the same as that of the previous action in which the plaintiff was nonsuited, it is error to dismiss the case on the ground that the plaintiff has made inconsistent elections as to the affirmation or repudiation of the contract in issue. McBurney v. Woodward, 86 Ga. App. 629, 72 S.E.2d 89 (1952).

Name of firm. — Defendants were estopped from denying the character and name under which the defendants traded and obtained credit after judgment had been rendered against the defendants covering the transaction. Georgia Ice Co. v. Porter & Meakin, 70 Ga. 637 (1883).

Regularity of judicial proceedings. — There is a presumption in favor of the regularity and legality of all proceedings in the superior court. Johnson v. Cleveland, 131 Ga. App. 560, 206 S.E.2d 704 (1974); Bennett v. Adel Banking Co., 144 Ga. App. 282, 241 S.E.2d 23 (1977); Key v. State, 147 Ga. App. 800, 250 S.E.2d 527 (1978).

Judicial officer acting legally. — Presumption of law is that a judicial officer, or court, has acted legally within the officer's proper sphere. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Ham, 78 Ga. App. 403, 50 S.E.2d 831 (1948).

Presumption of proper conduct of trial judge's duties. — In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it is presumed that a trial judge's conduct in performing the judge's official duties was proper. Riggins v. State, 159 Ga. App. 791, 285 S.E.2d 579 (1981).

Juror excused properly. — In the absence of any evidence in the record as to who actually excused a juror in question and whether the person who excused the juror was one of the two persons authorized to do so, it is presumed that the trial court and the court's officers performed their duties properly. Thomas v. State, 174 Ga. App. 560, 330 S.E.2d 777 (1985).

Judgment supported by facts. — In reviewing judgments of the lower court, the Court of Appeals presumes that such order or judgment is supported by every fact essential to make it valid and binding. Pichulik v. Simpson, 123 Ga. App. 604, 181 S.E.2d 925 (1971); Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Echols, 138 Ga. App. 593, 226 S.E.2d 742 (1976).

Ministerial acts by judicial officer. — There is a presumption in favor of the regularity and legality of all proceedings in the courts, but circumstances attending a purely ministerial act may be investigated, even though the person performing the act is a judicial officer. Vaughan v. Car Tapes, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 178, 217 S.E.2d 436 (1975).

Rebuttable presumption. — Presumption in favor of the regularity of judgments and proper conduct of courts and judicial officers set forth in statute is rebuttable; the ordinary rules of evidence apply in such rebuttal. Balkcom v. Vickers, 220 Ga. 345, 138 S.E.2d 868 (1964).

Estoppel cannot be basis of title to land. — Davis v. Auerbach, 78 Ga. App. 575, 51 S.E.2d 527 (1949).

Although O.C.G.A. § 24-4-24 prohibits a grantor from denying recitals contained within the grantor's deed, it is insufficient to establish title. Yaali, Ltd. v. Barnes & Noble, Inc., 269 Ga. 695, 506 S.E.2d 116 (1998).

Parties bound. — Recitals in deeds bind not only the parties thereto, but their privies in estate. Atlanta Land & Loan Co. v. Haile, 106 Ga. 498, 32 S.E. 606 (1899); Wyley Loose Leaf Co. v. Bird, 159 Ga. 246, 125 S.E. 496 (1924); Doe v. Newton, 171 Ga. 418, 156 S.E. 25 (1930); Williams v. Harris, 207 Ga. 576, 63 S.E.2d 386 (1951); Bell v. Studdard, 220 Ga. 756, 141 S.E.2d 536 (1965).

Administrator bound. — When the grantor filed a sworn bill, alleging that the grantor made an instrument as a deed, and that the instrument was procured by fraud, and sought to have the instrument canceled or reformed, after the grantor's death, the grantor's administrator, who was made a party in the grantor's stead, was estopped from denying the character of the paper as a deed. Youngblood v. Youngblood, 74 Ga. 614 (1885).

Specificity of recital. — In order to create an estoppel, the recital in the deed must be specific, and an estoppel by a recital in a deed will not extend beyond the specific fact contained in the recital. Toland v. Brewster, 144 Ga. 236, 86 S.E. 1089 (1915); Doe v. Newton, 171 Ga. 418, 156 S.E. 25 (1930).

Conclusiveness of recital as to consideration. — When the statement in a deed as to its consideration is merely by way of recital, the actual consideration of the deed is subject to explanation; but if the consideration is referred to in the deed in such a way as to make it one of the terms or conditions of the contract, it cannot be varied by parol. Sikes v. Sikes, 162 Ga. 302, 133 S.E. 239 (1926); Shapiro v. Steinberg, 179 Ga. 18, 175 S.E. 1 (1934).

Recital of payment of the purchase-money in a deed or other contract does not estop the maker from denying the fact and proving the contrary. McCann v. Glynn Lumber Co., 199 Ga. 669, 34 S.E.2d 839 (1945).

Recital of administrator. — Statute will not allow an administrator to dispute the truth of a solemn recital contained in the administrator's deed that the property was exposed for sale and that the highest bid was a stated sum, and that the administrator held the property therefor. The administrator may deny that the administrator has received the proceeds of the sale, but cannot deny the truth of the recital that the property was sold at public outcry for a stated sum. Gammage v. Perry, 29 Ga. App. 427, 116 S.E. 126 (1923).

Collection of proceeds of sale by executrix. — An executrix who duly and legally advertises and sells the land of an estate and makes a deed thereto in accordance with the sale cannot avoid liability to the heirs or creditors of the estate by showing that the executrix did not in fact collect the proceeds of the sale. Carder v. Arundel Mtg. Co., 47 Ga. App. 309, 170 S.E. 312 (1933).

Usurious note secured by deed. — One who makes a usurious note and secures the note's payment by executing a deed to realty, the usury not appearing upon the face of the papers is, as against another whom one induces to purchase the note by representing that it and the deed "are valid and all right" (the purchase being made in good faith and in ignorance of the usury), estopped from setting up the usury in the transaction. Henry v. McAllister, 99 Ga. 557, 26 S.E. 469 (1896).

Restrictive covenants. — Plaintiff was not estopped by acquiescence from seeking to enjoin violations of restrictive covenants by defendants merely because the same covenants were previously violated by other and different parties, by more remote sales. Dooley v. Savannah Bank & Trust Co., 199 Ga. 353, 34 S.E.2d 522 (1945).

Easement. — Grantee who accepts a deed to the property granted is estopped to deny the truth of a recital that the grantor had previously granted an easement or interest in the property to another person. Toland v. Brewster, 144 Ga. 236, 86 S.E. 1089 (1915).

Reliance on plat. — When an owner of land sells a part of the land in lots for residential purposes, the sales being made with reference to a plat by which another part of the land is designated as a park, and when the purchasers in buying rely upon the plat, the seller is estopped from asserting a claim adverse to the right of the purchasers, or their assigns, to have the land restricted to use as a park and to share such use. Caffey v. Parris, 186 Ga. 303, 197 S.E. 898 (1938).

Reacquisition of property. — When the grantor in a first security deed reacquired the property by purchasing the property at a sale under a power contained in such deed, a junior security deed made to another by the same grantor immediately attached as a first claim upon the property, and constituted an encumbrance thereon as against a subsequent grantee of such purchaser, notwithstanding the second security deed may show upon the deed's face that the deed is a junior deed. Federal Land Bank v. Bank of Lenox, 192 Ga. 543, 16 S.E.2d 9 (1941).

Mortgagee. — If claimant at time of execution of mortgage stated to the mortgagee that property belonged to her husband, the mortgagor, and he acted thereon in making the loan and taking the mortgage, she would be estopped from asserting her title to the property as against the plaintiff, the mortgagee. Tanner v. Tanner, 52 Ga. App. 460, 183 S.E. 666 (1936).

Exception of interest in land contained in a deed is notice to the grantee and the grantee's successors. Brown v. Mathis, 201 Ga. 740, 41 S.E.2d 137 (1947).

No title to easement defeated claim of title by estoppel. — Because at the time the appellee executed the deed to the appellant the appellee had no title to the easement which the appellee attempted to convey to appellant, the appellant's claim of title by estoppel was completely without merit. Elrod v. Elrod, 272 Ga. 188, 526 S.E.2d 339 (2000).

Equitable Estoppel1. Solemn Admissions in Judicio*Admission in judicio conclusively binding.

— Solemn admission in judicio is, at least until withdrawn after notice, conclusively binding upon the parties thereto. Tribble v. State, 89 Ga. App. 593, 80 S.E.2d 711 (1954); Spector v. Model Constr. Co., 95 Ga. App. 14, 96 S.E.2d 900 (1957); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Anderson, 107 Ga. App. 348, 130 S.E.2d 144, cert. dismissed, 219 Ga. 211, 132 S.E.2d 556 (1963); McDonald v. Hester, 115 Ga. App. 740, 155 S.E.2d 720 (1967).

Daughter who admitted that assets she took from her grandmother still belonged to her grandmother was not allowed to subsequently claim that she received the assets as a loan, and the probate court properly denied the daughter's motion for an order requiring the grandmother's guardian to return assets the guardian seized from the daughter, based on the daughter's claim that she has a legal right to the property. In re McCool, 267 Ga. App. 445, 600 S.E.2d 403 (2004).

Applicable to facts in particular case. —

Admissions in judicio apply only to facts in litigations in a particular case. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. v. Pinyan, 155 Ga. App. 343, 270 S.E.2d 883 (1980).

Inconsistent positions. — When a person has assumed a certain position in a litigation, and has succeeded in maintaining that position through a judgment or decision of the court, or through the acquiescence of the opposite party, to the detriment of that party, the person will not be permitted to assume a contrary position in a subsequent suit between the parties relating to the same subject-matter. Florence, Phillips & Co. v.

Newsome, 26 Ga. App. 501, 106 S.E. 619 (1921).

Testimony in case between other parties.

— Admissions made in one suit do not estop a witness from testifying differently in a case between other parties. Wilkinson & Wilson v. Thigpen, 71 Ga. 497 (1883).

Admission in pleadings. — Party to a suit or proceeding will not be allowed to disprove an admission made in the party's pleadings, without withdrawing the pleading from the record. Duke v. Ayers, 163 Ga. 444, 136 S.E. 410 (1927); Anderson v. Oakley, 133 Ga. App. 758, 212 S.E.2d 875 (1975).

Admission not withdrawn. — Trial court properly granted a seller's motion for partial summary judgment, and denied the escrow agent's motion to dismiss, in the seller's suit to recover the earnest money deposited by the buyers as the buyers admitted in their answer that the buyers knew the identity and location of the property, and although the buyers later amended their answer to raise a Georgia Statute of Frauds, O.C.G.A. § 13-5-30, defense, the buyers never withdrew their admission, and the buyers and the escrow agent were bound by the admission; the admission constituted a solemn admission in judicio under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-24(b)(7), and created a conclusive presumption of law under § 24-4-24(a). Nhan v. Wellington Square, LLC, 263 Ga. App. 717, 589 S.E.2d 285 (2003).

Admissions in forfeiture complaint. —

District attorney was bound by an admission in judicio in a forfeiture complaint since the complaint admitted that the claimants were the purported owners or interest holders of real and personal property sought to be forfeited, and went on to recite the recordation of the book and page of the deed in the superior court clerk's records that listed claimants as owners of the property. Bell v. State, 234 Ga. App. 693, 507 S.E.2d 535 (1998).

Civil Practice Act did not wipe out or destroy the law in Georgia to the effect that a party to an action is bound by material allegations made in the party's pleadings so long as the allegations remain in the party's pleadings, and the plaintiff's contradictory pleadings, if any, are to be construed in favor of the defendant. Anderson v. Oakley, 133 Ga. App. 758, 212 S.E.2d 875 (1975).

Parties and privies bound. — Estoppels by admissions made in pleading apply only between parties and privies to the suit or litigation in which the admissions relied on as an estoppel were made. Murray County v. Pickering, 198 Ga. 354, 31 S.E.2d 722 (1944).

Admissions contained in stricken plea may be introduced in evidence by the opposite party. Such admissions when thus made are to be taken as true, because the admissions are asserted by the party personally; and while the party may withdraw the admissions formally from the pleadings, the party cannot by a mere withdrawal avoid the effect of the admissions since the admissions may still be used as evidence against the party. Stallings v. Britt, 204 Ga. 250, 49 S.E.2d 517 (1948).

Admission of prima facie case. — Defendant who in a plea has admitted a prima facie case in favor of the plaintiff for the purpose of obtaining the opening and conclusion in the case cannot, after having failed to carry the burden thus assumed, make an amendment withdrawing such admission and thus preclude the plaintiff from the right to rely upon the admission contained in the original plea. Fisher v. George S. Jones Co., 108 Ga. 490, 34 S.E. 172 (1899).

An agreed statement of facts entered into between the parties to an action for the purpose of dispensing with proof on some or all of the issues presented by the pleadings constitutes a solemn admission in judicio, and so long as the admission remains in the case, the admission is conclusive so as to preclude either party from introducing evidence to disprove or contradict the admission. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Clarke, 187 Ga. 774, 2 S.E.2d 608 (1939); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Anderson, 107 Ga. App. 348, 130 S.E.2d 144, cert. dismissed, 219 Ga. 211, 132 S.E.2d 556 (1963); McDonald v. Hester, 115 Ga. App. 740, 155 S.E.2d 720 (1967); Holland-America Line v. United Coops., 124 Ga. App. 375, 183 S.E.2d 620 (1971).

Criminal defendant's agreed statement of facts. — In criminal cases, the defendant's agreed statement of facts upon which a case is to be tried constitutes a solemn admission in judicio and direct evidence of the fact stated. Tribble v. State, 89 Ga. App. 593, 80 S.E.2d 711 (1954).

Defendant's stipulation to the elements of the criminal charge against defendant, including venue, reserving for appeal only the issue of the sufficiency of the search warrant affidavit, was conclusively binding upon defendant and waived defendant's right to raise the issue of venue on appeal. Sanders v. State, 252 Ga. App. 609, 556 S.E.2d 505 (2001).

Repudiation of stipulations from former trial. — On a new trial of a case, either party may, as a matter of right, withdraw from and repudiate an agreed statement of facts had at the former trial, by giving proper and timely notice of such intended action to the opposite party, provided the opposite party has not been injured thereby. In such case, the agreed statement of facts is admissible in evidence against the party making the statement, in favor of the opposite party. It is not, however, absolutely binding and conclusive upon the party by whom the statement was signed, but it is that party's right to disprove, rebut, or explain any statement therein contained. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Clarke, 187 Ga. 774, 2 S.E.2d 608 (1939).

Statements of counsel during the trial of a case may be regarded as admissions in judicio. Gregory v. Star Enters., Inc., 122 Ga. App. 12, 176 S.E.2d 241 (1970).

Alleged admission in judicio by investor's attorney in prior action that investor's note and agreement were enforceable did not harm investor's case as the investor presented evidence that the investor owed nothing under the note and agreement; also, the corporation could not rely on that admission since issue preclusion based upon admissions in judicio was based on the equitable doctrine of estoppel and the alleged statement was made in reliance on fraudulent representations made by the three individual principals to which equity did not apply. Kothari v. Patel, 262 Ga. App. 168, 585 S.E.2d 97 (2003).

Suggestions of counsel. — If, in discussing a case, every suggestion or passing statement of each attorney touching what might be the effect of a deed, will, or other instrument would irrevocably fix that construction upon it, the courts might be much hampered in placing a proper judicial construction on the paper and might sometimes be compelled to construe the same clause in very conflicting ways, none of which might be the correct way. The eloquence of the advocate may sometimes soar a little without being weighted down with the fear of estoppel. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. Gill, 222 Ga. 760, 152 S.E.2d 411 (1966).

Unfavorable testimony of party. — Party testifying in the party's own behalf is not entitled to a finding in the party's favor if that version of the party's testimony which is most unfavorable to the party shows that the party is not entitled to recover. Norair Eng'r Corp. v. Saint Joseph's Hosp., 147 Ga. App. 595, 249 S.E.2d 642 (1978).

Confession. — Complete confession from the witness stand of participation in the crime provides more than sufficient evidence to convict. Jenkins v. State, 237 Ga. 493, 228 S.E.2d 877 (1976).

Mandamus. — When in a mandamus proceeding plaintiffs in error took position that bill of exceptions was certified conditionally in order that the trial court might have jurisdiction to sign another certificate, plaintiffs are later estopped to contend that the certificate is unconditional. NAACP v. Williams, 98 Ga. App. 74, 104 S.E.2d 923 (1958), cert. denied, 359 U.S. 550, 79 S. Ct. 947, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1023 (1959).

Condemnation. — Once the assessor has made the award in a condemnation proceeding the condemnor is estopped from taking a position contrary to its solemn admissions in judicio and dismissing the suit. Housing Auth. v. Mercer, 123 Ga. App. 38, 179 S.E.2d 275 (1970).

Testimony of insured. — None of insured's testimony as to whether nephew of insured was covered by motor vehicle policy at time of vehicle accident constituted an admission in judicio binding upon insurer. Allstate Ins. Co. v. Sapp, 223 Ga. App. 443, 477 S.E.2d 869 (1996).

2. Estoppel by Other Conduct

Elements. — In order to constitute estoppel by conduct, there must concur: first, a false representation or concealment of facts; second, it must be within the knowledge of the party making the one or concealing the other; third, the person affected thereby must be ignorant of the truth; fourth, the person seeking to influence the conduct of the other must act intentionally for that purpose; and, fifth, persons complaining shall have been induced to act by reason of such conduct of the other. Calhoun v. Williamson, 76 Ga. App. 91, 45 S.E.2d 87 (1947).

Origin of estoppel in pais is found in the doctrine of equity that if a representation be made to another who deals upon the faith of the representation, the former must make the representation good if the former knew or was bound to know the representation to be false. Elliott v. Keith, 102 Ga. 117, 29 S.E. 155 (1897); Rieves v. Smith, 184 Ga. 657, 192 S.E. 372 (1937).

Basis of equitable estoppel is to promote the equity and justice of the individual case by preventing a party from asserting the party's rights under a general technical rule of law, when the party has so conducted oneself that it would be contrary to equity and good conscience for that party to allege and prove the truth. Davis v. Auerbach, 78 Ga. App. 575, 51 S.E.2d 527 (1949).

Party invoking estoppel must show detriment and reliance. — One invoking the conduct of another as constituting an estoppel in pais must show that one has acted thereon to one's detriment, or has been hurt thereby, before one can successfully urge such conduct as an estoppel in pais. Tompkins v. Philips, 12 Ga. 52 (1852); Gaither v. Gaither, 23 Ga. 521 (1857); Rowe v. Sam Weichselbaum Co., 3 Ga. App. 504, 60 S.E. 275 (1908); Hancock v. King, 133 Ga. 734, 66 S.E. 949 (1910); Union Brokerage Co. v. Beall Bros., 30 Ga. App. 748, 119 S.E. 533 (1923); Kaufman v. Young, 32 Ga. App. 135, 122 S.E. 822 (1924).

No creation of new right. — Operation of this principle is not direct so as to create a new right in the opposite party, but primarily indirect and negative against the party making the statement, precluding the party and the party's privies from denying the truth of the statement or basing a defense on the statement's untruth. Hood v. Duren, 33 Ga. App. 203, 125 S.E. 787 (1924); Rieves v. Smith, 184 Ga. 657, 192 S.E. 372 (1937).

Estoppel cannot be waived. — While two contracting parties may agree that waivers must be in writing, there is no authority that holds the parties may agree that an estoppel may not arise against one or the other party if one's conduct is such as to amount to estoppel. Boston Ins. Co. v. Barnes, 120 Ga. App. 585, 171 S.E.2d 626 (1969).

Pleading unnecessary. — While the general rule is that estoppel, to be relied on, must be pleaded yet there are well-recognized exceptions to this general rule. Thus, since it is unnecessary to file a replication, this rule does not apply when the plaintiff relies upon estoppel in order to defeat a defense raised by the defendant in the defendant's answer, and in such a case evidence in rebuttal of other evidence of the defendant is admissible for the plaintiff for the purpose of showing an estoppel, even though estoppel is not pleaded, nor, if the elements and facts of an estoppel are set out, is it necessary that the pleader should have used the word "estoppel." Rieves v. Smith, 184 Ga. 657, 192 S.E. 372 (1937).

Estoppel is question for jury, unless it is unequivocally established. Tune v. Beeland, 131 Ga. 528, 62 S.E. 976 (1908); Corporation of Royal Exch. Assurance v. Franklin, 158 Ga. 644, 124 S.E. 172, 38 ALR 626 (1924); Calhoun v. Williamson, 76 Ga. App. 91, 45 S.E.2d 87 (1947); Eiberger v. West, 247 Ga. 767, 281 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

Estoppel is usually an issue of fact to be decided by the jury. Eiberger v. West, 247 Ga. 767, 281 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

Changing reason for conduct after litigation begins. — Rule which prevents one who has given a reason for one's conduct and decision in a matter from placing one's conduct upon another and different ground after litigation has begun is but an application of the principle of estoppel in pais, and applies only when one's conduct has caused another to act respecting the matter to the injury and detriment of the latter, and when the latter would be placed at an inequitable disadvantage, should the former be allowed to rely upon a ground other than that first urged as a reason for one's conduct and decision in the matter. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Atlantic & Gulf Shipping Co., 51 Ga. App. 904, 181 S.E. 310 (1935).

Silence. — When one under a duty to speak fails to do so, one is thereafter estopped to deny what one's silence imports. Cheek v. J. Allen Couch & Son Funeral Home, 125 Ga. App. 438, 187 S.E.2d 907 (1972).

Estoppel of minor. — Admissions by one, upon which others have acted, either to their own injury or for the benefit of the person making the admissions, are deemed estoppels and even minors may be estopped by their admissions from denying the truth of the admissions, or by their silence when the circumstances call for a disclosure of their claims or their rights, provided the minor has arrived at those years of discretion when a fraudulent intent can be reasonably imputed to the minor; a married woman has no legal rights that can exempt her from this rule of law and justice; that is, the law of estoppel in pais. Wootten v. Braswell, 48 Ga. App. 312, 172 S.E. 679 (1934).

Minority defense to contract. — Defendant is estopped from exercising one's privilege of avoiding a fair and reasonable contract upon the ground of defendant's minority at the time the agreement was made, when it appears that the defendant has consumed its irrestorable benefits; and when it appears that the plaintiff, dealing in good faith and being free from negligence was induced to act to plaintiff's injury by reason of the false and fraudulent representation of the defendant with respect to defendant's apparent majority. Hood v. Duren, 33 Ga. App. 203, 125 S.E. 787 (1924).

Existence or effect of contract. — Person may be estopped from questioning the existence or effect of a contract, the existence of which the person has asserted to the other party, to the person's own benefit or the injury of the other. Rieves v. Smith, 184 Ga. 657, 192 S.E. 372 (1937).

Nonsuit by consent. — Party is estopped from complaint of the grant of the nonsuit when it appears, from the record, that a nonsuit was granted upon motion of the party's counsel. Patterson v. Sams, 2 Ga. App. 755, 59 S.E. 18 (1907).

Validity of title to personalty. — False and fraudulent representations as to the validity of the title to personalty, acted on by another to that person's injury, will estop the maker of the representations from setting up title to the property. Roberts v. Davis, 72 Ga. 819 (1884).

Silence concerning purchase of chattel. — Mere silence by one who stands by and sees another make a gift to a third person of a chattel in which one has an interest will not alone estop one from asserting one's title against the donee. Hartz v. Hartz, 144 Ga. 98, 86 S.E. 220 (1915).

Inducement to buy property. — One who by acts or declarations induces another to buy property, as the property of a third person, is thereby estopped from setting up title in themselves to that property; but to make such acts or declarations a bar, it should appear that the acts or declarations were known to the purchaser, and that the purchaser acted upon the acts or declarations, and not upon the purchaser's own knowledge or judgment. McCune v. McMichael, 29 Ga. 312 (1859).

Time of insisting on invalidity of instrument. — Though an instrument may be “absolutely void,” this does not imply that there is no limit to the time within which its void character may be insisted upon. Truth is always precious, but it may become too late to assert it. It may be “more unjust and productive of more evil to hear the truth than to forbear the investigation”. Sutton v. Aiken, 62 Ga. 733 (1879).

Acceptance of insurance premiums and placing the money in the general funds of the defendant insurer amounted to such an unconditional acceptance as to estop the defendant to contend that the insured's policy was not in force. Progressive Fire Ins. Co. v. Morrison, 72 Ga. App. 473, 34 S.E.2d 173 (1945); Georgia Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Rainwater, 132 Ga. App. 170, 207 S.E.2d 610 (1974).

Change in insurance policy. — Insurer may be estopped from relying on a provision in a policy that the agent or officer cannot waive or change the insurance unless by writing attached, when the agent consents to changes in the policy, but fails to make the writing. Corporation of Royal Exch. Assurance v. Franklin, 158 Ga. 644, 124 S.E. 172, 38 A.L.R. 626 (1924).

Clause in insurance policy. — An insurer is estopped to deny coverage under a clause which provided that a lack of occupancy for more than 60 days would void coverage, since the insurer, through the insurer's agent, knew of the lack of occupancy when the building was first insured, and at all times thereafter. Boston Ins. Co. v. Barnes, 120 Ga. App. 585, 171 S.E.2d 626 (1969).

Contesting amount of note. — Estoppel to contest the amount of a note does not result from paying part and obtaining an indefinite extension of time for payment of the balance. Long v. Lawson, 7 Ga. App. 460, 67 S.E. 123 (1910).

Extension of time from holder of note. — Maker of promissory notes who obtains from the holder an extension of time for the payment of the principal due on each note, and, as a consideration therefor, pays the interest due on each of the notes, is precluded thereby from setting up that the holder is not the owner thereof. Such agreement, it is true, does not change the real title to the notes, but it bars the maker from contesting the ownership with the holder. Yarbrough v. Seagraves, 47 Ga. App. 436, 170 S.E. 553 (1933).

Estoppel can lie to bar defense of usury. Eiberger v. West, 247 Ga. 767, 281 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

When note requiring usury was prepared by a borrower and presented to an unwary lender doctrine of estoppel was applicable. Eiberger v. West, 247 Ga. 767, 281 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

Silence by guarantors at time of renewing of corporate obligations estops them as a matter of law from asserting defenses of which they then had knowledge. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Yeager Enters., 247 Ga. 797, 279 S.E.2d 674 (1981).

Performance bond. — When there is no evidence that the makers of a performance bond acted on any conduct or declarations of the surety in releasing a third party from liability for the bond premium, the surety was not estopped from maintaining an action on an application signed by the makers whereby the makers obligated themselves to pay the premium on the bond. Loftis Plumbing & Heating Co. v. American Sur. Co., 74 Ga. App. 590, 40 S.E.2d 667 (1946).

Sureties on government bond. — Sureties on county treasurer's bond are estopped from setting up by parol that the bond was delivered conditionally, the treasurer having a commission, and possession of the revenues in consequence of the bond. Lewis v. Board of Comm'rs, 70 Ga. 486 (1883).

Surety on bond to dissolve garnishment is estopped from denying that the garnishee had effects belonging to the defendants or that the garnishee was indebted to the defendants in a sum equal to the amount that might be recovered against the defendants. Nevin v. Fouche, 77 Ga. 47 (1886).

Delivery of assets to parties not entitled. — Delivery of assets to parties, who were not entitled, was, to that extent, a devastavit, and the party entitled is not estopped by the party's acts of consenting to the distribution, from claiming of the administrator the party's full rights as heir-at-law. Davis v. Bagley, 40 Ga. 181, 2 Am. R. 570 (1869).

When chattels are mistakenly delivered to the vendee of realty subsequent to the sale thereof upon the vendee's representation that the chattels were included in the sale, when in fact the chattels were not so included, such delivery is not a waiver of the rights of the plaintiff to a recovery of the chattels upon plaintiff's ascertainment of the true state of facts, nor is the plaintiff estopped thereby from asserting title to the personality. Gostin v. Scott, 80 Ga. App. 630, 56 S.E.2d 778 (1949).

Payment to general contractor. — When subcontractor and homeowner had an agreement subsequent to the original contract whereby subcontractor consented for homeowner to make payment for all work to the general contractor which payment was made, the subcontractor's action worked as an estoppel against the subcontractor. Hill v. Brooks, 133 Ga. App. 138, 210 S.E.2d 176 (1974).

Violator of bylaw seeking benefit of bylaw. — One who borrows money from a building and loan association cannot set up, in defense to an action for the recovery of the money, that the loan was made in disregard of a bylaw prohibiting the making of loans to any persons other than those who have been members of the association for a stated period. Whatever may be the object of such a bylaw, one who obtains a benefit from a violation of the bylaw is estopped from taking any advantage of the fact that such violation occurred. Reynolds v. Georgia State Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 102 Ga. 126, 29 S.E. 187 (1897).

Sale for benefit of creditors. — Doctrine of estoppel would apply and forbid a dissatisfied creditor from in any manner interfering with or preventing the consummation of an agreement to turn a stock of goods over to a third person to sell for the benefit of creditors, to which one had been a consenting party. Stovall Co. v. Shepherd Co., 10 Ga. App. 498, 73 S.E. 761 (1912).

Purchaser setting up invalidity of judicial sale. — In suit by a sheriff upon a bid at the sale of personalty, the bidder is estopped from setting up as a defense the invalidity of the sale when, after bidding off the property, the bidder was given possession of the property, and removed the property, so that the sheriff could not find the property to resell the property. McDonald v. Ellis, 17 Ga. App. 471, 87 S.E. 711 (1916).

When year's support was set apart to a widow and minor children, and the widow, in order to obtain a loan upon the property, represented to the lender that she needed the loan as a support for herself and the children, and the loan was made upon the faith of such representation, and the lender was not negligent in failing to ascertain the truth, the lender is protected, and may enforce a security deed executed as a part of the transaction, whether or not the money was used, or was intended to be used, for a different purpose. Reynolds v. Baxter, 177 Ga. 849, 171 S.E. 706 (1933).

Forfeiting dower. — While the right of dower is highly favored and carefully guarded by the courts, yet if the widow should practice fraud upon innocent purchasers, and induce them to become purchasers of land subject to her dower, under the impression that they were getting property free from such encumbrance, she would be estopped from setting up her right to dower in such land. Knox v. Higginbotham, 75 Ga. 699 (1885). (The right of dower is abolished. See O.C.G.A. § 53-1-1.).

Purchase by wife on own account. — Admission by a wife that she is purchasing goods on her own account amounts to an estoppel; and, in a subsequent suit against her for the purchase price of the goods, it will preclude her from setting up the defense that it was the husband's debt. Wolff & Happ v. Hawes, 105 Ga. 153, 31 S.E. 425 (1898).

Validity of election. — Although a constable, while occupying the constable's office and performing the duties thereof, entered as a candidate for the office in a void election and was defeated, this conduct would not estop the constable from attacking the validity of the election and claiming title to the office for the unexpired portion of the term for which the constable was elected and qualified at the regular election held two years previously. Motes v. Davis, 188 Ga. 682, 4 S.E.2d 597 (1939).

Erroneous legal advice given by a person is not an "admission" within the meaning of this statute, although such advice may have been acted upon to another's injury and to the benefit of the party giving it. This is especially true when it does not appear that the advice was given in bad faith or with intent to deceive or defraud. Lee v. Hill, 28 Ga. App. 312, 111 S.E. 211 (1922) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-24.).

Insufficient evidence of equitable estoppel. — Trial court did not err in awarding summary judgment to the State Medical Education Board, making a student liable for both the amount of the scholarship received and attorney's fees as: (1) estoppels were disfavored under Georgia law; (2) the student came forward with no more than hearsay to support a claim that oral misrepresentations of fact were made regarding the scholarship; (3) the contract was not rescinded by either party; (4) no mutual mistake of fact was found; and (5) any impossibility in performing the contract was personal to the student. Calabro v. State Med. Educ. Bd., 283 Ga. App. 113, 640 S.E.2d 581 (2006).

24-4-25. Estoppel relating to real estate.

(a) Where an estoppel relates to the title to real estate, the party claiming to have been influenced by the other party's acts or declarations must not only have been ignorant of the true title, but also ignorant of any convenient means of acquiring such knowledge.

(b) Where both parties have equal knowledge or equal means of obtaining the truth, there shall be no estoppel. (Civil Code 1895, § 5151; Civil Code 1910, § 5737; Code 1933, § 38-115.)

History of Code section. — This Code section is derived from the decision in Wilkins v. McGhehee, 86 Ga. 764, 13 S.E. 84 (1891).

Law reviews. — For article surveying recent legislative and judicial developments in Georgia's real property laws, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 187 (1979).

In general. — Purchaser must be ignorant of the falsity of the alleged inducements and really act upon them and not upon purchaser's own knowledge or judgment and have no convenient means of acquiring knowledge of title. Tune v. Beeland, 131 Ga. 528, 62 S.E. 976 (1908); Stonecipher v. Kear, 131 Ga. 688, 63 S.E. 215, 127 Am. St. R. 248 (1908); Wall v. Louisville & N.R.R., 143 Ga. 417, 85 S.E. 325 (1915); Norman v. McMillan, 151 Ga. 363, 107 S.E. 325 (1921); Jackson v. Lipham, 158 Ga. 557, 123 S.E. 887 (1924).

Elements of estoppel. — In order to constitute estoppel by conduct, there must occur: (1) a false representation or concealment of facts; (2) it must be within the knowledge of the party making the one or concealing the other; (3) the person affected thereby must be ignorant of the truth; (4) the person seeking to influence the conduct of the other must act intentionally for that purpose; and (5) persons complaining shall have been induced to act by reason of such conduct of the other. Jones v. Tri-State Elec. Coop., 212 Ga. 577, 94 S.E.2d 497 (1956).

Estoppels do not convey title in this state. Kennedy v. Hannans, 246 Ga. 55, 268 S.E.2d 646 (1980).

Recovery of land. — If estoppel by acts or false declarations can in any case be the basis upon which to predicate the recovery of land, it falls clearly within the provisions of this statute. Groover v. Simmons, 163 Ga. 778, 137 S.E. 237 (1927) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-25).

Good faith and reasonable diligence. — Party who claims the benefit of an estoppel must not only have been free from fraud in the transaction, but must have acted in good faith and reasonable diligence; otherwise, no equity will arise in the party's favor. Travelodge Corp. v. Carwen Realty Co., 223 Ga. 821, 158 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Exercise of due diligence. — No estoppel defense is available when a party fails to exercise due diligence to obtain information concerning the title. Allen v. Bacon, 171 Ga. 479, 156 S.E. 20 (1930).

No ignorance of true title. — When there was nothing in the evidence showing or tending to show that the defendant or any of its predecessors in title were ignorant of the true title when they purchased, the evidence failed to establish any estoppel which would preclude the plaintiff from asserting and recovering on plaintiff's legal title. Seaboard Air-Line Ry. v. Holliday, 165 Ga. 200, 140 S.E. 507 (1927); Bank of Lenox v. Webb Naval Stores Co., 171 Ga. 464, 156 S.E. 30 (1930).

Ignorance of true title. — Fact that a deed from a husband to his wife, under which a wife claimed title, may have been based upon a valuable consideration and duly recorded would not necessarily prevent a subsequent purchaser, by security deed, from relying upon the principle of estoppel, if the subsequent purchaser was in fact ignorant of the true title. Roop Grocery Co. v. Gentry, 195 Ga. 736, 25 S.E.2d 705 (1943).

Ignorance of adverse interest. — It must appear that the party to the deed was ignorant of the interest of the attesting witness. Duncan v. Beasley, 174 Ga. 28, 161 S.E. 829 (1931).

No means of acquiring knowledge. — When the estoppel relates to real estate, it is essential to the application of the doctrine that the party claiming to have been influenced by the conduct of another was personally not only destitute of knowledge of the true state of the title, but also of any convenient and available means of acquiring such knowledge. Bennett v. Davis, 201 Ga. 58, 39 S.E.2d 3 (1946).

Means of knowing over extended period of time. — If a person having legal title to land, which fact the person does not know but has convenient means of knowing, and after a lapse of 27 years, during which time the person was under no legal disability, the person still has not learned the fact of the person's interest in the land, and in those circumstances the person induces one to buy the land from a third person by representations that the land is the property of such third person, the person's misrepresentations to the purchaser innocently made, coupled with the person's delay in ascertaining the truth, will amount to constructive fraud, and may be pleaded as an estoppel by the purchaser on the faith of the title of the person's vendor. Lanier v. Bryant, 180 Ga. 409, 179 S.E. 346 (1935).

Equal means of knowledge. — Disclaimer of interest by a distributee, in ignorance, when the other party had equal means of knowledge, is no estoppel as to the distributee or the grantee. Peyton v. Stephens, 130 Ga. 338, 60 S.E. 563, 124 Am. St. R. 170 (1908).

Contrary to a cotenant's contention, the cotenant's affidavit did not create an issue of fact as to whether heirs should have been estopped from challenging the cotenant's adverse possession claim relating to certain real estate; the cotenant had equal means to obtain the truth about the status of a probate case by which the cotenant claimed exclusive possession of the property at issue, and the consequences of letting the case languish. Ward v. Morgan, 280 Ga. 569, 629 S.E.2d 230 (2006).

Prior recorded deed becomes constructive notice for subsequent purchasers and the holder of a prior recorded interest will not be subject to estoppel. Pressley v. Maxwell, 242 Ga. 360, 249 S.E.2d 49 (1978).

Recorded deed as means of acquiring knowledge. — Recorded deed is not necessarily such "convenient means of acquiring knowledge" of title, within the contemplation of former Code 1933, § 38-115 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-25), as to abrogate the effect of former Code 1933, § 105-304 (see O.C.G.A. § 51-6-4) on one who remains silent while a third party represents to another that the third party owns certain property which in actuality belongs to the aphonic one. Anderson v. Manning, 221 Ga. 421, 144 S.E.2d 772 (1965); Pressley v. Maxwell, 242 Ga. 360, 249 S.E.2d 49 (1978).

Admission in favor of third person. — Admissions against one's title to land, and in favor of the title of a third person, will not be estopped in behalf of one to whom the admissions were not made, and who has merely heard of the admissions, it not appearing that the admissions were made for the purpose of being acted upon, or with any design or intention that the admissions should be acted upon. Randolph v. Merchants & Mechanics Banking & Loan Co., 181 Ga. 671, 183 S.E. 801 (1936).

Agent's knowledge. — Estoppel did not result from an agent's knowledge when a contract provided that knowledge must be brought directly to the principal by the opposite party. Sovereign Camp Woodmen of the World v. Griffin, 30 Ga. App. 217, 117 S.E. 261 (1923).

Improvements. — One who has title to land and sees another who is in bona fide possession thereof place valuable improvements thereon, without giving notice of one's title, is not thereby subsequently estopped from asserting one's title. Owen v. Miller, 209 Ga. 875, 76 S.E.2d 772 (1953).

Merely attesting deed will not work an estoppel. Duncan v. Beasley, 174 Ga. 28, 161 S.E. 829 (1931).

Burden of proof rests upon the party asserting an estoppel to establish all the elements necessary to constitute an estoppel. Hartsfield Loan & Sav. Co. v. Garner, 184 Ga. 283, 191 S.E. 119 (1937); Bennett v. Davis, 201 Ga. 58, 39 S.E.2d 3 (1946).

Limitation on § 51-6-4. — Former Code 1933, § 36-115 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-25) limited former Code 1933, § 105-304 (see O.C.G.A. § 51-6-4) to purchasers without notice. Fuller v. Calhoun Nat'l Bank, 59 Ga. App. 419, 1 S.E.2d 86 (1939).

Construction with § 51-6-4. — Principle stated in former Code 1933, § 105-304 (see O.C.G.A. § 51-6-4), does not depend for the principle's operation upon the existence or absence of mere constructive notice, nor will a recorded deed necessarily constitute a "convenient means of acquiring such knowledge," within the meaning of former Code 1933, § 38-115 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-25); this latter statute should be construed in harmony with the former. Roop Grocery Co. v. Gentry, 195 Ga. 736, 25 S.E.2d 705 (1943).

24-4-26. Trustees estopped to set up title adverse to trust.

Trustees and other representatives with custody of papers have ample opportunities to discover defects in the title of property in their care and are estopped from setting up title adverse to their trust. (Civil Code 1895, § 5153; Civil Code 1910, § 5739; Code 1933, § 38-117.)

Executors. — When the plaintiff maintained a suit for specific performance of the contract alleged, in which plaintiff sought to have decreed in oneself title to the entire property owned by plaintiff's testatrix at the time of the testatrix's death, and devised by the testatrix and given to the executor (plaintiff) and other beneficiaries, it was held that plaintiff was estopped on the ground that plaintiff had the will probated and qualified as executor, and continued in the office of executor for two years, during which time plaintiff had discharged the duties of plaintiff's office and had paid out large sums of money; this conduct being inconsistent with plaintiff's claim of title to the entire estate of plaintiff's testatrix. Hardeman v. Ellis, 162 Ga. 664, 135 S.E. 195 (1926); Scoggins v. Strickland, 265 Ga. 417, 456 S.E.2d 208 (1995).

Multiple executors. — Rule which prohibits a person from suing oneself does not apply when there are two or more executors. Spratlin v. Spratlin, 216 Ga. 27, 114 S.E.2d 370 (1960).

Ownership in estate. — When ownership is once shown to be in an estate, the executor cannot acquire title by adverse holding by reason of this statute. Dozier v. McWhorter, 117 Ga. 786, 45 S.E. 61 (1903) (see O.C.G.A. § 244-26).

Claim anterior to appointment. — An administrator who sells property at public outcry, executing a deed, and signing as administrator is estopped from setting up any title or interest, based upon a claim anterior to the administrator's appointment. Gammage v. Perry, 29 Ga. App. 427, 116 S.E. 126 (1923).

Title not vested. — Rule of estoppel against an administrator does not operate if the legal title to land in controversy was not vested in the decedent at the time of death. Crummey v. Crummey, 190 Ga. 774, 10 S.E.2d 859 (1940).

Mistake of law. — When claimant contended that this statute should not be applied because claimant did not know at the time claimant was appointed administrator that claimant had title to the land, and testified that the claimant believed that when the claimant lost the claimant's deed the claimant's title had been killed, the claimant acted with full knowledge of the facts, but under a mistake of law as to the claimant's legal rights; such testimony was not sufficient to demand a finding that the claimant was not estopped under this statute. Wright v. Thompson, 190 Ga. 173, 8 S.E.2d 640 (1940) (see O.C.G.A. § 244-26).

Claim not setting up title. — There is nothing inimical in the principle that an heir, next of kin, or creditor is favored in the appointment of an administrator, and is not precluded from receiving proper share or claim from the assets of the estate, since such a claim does not have the legal effect of setting up a "title adverse to their trust." Crummey v. Crummey, 190 Ga. 774, 10 S.E.2d 859 (1940).

Guardian. — Law will not permit a guardian to act in such way that the guardian's own personal interest may come in conflict with the interest of the guardian's ward with respect to the estate of the latter in the guardian's charge. Allen v. Wade, 203 Ga. 753, 48 S.E.2d 538 (1948).

Trustee of corporations. — Principles apply to a trustee holding choses in action for a corporation. Caswell v. Vanderbilt, 35 Ga. App. 34, 132 S.E. 123 (1926).

Inconsistent positions. — When one is in a situation in which one may elect between two inconsistent positions or proceedings, the choice of one's position or proceeding must be made before bringing suit. One cannot bring either action without selecting and determining to accept and occupy a position consistent with that action or position and inconsistent with the other. Spratlin v. Spratlin, 216 Ga. 27, 114 S.E.2d 370 (1960).

244-27. Equitable estoppel.

In order for an equitable estoppel to arise, there must generally be some intended deception in the conduct or declarations of the party to be estopped, or such gross negligence as to amount to constructive fraud, by which another has been misled to his injury. (Civil Code 1895, § 5152; Civil Code 1910, § 5738; Code 1933, § 38-116.)

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION ILLUSTRATIONS

Elements. — In order to constitute estoppel by conduct, there must concur: (1) a false representation or concealment of facts; (2) it must be within the knowledge of the party making the one or concealing the other; (3) the person affected thereby must be ignorant of the truth; (4) the person seeking to influence the conduct of the other must act intentionally for that purpose; and (5) persons complaining shall have been induced to act by reason of such conduct of the other. Harris v. Abney, 208 Ga. 518, 67 S.E.2d 724 (1951); Cobb County Rural Elec. Membership Corp. v. Board of Lights & Water Works, 211 Ga. 535, 87 S.E.2d 80 (1955); Jones v. Tri-State Elec. Coop., 212 Ga. 577, 94 S.E.2d 497 (1956).

Function of estoppel. — Estoppel may be used to prevent a party from denying at the time of litigation a representation that was made by that party and accepted and reasonably acted upon by another party with detrimental results to the party that acted thereon. Sabin Meyer Regional Sales Corp. v. Citizens Bank, 502 F. Supp. 557 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Estoppels are not favored by Georgia law. Cobb County Rural Elec. Membership Corp. v. Board of Lights & Water Works, 211 Ga. 535, 87 S.E.2d 80 (1955).

Estoppels are rarely resorted to, except when it would be more unjust and more productive of evil to hear the truth than to forbear the investigation. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Atlantic & Gulf Shipping Co., 51 Ga. App. 904, 181 S.E. 310 (1935).

Estoppel does not create new rights. — Doctrines of estoppel are primarily negative in their operation against the party making the statement or admission, rather than creative of any new rights in the opposite party. Sabin Meyer Regional Sales Corp. v. Citizens Bank, 502 F. Supp. 557 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Existing rights. — An estoppel in pais operates only upon existing rights, not upon rights subsequently acquired. Atlantic C.L.R.R. v. Williams, 50 Ga. App. 726, 179 S.E. 136 (1934); Gellis v. B.L.I. Constr. Co., 148 Ga. App. 527, 251 S.E.2d 800 (1978).

Estoppel cannot legalize or vitalize that which the law declares unlawful and void. Macon Ambulance Serv., Inc. v. Snow Properties, Inc., 218 Ga. 262, 127 S.E.2d 598 (1962).

Existing cause of action required. — Without some proper legal cause of action, establishing all the elements of equitable estoppel will not entitle plaintiff to relief. Sabin Meyer Regional Sales Corp. v. Citizens Bank, 502 F. Supp. 557 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Conduct of party. — Equitable estoppel arises from the conduct of a party, using the word "conduct" in the term's broadest meaning as including that party's spoken words, the party's positive acts, and the party's silence when there is a duty to speak, and proceeds on the consideration that the author of misfortune shall not personally escape the consequences and cast the burden on another. Accordingly, it holds a person to a representation made or position assumed where otherwise inequitable consequences would result to another who, having the right to do so, under all the circumstances of the case, has in good faith relied thereon and been misled, to that person's injury. McArthur v. Southern Airways, Inc., 404 F.

Supp. 508 (N.D. Ga. 1975), vacated on other grounds, 569 F.2d 276 (5th Cir. 1978).

Contrary to equity and good conscience.

— Equitable estoppel is an established principle of Georgia law and arises when a party has so acted that the party has by the party's conduct either gained some advantage for the party or caused some disadvantage to another by reason of which it would be contrary to equity and good conscience to permit the party to allege and prove the truth. A.S. Int'l Corp. v. Salem Carpet Mills, Inc., 441 F. Supp. 125 (N.D. Ga. 1977).

Estoppel in pais. — Doctrine of estoppel in pais proceeds wholly on the theory that the party to be estopped has, by the party's declarations or conduct, misled another to the party's prejudice, so that it would be a fraud upon the party to allow the true state of the facts to be proved. Gainesville Glass Co. v. Don Hammond, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 640, 278 S.E.2d 182 (1981).

No equitable estoppel arises when no harm or disadvantage is presented as injury is essential for an equitable estoppel. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 168 Ga. App. 66, 308 S.E.2d 193 (1983).

Inducement and injury. — To assert an estoppel in pais one must show that one has lost or the other party gained something which makes it unjust for the latter to insist upon preexistent rights. There must be inducement by which one changes one's position for the worse. Injury is its essence. Meeks v. Adams La. Co., 49 F. Supp. 489 (S.D. Ga. 1943), modified sub nom., Meeks v. Taylor, 138 F.2d 458 (5th Cir. 1943), cert. denied, 321 U.S. 773, 64 S. Ct. 611, 88 L. Ed. 1067 (1944).

Inducement to forego valuable right. — When a party by making an invalid agreement or promise induces another to forego a valuable legal right, one waives and is estopped to deny the right of the promisee to have the agreement carried out or the promise fulfilled. Pethel v. Waters, 220 Ga. 543, 140 S.E.2d 252 (1965).

Injury or disadvantage. — When in a case no facts appear from which it can be said that a party has been injured or placed at any disadvantage by the conduct of the party allegedly estopped, no estoppel resulted therefrom. City of Atlanta v. Anglin, 209 Ga. 170, 71 S.E.2d 419, appeal dismissed, 344 U.S. 870, 73 S. Ct. 169, 97 L. Ed. 675 (1952).

Changing reason for conduct. — Rule which prevents one who has given a reason for one's conduct and decision in a matter from placing one's conduct upon another and different ground after litigation has begun is but an application of the principle of estoppel in pais, and applies only where one's conduct has caused another to act respecting the matter to the injury and detriment of the latter, and if the latter would be placed at an inequitable disadvantage, should the former be allowed to rely upon a ground other than that first urged as a reason for one's conduct and decision in the matter. Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Atlantic & Gulf Shipping Co., 51 Ga. App. 904, 181 S.E. 310 (1935).

Good faith and reasonable diligence. — Party seeking the benefit of estoppel must not only have been free from fraud, but must have acted in good faith and reasonable diligence; otherwise no equity will arise in that party's favor. Tybrisa Co. v. Tybeeland, Inc., 220 Ga. 442, 139 S.E.2d 302 (1964); Travelodge Corp. v. Carwen Realty Co., 223 Ga. 821, 158 S.E.2d 378 (1967); Whitcomb Produce Co. v. Bonanza Int'l, Inc., 154 Ga. App. 92, 267 S.E.2d 627 (1980).

Reliance. — Party claiming estoppel must have relied and acted upon declarations or conduct of the other party and not on one's own knowledge or judgment. Tybrisa Co. v. Tybeeland, Inc., 220 Ga. 442, 139 S.E.2d 302 (1964).

Doctrine of estoppel by representation is ordinarily applicable only to representations as to facts either past or present, and not to promises concerning the future which, if binding at all, must be binding as contracts. Gainesville Glass Co. v. Don Hammond, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 640, 278 S.E.2d 182 (1981).

Representation to invoking party. — General rule is that for an estoppel by misrepresentation to arise the false representation must be made to the person seeking the benefit of the estoppel or intended for communication to that person. James Talcott, Inc. v. Carder, 300 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1962).

Contract by estoppel presupposes that one party has a defense to imposition of contractual liability but, by reason of one's conduct, is estopped to assert it. Gainesville Glass Co. v. Don Hammond, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 640, 278 S.E.2d 182 (1981).

Equal knowledge or means of knowing truth. — There is no estoppel by conduct when both parties have equal knowledge or equal means of obtaining the truth. Gay v. Laurens County, 213 Ga. 518, 100 S.E.2d 271 (1957); Yancey Bros. Co. v. Dehco, Inc., 108 Ga. App. 875, 134 S.E.2d 828 (1964); Tybrisa Co. v. Tybeeland, Inc., 220 Ga. 442, 139 S.E.2d 302 (1964).

Duty to speak. — In cases of estoppel through silence there must be not only the right but the duty to speak before failure to do so can operate as an estoppel. Tybrisa Co. v. Tybeeland, Inc., 220 Ga. 442, 139 S.E.2d 302 (1964).

Testimony of party at second trial. — In a second trial of a case, a party is not estopped to give testimony at the second trial which is different from the party's testimony given at the first trial. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Brower, 106 Ga. App. 340, 127 S.E.2d 33, rev'd on other grounds, 218 Ga. 525, 128 S.E.2d 926 (1962).

Burden of proof rests upon the party asserting an estoppel to establish all the elements necessary to constitute an estoppel. Hartsfield Loan & Sav. Co. v. Garner, 184 Ga. 283, 191 S.E. 119 (1937); Bennett v. Davis, 201 Ga. 58, 39 S.E.2d 3 (1946).

Burden of pleading. — In order for an estoppel to be proved, it must be properly pleaded; a defendant who relies upon equitable estoppel must set up the same by answer in the suit of one's adversary. Citizens & S. Bank v. Barron, 181 Ga. 351, 181 S.E. 859 (1935); Hartsfield Loan & Sav. Co. v. Garner, 184 Ga. 283, 191 S.E. 119 (1937).

Pleading concealment of facts. — It is not error for the trial court to strike the plaintiff in error's plea of estoppel when there is no allegation showing a concealment of facts which resulted in the party asserting the estoppel acting to one's detriment. Beeland v. Alston, 101 Ga. App. 584, 114 S.E.2d 545 (1960).

Question for jury. — When the facts relied on to establish estoppel do not unequivocally show an estoppel in pais, the jury, and not the judge, should determine whether the facts constitute such an estoppel. Tune v. Beeland, 131 Ga. 528, 62 S.E. 976 (1908).

As a factual determination, estoppel is a matter to be determined by a jury. Mathis v. Rock Springs Whsle. Co., 157 Ga. App. 726, 278 S.E.2d 484 (1981).

Estoppel of state. — State can only be estopped from asserting the state's right to the state's own property by legislative enactment or resolution. State Hwy. Dep't v. Strickland, 214 Ga. 467, 105 S.E.2d 299 (1958).

Admission in favor of third person. — Admissions against one's title to land, and in favor of the title of a third person, will be no estoppel in behalf of one to whom they were not made and who has merely heard of them, it not appearing that they were made for the purpose of being acted upon or with any design or intention that they should be acted upon. Randolph v. Merchants & Mechanics Banking & Loan Co., 181 Ga. 671, 183 S.E. 801 (1936).

Silence after sale by tenant in common. — When plaintiff did not stand by at the time of the sale with knowledge that the sale was taking place, but only remained silent after learning of the sale previously made and of the valuable, permanent, and expensive improvements made thereon by the purchaser, the plaintiff is not estopped to assert the plaintiff's title or claim of interest in the property within seven years from the date of the sale. Owen v. Miller, 209 Ga. 875, 76 S.E.2d 772 (1953).

Persons acquiescing in partitions. — Persons sui juris, who acquiesced in a partition and took possession of their shares, could not recover from a grantee of one partitioner. Watkins v. Gilmore, 130 Ga. 797, 62 S.E. 32 (1908).

Recorded deed. — Fact that a deed from a husband to his wife, under which a wife claimed title, may have been based upon a valuable consideration and duly recorded would not necessarily prevent a subsequent purchaser, by security deed, from relying upon the principle of estoppel, if he was in fact ignorant of the true title. Roop Grocery Co. v. Gentry, 195 Ga. 736, 25 S.E.2d 705 (1943).

Innocent representations coupled with delay in ascertaining truth. — If a person having legal title to land, which fact person does not know but has convenient means of knowing, and after a lapse of 27 years, during which time person was under no legal disability, person still has not learned the fact of the person's interest in the land, and in those circumstances the person induces one to buy the land from a third person by representations that the land is the property of such third person, the person's misrepresentations to the purchaser innocently made, coupled with the person's delay in ascertaining the truth, will amount to constructive fraud, and they may be pleaded as an estoppel by the purchaser on the faith of the title of the person's vendor. Lanier v. Bryant, 180 Ga. 409, 179 S.E. 346 (1935).

Valuable improvements on land. — One who has title to land and sees another who is in bona fide possession thereof place valuable improvements thereon, without giving notice of one's title, is not thereby subsequently estopped from asserting ones' title. Owen v. Miller, 209 Ga. 875, 76 S.E.2d 772 (1953).

Restrictive covenant. — Plaintiff was not estopped by acquiescence from seeking to enjoin violations of restrictive covenants by defendants merely because the same covenants were previously violated by other and different parties by more remote sales. Dooley v. Savannah Bank & Trust Co., 199 Ga. 353, 34 S.E.2d 522 (1945).

Waiver of landlord's lien. — Even if the claimant by the claimant's signature to the waiver of the claimant's landlord's lien against the immediately preceding bill of sale to secure debt, and by the express reference in the claimant's waiver to such bill of sale, did not in effect so recognize the covenant and warranty of title made by the debtor in the bill of sale to the property in question as to be conclusively bound thereby the same as if the claimant had signed the bill of sale as a party thereto, the claimant will at least be prima facie presumed to have read the bill of sale, to which the claimant expressly referred, or to have had knowledge of its essential contents; the claimant will be assumed not to have acted without knowledge of the property on which the claimant expressly waived the claimant's lien. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank v. Sherrod, 50 Ga. App. 501, 178 S.E. 477 (1935).

Condemnation. — When there was no evidence of intentional deception on the part of the plaintiff, or any conduct which actually misled the defendant, the plaintiff would not be estopped from asserting any of the plaintiff's legal rights in injunction proceedings against the condemnation of property for a railroad right of way. Piedmont Cotton Mills v. Georgia Ry. & Elec. Co., 131 Ga. 129, 62 S.E. 52 (1908).

Claiming equitable title to property. — When a wife, who claimed the equitable title to property, knowingly permitted her husband to retain the legal title and possession thereof, and credit was extended to him upon the faith of his apparent ownership or arose from the purchase of his outstanding promissory note, she was estopped from asserting her secret equity as against a creditor, whether or not he had reduced his claim to judgment, who had no notice of such equity. Rowe v. Cole, 171 Ga. 391, 155 S.E. 473 (1930), later appeal, 176 Ga. 592, 168 S.E. 882 (1933), and 183 Ga. 477, 188 S.E. 668 (1936).

Actual knowledge. — When one knows that one owns the title to or an interest in real or personal property, and knowingly permits or acquiesces in the property's sale, encumbrance, or pledge by another, one will be estopped from setting up one's title or interest against the person who by such conduct has been misled to one's injury; however, when the estoppel relied upon is not one by deed or from an express contract, signed by the person against whom the rule is invoked, and is merely an equitable estoppel, it is the general rule that such person must, before the injury, have had actual knowledge of the transfer, sale, or encumbrance, and the material facts and circumstances attending the transaction. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank v. Sherrod, 50 Ga. App. 501, 178 S.E. 477 (1935).

Husband and wife. — Wife was estopped from claiming title to personalty in her husband's possession and mortgaged by him. Whitchard v. Exchange Nat'l Bank, 15 Ga. App. 190, 82 S.E. 770 (1914).

Consent of wife to include her property in husband's mortgage. — Fact that a wife may have consented for her husband to include personal property, belonging to her, in a mortgage executed by him to secure his individual debt would not estop her from thereafter setting up her title to the property, where the mortgagee had knowledge of the true ownership of the property at the time the mortgage was executed. Whitchard v. Exchange Nat'l Bank, 15 Ga. App. 190, 82 S.E. 770 (1914).

Signing ancillary agreement. — When one who is not a party to the instrument of sale signs an ancillary agreement thereon, which agreement is material to the force and effect of the instrument on the signer, and which expressly refers to the preceding instrument, one is estopped from asserting any interest one may have. Federal Intermediate Credit Bank v. Sherrod, 50 Ga. App. 501, 178 S.E. 477 (1935).

Failure to file will. — One's failure to move in the matter of compelling another to file the alleged will after one's refusal, and to apply to have the will probated for so long a time, is such gross negligence as would amount to constructive fraud against a purchaser from the other without notice of the will and acting on faith of one's apparent title as heir at law, and would estop one and one's assigns from setting up title under the subsequently probated will as against such purchaser from the husband claiming as heir at law. Hadden v. Stevens, 181 Ga. 165, 181 S.E. 767 (1935).

Acceptance of insurance premiums and placing the money in the general funds of the defendant insurer amounted to such an unconditional acceptance as to estop the defendant to contend that the insured's policy was not in force at the date of the fire. Progressive Fire Ins. Co. v. Morrison, 72 Ga. App. 473, 34 S.E.2d 173 (1945).

State utility company and railroad station owner were estopped from contending that debtor's lease had been terminated prior to the debtor's bankruptcy filing since a revised memorandum effecting only the minor change of extending a termination date did not serve to negate the debtor's reasonable reliance on the previously established general terms of the contested deal. Historic Macon Station Ltd. Partnership v. Piedmont-Forrest Corp., 152 Bankr. 358 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1993).

Invalidity of franchise. — Regardless of the amount of expenditures holder of franchise and transferee might have made in connection therewith, no equitable estoppel would arise against city barring it from challenging validity of the franchise since there was evidence to show such expenses were incurred with knowledge of the invalidity of the franchise and therefore good faith was wholly lacking. Mid-Georgia Natural Gas Co. v. City of Covington, 211 Ga. 163, 84 S.E.2d 451 (1954).

Bank's refusal to honor check. — Car auction contended that a bank should have been equitably estopped from denying that the bank had an obligation to honor checks drawn on a special account. However, the bank made no intentional misrepresentations and had no duty to disclose the bank's customer's financial status. The car auction, also, did not act with reasonable diligence by relying on the credit history of the customer's father instead of performing the auction's standard credit check. Georgia Cas. &

Sur. Co. v. Tennille Banking Co. (In re Smith), 51 Bankr. 904 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1985).

Use of other's name in making purchase to escape sales tax payment. — Use of out-of-state party's name and address to avoid payment of state sales tax does not give rise to estoppel to assert title to diamond ring since such party knew of the use of her name and address and has not adversely changed position in reliance thereon. Kornegay v. Thompson, 157 Ga. App. 558, 278 S.E.2d 140 (1981).

Wife who benefited from a loan obtained by her husband from his mother because it protected the marital home from foreclosure was not estopped from pursuing a claim to the residence, where it was not shown that the wife was in any way directly involved in the discussions and negotiations that procured the loan. Watkins v. Watkins, 256 Ga. 58, 344 S.E.2d 220 (1986).

No evidence party misled to that party's detriment. Cowen v. Snellgrove, 169 Ga. App. 271, 312 S.E.2d 623 (1983).

In a dispute between adjoining landowners over title to approximately six acres of land, because appellant adjoining neighbors failed to identify any evidence of deception on the part of the adjoining landowner or the landowner's predecessors, the trial court did not err by omitting a jury charge on equitable estoppel. Pirkle v. Turner, 281 Ga. 846, 642 S.E.2d 849 (2007).

No fraud shown on part of developer. — In an action brought by the purchasers of a lot seeking to cancel the developer's security deed based upon alleged fraud, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the developer as, even if the developer knew of the sale of the lot to the purchasers, such sale did not estop the developer from the developer's claim against the lot pursuant to the developer's security deed; however, the trial court did err by denying the equitable subrogation claim asserted by the purchasers' lender since exercising subrogation did not prejudice the developer in any manner. Byers v. McGuire Props., 285 Ga. 530, 679 S.E.2d 1 (2009).

PARTICULAR MATTERS OF PROOF

24-4-40. Evidence of identity; burden in civil actions.

(a) Concordance of name alone is some evidence of identity. Residence, vocation, ownership of property, and other like facts may be proved. Reasonable certainty is all that can be required.

(b) In civil actions parties are generally relieved from the onus of proving identity, as it is a fact generally more easily disproved than established. (Civil Code 1895, § 5178; Civil Code 1910, § 5765; Code 1933, § 38-304.)

History of Code section. — This Code section is derived from the decision in Mullery v. Hamilton, 71 Ga. 720 (1884).

Law reviews. — For article, "DNA Fingerprinting: A Scientific Perspective," see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 1099 (1991).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality of speech identification. — Requiring a suspect in a criminal case to verbalize specified words for identification purposes, whether or not the words used are the same as those allegedly used during the commission of the offense, does not violate an accused's privilege against self-incrimination accorded the accused by the United States Constitution and the state statutes and Constitution. Tate v. State, 153 Ga. App. 508, 265 S.E.2d 818 (1980).

Identification testimony admissible when it is relevant and supported by facts. Clark v. State, 153 Ga. App. 829, 266 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Jury question. — Question of identity is one for the jury. Calhoun v. Herrin, 125 Ga. App. 518, 188 S.E.2d 273 (1972).

Identity of names is generally prima facie evidence of identity of persons. Hardrick v. State, 96 Ga. App. 670, 101 S.E.2d 99 (1957).

Concordance of name is sufficient to show that the defendant and the individual previously convicted was the same person, in the absence of any denial by the defendant and no proof to the contrary. Hammond v. State, 139 Ga. App. 820, 229 S.E.2d 685 (1976).

In the absence of a denial by the defendant that the defendant was the perpetrator of a previous crime and any proof to the contrary, a concordance of name is sufficient to show that the defendant and the individual previously convicted were the same person. Lewis v. State, 234 Ga. App. 873, 508 S.E.2d 218 (1998).

Under O.C.G.A. § 24-440(a), if a defendant has the same name as is specified in a certified copy of a conviction, the concordance of name alone is some evidence of identity; without evidence to the contrary, the concordance of name established the previous conviction. Additionally, defendant stated the sentence set forth in the final disposition and acknowledged that defendant served the sentence. Patterson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 630, 577 S.E.2d 850 (2003).

Adoption of name. — Witness may testify as to the identity of another person by showing that the other person has assumed and adopted the name in question. Hardrick v. State, 96 Ga. App. 670, 101 S.E.2d 99 (1957).

Reference to person in case. — If a witness mentions the name of a person, it will be referred to the person in the case of that name, rather than to some outsider. Swift v. Oglesby & Smith, 8 Ga. App. 540, 70 S.E. 97 (1911).

If pretrial showup may have been unnecessarily suggestive, the criteria to determine whether there was a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification are: (1) opportunity to view the defendant at the scene; (2) witness's degree of attention; (3) accuracy of prior description; (4) level of certainty demonstrated at confrontation; and (5) time lapse. Tate v. State, 153 Ga. App. 508, 265 S.E.2d 818 (1980); Smith v. State, 160 Ga. App. 60, 286 S.E.2d 45 (1981).

Two-prong test for admissibility of preindictment lineup. — In determining whether the eyewitness testimony following a preindictment investigative lineup should be admitted, each case must be considered on its own facts and a two-prong test must be applied: (1) whether the photographic display was impermissibly suggestive, and, if it was, the court must consider (2) whether there was a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Cheeves v. State, 157 Ga. App. 566, 278 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

In considering whether lineup is impermissibly suggestive, evil to be avoided is likelihood of misidentification of an accused. James v. State, 157 Ga. App. 645, 278 S.E.2d 187 (1981).

Reliability of any identification procedure requires determination of whether it was in any way tainted by illegal pretrial showup or lineup or by use of photographs; in such situations the court should consider the totality of the circumstances and determine first if the procedures were impermissibly suggestive, and, if so, did that procedure give rise to a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Miller v. State, 158 Ga. App. 21, 279 S.E.2d 289 (1981).

Photo array was not impermissibly suggestive because the eyewitnesses testified that the eyewitnesses looked at the lineup outside the presence of each other, read an admonition form before looking at the lineup, and picked out defendant's photograph; furthermore, the officer showing the lineup to the eyewitnesses did not tell the eyewitnesses that the eyewitnesses had picked the "right" photograph. Pace v. State, 272 Ga. App. 16, 611 S.E.2d 694 (2005).

Vocal verification is analogous to visual verification. Wallace v. State, 156 Ga. App. 525, 275 S.E.2d 110 (1980).

Photographic array can be suggestive when used close in time to a lineup, but when the record is devoid of specifics which would substantiate a claim of misidentification and the witness is able to identify appellant from the array, the procedure is not impermissibly suggestive. Coleman v. State, 150 Ga. App. 380, 258 S.E.2d 12 (1979).

Evidence of other offenses of a similar nature may be admitted in criminal prosecutions for the purpose of identifying the accused and for the purpose of showing a common motive, plan, scheme, bent of mind, or course of conduct. Laws v. State, 153 Ga. App. 166, 264 S.E.2d 700 (1980); Chambers v. State, 154 Ga. App. 620, 269 S.E.2d 42 (1980).

Admissible evidence. — Personal appearance, conversations, account one gave of oneself, one's family connections and associations, are admissible. Mullery v. Hamilton, 71 Ga. 720 (1883).

Evidence sufficient. — In the instant suit by the beneficiary on a policy insuring the life of one's brother, even if under this rule the burden of providing that the person, bearing the same name as the insured and as to whom proof of death by pleuro-pneumonia was made, was the insured named in the policy, the onus was sufficiently met by the plaintiff's testimony, admitted without objection, that plaintiff's brother, of the name stated in the policy, was a world war veteran, that the Veterans' Bureau in Washington, D.C., informed plaintiff of plaintiff's brother's death, and that upon further inquiry plaintiff found that plaintiff's brother had died in a town in New Jersey, no evidence having been presented by the defendant to dispute such identity, a finding on that question was demanded for the plaintiff. Progressive Life Ins. Co. v. Haygood, 53 Ga. App. 231, 185 S.E. 534 (1936).

Cited in Townsend v. Rechsteiner, 195 Ga. 618, 24 S.E.2d 776 (1943); Green v. State, 74 Ga. App. 390, 39 S.E.2d 765 (1946); Robinson v. State, 209 Ga. 650, 75 S.E.2d 9 (1953); Hitchcock v. Rochelle, 104 Ga. App. 775, 123 S.E.2d 268 (1961); Taylor v. Marsh, 107 Ga. App. 575, 130 S.E.2d 770 (1963); Walden v. State, 121 Ga. App. 142, 173 S.E.2d 110 (1970); *Hicks v. Admissibility of evidence of voice identification of defendant as affected by allegedly suggestive voice lineup procedures, 55 ALR5th 423.

24-4-41. Proof of de facto officer.

An officer de facto may be proved to be such by his acts, without the production of his commission or appointment. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3687; Code 1868, § 3711; Code 1873, § 3764; Code 1882, § 3764; Civil Code 1895, § 5168; Civil Code 1910, § 5754; Code 1933, § 38-207.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

De facto notary doctrine. — Pursuant to the de facto notary doctrine, an expert's affidavit satisfied the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, despite the fact that the commission of the notary who attested the affidavit had expired. Thomas v. Gastroen- terology Assocs. of Gainesville, P.C., 280 Ga. 698, 632 S.E.2d 118 (2006).

Cited in Howell v. State, 162 Ga. 14, 134 S.E. 59 (1926); Consolidated Eng'g Co. v. U.I.R. Contractors, 136 Ga. App. 923, 222 S.E.2d 692 (1975).

24-4-42. Judgment admissible; effect.

A judgment shall be admissible between any parties to show the fact of the rendition thereof; between parties and privies it is conclusive as to the matter directly in issue, until reversed or set aside. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3749; Code 1868, § 3773; Code 1873, § 3826; Code 1882, § 3826; Civil Code 1895, § 5233; Civil Code 1910, § 5820; Code 1933, § 38-623.)

Law reviews. — For article on the effect of a conviction that is based on a nolo contendere plea, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 723 (1979).

Direct or indirect relitigation prohibited.

— Questions settled by a former final judgment must be considered an end of the litigation; those questions cannot be litigated in other actions, directly or indirectly. Smith v. Robinson, 214 Ga. 835, 108 S.E.2d 317 (1959).

Issues in second suit are concluded as between parties and their privies if they were made in the first suit or if, under the rules of pleading and evidence, they could have been put in issue. Roadway Express, Inc. v. McBroom, 61 Ga. App. 223, 6 S.E.2d 460 (1939).

Mere witness not estopped. — While an adjudication of the same subject matter in issue in a former suit between the same parties by a court of competent jurisdiction is an end of litigation, the plaintiff is not estopped by the judgment rendered in the court of ordinary (now probate court) in a proceeding to which the plaintiff was not a party, although the plaintiff appeared as a witness therein. McAfee v. Martin, 211 Ga. 14, 83 S.E.2d 605 (1954).

Entire record must be offered. — When a judgment is relied on as establishing any particular state of facts it can be proved only by offering in evidence the entire proceedings in which the judgment was rendered. Cambron v. Canal Ins. Co., 246 Ga. 147, 269 S.E.2d 426 (1980).

New rule of law irrelevant. — Judgment of the Court of Appeals, reversing a judgment of the trial court cannot be set aside on motion in the trial court, upon the ground that since the rendition of the decision by the Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court, in another case, announced a rule of law contrary to the decision of the Court of Appeals. Atkinson v. Battle, 11 Ga. App. 837, 76 S.E. 597 (1912).

Decree in chancery is evidence, not merely of the fact of its rendition, but also of all the consequences resulting therefrom. It may be given in proof against persons who were not parties to the bill, in support of the plaintiff's right or title to sue. Hardwock v. Hook, 8 Ga. 354 (1850).

Judgment cannot be collaterally questioned by third persons, except on the ground of fraud and collusion, in the procurement of the judgment. Creditors or bona fide purchasers may attack a judgment fraudulently obtained, whenever the judgment interferes with their rights, either at law or in equity. Hammock v. McBride, 6 Ga. 178 (1849).

Same parties and privies. — Debtor's transfer of real property to the debtor's wife, a default judgment in a lawsuit, which the trustee claimed rendered the debtor insolvent, in which the wife did not participate and which was filed after the transfer did not prove the debtor's insolvency at the time of the transfer for purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 18-2-22(3); the wife's status as the debtor's wife, standing alone, did not establish privity with the debtor, and the judgment against the debtor did not bind the wife. Thurmond v. Turner (In re Turner), No. 00-72597-PWB, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 2745 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Sept. 19, 2006).

Irregular judgment. — Although the judgment of a court may be irregular, still the judgment may be given in evidence for many purposes. Bryan v. Watson, 20 Ga. 480 (1856).

Consent order in previous litigation involving an insurer and insured in subsequent litigation, unreversed and not set aside, which recites that a compromise settlement release is valid according to all its terms and provisions is conclusive on the parties as to any claim under the policy. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. v. Morris, 120 Ga. App. 525, 171 S.E.2d 378 (1969).

Litigation of jurisdiction. — When in an action for divorce brought by wife, the husband appeared and filed an answer denying the allegations as to residence and also filed a plea to the jurisdiction, the question as to jurisdiction was necessarily litigated despite the fact that he had not appeared to defend the action in person, and the result was binding on the husband, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, unmixed with negligence on his part. Johnson v. Johnson, 188 Ga. 800, 4 S.E.2d 807 (1939).

Issue directly litigated. — When the defendant in a trover suit sues the plaintiff therein for divorce, and the question of title to the automobile is adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction, without objection by either party, in the action for divorce, the judgment rendered in that case, when the issue as to the title of the automobile is directly made, is conclusive on that question in the trover case. Maddox v. Carithers, 77 Ga. App. 280, 47 S.E.2d 888 (1948).

When custody of minor child was vested in the mother by prior judgment, until and unless it was set aside in accordance with law, it was conclusive against the father, and was res judicata in a habeas corpus proceeding by the father. Levens v. Edge, 217 Ga. 418, 122 S.E.2d 728 (1961).

Res judicata in criminal case. — Court properly sustained the state's plea of res judicata and dismissed on oral motion the defendant's special plea, where the judgment pleaded in bar thereof adjudicated the issue, as the judgment so pleaded by the state had been neither reversed nor modified by any exception which the accused had taken to it, such unreversed and unmodified judgment had consequently become and was the law of the case. Seymour v. State, 210 Ga. 571, 81 S.E.2d 808 (1954).

Evidence of original divorce decree. — Trial court presiding over an action for modification of alimony erred in refusing to allow the introduction into evidence of the original divorce decree. Cotton v. Cotton, 272 Ga. 276, 528 S.E.2d 255 (2000).

Admissibility of civil judgment in criminal case. — Judgment in a civil action is not admissible in a criminal action to prove any fact determined in the civil action. Flynt v. State, 153 Ga. App. 232, 264 S.E.2d 669, application for stay of execution, 449 U.S. 888, 100 S.Ct. 2960, 64 L. Ed. 2d 837 (1980).

24-4-44. American Experience Mortality Tables.

In all civil cases where the life expectancy of a person shall be an issue, the American Experience Mortality Tables shall be admissible as evidence of the life expectancy of such person. (Ga. L. 1956, p. 68, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Permanent injuries. — Court errs in failing to charge that mortality tables are to be used only if the injuries sued for are permanent, and that the value of the victim-wife's services and consortium in the future, for the loss of which the plaintiff husband sought recovery, should be reduced to present cash value where there is an issue as to whether or not the injuries sustained by the plaintiff wife were permanent. Davison-Paxon Co. v. Archer, 91 Ga. App. 131, 85 S.E.2d 182 (1954).

Jury not bound by tables. — While standard mortality tables are admissible in evidence as an aid to the jury in determining the life expectancy of a deceased person, the jurors are not bound by such tables, but may use any method known to them as upright and intelligent individuals in applying their knowledge of the common phenomena and facts of human experience to the evidence, where sufficient facts appear as to the age, health, physical condition, and habits of the deceased to afford a basis for a proper conclusion. Pollard v. Gorman, 52 Ga. App. 127, 182 S.E. 678 (1935).

(a) In addition to any other lawful methods of computing the value of the life of a decedent in wrongful death cases or of determining the present value of future due earnings or amounts in cases involving permanent personal injuries, there shall be admissible in evidence, as competent evidence in such cases, either or both of the following mortality tables:

- (1) The Commissioners 1958 Standard Ordinary Mortality Table;
- (2) Annuity Mortality Table for 1949, Ultimate.

(b) In addition to the provisions set out in subsection (a) of this Code section, the jury or court shall be authorized in cases of wrongful death or permanent personal injuries to use any table determined by the jury or court, whichever is the trier of fact, to be accurate in showing the value of annuities on single lives according to the mortality tables listed in subsection (a) of this Code section.

(c) The admissible evidence provided for in subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section shall not be the exclusive method which the jury or court hereafter is required to use in such cases but shall be supplementary to other lawful and allowable evidence and method for such purpose otherwise obtaining in this state. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Jury's findings must be fair. — While a jury has latitude in determining the value of a person's life in considering income, health, life expectancy, etc., and are not bound by mortality tables which may be introduced in evidence and may reduce the value of a person's life to its present cash value by any method satisfactory to them which produces a definite result that is fair and reasonable and is authorized by the evidence, their final finding as to the present cash value of the decedent's life must be fair and within reason and adjusted to the evidence within the latitudes above mentioned. Swift & Co. v. Lawson, 95 Ga. App. 35, 97 S.E.2d 168 (1957).

Expert testimony. — Evidence offered by an expert on the value of the life of the deceased may take into account statistical studies and inflationary trends. Georgia S. & Fla. Ry. v. Odom, 152 Ga. App. 664, 263 S.E.2d 469 (1979).

Table properly admitted. — Trial court

did not err in admitting into evidence, over objection, a mortality table and in charging the jury on permanent injury since plaintiff was injured on February 28, 1983, and at the time of trial on March 19, 1986, was still disabled from performing some normal, everyday functions, and the court limited any damages awarded to future pain and suffering. Cox v. Cantrell, 181 Ga. App. 722, 353 S.E.2d 582 (1987).

in any court, office, or other place in this state as evidence of the death of the person therein found to be dead, and the date, circumstances, and place of his disappearance.

(b) An official written report, record, or duly certified copy thereof, that a person is missing, missing in action, interned in a neutral country, beleaguered, besieged, or captured by an enemy, dead, or alive, made by an officer or employee of the United States authorized by any law of the United States to make the same shall be received in any court, office, or other place in this state, as evidence that such person is missing, missing in action, interned in a neutral country, beleaguered, besieged, or captured by an enemy, dead, or alive, as the case may be.

(c) For the purposes of subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section, any finding, report, record, or duly certified copy thereof, purporting to have been signed by an officer or employee of the United States as is described in this Code section shall prima facie be deemed to have been signed and issued by such an officer or employee pursuant to law, and the person signing same shall prima facie be deemed to have acted within the scope of his authority. If a copy purports to have been certified by a person authorized by law to certify the same, such certified copy shall be prima-facie evidence of his authority so to certify. (Ga. 24-4-48. Admissibility of photographs, motion pictures, videotapes, and audio recordings.

(a) For purposes of this Code section, “unavailability of a witness” includes situations in which the authenticating witness:

- (1) Is exempted by ruling of the court on the ground of privilege from testifying concerning the subject matter of the authentication;
- (2) Persists in refusing to testify concerning the subject matter of the authentication despite an order of the court to do so;

(3) Testifies to a lack of memory of the subject matter of the authentication;

(4) Is unable to be present or to testify at the hearing because of death or then existing physical or mental illness or infirmity; or

(5) Is absent from the hearing and the proponent of the authentication has been unable to procure the attendance of the authenticating witness by process or other reasonable means.

An authenticating witness is not unavailable as a witness if his or her exemption, refusal, claim of lack of memory, inability, or absence is due to the procurement or wrongdoing of the proponent of an authentication for the purpose of preventing the witness from attending or testifying.

(b) Subject to any other valid objection, photographs, motion pictures, videotapes, and audio recordings shall be admissible in evidence when necessitated by the unavailability of a witness who can provide personal authentication and when the court determines, based on competent evidence presented to the court, that such items tend to show reliably the fact or facts for which the items are offered.

(c) Subject to any other valid objection, photographs, motion pictures, videotapes, and audio recordings produced at a time when the device producing the items was not being operated by an individual person or was not under the personal control or in the presence of an individual operator shall be admissible in evidence when the court determines, based on competent evidence presented to the court, that such items tend to show reliably the fact or facts for which the items are offered, provided that prior to the admission of such evidence the date and time of such photograph, motion picture, or videotape recording shall be contained on such evidence and such date and time shall be shown to have been made contemporaneously with the events depicted in the photograph, videotape, or motion picture.

(d) This Code section shall not be the exclusive method of introduction into evidence of photographs, motion pictures, videotapes, and audio recordings but shall be supplementary to any other statutes and lawful methods existing in this state. (Code 1981, § 24-4-48, enacted by Ga. L. 1996, p. 443, § 1; Ga. L. 1997, p. 143, § 24.)

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1996, “authenticating” was substituted for “authenticating” in the undesignated paragraph at the end of subsection (a).

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

VIDEOTAPES

Brief nonresponsive reference to polygraph test did not open the door to the cross-examination of a witness about the witness's polygraph test; additionally, the polygraph reference did not prejudice a defendant because the reference indicated nothing about the results of the polygraph. Franks v. State, 278 Ga. 246, 599 S.E.2d 134 (2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 1058, 125 S. Ct. 870, 160 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2005).

Internet chat session transcript admissible. — Transcript of an internet chat session was admissible because the operator of the machine which produced the transcript, or one who personally witnessed the events recorded, testified that the videotape accurately portrayed what the witness saw take place at the time the events occurred. Ford v. State, 274 Ga. App. 695, 617 S.E.2d 262 (2005).

Transcript of an Internet chat room conversation between defendant and a police officer, posing as a 14-year-old girl, was properly admitted as similar transaction evidence in defendant's trial for pimping, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, and sexual exploitation of a minor; the officer was present to testify, personally witnessed the real-time chat recorded in the transcript as it was taking place, and testified that the transcript accurately represented the on-line conversation; the officer's testimony was tantamount to that of a witness to an event and was sufficient to authenticate the transcript. Ford v. State, 274 Ga. App. 695, 617 S.E.2d 262 (2005).

Cited in Ross v. State, 262 Ga. App. 323, 585 S.E.2d 666 (2003); Dingler v. State, 293 Ga. App. 27, 666 S.E.2d 441 (2008).

Audiotapes

9-1-1 call admissible. — An audioteape of a witness's 9-1-1 emergency telephone call that was admitted into evidence without meeting foundation requirements was properly authenticated by testimony of the witness that the witness had reviewed the tape and that the tape accurately portrayed the conversation the witness had with the 9-1-1 operator, with no deletions, additions, or alterations. Hudson v. State, 273 Ga. 124, 538 S.E.2d 751 (2000).

Audioteape of two 9-1-1 calls was properly admitted into evidence since the records custodian of the county 9-1-1 communications bureau presented detailed testimony as to the process used in producing both the original audiotapes and the copy admitted into evidence, the records custodian explained that calls are automatically recorded without the intervention of the 9-1-1 operator, and the records custodian further testified that the copy was a true and correct copy of the original recording. Shaw v. State, 247 Ga. App. 867, 545 S.E.2d 399 (2001).

Audioteape of deceased victim admissible. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for malice murder and kidnapping with bodily injury as a result of the defendant killing a former girlfriend who was also the mother of the defendant's two children, the trial court did not err by admitting an audioteape of a telephone conversation between the victim and the defendant since the state laid a proper foundation for the admission of the audioteape by adequately demonstrating that the victim was the person who made the tape, the victim was a party to the conversation, and the tape was not inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 16-11-62. Griffin v. State, 282 Ga. 215, 647 S.E.2d 36 (2007), overruled on other grounds, Garza v. State, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 865 (Ga. 2008).

Proper foundation for admission of audioteape. — Deed grantee laid a proper foundation pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48(c) for purposes of admission of an audioteape in a deed grantor's action to set aside the deed since the grantee testified that the tape was of a voice mail left on a cell phone that went unanswered, and that the voice on the tape was that of the grantor. Dae

v. Patterson, 295 Ga. App. 818, 673 S.E.2d 306 (2009).

Improper foundation for admission of audiotape in controlled drug buy. — Trial court erred in admitting an audiotape recording of a controlled drug sale by a confidential informant (CI) with defendant as neither party to the sale testified as to the authenticity and accuracy of the recording, and O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48 could not be the vehicle by which the tape was admitted because the essential criterion, the unavailability of an authenticating witness, could not be met; another audiotape of a second controlled buy was properly admitted as a police officer who listened to the transaction via a bug that had been attached to the CI testified that the tape recording was a fair and accurate portrayal of the conversation. Brown v. State, 274 Ga. App. 302, 617 S.E.2d 227 (2005).

Claim of error in admission of tape rejected. — Defendant's claim that an audiotape was improperly admitted into evidence was rejected as defendant did not include the tape in the record and defendant failed to specify the harm that resulted from any error in admitting the tape. Dupree v. State, 267 Ga. App. 561, 600 S.E.2d 654 (2004).

Transcript of audiotape and photographs. — Since a proper foundation for a transcript of defendant's statements to the police was laid by the trial court properly informing the jury that the transcript was not to be considered independent evidence, and that the jury had to return the transcript after listening to an audiotape thereof, admission of the transcript was proper; in addition, the photographs of the victim, which were not unduly gruesome or prejudicial, were admissible. Palmer v. State, 277 Ga. 124, 587 S.E.2d 1 (2003).

Proper foundation for admission of photo. — Since the defendant failed to establish the photo's origins or source, and also failed to connect the photo to the threatening letters defendant claimed defendant received while in jail, under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48(b), the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that a proper foundation was not laid for the photo's admission. Sweet v. State, 276 Ga. 545, 580 S.E.2d 231 (2003).

Defendant's motion for a mistrial based on the admission of a photograph of the victim's head was not an abuse of discretion as: (1) if pre-autopsy photographs were relevant and material to any issue in the case, they were admissible even if they were duplicative and might inflame the jury; (2) photographs showing the extent and nature of the victim's wounds were material and relevant, even if the cause of death was not in dispute; (3) the state had the burden to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant caused the death of the victim with malice aforethought; and (4) the photograph was relevant to the state's claim that the defendant had done so by shooting a single shot into the victim's head with a .38 revolver. Bradley v. State, 281 Ga. 173, 637 S.E.2d 19 (2006).

Child victim provided proper foundation. — Photos that were introduced not to show that they accurately represented the sexual events depicted, but rather to show that the defendant possessed sexually explicit photographs, were admissible after the photos were identified by the child victim as being photographs shown to the victim by the defendant and by other witnesses as the photos shown to the child victim on the defendant's computer. Abernathy v. State, 278 Ga. App. 574, 630 S.E.2d 421 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting numerous sexually explicit photographs and several video recordings into evidence as they were authenticated by showing the photographs to either minor victim during their testimony and having them identify themselves as being fairly depicted therein; in addition, both victims also testified that they viewed the digital video recordings prior to the admission of that evidence and were able to recognize themselves as being fairly depicted in those recordings. Walthall v. State, 281 Ga. App. 434, 636 S.E.2d 126 (2006).

No foundation for admission of photo. — Trial court properly refused to admit photos of a subdivision, tendered by a utility to rebut testimony by the condemnees' appraiser that property around power lines was usually the last piece of residential property to be developed, and was usually relegated to low income housing because the utility (1) failed to authenticate the pictures by showing the identity or address of the subdivision; (2) failed to present any evidence as to the value of the property in the pictures; and (3) failed to demonstrate whether the subdivision was built before or after the power lines were installed. Ga. Power Co. v. Jones, 277 Ga. App. 332, 626 S.E.2d 554 (2006).

Trial court erred in allowing an officer to identify the defendant in two surveillance photographs, based on the officer's familiarity with the defendant's appearance and absent a change in the defendant's appearance, because the testimony was offered to establish a fact which the jurors could decide for themselves; hence, the evidence was erroneously admitted as invading the jury's province to decide the issue. Mitchell v. State, 283 Ga. App. 456, 641 S.E.2d 674 (2007).

Photos of a deceased body. — Photographs of a victim's body after the body had been taken to the crime lab were material, relevant, and admissible as the photographs showed the location, nature, and extent of the victim's multiple gunshot wounds. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639 (2006).

Trial court did not err in admitting two post-incision autopsy photographs of the victim, despite the fact that the depicted injuries might not have been the direct cause of the victim's death, as the internal injuries could not have been shown by photographs of the outside of the body and were material in corroborating the details of the assault on the victim, which ultimately resulted in death. Lyons v. State, 282 Ga. 588, 652 S.E.2d 525 (2007), overruled on other grounds, Garza v. State, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 865 (Ga. 2008).

In a defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, felony murder, a photograph of the victim's body just prior to the beginning of the autopsy did not violate the rule pertaining to post-autopsy incision photographs as the incision marks shown related to an organ harvest after attempts to keep the victim alive failed; photographs that displayed the body's exposed rib cage and the calcification of ribs broken weeks before the victim's death were also properly admitted as those injuries formed the basis of charges against the defendant of cruelty to a child and aggravated assault, separate from the acts that immediately caused the victim's death. Berryhill v. State, 285 Ga. 198, 674 S.E.2d 920 (2009).

Photographs properly admitted. — In a boundary line dispute, the fact that the surveyor who prepared an exhibit depicting the area at issue did not testify, and that the exhibit did not contain a surveyor's stamp or signature, was not certified or authenticated, was not incorporated into a deed, and was labeled "not to scale," did not preclude the exhibit's admission. It was an aerial photo that a defendant used to explain the defendant's testimony about the defendant's understanding of the location of the boundary line and, thus, was properly admitted. Griggs v. Fletcher, 294 Ga. App. 60, 668 S.E.2d 521 (2008).

Videotape without authentication insufficient. — Introduction into evidence of videotapes, depicting a male and female engaged in sexual activity, without authentication by the operator of the machine which produced the videotapes, or by one who personally witnessed the events recorded, was error and required reversal of convictions for aggravated child molestation and sexual exploitation of a child. Phagan v. State, 268 Ga. 272, 486 S.E.2d 876 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1128, 118 S. Ct. 1079, 140 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1998).

First and third portions of a videotape were not properly authenticated under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48, as the subject child molestation victims were not sleeping in these segments of the videotape, and the victims, both of whom testified at trial, were available to authenticate these portions of the videotape; neither child was asked during testimony to confirm that the videotape accurately portrayed the events the children had witnessed. Smith v. State, 285 Ga. App. 658, 647 S.E.2d 346 (2007).

Evidence sufficient to authenticate videotape. — To establish that tape was taken from a surveillance camera at the scene of the crime, testimony of the store supervisor, the agent who found the tape, the forensic photographer who repaired the tape, and the investigator who created the state's exhibit was sufficient authentication. Tolver v. State, 269 Ga. 530, 500 S.E.2d 563 (1998).

Surveillance tape of a convenience store robbery was admissible into evidence because, even though the tape showed the wrong date because a store employee did not know how to properly set the videorecorder, the tape was properly authenticated by the store clerk and customers that were in the store during the robbery. Wallace v. State, 267 Ga. App. 801, 600 S.E.2d 808 (2004).

Since the victim was semiconscious at the time of acts of alleged child molestation due to drug and alcohol use, the victim was an unavailable witness under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48 for purposes of authenticating a videotape found at the scene; however, the trial court did not err in admitting the videotape because, in a pretrial statement to police, the defendant acknowledged that the victim had performed oral sex on the defendant on the evening in question and did not dispute the accuracy of the tape's depiction of it, the victim identified herself on the tape, another victim was identified on the videotape by the victim's mother, and another attendee at the party identified herself on the videotape. Wilson v. State, 279 Ga. App. 459, 631 S.E.2d 391 (2006), cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 1036 (Ga. 2006).

Trial court was authorized to find that a segment of a videotape reliably showed the facts for which the videotape was offered and was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48(b); that a child molestation victim appeared on the tape and that the defendant made the tape was shown by the testimony of the investigating officer, who identified the victim and who recognized the defendant's voice on the segment of the tape showing the victim to be asleep. Smith v. State, 285 Ga. App. 658, 647 S.E.2d 346 (2007).

Fast food restaurant video surveillance tape was properly admitted under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48(d), although the tape lacked date and time stamps, because other evidence authenticated the tape, including identification of the tape by a police officer who saw the tape, date and time stamps on still photographs from the tape, and the tape's corroboration of an employee's description of events. Dixon v. State, 300 Ga. App. 183, 684 S.E.2d 679 (2009).

Date and time stamp on videotape. — Defendant argued only that a proper foundation was not laid under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48(c) because no competent witness testified as to the date and time of the tape; however, since the videotape was not admitted under that portion of the statute which required a date and time on such evidence, that enumeration of error presented nothing for review. Rogers v. State, 294 Ga. App. 195, 670 S.E.2d 106 (2008).

Admitted to authenticate videotape. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court found that the state exercised due diligence in attempting to locate a robbery victim who had moved or by allowing a police officer to testify about out-of-court statements the victim made after a robbery to authenticate a videotape showing the robbery. Fernandez v. State, 263 Ga. App. 750, 589 S.E.2d 309 (2003).

Defendant unavailable as authenticating witness due to right against self-incrimination. — Child pornography defendant was deemed unavailable as an authenticating witness of seized photographic and videotape evidence against the defendant because defendant could not be compelled to testify due to the constitutional right against self-incrimination; but even though defendant was unavailable, the evidence was admissible through the testimony of the seizing officers. Craft v. State, 252 Ga. App. 834, 558 S.E.2d 18 (2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1025, 123 S. Ct. 537, 154 L. Ed. 2d 437 (2002).

Videotaped statement of testifying witness properly admitted. — Defendant's right of confrontation was not violated by the admission of a videotaped statement of a witness, who did not remain silent at the trial, and who completely denied making any statement to the police regarding the murder. Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 114, 587 S.E.2d 9 (2003).

Surveillance videotape was properly admitted, and the trial court's reliability finding was upheld on appeal, based on the surrounding testimony, despite the fact that the state was unable to present testimony from a witness who actually observed the events transpire contemporaneously with the recording of the tape; moreover, the tape was not rendered inadmissible merely because the tape did not contain the date and time on which it was recorded, as such went to the weight of the evidence, and not the admissibility. Holloway v. State, 287 Ga. App. 655, 653 S.E.2d 95 (2007).

A hotel surveillance tape was properly admitted under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-48. Testimony that security personnel in the dispatch office were not trained to operate machinery in the dispatch room and did nothing more than replace spent tapes with fresh ones established that the devices producing the images were not operated by a person or under the personal control or in the presence of an individual operator; the fact that the date-time stamp was 104 minutes “off” went to the weight of the evidence, not to the evidence’s admissibility; and the purported poor quality of the recording did not preclude the tape’s admissibility. Dawson v. State, 283 Ga. 315, 658 S.E.2d 755 (2008), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 169, 172 L.Ed.2d 122 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting a videotape of the footage from surveillance cameras depicting the defendant’s theft of the victim’s property because the victim testified that the victim recognized self on the tape, and police officers testified that they viewed the tape at the U. S. Attorney’s Office shortly after the theft. Sheppard v. State, 300 Ga. App. 631, 686 S.E.2d 295 (2009).

Voicemail message properly authenticated. — With regard to a defendant’s murder conviction, the trial court did not err by admitting the tape of the voicemail message the defendant left on the victim’s sibling’s voicemail service shortly before the shooting based on the defendant’s contention that the voicemail itself, as opposed to the tape of the voicemail, was not properly authenticated because competent evidence sufficient to establish the reliability of the voicemail message for purposes of authentication was admitted at trial via the testimony of the sibling as to retrieval of the message and the state presenting evidence of the phone records. Henley v. State, 285 Ga. 500, 678 S.E.2d 884 (2009), cert. denied, U.S. , 130 S. Ct. 800 175 L. Ed. 2d 559 (2009).

24-4-60. Requirement for DNA analysis of blood of persons convicted of certain sex offenses or convicted of a felony and incarcerated in a state correctional facility; storage of profile in data bank.

(a) As used in subsection (b) of this Code section, the term “state correctional facility” means a penal institution under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections, including inmate work camps and inmate boot camps; provided, however, that such term shall not include a probation detention center, probation diversion center, or probation boot camp under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections.

(b) Any person convicted of a criminal offense defined in Code Section 16-6-1, relating to the offense of rape; Code Section 16-6-2, relating to the offense of sodomy or aggravated sodomy; Code Section 16-6-3, relating to the offense of statutory rape; Code Section 16-6-4, relating to the offense of child molestation or aggravated child molestation; Code Section 16-6-5, relating to the offense of enticing a child for indecent purposes; Code Section 16-6-5.1, relating to the offense of sexual assault against persons in custody, sexual assault against a person detained or a patient in a hospital or other institution, or sexual assault by a practitioner of psychotherapy against a patient; Code Section 16-6-6, relating to the offense of bestiality; Code Section 16-6-7, relating to the offense of necrophilia; or Code Section 16-6-22, relating to the offense of incest, shall have a sample of his or her blood, an oral swab, or a sample obtained from a noninvasive procedure taken for DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) analysis to determine identification characteristics specific to the person. In addition, on and after July 1, 2000, any person convicted of a felony and incarcerated in a state correctional facility shall at the time of entering the prison system have a sample of his or her blood, an oral swab, or a sample obtained from a noninvasive procedure taken for DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) analysis to determine identification characteristics specific to the person. The provisions and requirements of this Code section shall also apply to any person who has been convicted of a felony prior to July 1, 2000, and who currently is incarcerated in a state correctional facility in this state for such offense. The provisions and requirements of this Code section shall also apply to any person who has been convicted of a felony in this state on or after July 1, 2000, and who is incarcerated in a private correctional facility in this state for such offense pursuant to a contract with the Department of Corrections upon entering the facility, and for any person convicted of a felony prior to July 1, 2000, and who is incarcerated in a private correctional facility in this state pursuant to contract with the Department of Corrections. The analysis shall be performed by the Division of Forensic Sciences of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. The division shall be authorized to contract with individuals or organizations for services to perform such analysis. The identification characteristics of the profile resulting from the DNA analysis shall be stored and maintained by the bureau in a DNA data bank and shall be made available only as provided in Code Section 24-4-63.

(c)(1) On and after July 1, 2007, any person who is placed on probation shall have a sample of his or her blood, an oral swab, or a sample obtained from a noninvasive procedure taken for DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) analysis to determine identification characteristics specific to the person if such person is convicted of a felony violation of any of the following:

- (A) Chapter 5 of Title 16, relating to crimes against persons;
- (B) Code Section 16-6-1, relating to the offense of rape;
- (C) Code Section 16-6-2, relating to the offense of sodomy or aggravated sodomy;
- (D) Code Section 16-6-3, relating to the offense of statutory rape;
- (E) Code Section 16-6-4, relating to the offense of child molestation or aggravated child molestation;
- (F) Code Section 16-6-5, relating to the offense of enticing a child for indecent purposes;
- (G) Code Section 16-6-5.1, relating to the offense of sexual assault against persons in custody, sexual assault against a person detained or a patient in a hospital or other institution, or sexual assault by a practitioner of psychotherapy against a patient;
- (H) Code Section 16-6-6, relating to the offense of bestiality;
- (I) Code Section 16-6-7, relating to the offense of necrophilia;
- (J) Code Section 16-6-22, relating to the offense of incest;
- (K) Code Section 16-7-1, relating to the offense of burglary;
- (L) Code Section 16-8-40, relating to the offense of robbery;
- (M) Code Section 16-8-41, relating to the offense of armed robbery;
- (N) Code Section 16-10-23, relating to the offense of impersonating an officer;
- (O) Code Section 16-10-24, relating to the offense of obstruction of an officer;
- (P) Article 4 of Chapter 11 of Title 16, relating to dangerous instrumentalities and practices; and
- (Q) Chapter 13 of Title 16, relating to controlled substances.

(2) The analysis shall be performed by the Division of Forensic Sciences of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. The division shall be authorized to contract with individuals or organizations for services to perform such analysis. The identification characteristics of the profile resulting from the DNA analysis shall be stored and maintained by the bureau in a DNA data bank and shall be made available only as provided in Code Section 24-4-63. The Department of Corrections shall be responsible for collecting such sample. (Code 1981, § 24-4-60, enacted by Ga. L. 1992, p. 2034, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 1; Ga. L. 2004, p. 485, § 1; Ga. L. 2005, p. 60, § 24/HB 95; Ga. L. 2007, p. 408, § 1/HB 314.)

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2000, “this Code section” was substituted for “this Code Section” near the beginning of subsection (a) and a comma was substituted for a semicolon following “the offense of incest” in the first sentence of subsection (b).

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 6, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “The provisions of this Act shall not be construed as requiring the Department of Corrections or the Georgia Bureau of Investigation to fully implement this Act prior to funds being appropriated or otherwise available for such purpose. If funds are not available, the director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or the director’s designee shall be authorized to designate those offenses for which samples shall be analyzed.”

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 did not authorize unreasonable searches in violation of the fourth amendment because the bodily intrusion of taking a blood or saliva sample was minimal, the state had a compelling interest in obtaining reliable and accurate identifying characteristics of individuals convicted of felonies, and those valid law enforcement interests outweighed a convicted felon’s privacy interests; to the extent that probable cause or individualized suspicion was required to justify a search, the prisoners’ felony convictions provided that justification. Padgett v. Ferrero, 294 F. Supp. 2d 1338 (N.D. Ga. 2003).

Where prisoners were challenging the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60, defendants were entitled to summary judgment on their privacy claims because the prisoners’ right to privacy in their identification, assuming one existed, was substantially outweighed by the interests of the state in having available a DNA database that could be used in solving crimes and exonerating the innocent. Padgett v. Ferrero, 294 F. Supp. 2d 1338 (N.D. Ga. 2003).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 does not violate the fourth amendment or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, as Georgia’s legitimate interest in creating a permanent identification record of convicted felons for law enforcement purposes outweighs the minor intrusion involved in taking prisoners’ saliva samples and storing DNA profiles, given prisoners’ reduced expectation of privacy in their identities. Padgett v. Donald, 401 F.3d 1273 (11th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 820, 126 S. Ct. 352, 163 L. Ed. 2d 61 (2005).

Prisoners’ challenge to the requirement in O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 that incarcerated felons submit saliva samples for DNA profiling was without merit; the bodily intrusion required by the statute to obtain saliva samples for DNA profiling did not impinge their fourteenth amendment right to privacy. Padgett v. Donald, 401 F.3d 1273 (11th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 820, 126 S. Ct. 352, 163 L. Ed. 2d 61 (2005).

Although prisoners retain a right to bodily privacy under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, the extraction of saliva required by O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 did not violate that right because the statute promotes law enforcement, and is narrowly tailored to promote that purpose by requiring DNA profiling on a limited population of incarcerated felons and forbidding release of the DNA profiles except for law enforcement purposes. Padgett v. Donald, 401 F.3d 1273 (11th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 820, 126 S. Ct. 352, 163 L. Ed. 2d 61 (2005).

The classification of subjecting convicted felons but not convicted misdemeanants to the DNA identification process is rationally related to the Georgia legislature's legitimate law enforcement purpose of creating a permanent identification record of convicted felons because the statute encompasses all convicted felons whose crimes and/or past histories were serious enough to warrant a sentence to confinement, as opposed to lesser punishment, and the legislature acted reasonably and not arbitrarily when the legislature focused on those convicted felons who are housed in a correctional facility where DNA samples can be efficiently and economically obtained. As a result, O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 rationally relates to the legitimate state interest the statute is intended to promote and does not violate equal protection. Quarterman v. State, 282 Ga. 383, 651 S.E.2d 32 (2007).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 does not violate the fourth amendment, the search and seizure provisions of the Georgia Constitution, or a convicted felons' rights to privacy under the United States or Georgia Constitutions. Quarterman v. State, 282 Ga. 383, 651 S.E.2d 32 (2007).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 does not violate a defendant's right under the Georgia Constitution to not incriminate oneself as the privilege against self-incrimination in the United States Constitution does not protect an individual from government compulsion to provide blood or other biological samples and, although the right against self-incrimination in the Georgia Constitution has been construed liberally to limit the state from forcing an individual to affirmatively produce any evidence, oral or real, regardless of whether or not it is testimonial, § 24-4-60 does not force a convicted felon to remove incriminating evidence but only to submit an incarcerated person's body for the purpose of having the evidence removed. Quarterman v. State, 282 Ga. 383, 651 S.E.2d 32 (2007).

O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 does not violate the eighth amendment because the statute, requiring all convicted felons incarcerated in a state correctional facility to provide a sample for DNA analysis to determine the identification characteristics specific to the person, does not impose any form of punishment. Further, the purpose of establishing a DNA databank has been identified, and the methods for obtaining data provided by the statute are not excessive measures in response to the purpose, therefore, without any showing of the use of excessive force that might arguably state a claim of cruel and unusual punishment in obtaining DNA samples through involuntary means, the statute is deemed not penal and the means used to enforce the statute have not been shown to be malicious or grossly disproportionate to the refusal to comply with the statutory mandate. Quarterman v. State, 282 Ga. 383, 651 S.E.2d 32 (2007).

Application. — As a person who was convicted of a felony prior to July 1, 2000, and who on that date was incarcerated on such offense, the defendant was properly subject to compulsory blood sampling to establish a DNA profile for storage in the state's DNA data bank. Dingler v. State, 281 Ga. App. 721, 637 S.E.2d 120 (2006).

In convictions of aggravated sodomy, kidnapping, burglary, and aggravated assault, use of evidence comparing DNA on lip balm found at the crime scene with defendant's blood sample and with evidence retained from a prior rape prosecution that resulted in defendant's acquittal did not violate O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 et seq. Fortune v. State, 300 Ga. App. 550, 685 S.E.2d 466 (2009).

Collection of DNA not unconstitutional on day of release from prison. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to suppress the match of the defendant's DNA collected pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 on the day the defendant was released from prison for separate crimes because the DNA extraction was not a result of an illegal detention and the DNA seizure would have occurred regardless of the any illegal search or seizure; the correct calculation of the defendant's remaining sentence after the entry of an order vacating some of those convictions was a matter for the Department of Corrections, not the trial court, and the order directing the defendant's release was not necessarily evidence that the defendant's detention after a certain date was illegal. The defendant's argument that the defendant was a probationer at the time of the search was meritless. Leftwich v. State, 299 Ga. App. 392, 682 S.E.2d 614 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C2013, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 710

(Ga. 2009); cert. denied, U.S. , 130 S. Ct. 1913, 176 L. Ed. 2d 386 (2010).

Purpose of Georgia's DNA collection statute was not to punish, but to obtain a reliable, immutable form of identification for placement in a DNA database, and all the relevant evidence in the case indicated that the statute would not increase the punishment of anyone to whom the statute was applied. Padgett v. Ferrero, 294 F. Supp. 2d 1338 (N.D. Ga. 2003).

24-4-61. Time and procedure for withdrawal of blood samples.

(a) Each sample required pursuant to Code Section 24-4-60 from persons who are to be incarcerated shall be withdrawn within the first 30 days of incarceration at the receiving unit or at such other place as is designated by the Department of Corrections. Each sample required pursuant to Code Section 24-4-60 from persons who are to be released from a state correctional facility or private correctional facility shall be withdrawn within the 12 months preceding such person's release at a place designated by the Department of Corrections. The required samples from persons who are not sentenced to a term of confinement shall be withdrawn as a condition of probation. The Division of Forensic Sciences of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation shall publish in its quality manuals the procedures for the collection and transfer of samples to such division pursuant to Code Section 35-3-154. Personnel at a Department of Corrections facility shall implement the provisions of this Code section as part of the regular processing of offenders.

(b) Samples collected by oral swab or by a noninvasive procedure may be collected by any individual who has been trained in the procedure. Only a correctional health nurse technician, physician, registered professional nurse, licensed practical nurse, graduate laboratory technician, or phlebotomist shall withdraw any sample of blood to be submitted for analysis. No civil liability shall attach to any person authorized to take a sample as provided in this article as a result of the act of taking a sample from any person submitting thereto, provided the sample was taken according to recognized medically accepted procedures. However, no person shall be relieved from liability for negligence in the withdrawing of any blood sample.

(c) Chemically clean sterile disposable needles shall be used for the withdrawal of all samples of blood. The containers for blood samples, oral swabs, and the samples obtained by noninvasive procedures shall be sealed and labeled with the subject’s name, social security number, date of birth, race, and gender plus the name of the person collecting the sample and the date and place of collection. The containers shall be secured to prevent tampering with the contents. The steps set forth in this subsection relating to the taking, handling, identification, and disposition of samples are procedural and not substantive. Substantial compliance therewith shall be deemed to be sufficient. The samples shall be transported to the Division of Forensic Sciences of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation not more than 15 days following withdrawal and shall be analyzed and stored in the DNA data bank in accordance with Code Sections 24-4-62 and 24-4-63. (Code 1981, § 24-4-61, enacted by Ga. L. 1992, p. 2034, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 2.)

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1992, “Code Sections” was substituted for “Code Section” in the last sentence of subsection (c).
Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2000, “of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation” was inserted following “Division of Forensic Sciences” in the last sentence of subsection (c).
Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 6, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “The provisions of this Act shall not be construed as requiring the Department of Corrections or the Georgia Bureau of Investigation to fully implement this Act prior to funds being appropriated or otherwise available for such purpose. If funds are not available, the director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or the director’s designee shall be authorized to designate those offenses for which samples shall be analyzed.”

24-4-62. Procedure for analysis and storage of blood sample; use of remainder of sample not subjected to analysis; confidentiality of results.

Whether or not the results of an analysis are to be included in the data bank, the bureau shall conduct the DNA analysis in accordance with procedures adopted by the bureau to determine identification characteristics specific to the individual whose sample is being analyzed. The director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or his or her designated representative shall complete and maintain on file a form indicating the name of the person whose sample is to be analyzed, the date and by whom the sample was received and examined, and a statement that the seal on the container containing the sample had not been broken or otherwise tampered with. The remainder of a sample submitted for analysis and inclusion in the data bank pursuant to Code Section 24-4-60 may be divided, if possible, labeled as provided for the original sample, and securely stored by the bureau in accordance with specific procedures of the bureau to ensure the integrity and confidentiality of the samples. All or part of the remainder of that sample may be used only to create a statistical data base provided no identifying information on the individual whose sample is being analyzed is included or for retesting by the bureau to validate or update the original analysis. A report of the results of a DNA analysis conducted by the bureau as authorized, including the identifying information, shall be made and maintained at the bureau. Except as specifically provided in this Code section and Code Section 24-4-63, the results of the analysis shall be securely stored and shall remain confidential. (Code 1981, § 24-4-62, enacted by Ga. L. 1992, p. 2034, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 3.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 6, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The provisions of this Act shall not be construed as requiring the Department of Corrections or the Georgia Bureau of Investigation to fully implement this Act prior to funds being appropriated or otherwise available for such purpose. If funds are not available, the director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or the director's designee shall be authorized to designate those offenses for which samples shall be analyzed."

24-4-63. Dissemination of information in data bank to law enforcement officials; comparison of profile; request for search; separate statistical data base authorized; fee for search and comparative analysis.

(a) It shall be the duty of the bureau to receive samples and to analyze, classify, and file the results of DNA identification characteristics of samples submitted pursuant to Code Section 24-4-60 and to make such information available as provided in this Code section. The results of an analysis and comparison of the identification of the characteristics from two or more biological samples shall be made available directly to federal, state, and local law enforcement officers upon a request made in furtherance of an official investigation of any criminal offense. A request may be made by personal contact, mail, or electronic means. The name of the requestor and the purpose for which the information is requested shall be maintained on file with the bureau.

(b) Upon request from a prosecutor or law enforcement agency, the bureau may compare a DNA profile from an analysis of a sample from a suspect in a criminal investigation where the sample was obtained through a search warrant, consent of the suspect, court order, or other lawful means to DNA profiles lawfully collected and maintained by the bureau. The bureau shall not add a DNA profile of any such suspect to any DNA data bank except upon conviction as provided in this article.

(c)(1) Upon his or her request, a copy of the request for search shall be furnished to any person identified and charged with an offense as the result of a search of information in the data bank. Only when a sample or DNA profile supplied by the requestor satisfactorily matches the requestor's profile in the data bank shall the existence of data in the data bank be confirmed or identifying information from the data bank be disseminated.

(2) The name of the convicted offender whose profile is contained in the data bank may be related to any other data bases which are constructed for law enforcement purposes and may be disseminated only for law enforcement purposes.

(3) Upon a showing by the defendant in a criminal case that access to the DNA data bank is material to the investigation, preparation, or presentation of a defense at trial or in a motion for a new trial, a superior court having proper jurisdiction over such criminal case shall direct the bureau to compare a DNA profile which has been generated by the defendant through an independent test against the data bank, provided that such DNA profile has been generated in accordance with standards for forensic DNA analysis adopted pursuant to 42 U.S.C. Section 14131, as amended.

(d) The bureau shall develop procedures governing the methods of obtaining information from the data bank in accordance with this Code section and procedures for verification of the identity and authority of the requestor. The bureau shall specify the positions in that agency which require regular access to the data bank and samples submitted as a necessary function of the job.

(e) The bureau may create a separate statistical data base comprised of DNA profiles of samples of persons whose identity is unknown. Nothing in this Code section or Code Section 24-4-64 shall prohibit the bureau from sharing or otherwise disseminating the information in the statistical data base with law enforcement or criminal justice agencies within or outside the state.

(f) The bureau may charge a reasonable fee to search and provide a comparative analysis of DNA profiles in the data bank to any authorized law enforcement agency outside of the state. (Code 1981, § 24-4-63, enacted by Ga. L. 1992, p. 2034, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 4; Ga. L. 2008, p. 252, § 1/SB 430.)

The 2008 amendment, effective July 1, 2008, added present subsection (b) and redesignated former subsections (b) through (e) as present subsections (c) through (f), respectively.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2000, “identity” was substituted for “identify” in the first sentence in subsection (d).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 6, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “The provisions of this Act shall not be construed as requiring the Department of Corrections or the Georgia Bureau of Investigation to fully implement this Act prior to funds being appropriated or otherwise available for such purpose. If funds are not available, the director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or the director's designee shall be authorized to designate those offenses for which samples shall be analyzed."

Prisoners' right to privacy not violated. —

Although prisoners retain a right to bodily privacy under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, the extraction of saliva required by O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 did not violate that right because the statute promotes law enforcement, and is narrowly tailored to promote that purpose by requiring DNA profiling on a limited population of incarcerated felons and forbidding release of DNA profiles except for law enforcement purposes. Padgett v. Donald, 401 F.3d 1273 (11th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 820, 126 S. Ct. 352, 163 L. Ed. 2d 61 (2005).

Match of DNA established probable cause for search warrant. — Match of defendant's DNA profile to DNA of semen collected at the scene of a crime established probable cause for a search warrant; defendant's argument that the state needed to further prove that the requirements and procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. §§ 24-4-60 through 24-4-65 were followed was without merit, and the trial court's order denying defendant's motion to suppress evidence was affirmed. Brown v. State, 270 Ga. App. 176, 605 S.E.2d 885 (2004).

24-4-64. Unlawful dissemination or use of information; obtaining sample without authority.

(a) Any person who, without authority, disseminates information contained in the data bank shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person who disseminates, receives, or otherwise uses or attempts to so use information in the data bank, knowing that such dissemination, receipt, or use is for a purpose other than as authorized by law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature.

(b) Except as authorized by law, any person who, for purposes of having DNA analysis performed, obtains or attempts to obtain any sample submitted to the Division of Forensic Sciences for analysis shall be guilty of a felony. (Code 1981, § 24-4-64, enacted by Ga. L. 1992, p. 2034, § 1.)

24-4-65. Expungement of profile in data bank upon reversal and dismissal of conviction.

A person whose DNA profile has been included in the data bank pursuant to this article may request that it be expunged on the grounds that the conviction on which the authority for including his or her DNA profile was based has been reversed and the case dismissed. The bureau shall purge all records and identifiable information in the data bank pertaining to the person and destroy all samples from the person upon receipt of a written request that such data be expunged, pursuant to this Code section, and a certified copy of the court order reversing and dismissing the conviction. (Code 1981, § 24-4-65, enacted by Ga. L. 1992, p. 2034, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1075, § 5.)

wise available for such purpose. If funds are not available, the director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or the director’s designee shall be authorized to designate those offenses for which samples shall be analyzed.”

Expungement right not violated. — In convictions of aggravated sodomy, kidnapping, burglary, and aggravated assault, in which the state used evidence comparing DNA on lip balm found at the crime scene with defendant’s blood sample and with evidence retained from a prior rape prosecution, retention and use of the rape trial evidence did not violate defendant’s right to seek expungement of such evidence under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-65. Fortune v. State, 300 Ga. App. 550, 685 S.E.2d 466 (2009).

GENERAL PROVISIONS

24-5-1. Primary and secondary evidence distinguished.

(a) Primary evidence is such as in itself does not indicate the existence of other and better proof.

Primary Evidence

Certified copy of conviction is primary evidence. — To impeach a witness by a prior conviction, the conviction must be proved by the record of the conviction itself. The certified copy of a conviction is primary evidence, as opposed to secondary evidence, and is the best proof. Howard v. State, 204 Ga. App. 743, 420 S.E.2d 594 (1992).

A duplicate original signed by both parties at the same time as the original constituted primary instead of secondary evidence and was admissible without the necessity of first serving a notice to produce the “original.” Beard v. Westmoreland, 90 Ga. App. 632, 84 S.E.2d 93 (1954); Raulerson v. Jones, 122 Ga. App. 440, 177 S.E.2d 181 (1970).

Written bill of sale is the best evidence, and parol evidence is inadmissible to show the title to personalty. Epping v. Mockler, 55 Ga. 376 (1875).

Evidence of title. — If there be written evidence of title that evidence should be produced. Morgan v. Jones, 24 Ga. 155 (1858).

Existence of fact as issue. — When the existence of a fact is the question at issue and not the contents of a writing, then oral and written evidence of the fact may both be primary evidence. Denson v. State, 149 Ga. App. 453, 254 S.E.2d 455 (1979).

Familiarity with basis for record. — As a general rule, the testimony of a person who has knowledge of the facts from which books of account are made up is primary evidence as to those facts, and is admissible whether or not the books themselves are put in evidence. Mayor of Buford v. Medley, 58 Ga. App. 48, 197 S.E. 494 (1938).

Oral testimony by a police officer that the officer was certified to operate particular model of intoximeter at the time the officer tested defendant was not barred by the best evidence rule. Clarke v. State, 170 Ga. App. 852, 319 S.E.2d 16 (1984).

Claim under best evidence rule waived. — Driver waived the driver's claim that the trial court erred in denying the driver's pretrial motion seeking to exclude an injured party from cross-examining the driver about a traffic citation without producing a certified copy of the guilty plea under the best evidence rule of O.C.G.A. § 24-5-1 when the driver testified on direct that the driver received a traffic citation in connection with the automobile accident with the injured party and that the driver paid a fine on the citation, and the driver did not object when the injured party asked the driver about the citation without introducing a certified copy. Daniel v. Smith, 266 Ga. App. 637, 597 S.E.2d 432 (2004).

Photostatic copies are ordinarily secondary evidence. Montgomery v. State, 154 Ga. App. 311, 268 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

When it is proved that a genuine original was executed, proof that a document is an exact carbon copy of that original is sufficient to admit the copy into evidence without proving the loss of the original. Mitchell v. United States, 214 Ga. 473, 105 S.E.2d 337 (1958), for comment, see 21 Ga. B.J. 553 (1959).

Production of photocopy of search warrant was sufficient to evidence valid search when issuing magistrate testified that the magistrate had searched the magistrate's files and had not found the original warrant, and the police officer who executed the warrant similarly found only the photocopy in the officer's file. Early v. State, 170 Ga. App. 158, 316 S.E.2d 527 (1984).

An unsigned copy of the existing original contract was properly excluded from evidence. Brenard Mfg. Co. v. Winn-Wilkes Drug Co., 31 Ga. App. 200, 120 S.E. 446 (1923).

Altered copy of contract properly excluded. — When an unaltered original of a contract was available to plaintiff from defendant according to the assertion of plaintiff's president at trial but plaintiff's president did not attempt to subpoena the document, the trial court properly exercised the court's discretion in excluding an altered copy of the contract since plaintiff failed to exercise diligence to obtain the original. Jeff Goolsby Homes Corp. v. Thomas, 181 Ga. App. 308, 352 S.E.2d 172 (1986).

A press letter book is not original but secondary evidence of the contents of the letters. Watkins v. Paine, 57 Ga. 50 (1876).

Witness's notes. — Best evidence of the expert witness's opinion was the witness's own testimony not the worksheet which the witness had prepared in order to assist the witness in presenting the testimony. Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972).

Illegal hearsay distinguished. — There is a distinction between illegal testimony and secondary evidence in that hearsay testimony (illegal testimony) has no probative force whatsoever, and its only effect is to prejudice the minds of the jury against the party against whom such hearsay evidence is introduced, while the only objection to secondary evidence is that the evidence is received without first laying the preliminary foundation; such evidence stands on a different footing, and if admitted without objection it is nevertheless competent, for by allowing such evidence without objecting at the time it is sought to be introduced the party waives the party's right to have the best evidence of such fact sought to be proved, and cannot subsequently insist that the court should withdraw such secondary evidence from the consideration of the jury. Rushin v. State, 63 Ga. App. 646, 11 S.E.2d 844 (1940).

Preliminary proof. — Party must always make the usual preliminary proof for the admission of secondary evidence, or that kind of evidence will not be admitted. Morgan v. Jones, 24 Ga. 155 (1858).

Criminal Confessions

General consideration. — Rules governing the admission of primary and secondary evidence to establish a contract have no application to the confession of a crime. In making a confession, all that the accused voluntarily wrote, or said, or signed, which is material to the charge, is competent against the accused because it is the accused's own admission, and against the accused's own interest. Cawthon v. State, 71 Ga. App. 497, 31 S.E.2d 64 (1944).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

INACCESSIBILITY
DILIGENCE

Accessibility and diligence. — In order to introduce secondary evidence of the contents of a lost paper, it is only necessary to establish a reasonable presumption of the paper’s loss; and this presumption is held to be established when the party shows that in a reasonable degree, the party has exhausted all the sources of information and means of discovery, which the nature of the cases suggests and which were accessible to the party. Ellis v. Doe, 10 Ga. 253 (1851); Harper v. Scott, 12 Ga. 125 (1852); Molyneaux v. Collier, 13 Ga. 406 (1853); Bryan v. Walton, 14 Ga. 185 (1853).

Function of trial court is not to determine the worthiness or credibility of secondary evidence, but is only to determine whether what is offered as evidence is the best form accessible to the court. Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

Discretion of trial judge. — Question of inaccessibility of primary evidence and diligence of the party is a determination within the discretion of the trial judge and the judge's decision will not be overturned unless that discretion is abused. Hawes v. Paul, 41 Ga. 609 (1871); Florida Coca Cola Bottling Co. v. Ricker, 136 Ga. 411, 71 S.E. 734 (1911); Orr v. Dunn, 145 Ga. 137, 88 S.E. 669 (1916); Brookman v. Rennolds, 148 Ga. 721, 98 S.E. 543 (1919); Bedgood v. State, 100 Ga. App. 736, 112 S.E.2d 430 (1959); Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

Secondary evidence admitted without objection. — Court has a right to charge, and the jury to find, upon secondary evidence, provided the evidence has been introduced without objection. Goodwyn v. Goodwyn, 20 Ga. 600 (1856).

Party as witness. — Proof that a paper is lost or destroyed lays a proper foundation for the admission of secondary evidence, and a party is a competent witness to this point. Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

If witnesses are unknown, it is not necessary to prove that the alleged lost original writing was executed with any particular formality in order to admit secondary evidence of the writing's contents. Sharp v. Autry, 185 Ga. 160, 194 S.E. 194 (1937).

Parol evidence. — Contents of a lost writing may be established by parol. Segars v. City of Cornelia, 60 Ga. App. 457, 4 S.E.2d 60 (1939); Cummings v. State, 84 Ga. App. 698, 67 S.E.2d 156 (1951).

Evidence of title to land. — If there is written evidence of title to land, it must be produced in order to prove its contents; and before secondary evidence is competent to show its contents, it must first be shown to the court that the original one existed, that it was properly executed and that it is either lost or destroyed, or for some other sufficient cause is not accessible to the diligence of the party. Head v. Lee, 203 Ga. 191, 45 S.E.2d 666 (1947).

Photocopies of claim forms identified as authentic by a witness are properly admissible under Ga. L. 1950, p. 73, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-26) without accounting for the original under former Code 1933, § 38-212 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-2). Strickland v. Foundation Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 614, 200 S.E.2d 306 (1973).

Carbon copies of documents. — When it is proved that a genuine original was executed, proof that a document is an exact carbon copy of that original is sufficient to admit it into evidence without proving the loss of the original. Mitchell v. United States, 214 Ga. 473, 105 S.E.2d 337 (1958), for comment, see 21 Ga. B.J. 553 (1959).

Trial court did not err in admitting certain copies of a store's receipts of defendant's fraudulent transactions rather than the originals as the store's loss prevention manager testified that although the originals had been maintained at the store, the manager had not been able to locate the receipts in time for trial and that the manager had made the copies of the original receipts, which accurately reflected the original receipts; defendant did not show that the best evidence rule had been violated. Epps v. State, 262 Ga. App. 113, 584 S.E.2d 701 (2003).

Admission of W-2 and spouse's memory to prove income of deceased. — In a spouse's wrongful death suit against the Georgia Department of Transportation, the trial court did not err by allowing the surviving spouse to testify as to that spouse's memory of the deceased spouse's income as the question at issue concerned the prior earnings of the deceased spouse, not the actual contents of prior paychecks. Although W-2 forms and other documentary evidence certainly contained evidence of the past earnings, those documents did not preclude the admission of other evidence to prove the actual fact at issue, namely, the amount of the deceased spouse's income. DOT v. Baldwin, 292 Ga. App. 816, 665 S.E.2d 898 (2008).

Copies of affidavit and search warrant at motion to suppress hearing. — While the trial court errs in considering copies of an affidavit and search warrant at a motion to suppress hearing, without requiring the originals to be accounted for, the subsequent inclusion of the originals in the record obviates any technical error which may result.

Williams v. State, 168 Ga. App. 614, 309 S.E.2d 856 (1983).

Certified copy of conviction is not secondary evidence. — To impeach a witness by a prior conviction, the conviction must be proved by the record of the conviction itself. The certified copy of a conviction is primary evidence, as opposed to secondary evidence, and is the best proof. Howard v. State, 204 Ga. App. 743, 420 S.E.2d 594 (1992).

Secondary evidence was found admissible in the following cases. — See Hawes v. Paul, 41 Ga. 609 (1871) (material evidence); Sims v. Scheussler, 2 Ga. App. 466, 58 S.E. 693 (1907) (certified copy of deed); Sharp v. Autry, 185 Ga. 160, 194 S.E. 194 (1937) (circumstantial evidence); Everitt v. Harris, 67 Ga. App. 64, 19 S.E.2d 545 (1942) (carbon copies); Saliba v. Saliba, 202 Ga. 791, 44 S.E.2d 744 (1947) (circumstantial evidence); Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980) (critical evidence).

State's showing insufficient. — Sentencing court improperly considered defendant's prior state court conviction because the state presented only hearsay, rather than competent evidence, showing that it was unable to obtain a certified copy of the conviction, and there was no evidence regarding whether it used due diligence to obtain such a copy. Brinkley v. State, 301 Ga. App. 827, 689 S.E.2d 116 (2009).

Harmless error. — In an identity fraud case, the transcript showed that the state never accounted for the original check when defense counsel objected on the ground that the admission of the original was the best evidence; therefore, it was error for the trial court to admit the photostatic copy pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-5-2, but the error was harmless because the state's witnesses provided direct testimony regarding details about the check, and specifically testified regarding defendant's use of the identity fraud victim's driver's license; thus, the check itself was of little or no significance in determining defendant's guilt or innocence of identity fraud, and any error in admitting a photostatic copy of the check into evidence would not have influenced the jury's verdict in any way. Wilson v. State, 276 Ga. App. 39, 622 S.E.2d 411 (2005).

Inaccessibility

Inaccessibility was found in the following cases. — See Jackson v. Johnson, 67 Ga. 167 (1881) (administrator's bond in foreign state); Sims v. Scheussler, 2 Ga. App. 466, 58 S.E. 693 (1907) (mortgage); Davis v. State, 25 Ga. App. 532, 103 S.E. 819, cert. denied, 25 Ga. App. 840 (1920) (telegraph messages); Beall v. Francis, 163 Ga. 894, 137 S.E. 251 (1927) (certified copy of marriage contract); Carpenter v. State, 140 Ga. App. 368, 231 S.E.2d 97 (1976) (golf membership card); Knox v. State, 165 Ga. App. 26, 299 S.E.2d 105 (1983) (laboratory); General Ins. Servs., Inc. v. Marcola, 231 Ga. App. 144, 497 S.E.2d 679 (1998) (contract).

Inaccessibility was not found in the following cases. — Florida Coca Cola Bottling Co. v. Ricker, 136 Ga. 411, 71 S.E. 734 (1911) (written assignment sent to another state); Caraker v. Brown, 152 Ga. 677, 111 S.E. 51 (1922) (record of a homestead); Illinois C.R.R. v. Banks, 31 Ga. App. 756, 122 S.E. 85 (1924) (original records).

Patients' dental records. — When, in a dentist's suit to recover income for work performed for a dental clinic, it appeared that the patients' individual records constituted the primary documentary evidence of their visits, charges, and payments and that those records were otherwise available or accessible, the trial court did not err in refusing to admit plaintiff's own purported summary as secondary evidence of that information. White v. Dilworth, 178 Ga. App. 226, 342 S.E.2d 709 (1986).

Records destroyed. — Trial court erred in directing a verdict as to damages after a landlord satisfied the requirement for submitting secondary evidence by establishing that the primary evidence, the purchase invoices, had been destroyed and that higher secondary evidence from the company was unavailable; the oral evidence as to the wholesale fair market value and as to the dealer's discount, based upon the actual damaged parts, was sufficient secondary evidence to go to a jury. Hodges v. Vara, 268 Ga. App. 815, 603 S.E.2d 327 (2004).

Diligence

Diligence was found. — When absence of letter in court was explained by to whom the letter was sent, as was the receiver's diligence in searching for the letter, and in no other way could this letter be accounted for but that it was "lost," this was good and reasonable cause in inaccessibility. Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

Diligence was not found. — Copy of a deed taken from the register is not admissible evidence against the grantee, without notice to the grantee to produce the original. Solomon & Son v. Creech, 82 Ga. 445, 9 S.E. 165 (1889).

Purchaser of land. — Equity will grant no relief in favor of one who buys land, when one fails to exercise any diligence for one's protection, and asserts that one blindly relied on the representations of the seller as to matters of which one could have informed oneself. Browning v. Richardson, 181 Ga. 413, 182 S.E. 516 (1935).

Transcript of tape recording. — Best evidence rule does not apply to a tape recorded statement and, therefore, a transcript of a tape recorded statement is admissible when the court determines that a reasonable necessity exists for the reading of the transcript rather than experiencing a delay caused by the additional effort of playing the tape before the court. In re F.L.P., 184 Ga. App. 164, 361 S.E.2d 43 (1987).

Records destroyed. — Trial court erred in directing a verdict as to damages when a landlord satisfied the requirement for submitting secondary evidence by establishing that the primary evidence, the purchase invoices, had been destroyed and that higher secondary evidence from the company was unavailable; the oral evidence as to the wholesale fair market value and as to the dealer's discount, based upon the actual damaged parts, was sufficient secondary evidence to go to a jury. *Hodges v. 24-5-4. Best evidence of writing to be produced or accounted for.

(a) The best evidence which exists of a writing sought to be proved shall be produced, unless its absence shall be satisfactorily accounted for.

ANALYSIS

BEST EVIDENCE RULE INAPPLICABLE
WHAT CONSTITUTES BEST EVIDENCE

Rule restricted to writings and has nothing to do with evidence generally. Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972); Willingham v. State, 134 Ga. App. 603, 215 S.E.2d 521 (1975); Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979); Bostic v. State, 183 Ga. App. 430, 359 S.E.2d 201 (1987).

Contents of writing in issue. — This statute applies only when the contents of a writing are in issue. Young v. State, 226 Ga. 553, 176 S.E.2d 52 (1970); Springer v. State, 238 Ga. 81, 230 S.E.2d 883 (1976); Pryor v. State, 238 Ga. 698, 234 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 935, 98 S. Ct. 422, 54 L. Ed. 2d 294 (1977), overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006); Guthrie v. State, 147 Ga. App. 351, 248 S.E.2d 714 (1978); Smith v. State, 147 Ga. App. 549, 249 S.E.2d 353 (1978); Ferrell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 405, 254 S.E.2d 404 (1979); Denson v. State, 149 Ga. App. 453, 254 S.E.2d 455 (1979) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-4).

Preference for original writing. — This is really a preferential rule giving first preference to the original writing. Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972); Willingham v. State, 134 Ga. App. 603, 215 S.E.2d 521 (1975).

The rule should be more appropriately called the “original document rule.” Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972); Pugh v. Jones, 131 Ga. App. 600, 206 S.E.2d 650 (1974).

Accounting for absence of notes. — There was no violation of this rule by the failure to introduce officer’s notes taken during interviews with defendant when the absence of notes was accounted for and explained. Dowdy v. State, 215 Ga. App. 576, 451 S.E.2d 528 (1994).

When, with regard to proof of transmittal of contraband to state crime lab by certified mail, the state could only produce a photostatic copy of the certification receipt in lieu of the original and the defendant urged that, without an adequate explanation for the absence of the original certified mail receipt as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-5-4, the chain of custody was not sufficiently proven, but a deputy sheriff testified that the deputy would always make a copy of the certified mail receipt when the deputy mailed contraband to the state crime lab, but had been unable to locate the original receipt for this particular mailing, and identified the deputy’s handwriting on the photostatic copy and noted that the certification number was identical to that on the state crime lab report, the trial court was authorized to conclude that the copy of the receipt had been made in the regular course of business so as to be admissible pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-3-14 and 24-5-26. Spead v. State, 187 Ga. App. 359, 370 S.E.2d 213 (1988).

Substitution of oral for written evidence. — Cases which most frequently call for the application of this rule are those which relate to the substitution of oral for written evidence. Fitzgerald v. Adams, 9 Ga. 471 (1851).

Inadmissible testimony. — It was error to admit the testimony of witnesses as to the contents of a notebook without establishing the notebook’s existence, admissibility, authentication and without accounting for the absence of the original. Clark v. State, 271 Ga. 6, 515 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

In a civil forfeiture proceeding in connection with an action brought under the Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., a witness’s testimony regarding newspaper and billboard advertising, telephone calls, and credit card charges violated the best evidence rule because the state neither produced documentary evidence to support the statements, nor accounted for the absence of such evidence. Pabey v. State, 262 Ga. App. 272, 585 S.E.2d 200 (2003).

Inadmissible evidence. — Cover letter sought to be introduced was a photocopy of an alleged original that had never been produced, that the introducing party had never seen, and that the other party claimed did not exist; thus, without additional foundation, the photocopy was susceptible to a best evidence objection, and a trial court properly denied admission of the letter. Dixon Dairy Farms, Inc. v. Purina Mills, Inc., 267 Ga. App. 738, 601 S.E.2d 152 (2004).

Suspicion of fraud as basis for rule. — Ground of the rule is a suspicion of fraud and, if there is better evidence of the fact which is withheld, a presumption arises that the party has some secret or sinister motive in not producing the better evidence. United States v. Reyburn, 31 U.S. (6 Pet.)

352, 8 L. Ed. 424 (1832); Fitzgerald v. Adams, 9 Ga. 471 (1851).

Evidence which itself indicates accessibility of other and better proof is inadmissible. Wise v. State, 52 Ga. App. 98, 182 S.E. 535 (1935); Short v. Haney, 60 Ga. App. 585, 4 S.E.2d 497 (1939).

Rule does not require introduction of chattels into evidence. Hill v. State, 221 Ga. 65, 142 S.E.2d 909 (1965), overruled on other grounds, Henderson v. State, 251 Ga. 398, 306 S.E.2d 645 (1983); Adams v. State, 142 Ga. App. 252, 235 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Rule may be waived. Moret v. State, 246 Ga. 5, 268 S.E.2d 635 (1980).

Defendant waived this rule when, with knowledge that officer's notes taken during interviews with the defendant were accessible, the defendant did not demand that the notes be produced and allowed the introduction of typed notes. Dowdy v. State, 215 Ga. App. 576, 451 S.E.2d 528 (1994).

Function of trial court is not to determine the worthiness or credibility of secondary evidence, but is only to determine whether what is offered as evidence is the best form accessible to the court. Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

Secondary evidence admitted without objection will support verdict. — Secondary evidence, while not the best evidence, and while inadmissible on proper objection unless it be shown that the primary evidence is unavailable, will nevertheless support a verdict if the evidence is admitted without objection. Planters Rural Tel. Coop. v. Chance, 108 Ga. App. 146, 132 S.E.2d 90 (1963).

Other evidence of similar import. — Party cannot complain that evidence is admitted when the party offers other evidence of similar legal import. Cain v. State, 113 Ga. App. 477, 148 S.E.2d 508 (1966).

Harmless error. — An error in failing to require production of a warrant is harmless if its only effect was to establish a state of facts the defendant admits to be true. Cain v. State, 113 Ga. App. 477, 148 S.E.2d 508 (1966).

When there was no evidence whatsoever accounting for absence of original of document as required by the law, trial court erred in admitting the evidence, however, since there was testimony of witnesses generally as to contents of document and prosecutor read contents of the document verbatim to defendant in cross-examination, all without objection, error was harmless. Garrett v. State, 156 Ga. App. 33, 274 S.E.2d 80 (1980).

Effect of failure to comply with rule. — Failure to comply with the "original document rule" in attachments may cause the affidavit to be stricken. Pugh v. Jones, 131 Ga. App. 600, 206 S.E.2d 650 (1974).

Expert's opinion must be based on best evidence. — It is reversible error to allow an expert witness to base an opinion upon what the expert says a chart of an official Navy health record shows when the record itself is not introduced in evidence. Pressley v. State, 205 Ga. 197, 53 S.E.2d 106 (1949).

Insurance card testimony admissible. — In light of defendant's own admission at trial that the defendant did not have an insurance card because the defendant paid for insurance in installments, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the officer's testimony without producing the card itself. Johnson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 395, 433 S.E.2d 638 (1993).

Best Evidence Rule Inapplicable

Videotapes. — Best evidence rule applies only to writings and not to videotapes. Collins v. State, 232 Ga. App. 651, 502 S.E.2d 498 (1998).

Best evidence rule does not apply to videotapes. Reese v. State, 252 Ga. App. 650, 556 S.E.2d 150 (2001).

Best evidence rule does not apply to collateral evidence. Walls v. State, 161 Ga. App. 235, 291 S.E.2d 15 (1982).

When essential fact to be proved was neither existence nor contents of quarterly bank statements, which were merely collateral or incidental to issue involved, it was not error to admit photocopies of such statements since plaintiff testified that the plaintiff did not have the originals. Jones v.

Rule inapplicable when contents of writing not in issue. — See Jones v. Blackburn, 75 Ga. App. 791, 44 S.E.2d 555 (1947); DeKalb County v. Townsend Assocs., 243 Ga. 80, 252 S.E.2d 498 (1979); Wells v. State, 151 Ga. App. 416, 260 S.E.2d 374 (1979); Borenstein v. Blumenfeld, 151 Ga. App. 420, 260 S.E.2d 377 (1979); Brown v. State, 177 Ga. App. 284, 339 S.E.2d 332 (1985); Johnson v. State, 177 Ga. App. 705, 340 S.E.2d 662 (1986); Blue Cross of Georgia/Columbus, Inc. v. Whatley, 180 Ga. App. 93, 348 S.E.2d 459 (1986); Covington v. State, 226 Ga. App. 484, 486 S.E.2d 706 (1997).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for aggravated sodomy and kidnapping, the trial court did not err by admitting the testimony of the defendant's relative regarding letters the defendant sent to the relative while the defendant was awaiting trial wherein the defendant asked the relative to testify at trial that the relative had seen the victim and the defendant together the day before the attack at a motel, which was an event that never occurred. Contrary to the defendant's contention that the admission of the relative's testimony violated the best evidence rule, the best evidence rule did not apply since the contents of the writings were not in issue. Smith v. State, 294 Ga. App. 692, 670 S.E.2d 191 (2008).

Rule inapplicable when contents or existence not in issue. — Best evidence rule is inapplicable when neither the existence nor the contents of documents is in issue. Bacon v. Decatur Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 169 Ga. App. 538, 313 S.E.2d 727 (1984); Calloway v. State, 176 Ga. App. 674, 337 S.E.2d 397 (1985).

Currency is not a "writing" under the best evidence rule. — Photocopy of a $20 bill used as "buy money" in a drug transaction was admissible under either O.C.G.A. § 24-5-4 or O.C.G.A. § 24-5-26. Johnson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 114, 497 S.E.2d 666 (1998).

Existence of fact rather than contents of writing in issue. — When the existence of a fact is the question at issue and not the contents of a writing, then oral and written evidence of the fact may both be primary evidence. Willingham v. State, 134 Ga. App. 603, 215 S.E.2d 521 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 145 Ga. App. 315, 244 S.E.2d 355 (1978); Sumners v. State, 137 Ga. App. 493, 224 S.E.2d 126 (1976); Gilliland v. State, 139 Ga. App. 399, 228 S.E.2d 314 (1976), vacated on other grounds, 238 Ga. 542, 233 S.E.2d 801 (1977); Guthrie v. State, 147 Ga. App. 351, 248 S.E.2d 714 (1978); Glennville Wood Preserving Co. v. Riddlespur, 156 Ga. App. 578, 276 S.E.2d 248 (1980).

Best evidence rule applies only when a writing is introduced to establish the existence or contents of the document, and is not applicable when a party uses the document to prove a fact. Shivers v. State, 188 Ga. App. 744, 374 S.E.2d 233 (1988); Transportation Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 208 Ga. App. 837, 432 S.E.2d 259 (1993).

Admission of the oral testimony of a clerk whose computer defendant used to “back out” taxes, that the clerk’s computer showed evidence of backing out, did not violate the best evidence rule, even assuming that a computer screen constituted a writing; at issue was a question of fact, whether defendant used the clerk’s computer to back out taxes, and not the contents or terms of a writing. Parham v. State, 275 Ga. App. 528, 621 S.E.2d 532 (2005).

Nonexistence of fact. — When it is sought to show that certain records do not contain a certain thing, the testimony of the keeper of the records, or of any other person who has read the records, that the records do not show the thing in question, is not inadmissible on the ground that the records themselves are the highest and best evidence. Cary v. State, 55 Ga. App. 167, 189 S.E. 625 (1937); Peters v. Adcock, 196 Ga. 118, 26 S.E.2d 342 (1943).

Existence of fact to which writing is incidental. — Oral testimony of a fact in issue may be primary evidence thereof, although there is written evidence of the same fact, where the essential fact to be proved is neither the existence nor the contents of the writing, but the existence of the independent fact itself, to which the writing is merely collateral or incidental. Peterson v. Lott, 200 Ga. 390, 37 S.E.2d 358 (1946); Burke v. State, 153 Ga. App. 769, 266 S.E.2d 549 (1980); Emmett v. Regions Bank, 238 Ga. App. 455, 518 S.E.2d 472 (1999).

Existence of writing. — Witness may testify that a writing exists since the witness does not attempt to testify as to the contents of the writing. Jones v. Blackburn, 75 Ga. App. 791, 44 S.E.2d 555 (1947).

Existence of notes, checks, letters, and the like. — Parol evidence as to the existence of notes, checks, receipts, books, letters, and the like, or as to their location, size, length, quantity, and other factors, but not undertaking to disclose the material contents thereof, is not subject to the objection that the writings themselves would be higher proof; where such writings are only collaterally in point, and are in no sense the foundation of the action or defense, even their contents may sometimes be shown by parol without accounting for the nonproduction of the papers themselves. Butts v. Maryland Cas. Co., 52 Ga. App. 838, 184 S.E. 774 (1936).

Existence of magazine pictures. — Trial court properly allowed arresting officer to testify regarding the presence of magazine pictures of female nudes in defendant’s home since the pictures were not introduced into evidence. King v. State, 209 Ga. App. 529, 433 S.E.2d 722 (1993).

Facts from which books of account are made. — As a general rule, the testimony of a person who has knowledge of the facts from which books of account are made up is primary evidence as to those facts, and is admissible whether or not the books themselves are put in evidence. Mayor of Buford v. Medley, 58 Ga. App. 48, 197 S.E. 494 (1938); Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Grimes, 99 Ga. App. 774, 109 S.E.2d 890 (1959).

Summary of accounting book entries. — When pertinent and essential facts can be ascertained only by an examination of a large number of entries in books of account, an auditor or an expert accountant who has made an examination and analysis of the books and figures may testify as a witness and give summarized statements of what the books show as a result of the investigation, provided the books themselves are accessible to the court and the parties. Stewart v. State, 246 Ga. 70, 268 S.E.2d 906 (1980); Jackson v. Meadows, 157 Ga. App. 569, 278 S.E.2d 8 (1981).

Showing absence of administration. — Best method of proving that no administration was ever had upon a particular estate is to introduce the evidence of one who has examined the records in the court where letters of administration should have been granted, that no such letters are shown by those records. Cowan v. Corbett, 68 Ga. 66 (1881); Greenfield v. McIntyre, 112 Ga. 691, 38 S.E. 44 (1901); Compton v. Fender, 132 Ga. 483, 64 S.E. 475 (1909).

Accounting for absence. — Hearsay testimony of a deputy about the contents of a missing letter that defendant allegedly wrote and sent to a codefendant was admissible as an incriminating statement by the defendant; the state satisfactorily accounted for the absence of the letter through the codefendant, who testified that the codefendant destroyed the letter after showing the letter to the deputy. Summerour v. State, 211 Ga. App. 65, 438 S.E.2d 176 (1993).

Trial court's admission of a photocopy of a letter examined by a documents examiner did not violate the best evidence rule as the original letter was lost and the copy was properly authenticated. Roberts v. State, 282 Ga. 548, 651 S.E.2d 689 (2007).

No error in admission of copy of warranty. Croxtan v. Leggett Motor Rebuilding, 168 Ga. App. 258, 308 S.E.2d 640 (1983).

Still photographs taken from videotape were inapplicable to best evidence rule. The snapshots were merely positive enlargements of the frames which the jury could not have easily seen. Cleveland v. State, 204 Ga. App. 101, 418 S.E.2d 430 (1992).

Rule was inapplicable in the following cases. — See International Harvester Co. of Am. v. Morgan, 19 Ga. App. 716, 92 S.E. 35 (1917) (prior written agreement); Jenkins v. Lane, 154 Ga. 454, 115 S.E. 126 (1922) (parol evidence to establish implied trust); Maynard v. Rawlins, 45 Ga. App. 91, 163 S.E. 269 (1932) (testimony concerning note admitted by agreement of counsel); Oliver v. Lane, 46 Ga. App. 136, 167 S.E. 116 (1932) (parol evidence concerning note); Cooper v. State, 180 Ga. 612, 180 S.E. 103 (1935) (oral criminal confession); Garcia v. State, 52 Ga. App. 80, 182 S.E. 526 (1935) (testimony derived from records); Wise v. State, 52 Ga. App. 98, 182 S.E. 535 (1935) (testimony concerning addresses printed on stolen property); Butts v. Maryland Cas. Co., 52 Ga. App. 838, 184 S.E. 774 (1936) (accord and satisfaction); Jones v. State, 182 Ga. 378, 185 S.E. 571 (1936) (certificate of insurance issued under group policy); Roberts v. State, 86 Ga. App. 768, 72 S.E.2d 551 (1952) (parol evidence to impeach); Robinson v. Reward Ceramic Color Mfg., Inc., 120 Ga. App. 380, 170 S.E.2d 724 (1969) (testimony concerning records); Young v. State, 226 Ga. 553, 176 S.E.2d 52 (1970) (proof to convict); Denson v. State, 149 Ga. App. 453, 254 S.E.2d 455 (1979) (testimony concerning ownership and possession of car); Jones v. Brawner, 151 Ga. App. 437, 260 S.E.2d 385 (1979) (testimony concerning existence of perpetual care reserve fund); Causey v. State, 154 Ga. App. 76, 267 S.E.2d 475 (1980) (transcript of tape recording); Timberlake v. State, 246 Ga. 488, 271 S.E.2d 792 (1980) (copy of forged check); Knox v. State, 165 Ga. App. 26, 299 S.E.2d 105 (1983) (checks); Fantasia v. State, 268 Ga. 512, 491 S.E.2d 318 (1997) (photocopies of original inspection certificates).

In a breach of contract action between a business and an advertiser, the best evidence rule required the advertiser to produce the first affidavit provided by the advertiser's senior director of business affairs, and the trial court erred in considering the affidavit without requiring the affidavit's production. But, given that the second affidavit showed that the parties entered into the contract at issue, the trial court properly considered the affidavit to that effect. Alcatraz Media, LLC v. Yahoo! Inc., 290 Ga. App. 882, 660 S.E.2d 797 (2008).

Duplicate original of instrument may be admitted into evidence without violation of best evidence rule. Jones v. Sudduth, 162 Ga. App. 602, 292 S.E.2d 448 (1982).

Substitution of an exact copy for an original letter was in compliance with the "best evidence" rule. Moore v. State, 191 Ga. App. 911, 383 S.E.2d 355, cert. denied, 191 Ga. App. 922, 383 S.E.2d 355 (1989).

Copies satisfactory where originals can be accounted for. — When the original certificates of inspection for breath-testing instruments were accounted for, the admission of photocopies was not an abuse of discretion. Chastain v. State, 231 Ga. App. 225, 498 S.E.2d 792 (1998).

A carbon original is admissible as primary evidence. Millwood v. State, 166 Ga. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 103 (1983).

Photostatic copies not best evidence. — Photostatic copies are ordinarily secondary evidence, which may not be admitted over objection without properly accounting for the original. Cox v. State, 93 Ga. App. 533, 92 S.E.2d 260 (1956); Montgomery v. State, 154 Ga. App. 311, 268 S.E.2d 723 (1980); Jones v. Sudduth, 162 Ga. App. 602, 292 S.E.2d 448 (1982); First Ga. Leasing, Inc. v. First Ga. Bank, 188 Ga. App. 847, 374 S.E.2d 751, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 911, 374 S.E.2d 751 (1988).

Defendant's conviction for driving under the influence to the extent that defendant's blood-alcohol content exceeded the legal limit was reversed as the trial court erroneously admitted a photostatic copy of the Intoxilyzer report over a best evidence objection, the state was unable to explain the absence of the original, the state presented no evidence that the state made any effort to locate the original, and O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20 did not apply. Lumley v. State, 280 Ga. App. 82, 633 S.E.2d 413 (2006).

Certified copy of a public record is the best evidence of the records contents. O'Connor v. United States, 11 Ga. App. 246, 75 S.E. 110 (1912); Pressley v. State, 205 Ga. 197, 53 S.E.2d 106 (1949); Pugh v. Jones, 131 Ga. App. 600, 206 S.E.2d 650 (1974).

Deed is the best evidence of the deed's contents. Hall v. Waller, 66 Ga. 483 (1881); McConnell Bros. v. Slappey, 134 Ga. 95, 67 S.E. 440 (1910); Head v. Lee, 203 Ga. 191, 45 S.E.2d 666 (1947); Ehrlich v. Mills, 203 Ga. 600, 48 S.E.2d 107 (1948); Green v. Wright, 225 Ga. 25, 165 S.E.2d 843 (1969); Hembree v. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co., 132 Ga. App. 556, 208 S.E.2d 568 (1974).

Record of a conviction is the best evidence of conviction. Johnson v. State, 48 Ga. 116 (1873); Beach v. State, 138 Ga. 265, 75 S.E. 139 (1912); Howard v. State, 144 Ga. 169, 86 S.E. 540 (1915); Swain v. State, 151 Ga. 375, 107 S.E. 40 (1921); Lovinger v. State, 39 Ga. App. 116, 146 S.E. 346 (1929); Corley v. State, 64 Ga. App. 841, 14 S.E.2d 121 (1941); Carroll v. Crawford, 218 Ga. 635, 129 S.E.2d 865 (1963).

When the defendant did not tender the copies of convictions which the defendant desired to have introduced to impeach witnesses, but only made a proffer of the testimony of the clerk's representative, the state's objection based on the failure to produce the best evidence was properly sustained. The testimony of the deputy clerk as to the content of the records was not only not the best evidence, it was also hearsay. Lipscomb v. State, 194 Ga. App. 657, 391 S.E.2d 773 (1990).

Patients' dental records. — When, in a dentist's suit to recover income for work performed for a dental clinic, it appeared that the patients' individual records constituted the primary documentary evidence of their visits, charges, and payments and that those records were otherwise available or accessible, the trial court did not err in refusing to admit plaintiff's own purported summary as secondary evidence of that information. White v. Dilworth, 178 Ga. App. 226, 342 S.E.2d 709 (1986).

Reconstruction of recorded statement. — Since the tape recorder malfunctioned for a period of time during the giving of defendant's statement to police, and the interview continued after the recorder had been repaired; since the officers who conducted the interview offered their reconstruction of the interview's unrecorded portions, and testified that they were substantially the same as the recorded parts; and the recorded statement, as thus supplemented, was admitted only after a Jackson-Denno hearing, there was no error. McGee v. State, 260 Ga. 178, 391 S.E.2d 400 (1990).

Examples of best evidence are found in the following cases. — See Fitzgerald v. Adams, 9 Ga. 471 (1851) (writing as evidence of transaction); Cook v. North & S.R.R., 50 Ga. 211 (1873) (written contract); White v. Claxton, 12 Ga. App. 141, 76 S.E. 1040 (1913) (written application for insurance); Probasco v. Shaw, 144 Ga. 416, 87 S.E. 466 (1915) (unconditional note); Smith v. Lawrence, 23 Ga. App. 795, 99 S.E. 536 (1919) (specific written agreement); Bowen v. Mobley, 40 Ga. App. 833, 151 S.E. 667 (1930) (mortgage); Southern Loan & Inv. Co. v. State, 68 Ga. App. 75, 22 S.E.2d 108 (1942) (charter and bylaws of company); Shaw v. Fehn, 196 Ga. 661, 27 S.E.2d 406 (1943), later appeal, 199 Ga. 747, 35 S.E.2d 253 (1945) (will); Sikes v. State, 76 Ga. App. 883, 47 S.E.2d 677 (1948) (record of trial); Pressley v. State, 205 Ga. 197, 53 S.E.2d 106 (1949) (verified copy); Delinski v. Dunn, 209 Ga. 402, 73 S.E.2d 171 (1952) (record of board of corrections and certified copy of sentence); Beard v. Westmoreland, 90 Ga. App. 632, 84 S.E.2d 93 (1954) (duplicate original of property settlement); Carroll v. Crawford, 218 Ga. 635, 129 S.E.2d 865 (1963) (indictment); Cain v. State, 113 Ga. App. 477, 148 S.E.2d 508 (1966) (search warrant); Hawes v. Red Oak Hauling Co., 116 Ga. App. 302, 157 S.E.2d 38 (1967)

(documents in possession of party); Consolidated Eng'g Co. v. U.I.R. Contractors, 136 Ga. App. 923, 222 S.E.2d 692 (1975) (checks and vouchers); Barrett v. State, 146 Ga. App. 207, 245 S.E.2d 890 (1978) (duplicate original); Ferrell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 405, 254 S.E.2d 404 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1021, 100 S. Ct. 679, 62 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1980) (traffic citations).

24-5-5. Degrees of secondary evidence.

There are degrees in secondary evidence. The best secondary evidence should always be produced. A duplicate is better than a copy and an examined copy is better than oral evidence. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3691; Code 1868, § 3715; Code 1873, § 3768; Code 1882, § 3768; Civil Code 1895, § 5173; Civil Code 1910, § 5760; Code 1933, § 38-213.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general. — Rule as to the degree of secondary evidence is that where there is no ground for the presumption that better secondary evidence exists, any proof is received which is admissible by the other rules of law, unless the objecting party can show that better evidence was previously known to the other party, and might have been produced. Doe v. Biggers, 6 Ga. 188 (1849).

Copy as evidence. — When an approved copy is in evidence, parol testimony as to its contents is inadmissible. Shedden v. Heard, 110 Ga. 461, 35 S.E. 707 (1900). See also Williams v. Waters, 36 Ga. 454 (1867).

Deed in hands of nonresident grantee. — Parol evidence of the contents of a deed to land in this state is not admissible under the theory that the original deed is in the hands of nonresident grantees who are not parties to the suit, and therefore beyond the power of the court, without making preliminary proof that the deed was not duly recorded. McConnell Bros. v. Slappey, 134 Ga. 95, 67 S.E. 440 (1910).

Oral testimony. — Trial court did not err in allowing a witness to testify that defendant had signed personal guaranties of defendant's company's prior indebtednesses to plaintiff since the failure to produce the original of such personal guaranties was explained and oral testimony was shown to be the "best" secondary evidence of their existence. Dedousis v. First Nat'l Bank, 181 Ga. App. 425, 352 S.E.2d 577 (1986).

24-5-20. When exemplifications of public records considered primary evidence; exemplifications transmitted by facsimile.

(a) Exemplifications made by public officers of records, documents, papers, or other matters in their respective offices, pursuant to Code Sections 24-7-20 and 24-7-21 or in the manner set out in subsection (b) of this Code section, shall be primary evidence as to all records or other things required by law to remain in such offices, but only secondary evidence as to such documents as by law properly remain in the possession of the party.

(b) As an alternative to an exemplification made by any public officer of the records, documents, papers, or other matters in the office of such public officer in accordance with Code Sections 24-7-20 and 24-7-21, an exemplification transmitted by facsimile or a copy of an exemplification transmitted by facsimile is admissible if:

(1) The certification by the public officer includes a statement that the certified document is being transmitted by facsimile and the telephone number and location of the facsimile machine transmitting the facsimile; and

This subsection shall not be construed to require public officers to obtain or maintain facsimile equipment. Public officers are authorized to collect the usual cost of providing exemplifications as provided by law and a reasonable fee for the cost of telephone facsimile transmission. Public officers are authorized to maintain a record of facsimile exemplifications, which may but is not required to include the retention of the exemplification as transmitted by facsimile. (Orig. Code Section 24-7-20 being so closely allied, and so often construed together by the courts, the notes to one will be found helpful in construing the other.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Original records as evidence. — While the use of original records as evidence is disapproved, yet where an original record has been brought into court and admitted to be such, it is admissible in evidence; and hence the original order of the commissioners calling a road bond election, as well as extracts from the original minute book of the commissioners, being admittedly originals, were not inadmissible, in the instant case, although the better method of proof would have been by properly exemplified copies. Moody v. Board of Comm'rs, 29 Ga. App. 21, 113 S.E. 103 (1922).

Original record admissible. — Notwithstanding the statutory rules as to the proof of official and court records by certified or exemplified copies, and as to such exemplifications being primary evidence, it is also the rule that, when the record of a court in which a case is being tried is material evidence in a case it may be proved by the production of the record itself, and a certified copy is not necessary. Woods v. Travelers Ins. Co., 53 Ga. App. 429, 186 S.E. 467 (1936); Harrison v. State, 120 Ga. App. 812, 172 S.E.2d 328 (1969).

Original record not admissible. — City court did not err in excluding from evidence the original papers of foreclosure proceedings in a justice's court. Original records of one court ordinarily are not admissible in evidence in a different court, but certified copies of such papers constitute primary evidence. Hall v. Treadaway, 12 Ga. App. 492, 77 S.E. 878 (1913).

Admission of hearsay. — Like O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20, O.C.G.A. § 24-5-20 does not address hearsay concerns. Consequently, that Code section does not require the admission of hearsay merely because the hearsay has been recorded in a court record certified by facsimile. McKinley v. State, 303 Ga. App. 203, 692 S.E.2d 787 (2010).

Bonds. — Bond being an office paper of the court, a certified copy or an exemplification of the bond, is primary evidence. Blount v. Bowne, 82 Ga. 346, 9 S.E. 164 (1889); Richardson v. Whitworth, 103 Ga. 741, 30 S.E. 573 (1898).

Books of minutes of municipality. — Book of minutes of a municipal corporation may be proved to be such by any witness who knows the fact, there being no objection that a certified copy would be the primary evidence. Robinson v. State, 82 Ga. 535, 9 S.E. 528 (1889).

Original minute book of county commissioners is not primary evidence. Daniel v. State, 114 Ga. 533, 40 S.E. 805 (1902).

Homestead papers. — An exemplification, or certified copy of the plat of homestead and schedule of personalty, certified by the clerk of the superior court of the county where those papers are recorded, is only secondary evidence under former Code 1933, §§ 38-601 and 38-602 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 24-5-20 and 24-7-20). Brown v. Driggers, 60 Ga. 114 (1878). The original papers are the primary evidence. Pritchett v. Davis, 101 Ga. 236, 28 S.E. 666, 65 Am. St. R. 398 (1897).

Railroad lease. — Lease of a certain railroad being a paper which was required to be kept on file in the proper office of the executive department, a certified copy of the lease was primary evidence. Branan v. Nashville, C. & S. L. Ry., 119 Ga. 738, 46 S.E. 882 (1904).

Search warrants. — Law does not apply to search warrants. DePalma v. State, 228 Ga. 272, 185 S.E.2d 53 (1971).

Schedule of creditors. — An original triplicate of the schedule of creditors and their claims, required to be filed by a bankrupt in the court of bankruptcy under the Bankruptcy Act, is an office paper, and a certified copy thereof is primary evidence. Harvard v. Davis, 145 Ga. 580, 89 S.E. 740 (1916).

Traffic citation indicating guilty plea admissible. — In a suit for damages sustained in an automobile collision, alleging that the defendant negligently failed to yield the right-of-way at a stop sign, the trial court did not err by admitting evidence of a traffic citation issued against the defendant in conjunction with the accident. The citation noted entry of a guilty plea, but also indicated the defendant was found guilty by the municipal court. Though ambiguous and subject to conflicting interpretations, the citation was relevant if interpreted by the jury as a plea of guilty. Hunter v. Hardnett, 199 Ga. App. 443, 405 S.E.2d 286, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 286 (1991).

Traffic citations stamped “FTA” were inadmissible hearsay. — Trial court erred in admitting the state’s exhibits, which were copies of two traffic citations stamped “FTA,” pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-5-20 without any determination that the exhibits fell within an exception to the rule prohibiting the use of hearsay because the state introduced the exhibits to prove the truth of the statement of the unidentified person who stamped “FTA” on the citations that the defendant failed to appear for the defendant’s court date, and despite defendant’s objection to the documents as hearsay, the state argued only the issue of authentication and never identified any exception to the rule prohibiting hearsay that would authorize admitting the documents; the state failed to lay the required foundation for the application of the business records exception, O.C.G.A. § 24-3-14(b), because the state did not call any witness to provide the required foundation. McKinley v. State, 303 Ga. App. 203, 692 S.E.2d 787 (2010).

24-5-21. When secondary evidence admitted; diligence.

If a paper shall have been lost or destroyed, proof of the fact to the court shall admit secondary evidence. The question of diligence is one for the sound discretion of the court. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3755; Code 1868, § 3779; Code 1873, § 3832; Code 1882, § 3832; Civil Code 1895, § 5240; Civil Code 1910, § 5829; Code 1933, § 38-702.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general. — To admit secondary evidence as by law provided, it is necessary to prove that there has been an original and that the original is lost. Mitchell v. United States, 214 Ga. 473, 105 S.E.2d 337 (1958).

While this statute leaves the question of diligence to the sound discretion of the court, before secondary evidence can be admitted, the party will be required to show that the party has, in good faith, exhausted, in a reasonable degree, all the sources of information and means of discovery, which the nature of the case suggests and which were accessible to the party. Pendley v. Murphy, 112 Ga. App. 33, 143 S.E.2d 674 (1965) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-21).

Applicability. — O.C.G.A. § 24-5-21 applies to writings, not videotapes. Bowen v. State, 237 Ga. App. 597, 516 S.E.2d 311 (1999).

O.C.G.A. § 24-5-21 applies both to secondary documentary evidence and to parol testimony. Croxton v. Leggett Motor Rebuilding, 168 Ga. App. 258, 308 S.E.2d 640 (1983).

Foundation for secondary evidence. — An affidavit by a party that an original paper, of which one desires to make proof by secondary evidence, is lost or mislaid, and after diligent search that one cannot find it, is a substantial compliance. Smith v. Atwood, 14 Ga. 402 (1854).

Proof of diligence. — While upon proof that a paper is lost, secondary evidence as to the paper's contents is admissible, the mere statement of a party that a paper "is lost" is nothing but a conclusion of the witness, and, in the absence of testimony as to any search for the missing paper, or other facts to support the witness's conclusion, such secondary evidence, on timely objection, should be rejected. Underdonk & Pitts v. Jester, 17 Ga. App. 419, 87 S.E. 680 (1916).

Since, during the giving of defendant's statement to police the tape recorder malfunctioned for a period of time, and the interview continued after the recorder had been repaired; since the officers who conducted the interview offered their reconstruction of the interview's unrecorded portions, and testified that the statements were substantially the same as the recorded parts, and the recorded statement, as thus supplemented, was admitted only after a Jackson-Denno hearing, there was no error. McGee v. State, 260 Ga. 178, 391 S.E.2d 400 (1990).

Insufficient evidence of diligence. — Admission in evidence of testimony as to the contents of a lost document was error since there was not sufficient evidence of the diligence of the defendants to show its nonavailability. Pendley v. Murphy, 112 Ga. App. 33, 143 S.E.2d 674 (1965).

Accounting for absence of best evidence. — Hearsay testimony of a deputy about the contents of a missing letter that defendant allegedly wrote and sent to the codefendant was admissible as an incriminating statement by the defendant; the state satisfactorily accounted for the absence of the letter through the codefendant, who testified that the codefendant destroyed the letter after showing the letter to the deputy. Summerour v. State, 211 Ga. App. 65, 438 S.E.2d 176 (1993).

In a consumer's suit against a car dealer for breach of a written warranty, regarding the sale of a used car which the dealer's salesman falsely represented had not been in a wreck, it was not error for the trial court to grant a directed verdict to the dealer because, while the consumer testified that the dealer sold the consumer a written warranty for the vehicle, the consumer did not produce the warranty or account for the warranty's absence, rendering the testimony inadmissible under the best evidence rule. Mitchell v. Backus Cadillac-Pontiac, Inc., 274 Ga. App. 330, 618 S.E.2d 87 (2005).

Duplicate original of instrument admissible into evidence without violation of the best evidence rule. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Latimore, 151 Ga. App. 786, 261 S.E.2d 735 (1979).

Copy of contract admissible. — Since the original copy of a contract was admittedly destroyed by the defendant, and testimony was introduced that the plaintiff and the third party to the contract formally executed the original, though there is no evidence that the defendant ever signed the contract, and there was evidence to the effect that the defendant followed the provisions of the contract until the parties had a falling out, evidence was sufficient to infer that defendant had received the benefits of such contract and to admit the copy into evidence over the defendant's objection. Silvey v. Wynn, 102 Ga. App. 283, 115 S.E.2d 774 (1960).

Copy need not be exact. — It is not necessary that a copy sought to be proved shall be identical with the original, but it may be either a literal or a substantial copy, provided other rules as to the admission of secondary evidence are satisfied. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Latimore, 151 Ga. App. 786, 261 S.E.2d 735 (1979).

Carbon copy inadmissible. — When a carbon copy of a letter was offered in evidence without any proof of the execution, mailing, or receipt of an original and the copy contained a signature only in type, the copy was prejudicial and the court erred in admitting the copy. Mitchell v. United States, 214 Ga. 473, 105 S.E.2d 337 (1958).

Exact carbon copy admissible. — If it is proved that a genuine original was executed, proof that a proffered document is an exact carbon copy of that original is sufficient to admit in evidence the carbon copy without proving loss of the original. Mitchell v. United States, 214 Ga. 473, 105 S.E.2d 337 (1958).

Carbonless copies held admissible. — In light of a landowner's testimony that the original cancelled checks and bank statements showing evidence of payment from 1986 for the land in question were unavailable, the trial court could not be said to have abused the court's discretion in allowing the landowner to introduce two "carbonless copies" of checks showing payment. Murray v. Stone, 283 Ga. 6, 655 S.E.2d 821 (2008).

Record. — Mere failure of the record, as appears in the writ book, to show the existence of a portion of the record of a lost paper is not conclusive of the nonexistence of the paper, but the existence and the contents of such lost portion of a record may be established by parol. Benton v. Maddox, 52 Ga. App. 813, 184 S.E. 788 (1936).

Letters. — When letters which would be admissible in evidence are lost or destroyed, their contents are provable by parol after proof of loss or destruction. Marietta Sav. Bank v. Janes, 66 Ga. 286 (1881); Knox v. Harrell, 26 Ga. App. 772, 107 S.E. 594, cert. denied, 26 Ga. App. 801 (1921).

Trial court's admission of a photocopy of a letter examined by a documents examiner did not violate the best evidence rule as the original letter was lost and the copy was properly authenticated. Roberts v. State, 282 Ga. 548, 651 S.E.2d 689 (2007).

Last person who had custody of letter must make a complete and proper showing with respect to the alleged nonexistence or inaccessibility or loss of the letter; merely asserting the loss, without showing diligence in attempting to provide the item, will not do. Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

Memorandum of terms of settlement. — When a memorandum of the terms of a settlement was reduced to writing, and handed to defendant's agent, parol evidence as to the memorandum's contents is admissible when such agent testified that the agent never had such memorandum, or if the agent ever had the memorandum in the agent's possession, the memorandum was lost or mislaid even though no notice to produce was served either on the defendant or the agent. Carr v. Smith, 58 Ga. 361 (1877).

Deed. — If a party wishes to introduce a copy deed in evidence, it will be a sufficient compliance with the rule to swear that the original deed in the party's belief is lost or destroyed, and the deed is not in the party's custody, power, or control. Ratteree v. Nelson, 10 Ga. 439 (1851); Drew v. Drew, 146 Ga. 479, 91 S.E. 541 (1917).

Original of exhibit inadvertently removed from attorney's office. — When witness testified that original of exhibit was prepared by the witness, and that the exhibit was an exact copy of the original, and when plaintiff's attorney stated in plaintiff's place that the original had been given to the attorney and several copies made, and also stated that through inadvertence the original went out of the attorney's office as an exhibit to the complaint and could not be located, the trial judge did not abuse judicial discretion in admitting the exhibit. Palmer v. Wilkins, 163 Ga. App. 104, 294 S.E.2d 355 (1982).

Original document, not disclosed during discovery, excluded. — When the defendant introduced evidence to show that a contract had been altered, and when the plaintiff then tendered the original of the contract, which contained blank spaces, the original was properly excluded by the trial court on the basis that the plaintiff had not disclosed the original's existence during discovery. White v. Lance H. Herndon, Inc., 203 Ga. App. 580, 417 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 383 (1982).

Contents of a journal. — Trial court did not err in ruling that the best evidence rule, O.C.G.A. § 24-5-21, precluded defendant's wife from testifying about the contents of the victim's journal because the victim testified that the victim threw the journal away; there was no harm in the trial court's refusal to allow further testimony about the contents of the journal as the victim testified that the victim did not include the sexual assaults in the journal, and the wife's testimony about the journal's contents was consistent with the victim's testimony. Eley v. State, 266 Ga. App. 45, 596 S.E.2d 660 (2004).

Function of trial court is not to determine the worthiness or credibility of secondary evidence, but is only to determine whether what is offered as evidence is the best form accessible to the court. Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

Discretion of court. — Exercise of such discretion mentioned in this statute will not be controlled, unless the discretion is abused. Cowart v. Fender, 137 Ga. 586, 73 S.E. 822, 1913A Ann. Cas. 932 (1912); Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Vickery, 49 Ga. App. 727, 176 S.E. 815 (1934); Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-21).

It was abuse of discretion to exclude testimony which should have qualified as secondary evidence and which comprised defendant's most critical defense to the only direct evidence against the defendant. Mulkey v. State, 155 Ga. App. 304, 270 S.E.2d 816 (1980).

Lost records. — While the contents of lost papers in a case on file in the clerk's office of the court may be established by copies of the papers as they appear of record in the writ book required to be kept by the clerk of the court, this method of proof is cumulative only; parol evidence is also admissible to establish the contents of the lost papers. Benton v. Maddox, 52 Ga. App. 813, 184 S.E. 788 (1936).

Other records in writ book. — On the trial of an issue to establish lost papers in a case on file in the office of the clerk of the court where it appears from parol evidence introduced to establish copies of the lost papers that there was a return of service by the officer, but where from the evidence, which consists of the copies of the proceedings as contained in the writ book on file in the office of the clerk of the court, there appears no return of service upon the papers, evidence consisting of the records in other cases recorded in the same writ book immediately before and immediately after the record in the present case, in which there appears no record of a return of service, and evidence of the original papers in such cases which contain a return of service, are admissible. *Benton v. Contents of lost writing may be established by parol. Segars v. City of Cornelia, 60 Ga. App. 457, 4 S.E.2d 60 (1939).

Original photographic line-up lost. — Admission of a photocopy of an original photographic lineup did not violate the best evidence rule since the original photographic copy was missing from the state's file and the photocopies were clear enough to be easily recognizable. *Pinson v. 24-5-25. Existence of original essential to admissibility of copy; amount of evidence required.

The existence of a genuine original is essential to the admissibility of a copy. The amount of evidence to show such existence must vary with the circumstances of each case. Where no direct issue is made upon the fact, slight evidence shall be sufficient. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3692; Code 1868, § 3716; Code 1873, § 3769; Code 1882, § 3769; Civil Code 1895, § 5174; Penal Code 1895, § 996; Civil Code 1910, § 5761; Penal Code 1910, § 1022; Code 1933, § 38-214.)

In general. — Existence of a genuine original is essential to the admissibility of a copy and therefore whether there was any primary evidence relating to the existence of a genuine original deed becomes a material question. Latham v. Fowler, 199 Ga. 648, 34 S.E.2d 870 (1945), later appeal, 201 Ga. 68, 38 S.E.2d 732 (1946).

Standard is one of moral certainty. — Best evidence rule requires that the court be satisfied that the better evidence has not been willfully destroyed nor voluntarily withheld, but the rule does not exact that the loss or destruction of the document should be proven beyond all possibility of a mistake; it only demands that a moral certainty should exist that the court has had every opportunity for examining and deciding the cause upon the best evidence within the power or ability of the litigant. Fowler v. Latham, 201 Ga. 68, 38 S.E.2d 732 (1946).

Execution as well as existence of written contract must be proved before a copy can be used as evidence. Bigelow v. Young, 30 Ga. 121 (1860); Durham v. Holeman, 30 Ga. 619 (1860).

Unauthorized execution. — Evidence that a contract was executed by the treasurer of an insurance company, without proof of the treasurer's authority so to do, is insufficient to show that the original contract was the act of the company and does not satisfy the law. Brown v. Bass, 132 Ga. 41, 63 S.E. 788 (1909).

Formality of execution. — When the witnesses, if any, are unknown, it is not necessary to prove that the alleged lost original writing was executed with any particular formality in order to admit secondary evidence of the writing's contents. Sharp v. Autry, 185 Ga. 160, 194 S.E. 194 (1937).

Execution may be proved by circumstances where no direct evidence of the execution of a written instrument is attainable. Sharp v. Autry, 185 Ga. 160, 194 S.E. 194 (1937).

Indefinite statement. — Evidence of a statement by a defendant that the defendant knew such a deed as alleged by the plaintiffs was in existence in which the father and his children were grantees, is not sufficient to establish the deed, because such as an admission is too indefinite to properly identify and establish the existence of any particular deed. Latham v. Fowler, 199 Ga. 648, 34 S.E.2d 870 (1945), later appeal, 201 Ga. 68, 38 S.E.2d 732 (1946).

Response to notice to produce. — When a party to a cause serves on the opposite party, who is presumably in possession of a once existing material writing, a notice to produce such writing, and the party served responds that the writing is lost, or fails to produce the writing at the trial, secondary evidence as to the contents of the original writing becomes admissible. Middlebrooks v. Cabaniss, 193 Ga. 764, 20 S.E.2d 10 (1942).

Testimony concerning record books. — Testimony of a claimant that the claimant had recently examined the books of a bank in another state was insufficient to show the authenticity of such books as a foundation for the admission of secondary evidence of their contents, it not appearing that the books were found in the custody of any trustee or officer of court in charge of such insolvent bank, or in the possession of any person whose duty it was to keep and preserve the books. McDonald v. Redding Lumber Co., 43 Ga. App. 656, 159 S.E. 888 (1931).

Title to land. — If there is written evidence of title to land, that evidence must be produced in order to prove its contents and before secondary evidence is competent to show its contents, it must first be shown to the court that the original once existed, that the original was properly executed and that the original is either lost or destroyed, or for some other sufficient cause is not accessible to the diligence of the party. Head v. Lee, 203 Ga. 191, 45 S.E.2d 666 (1947).

Deed. — When in a suit for land the right of the plaintiffs is predicated upon an alleged lost and unrecorded deed, proof of the existence of a genuine original must be established before secondary evidence relating thereto is admissible. Latham v. Fowler, 199 Ga. 648, 34 S.E.2d 870 (1945), later appeal, 201 Ga. 68, 38 S.E.2d 732 (1946).

Typewritten copy of deed. — Certified copy of a petition filed by the plaintiffs' father (holder of life estate under the alleged deed) to sell for reinvestment and attaching a typewritten copy of what purported to be the alleged unrecorded deed does not establish that in fact a genuine deed has been executed. Latham v. Fowler, 199 Ga. 648, 34 S.E.2d 870 (1945), later appeal, 201 Ga. 68, 38 S.E.2d 732 (1946).

Proof of handwriting not required. — If an original deed remains in existence in possession of the grantee, proof of the handwriting would be prima facie evidence that the deed was sealed and delivered; but when the deed is lost, positive proof of the handwriting is not to be expected or required, and the grantee must depend on other proof. Fowler v. Latham, 201 Ga. 68, 38 S.E.2d 732 (1946).

Copies of duplicate originals. — Copies of duplicate originals are admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-5-26, without accounting for the original. Ellerbee v. State, 215 Ga. App. 102, 449 S.E.2d 874 (1994).

Photostatic copies of bill payments and original bills excluded. — Bills from a court reporter for depositions and from company for the company's efforts to locate indemnitee, the photostatic copies of checks issued in payment of these bills, and the photostatic copy of check issued in payment of the claim were properly excluded under the best evidence rule. Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 179 Ga. App. 734, 347 S.E.2d 701 (1986).

Evidence inadmissible. — In a civil forfeiture proceeding in connection with an action brought under the Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., a witness's testimony regarding newspaper and billboard advertising, telephone calls, and credit card charges violated the best evidence rule because the state neither produced documentary evidence to support the statements, nor accounted for the absence of such evidence.

Any photostatic, microphotographic, photographic, or optical image reproduction of any original writing or record made in the regular course of business to preserve the writing or record shall be admissible in evidence in any proceeding in any court of this state and in any proceeding before any board, bureau, department, commission, or agency of the state, in lieu of and without accounting for the original of such writing or record, if such reproduction accurately reproduces or forms a durable medium for reproducing the original. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general. — Statute simply permits photostatic, microphotographic, and photographic reproductions of original writings or records made in the regular course of business to be admitted in evidence without accounting for the original. Knudsen v. Duffee-Freeman, Inc., 95 Ga. App. 872, 99

Construction with § 24-7-7. — Provisions of Ga. L. 1950, p. 73, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-26), permitting the introduction of photostatic copies of original writings or records made in the regular course of business to be introduced as original evidence in a case do not have any bearing upon former Code 1933, § 38-709 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-7). Ga. L. 1950, p. 73 applies to situations where the contents of the document are sought to be introduced because the document itself has a bearing upon the issues sought to be proved, the test of admissibility being relevancy and materiality, while documents containing signatures introduced under the provisions of former Code 1933, § 38-709 do not necessarily have any bearing upon the issue being tried, and their sole purpose is to establish a criterion by which the genuineness or forgery of the signature on some other document relevant to the cause may be established. Mitchell v. State, 89 Ga. App. 80, 78 S.E.2d 563 (1953).

Copies of affidavits. — Affidavits introduced in evidence that were reproductions of the original affidavits were admissible notwithstanding objection based on the best evidence rule. Adams v. State, 217 Ga. App. 706, 459 S.E.2d 182 (1995).

Copy of currency. — Since the police department routinely made copies of currency used in drug buys, the photocopy of a $20 bill used as “buy money” in a drug transaction was admissible under either O.C.G.A. § 24-5-26 or O.C.G.A. § 24-5-4. Johnson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 114, 497 S.E.2d 666 (1998).

Duplicate originals. — Papers which are executed simultaneously with the original, by the same stroke of the pen or the typewriter, are admissible as primary evidence without accounting for the original because the papers are considered duplicate originals. Strickland v. Foundation Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 614, 200 S.E.2d 306 (1973).

Copies of duplicate originals are admissible without accounting for the original. Strickland v. Foundation Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 614, 200 S.E.2d 306 (1973).

Accounting for original where photocopy was used. — Photocopy may not be admitted in evidence without accounting for the original, except where there is proof that copy is identical to original. Lester v. Groves, 162 Ga. App. 590, 291 S.E.2d 785 (1982).

Showing that photocopy was made in regular course of business. — When the party offering photostatic reproductions as evidence makes no attempt to establish that the photocopies were made in the regular course of business and fails to properly account for the absence of the original, it is not error to refuse to admit the photocopies. State v. Mincey, 167 Ga. App. 850, 308 S.E.2d 18 (1983).

Photocopy of insurance application form. — Court does not err in refusing to admit a photocopy of an insurance application form offered as evidence by the defendant, where the defendant was in possession of the original and had made no attempt to establish that the photocopy had been made in the regular course of business. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Rhee, 160 Ga. App. 468, 287 S.E.2d 257 (1981).

Photostatic copies of claim forms identified as authentic by a witness are properly admissible. Strickland v. Foundation Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 614, 200 S.E.2d 306 (1973).

Where the original, cancelled checks were returned by the payor bank to the bank's home office in another state, the photostatic copies of the issued checks were admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-5-26. Commercial Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 179 Ga. App. 734, 347 S.E.2d 701 (1986).

Photostatic copy of bank account signature card. — When the original of the bank account signature card was on file in the bank and the custodian of the bank's records brought with the custodian a photostatic copy, which was a copy routinely made in the normal course of business, the photostatic copy was admissible. Hawkins v. State, 167 Ga. App. 143, 305 S.E.2d 797 (1983).

Photostatic copy of check drawn on a New York bank and returned for insufficient funds was properly identified as a bank record since the original was accounted for as having been returned to the defendant. Hamilton v. State, 118 Ga. App. 842, 165 S.E.2d 884 (1968).

Where, with regard to proof of transmittal of contraband to state crime lab by certified mail, the state could only produce a photostatic copy of the certification receipt in lieu of the original and defendant urged that, without an adequate explanation for the absence of the original certified mail receipt as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-5-4, the chain of custody was not sufficiently proven, but a deputy sheriff testified that the deputy would always make a copy of the certified mail receipt when the deputy mailed contraband to the state crime lab, but had been unable to locate the original receipt for this particular mailing, and identified the deputy's handwriting on the photostatic copy and noted that the certification number was identical to that on the state crime lab report, the trial court was authorized to conclude that the copy of the receipt had been made in the regular course of business so as to be admissible pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-3-14 and 24-5-26. Spead v. State, 187 Ga. App. 359, 370 S.E.2d 213 (1988).

Certifications from manufacturer as to accuracy of radar device were admissible under business records rule although officer testifying did not have personal knowledge of correctness of record and did not make entries personally, and the person who made entries did not testify. Wiggins v. State, 249 Ga. 302, 290 S.E.2d 427 (1982).

Reproduction admissible despite testifying witness's lack of personal knowledge. — Trial court did not err in admitting a copy of the defendant's fingerprint card, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-3-14 and 24-5-26, despite the defendant's claim that the testifying witness lacked personal knowledge with regard to the circumstances or time of the creation or transmission of the card, as the card itself showed that the card was created and transmitted at the time of the defendant's arrest, and was handled in the gathering agency's regular and routine course of business. Tubbs v. State, 283 Ga. App. 578, 642 S.E.2d 205 (2007).

Copy of particular magazine issue. — As copies of magazines of the same issue are usually duplicates of the original, there was no error in admitting another copy of the same issue used by an investigating officer where the officer testified it was identical. Verble v. State, 172 Ga. App. 321, 323 S.E.2d 239 (1984).

24-5-29. Transcript from books of corporation admissible in lieu of books; notice.

(a) When any portion of the contents of the books or records of any incorporated company located in this state is material and competent evidence in any civil cause, the party desiring to use the same in evidence, upon procuring a correct transcript from such books, certified under the hand of the chief officer in charge of the office where the books are located, that the extract is a true and complete transcript of all that appears upon the books in the office relative to that subject matter, may use the extract in evidence, in lieu of the books themselves, provided that he first serves the opposite party with a copy of the extract 20 days before court and with notice that the same will be offered in evidence.

(b) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to impair or diminish the right of either party to compel the production of books and papers, by notice, where in the hands of the opposite party, or by subpoena for the production of evidence, where in the hands of third persons. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Original records admissible. — While the use of the record as evidence is disapproved, yet where an original record has been brought into court and admitted to be such, it is admissible in evidence. A certified copy would not be higher or better evidence than the original. Moody v. Board of Comm'rs, 29 Ga. App. 21, 113 S.E. 103 (1922); Mason v. State, 197 Ga. App. 534, 398 S.E.2d 822 (1990).

Original records inadmissible. — Original minutes of a superior court are not admissible in the trial of an action in a city court, over the objection that such minutes are not primary evidence. Traylor v. Epps, 11 Ga. App. 497, 75 S.E. 828 (1912).

Duplicate original. — When more than one copy of a document is executed at the same time, any copy thereof is a duplicate original, and it is primary evidence of the agreement instead of secondary evidence. Raulerson v. Jones, 122 Ga. App. 440, 177 S.E.2d 181 (1970).

Unsigned order of court. — An exemplification of an unsigned order of a court for the sale of lands is admissible. Smith & Co. v. Ross, 108 Ga. 198, 33 S.E. 953 (1899).

Prior court order not given judicial notice. — While the trial court errs in giving a prior court order “judicial notice” and binding effect, it is clear that the court may consider a prior court order as evidence. Genins v. Boyd, 166 Ga. App. 843, 305 S.E.2d 391 (1983).

Certified copies. — When a division in kind is made between heirs and distributees of a decedent, a certified copy of the return of the commissioners, and of the order of the court approving the return, are admissible in evidence in an action involving title to the land covered by the award. Bell v. Cone, 208 Ga. 467, 67 S.E.2d 558 (1951).

In a deprivation proceeding, the trial court properly admitted documents from a parent’s criminal case under O.C.G.A. § 24-5-31. The court found that the documents were attached to a negotiated plea and had been certified. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009).

Juvenile court proceedings. — Plans for family reunification prepared by the county Department of Family and Children Services as copies of records of judicial proceedings were admissible as primary evidence in a proceeding to terminate parental rights. In re C.W.D., 232 Ga. App. 200, 501 S.E.2d 232 (1998).

Exemplified copy of will from the judge’s office is presumptive proof that the will was properly probated as otherwise the will could not have been recorded. Davis v. Tyson, 60 Ga. App. 714, 4 S.E.2d 704 (1939).

Indictment and record of trial. — Highest and best evidence of a writing or of a judicial proceeding, including an indictment and the trial thereupon, are the indictment and the record of the trial. Sikes v. State, 76 Ga. App. 883, 47 S.E.2d 677 (1948).

Evidence held inadmissible. — Since the defendant did not tender the copies of the convictions which the defendant desired to have introduced to impeach witnesses, but only made a proffer of the testimony of the clerk’s representative, the state’s objection based on the failure to produce the best evidence was properly sustained. The testimony of the deputy clerk as to the content of the records was not only not the best evidence, it was also hearsay. Lipscomb v. State, 194 Ga. App. 657, 391 S.E.2d 773 (1990).

Sentencing court improperly considered defendant’s prior state court conviction based on an uncertified copy of the indictment, a document titled “State’s Version of the Offense,” and a computer print-out showing that a guilty plea had been entered because the state presented only hearsay, rather than competent evidence, showing that it was unable to obtain a certified copy of the conviction, and there was no evidence regarding whether it used due diligence to obtain such a copy. Brinkley v. State, 301 Ga. App. 827, 689 S.E.2d 116 (2009).

Purpose of the rule that the terms of a valid written agreement which is complete and the terms of which are not ambiguous cannot be contradicted, added to, altered, or varied by parol agreements is to establish the finality of written contracts. Stonecypher v. Georgia Power Co., 183 Ga. 498, 189 S.E. 13 (1936).

Parol evidence rule is matter of substantive law and no amount of oral testimony contradicting the legal consequence of a written instrument can avail to destroy or weaken that legal consequence. Albany Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Henderson, 198 Ga. 116, 31 S.E.2d 20 (1944); Almon v. R.H. Macy & Co., 106 Ga. App. 123, 126 S.E.2d 641 (1962).

Parol evidence cannot add to, take from, or vary writing itself. Buice Grading & Pipeline, Inc. v. Bales, 187 Ga. App. 263, 370 S.E.2d 26 (1988); Price v. Age, Ltd., 194 Ga. App. 141, 390 S.E.2d 242 (1990).

Statute should not be relaxed. Howard & Soule v. Stephens, 52 Ga. 448 (1874) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-6-1).

Test for admissibility of oral agreement. — Test to determine whether an oral agreement is one which the law will permit to be plead and proved is whether the oral agreement constitutes a part of the written contract or whether, instead, it is a separate and distinct, oral contract which is not inconsistent with the written contract. If the latter, it admits of pleading and proof. S. & S. Bldrs., Inc. v. Equitable Inv. Corp., 219 Ga. 557, 134 S.E.2d 777 (1964); Diamondhead Corp. v. Robinson, 144 Ga. App. 60, 240 S.E.2d 572 (1977).

Court will not ignore clear language of written contract between the parties to enforce an alleged oral contract in contradiction thereto. Johnson v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 142 Ga. App. 547, 236 S.E.2d 527 (1977).

Oral agreement that contradicts written agreement inadmissible. — Evidence that attorney verbally agreed to keep fees at the low end of the range specified in the attorney's written agreement with plaintiff and to complete project within two weeks was inadmissible since it contradicted the parties written agreement. Schluter v. Perrie, Buker, Stagg & Jones, 230 Ga. App. 776, 498 S.E.2d 543 (1998).

All previous negotiations are merged in the subsequent written contract. Freeman v. Bass, 34 Ga. 355, 89 Am. Dec. 255 (1866); Roberts v. Investors' Sav. Co., 154 Ga. 45, 113 S.E. 398 (1922); Wynn v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Ga. 218, 167 S.E. 513 (1933); Allison v. United Small-Loan Corp., 54 Ga. App. 820, 189 S.E. 263 (1936); Thompson v. Riggs, 193 Ga. 632, 19 S.E.2d 299 (1942); Heisley v. Allied Am. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 71 Ga. App. 107, 30 S.E.2d 285 (1944); Albany Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Henderson, 198 Ga. 116, 31 S.E.2d 20 (1944); Thompson v. Arrington, 209 Ga. 343, 72 S.E.2d 293 (1952); Simmons v. Wooten, 241 Ga. 518, 246 S.E.2d 639 (1978).

Evidence admitted without objection. — Parol evidence as to the terms of the agreement, and as to statements of the defendant made previously to the execution of the paper, is ineffectual to vary the terms of the written instrument, even though admitted without objection. Cleghorn v. Shields, 165 Ga. 362, 141 S.E. 55 (1927).

Determination of timeliness of objection to parol evidence is unnecessary, since parol evidence, by its nature, is incompetent and without probative value to alter the terms or conditions of a written contract. Lyon v. Patterson, 138 Ga. App. 816, 227 S.E.2d 423 (1976).

Uncertainty in contract. — There can be no admission of parol evidence unless and until an application of the pertinent rules of interpretation leaves it really uncertain which of two or more possible meanings represent the true intention of the parties. McCann v. Glynn Lumber Co., 199 Ga. 669, 34 S.E.2d 839 (1945).

Violation of parol agreement not fraud. — Making and violating a contemporaneous parol agreement if inconsistent with the writing would not be such fraud as would permit a varying of the written instrument, even if plead as fraud, no sufficient reason appearing why the agreement was not incorporated in the writing. Bowen v. Swift & Co., 52 Ga. App. 793, 184 S.E. 625 (1936).

Invoices. — An invoice for goods delivered on open account is not “a valid written instrument” as that term is used in O.C.G.A. § 24-6-1. Wheeler v. IDN-Armstrong’s, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 253, 653 S.E.2d 835 (2007).

Jury question. — It is for the jury to decide whether an independent collateral oral agreement was made, and, if so, whether it was part of the inducement to the written agreement. Diamondhead Corp. v. Robinson, 144 Ga. App. 60, 240 S.E.2d 572 (1977).

Attempt to invoke rule on appeal. — When a party who is entitled to the benefit of the rule prohibiting the admission of parol evidence to vary or contradict a writing waives the benefit thereof by allowing such evidence to be received without objection and without any effort to have the evidence stricken and disregarded by the trial judge or the jury, the party cannot, after the trial has terminated and the case has been decided against the party, invoke the parol evidence rule in order to obtain a reversal of such verdict and judgment in the appellate court. Southern Envelope Co. v. Adamson Printing Co., 51 Ga. App. 475, 180 S.E. 770 (1935); Commercial Credit Co. v. Lewis, 59 Ga. App. 144, 200 S.E. 566 (1938).

Evidence Inadmissible1. In General

Prior and contemporaneous statements or agreements cannot be shown to vary, contradict, or change the terms of a valid written contract purporting on the contract's face to contain all the terms of an agreement between the parties. Campbell v. Alkahest Lyceum Sys., 10 Ga. App. 839, 74 S.E. 443 (1912); Roberts v. Investors' Sav. Co., 154 Ga. 45, 113 S.E. 398 (1922); Eaves v. Georgian Co., 47 Ga. App. 37, 169 S.E. 519 (1933); Hardin v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 71 Ga. App. 63, 30 S.E.2d 121 (1944); Owensby v. Byrd, 75 Ga. App. 729, 44 S.E.2d 452 (1947); Cone Mills Corp. v. A.G. Estes, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 938 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Lewis v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 139 Ga. App. 855, 229 S.E.2d 765 (1976); Diamondhead Corp. v. Robinson, 144 Ga. App. 60, 240 S.E.2d 572 (1977).

When the contract is complete on the contract's face and the evidence offered to explain the ambiguity contradicts the terms of the written instrument, parol evidence should not be admitted. American Cyanamid Co. v. Ring, 248 Ga. 673, 286 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

In absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, parol evidence is not admissible to vary an unambiguous written agreement. Freeman v. Bass, 34 Ga. 355, 89 Am. Dec. 255 (1866); Roberts v. Investors' Sav. Co., 154 Ga. 45, 113 S.E. 398 (1922); Holloway v. Brown, 171 Ga. 481, 155 S.E. 917 (1930); Long v. Sullivan, 52 Ga. App. 318, 183 S.E. 71 (1935); Albany Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Henderson, 198 Ga. 116, 31 S.E.2d 20 (1944); Gilleland v. Welch, 199 Ga. 341, 34 S.E.2d 517 (1945); McCann v. Glynn Lumber Co., 199 Ga. 669, 34 S.E.2d 839 (1945); Smith v. Standard Oil Co., 227 Ga. 268, 180 S.E.2d 691 (1971); Vulcan Materials Co. v. Douglas, 131 Ga. App. 21, 205 S.E.2d 84 (1974); Wilson v. Sheppard, 136 Ga. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 671 (1975); C.P.D. Chem. Co. v. National Car Rental Sys., 148 Ga. App. 756, 252 S.E.2d 665 (1979).

With respect to an unambiguous promissory note, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, parol evidence cannot be considered to alter or vary the terms of a promissory note. Citizens & S. Trust Co. v. Johnson,

201 Ga. App. 464, 411 S.E.2d 543 (1991).

Parol evidence inadmissible even to establish fraud. — Parol evidence is not admissible to vary the terms of a binding written agreement, even to establish fraud. Cosby v. A.M. Smyre Mfg. Co., 158 Ga. App. 587, 281 S.E.2d 332 (1981).

Oral representations made as inducements to the contract are inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary a written contract. Pepsico Truck Rental, Inc. v. Eastern Foods, Inc., 145 Ga. App. 410, 243 S.E.2d 662 (1978).

Different consideration. — As a general rule the consideration of a contract is open to inquiry as between the original parties, but if the consideration be so stated in the contract as to make it one of its terms or conditions, as when the consideration consists of mutual promises expressed in the contract, a different consideration, whether variant or additional, cannot be shown by parol. Lynchburg Shoe Co. v. Daniel, 23 Ga. App. 186, 98 S.E. 107 (1919); Georgia Cas. Co. v. Dixie Trust & Sec. Co., 23 Ga. App. 447, 98 S.E. 414 (1919); Ramsey-Fender Motor Co. v. Chapman, 46 Ga. App. 385, 168 S.E. 92 (1932); Phillips v. Phillips, 46 Ga. App. 838, 169 S.E. 537 (1933).

Party cannot engraft new condition under guise of inquiring into consideration. — Although it is permissible to inquire into consideration when the principles of justice require it, one of the parties to a contract cannot, under the guise of inquiring into consideration, engraft upon the contract a new condition which imposes an additional affirmative obligation upon the other party. Hanover Ins. Co. v. Nelson Conveyor & Mach. Co., 159 Ga. App. 13, 282 S.E.2d 670 (1981).

Inquiry into consideration to vary terms of contract. — When in some instances parol evidence that the real consideration of a contract is different from the one actually recited in the instrument is admissible for the purpose of proving that the true consideration has failed, it is never allowable, under the guise of inquiring into the consideration, to vary or contradict by parol the substance and meaning of the written terms of the contract itself. Lynchburg Shoe Co. v. Daniel, 23 Ga. App. 186, 98 S.E. 107 (1919); Middlebrooks v. Dunlap-Huckabee Auto Co., 44 Ga. App. 543, 162 S.E. 153 (1932);

Phillips v. Phillips, 46 Ga. App. 838, 169 S.E. 537 (1933); Tyre v. Price, 52 Ga. App. 526, 183 S.E. 843 (1936); Redfearn v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 122 Ga. App. 282, 176 S.E.2d 627 (1970); Zorn v. Robertson, 237 Ga. 395, 228 S.E.2d 804 (1976).

Proof of different contract. — An entirely different contract from that evidenced by a writing cannot be pleaded or proved by parol as a substitute for that embodied in such writing. Branan v. Warfield & Lee, 3 Ga. App. 586, 60 S.E. 325 (1908).

2. Notes

In absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, parol evidence is not admissible to vary or contradict express terms of a promissory note. Tyson v. Henson, 159 Ga. App. 684, 285 S.E.2d 27 (1981).

Showing note to be conditional. — In an action upon an unconditional promissory note, evidence of a contemporaneous parol agreement that the note was not to be paid except upon the happening of a certain event is inadmissible in the absence of evidence tending to show that the agreement was omitted from the note by accident, fraud, or mistake. Probasco v. Shaw, 144 Ga. 416, 87 S.E. 466 (1915); Cairo Banking Co. v. Hall, 42 Ga. App. 785, 157 S.E. 346 (1931); Jewell v. Norrell, 66 Ga. App. 11, 16 S.E.2d 797 (1941); Mooney v. Boyd, 86 Ga. App. 369, 71 S.E.2d 685 (1952); Knight v. William Summerlin Co., 119 Ga. App. 575, 168 S.E.2d 179 (1969); Smith v. Standard Oil Co., 227 Ga. 268, 180 S.E.2d 691 (1971); First Nat'l Bank v. Harrison, 408 F. Supp. 137 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 529 F.2d 1350 (5th Cir. 1976); Hyman v. Horwitz, 148 Ga. App. 647, 252 S.E.2d 74 (1978).

Showing a want or failure of consideration. — When the consideration underlying a note is at issue, the maker of the note has the right to show by parol a want or failure of consideration. Beasley v. Paul, 223 Ga. App. 706, 478 S.E.2d 899 (1996).

Variance in time of payment. — Parol evidence is inadmissible to vary the terms of payment or the date of the maturity of a promissory note, or to engraft upon the note a provision for an extension of time. Crooker v. Hamilton, 3 Ga. App. 190, 59 S.E. 722 (1907); Wilder v. Federal Land Bank, 176 Ga. 813, 169 S.E. 13 (1933).

Evidence Inadmissible (Cont'd)2. Notes (Cont'd)*Showing that note would not be enforced.

— An unconditional promise to pay could not be defeated by proof of a contemporaneous oral agreement that it would never be enforced. Pulliam v. Merchants & Miners State Bank, 33 Ga. App. 68, 125 S.E. 509 (1924); Cohan v. Flanders, 315 F. Supp. 1046 (S.D. Ga. 1970).

Note not to be paid in money. — A note in which it is stipulated that a certain sum will be paid means that this sum will be paid in money, and the maker will not be heard to plead or prove that there was a parol agreement by which the note was to be satisfied with something else than money. Kerr v. Holder, 13 Ga. App. 9, 78 S.E. 682 (1913); Cole v. Bank of Bowersville, 31 Ga. App. 435, 120 S.E. 790 (1923).

Express warranty. — When a promissory note is given for purchase money, which is unambiguous and unconditional, and contains no warranty of soundness, no express warranty can be added to the note by parol. Fleming v. Satterfield, 4 Ga. App. 351, 61 S.E. 518 (1908).

Additional warranty. — A purchaser of an article, who gives a note for the price of the article, and therein accepts a limited warranty, and stipulates not to exact anything beyond, will not be allowed to prove by parol another representation or warranty of the seller, unless upon the ground of fraud. Commercial Credit Co. v. Lewis, 59 Ga. App. 144, 200 S.E. 566 (1938).

Obligation conditioned on additional security. — “Parol contemporaneous evidence is inadmissible generally to contradict or vary the terms of a valid written instrument,” thus, when an unconditional promissory note was signed by two persons, while it was permissible for one of them to show that one was a mere surety, it was not permissible to alter the unconditional character of the obligation by setting up a prior or contemporaneous parol agreement to the effect that the obligation was conditional upon the payees taking a mortgage upon personalty from the principal debtor as additional security. Bowen v. Mobley, 40 Ga. App. 833, 151 S.E. 667 (1930).

Claim only in rem. — In a suit on promissory note secured by a deed to land, it is not permissible for the maker to set up by way of plea and answer that by executing the two instruments together the payee agreed to look solely to the land for repayment of the debt due, and the maker of the note was not to be under any personal obligation, and no personal judgment could be procured against the maker, but only a judgment in rem against the property could be had for such an interpretation would be to vary by parol the plain terms of a written instrument by which the maker agreed to pay a stated sum on a certain day. Skeffington v. Rowland, 52 Ga. App. 619, 184 S.E. 330 (1936).

Existence of prior cause of action. — In a suit by a payee against the maker of a promissory note reciting that the note was given “for value received,” a contemporaneous parol agreement cannot be engrafted thereon by the defendant by testimony to the effect that while the defendant, at the time of executing the note, actually received from the plaintiff the principal sum thereof, yet the defendant had a prior cause of action against the plaintiff and the note was to be set up against the demand of the defendant against the plaintiff in this case, and so understood at the time of the execution and delivery of the note. Dunson & Bros. Co. v. Smith Seed Co., 26 Ga. App. 585, 106 S.E. 914 (1921).

Memorandum written at bottom of note.

— Parol evidence is inadmissible to vary or contradict an unambiguous contract in writing so as to include a memorandum written upon the bottom of one note showing the note to be collateral; and this memorandum cannot by parol be included in (nor can this stipulation in itself include) another note of a prior date when in such prior note no such words appear. Buffington v. Bank of College Park, 157 Ga. 570, 122 S.E. 50 (1924).

3. Deeds

Additional conditions. — When expressed only by way of recital, parol evidence is admissible to show that the true consideration of the deed is in fact different from the one stated merely by way of recital. However, one of the parties to a deed cannot, under the guise of inquiring into the deed's consideration, engraft upon the instrument a new condition or covenant which imposes an additional affirmative obligation upon the other party. Awtrey v. Awtrey, 225 Ga. 666, 171 S.E.2d 126 (1969).

Answer at variance with deed. — Allegations of the defendant's answer, setting up an understanding at variance with the terms of the deed executed by the plaintiff to the defendant, should have been stricken. Groover v. Simmons, 152 Ga. 423, 110 S.E. 179 (1921).

House not included in deed. — When there is a conveyance of land by deed, containing no reservations as to the buildings, a parol understanding that the vendor retains the ownership of the houses, with the right to enter and remove the houses, is certainly inconsistent with the deed and ought to be excluded from evidence. Simpson v. Tate, 226 Ga. 558, 176 S.E.2d 62 (1970).

Obligation to sell adjoining tract. — When one of the parties to a contract involving a purchase and sale of land executes and delivers to the other a deed conveying a described tract of land for a named sum of money, a contemporaneous oral agreement obligating the grantee in the deed to purchase, at the option of the grantor and during the grantor's lifetime, an adjoining tract of land for an additional sum of money, will not be enforced, if it appears that the deed and the oral agreement constitute parts of the same contract, and the terms of the oral agreement add to and vary those of the written instrument. Stonecypher v. Georgia Power Co., 183 Ga. 498, 189 S.E. 13 (1936).

Showing deed to be mortgage. — Father, by a deed absolute, conveyed land to his son, who mortgaged it for a large sum. Thereafter, with the consent of his father, he sold and assigned in writing the equity of redemption. Under the law, the father could not show by parol a subsequent rescission of the transfer, and that the original deed from himself to his son was intended only as a mortgage, and thereby establish a right in himself to redeem the land. New England Mtg. Sec. Co. v. Tarver, 60 F. 660 (5th Cir. 1894).

Failure to make improvements. — In a suit based on a written contract given for the purchase money of described cemetery lots, the court did not err in sustaining demurrer to defense asserting failure of plaintiff to make certain improvements in the cemetery which prior to or contemporaneously with the execution of the contract it had verbally agreed to make. Slaten v. College Park Cem. Co., 185 Ga. 27, 193 S.E. 872 (1937).

Administrator denying sale at auction. — An administrator cannot dispute the truth of a solemn recital contained in a deed that the property was exposed for sale, that the highest bid was a stated sum and that the administrator held the property therefor. The administrator may deny receipt of the proceeds, but the administrator cannot deny the sale at public auction for a stated sum. Gammage v. Perry, 29 Ga. App. 427, 116 S.E. 126 (1923).

4. Other Agreements

Specific performance. — Parol evidence rule is applicable in a suit for specific performance to deny another parol proof of an antecedent, inconsistent parol agreement. Thompson v. Arrington, 209 Ga. 343, 72 S.E.2d 293 (1952).

Exclusion of specific performance in land purchase contract. — When there is no language excluding specific performance as a remedy in a land purchase contract, the contract being unambiguous on this point, proffered evidence to the contrary, which purports to show that the parties intended liquidated damages to be the sole remedy, violates the parol evidence rule and is properly disregarded by the trial judge. Laseter v. Brown, 251 Ga. 179, 304 S.E.2d 72 (1983).

Merger of prior negotiations. — Contract of sale merges prior negotiations and all oral understandings and the court cannot rewrite the agreement to suit one of the parties. Worthington Pump & Mach. Corp. v. Briarcliff, 67 Ga. App. 71, 19 S.E.2d 574 (1942); R.C. Craig, Ltd. v. Ships of Sea, Inc., 401 F. Supp. 1051 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Showing sale to be conditional. — When a special agent makes a contract of sale in writing, evidence of prior conversations is inadmissible for the purpose of showing that the sale, on the sale's face absolute was in fact conditional. Bass Dry Goods Co. v. Granite City Mfg. Co., 119 Ga. 124, 45 S.E. 980 (1903).

Oral understanding concerning contractual phrase. — When a timber release contains a general descriptive phrase, the meaning of which was presumably well known to both the contracting parties, any attempt to prove that at the time of the execution of the contract the parties had an oral understanding as to the meaning of such phrase would clearly violate the statute of frauds, as well as the parol evidence rule. Dorsey v. Clements, 202 Ga. 820, 44 S.E.2d 783 (1947).

Material contractual term. — Statement in a complete conditional sales contract that one of the parties “has this day purchased” from the other party certain described personal property, for which one agrees to pay a stated amount of money, is a material contractual term and not a mere recital of the consideration of the contract, and may not be contradicted by parol evidence. Wade v. Ballard, 69 Ga. App. 669, 26 S.E.2d 542 (1943).

Employment contract. — Parol “lifetime” employment contract between the parties upon which the plaintiff relied, even if certain and definite enough to be enforceable, is superseded by the inconsistent, valid, complete, unambiguous, written employment contracts covering the same subject matter and providing for termination of employment by written notice. Vulcan Materials Co. v. Douglas, 131 Ga. App. 21, 205 S.E.2d 84 (1974).

Sales contract. — Parol evidence was inadmissible to establish that a seller had breached a written contract for the sale of certain carpet-making technology because such evidence would contradict the express disclaimers of the parties’ written contract. Textile Rubber & Chem. Co. v. Thermo-Flex Techs., Inc., 301 Ga. App. 491, 687 S.E.2d 919 (2009).

Endorser. — When the contract was not one by which the plaintiff was merely secured against loss which might result from the plaintiff becoming an endorser for the defendant, any testimony which sought to show that such was the understanding of the parties at the time the contract was entered into was inadmissible since the testimony sought to vary the express terms of the written contract by proof of a contemporaneous parol agreement. Macon Baseball Ass’n v. Pennington, 45 Ga. App. 611, 166 S.E. 35 (1932).

Guarantor. — After parties sign a bond as guarantors, the parties cannot set up, by way of defense to a suit thereon, that the instrument was executed by reason of a contemporaneous parol understanding with the principal debtor that they were not to be bound, and for a purpose wholly at variance with the instrument’s plain tenor and import, as this would in effect be merely adding to and varying the terms of a written contract, by parol evidence. Christopher v. Georgian Co., 22 Ga. App. 707, 97 S.E. 97 (1918).

Real estate bond. — Rule that negotiations in parol, occurring prior to or contemporaneously with the execution of a written contract, are considered as merged therein, and evidence as to parol terms which vary or contradict the terms of the written instrument should be excluded is ordinarily applied in a suit on the contract itself, but it also applies in suit against surety on real estate bond, as the alleged default under the bond sued on was in respect to the relation between the parties as fixed and governed by the real estate sales contract, especially in respect to the broker’s right to commissions under the contract of sale. Pfeffer v. General Cas. Co. of Am., 87 Ga. App. 173, 73 S.E.2d 234 (1952).

Real estate entire agreement clause. — Provision in parties’ contracts that there would be no verbal agreements of any kind between the parties was absolute, and as such, the provision barred the enforcement of a prior verbal agreement that, in fulfillment of its written contractual obligation to convey “lakefront” lots to the plaintiffs, contractor would provide plaintiffs with a permanent easement ensuring their littoral rights. Great Am. Bldrs., Inc. v. Howard, 207 Ga. App. 236, 427 S.E.2d 588 (1993).

Replevy bond. — When a defendant, on whose property a distress warrant was levied, gave a replevy bond for condemnation money, the security could not defend on the ground that the defendant signed on condition that the bond was only a forthcoming bond. Daniels v. Smith, 144 Ga. 561, 87 S.E. 774 (1916).

Partnership agreement to dissolve. — When one partner buys out another’s interest, and assumes all the liabilities of the firm, and the terms of sale are in writing, parol evidence is not admissible to show that the purchaser agreed to pay an account of the vendor for board, though a memorandum of that account was on the partnership books and the board was due to a third member of the partnership. Delaney v. Anderson, 54 Ga. 586 (1875).

Prior indebtedness. — In the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, writing signed by parties and treated by the parties as an account stated would be presumed to contain or represent the entire agreement between the parties with reference to the indebtedness then existing between the parties by reason of contract of employment in question, and it was error for the court to admit testimony tending to contradict or vary the terms of the account stated. Bullard v. Western Waterproofing Co., 63 Ga. App. 547, 11 S.E.2d 713 (1940).

Conveyance of right of way. — A written contract of conveyance of a right of way to a railroad company, duly executed and delivered by an owner of land, cannot be varied by oral testimony to the effect that the owner executed and delivered the contract upon agreement by the agent of the railroad company that the company would so construct the railroad as not to interfere with use of this land, on either side of the right of way, for pasturage purposes. Poole v. Elberton & E. Ry., 19 Ga. App. 631, 91 S.E. 1052 (1917).

Present transfer or discharge. — Parol evidence rule forbids any attempt to prove that the promises stated in a writing do not accurately represent the agreement of the parties; and words, not merely reciting that a transfer or discharge had been made as consideration as an existing fact, but purporting to make a present transfer or present discharge, have also been held contractual in their nature and within the rule. Wade v. Ballard, 69 Ga. App. 669, 26 S.E.2d 542 (1943).

Understandings between spouses not incorporated in divorce decree. — Negotiations and oral agreements between husband and wife, preceding divorce, as to alimony or child support, are, by presumption of law, merged in the final judgment in the divorce suit. Understandings between the husband and wife which are not incorporated into the divorce decree are not binding. Cabaniss v. Cabaniss, 251 Ga. 177, 304 S.E.2d 65 (1983).

Parol evidence rule prevented establishment of a trust based on communications that occurred prior to the agreements. — With respect to a Chapter 11 bankruptcy in which the debtor, a business that served as an intermediary for clients desiring to effect exchanges of real property qualifying for tax-deferred treatment under 26 U.S.C. § 1031, held funds in bank accounts that resulted from certain real estate sales, two real estate exchange investors were not entitled to turnover of proceeds from sales of their real estate, as opposed to having their claims payable on the same basis as the other unpaid exchangers, because the written agreements between the investors and the debtor specifically and unequivocally defined the circumstances under which the debtor acquired cash proceeds and the use and disposition of them, but did not create an express trust under O.C.G.A. § 53-12-20. The parol evidence rule, O.C.G.A. § 24-6-1, prevented the investors from trying to establish a trust based on communications that occurred prior to the agreements, which contained merger clauses. McCamy v. Kerr (In re Real Estate Exch. Servs.), No. 08-85871-PWB, 2009 Bankr. LEXIS 3731 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. Oct. 9, 2009).

Evidence Admissible

1. In General

When writing incomplete. — Before parol evidence can be received to show a collateral agreement, it must appear, either from the contract itself or from the attendant circumstances, that the contract is incomplete, and that what is sought to be shown as a collateral agreement does not in any way conflict with or contradict what is contained in the writing. Forsyth Mfg. Co. v. Castlen, 112 Ga. 199, 37 S.E. 485, 81 Am. St. R. 28 (1900); McCommons v. Williams, 131 Ga. 313, 62 S.E. 230 (1908); Napier v. Strong, 19 Ga. App. 401, 91 S.E. 579, cert. denied, 19 Ga. App. 828, 92 S.E. 558 (1917); Roberts v. Investors' Sav. Co., 154 Ga. 45, 113 S.E. 398 (1922); Bowen v. Swift & Co., 52 Ga. App. 793, 184 S.E. 625 (1936); Shubert v. Speir, 201 Ga. 20, 38 S.E.2d 835 (1946); Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 233 Ga. 423, 211 S.E.2d 720 (1975).

If the writing appears on its face to be an incomplete contract and if the parol evidence offered is consistent with and not contradictory of the terms of the written instrument, then the parol evidence is admissible to complete the agreement between the parties. Thomas v. Clark, 178 Ga. App. 823, 344 S.E.2d 754 (1986).

On an action on an open account, the trial court did not violate the parol evidence rule by admitting evidence that explained a "paid" notation on invoices. An invoice for goods delivered on open account was not "a valid written instrument" as that term was used in O.C.G.A. § 24-6-1; furthermore, O.C.G.A. § 24-6-9 specifically provided that receipts for money were always only prima facie evidence of payment and could be denied or explained by parol. Wheeler v. IDN-Armstrong's, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 253, 653 S.E.2d 835 (2007).

Construction of contract or explanation of ambiguities. — Parol evidence may be used to explain ambiguities, or aid on the construction of a contract, although it is clearly inadmissible to vary the terms of the written instrument. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Fordham, 148 Ga. App. 48, 250 S.E.2d 843 (1978); Kellos v. Parker-Sharpe, Inc., 245 Ga. 130, 263 S.E.2d 138 (1980).

Conflicting documents should be read consistently if possible. — Courts may not use extrinsic evidence to vary the terms of or otherwise render ambiguous a written contract. However, when two releases both concern the allocation of liability between the parties and were executed on the same day, the court should read the releases together and consider them as a single contract in determining whether an ambiguity exists. But if one release violates public policy, the court may not consider extrinsic evidence altering or contradicting the unambiguous language of the valid release. Watson v. Union Camp Corp., 861 F. Supp. 1086 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Existence of fraud. — Parol evidence is admissible to show that what appears to be a valid written contract is void because the complaining party was induced to execute the contract by the fraud of the other. Johnson v. Sherrer, 197 Ga. 392, 29 S.E.2d 581 (1944); Hinson v. Hinson, 221 Ga. 291, 144 S.E.2d 381 (1965); Brown v. Techdata Corp., 238 Ga. 622, 234 S.E.2d 787 (1977).

Contracts. — Rule that parol agreements shall not be received to change or add to terms of written contract does not apply where alleged contract was procured by fraud; and stipulation in contract that provisions thereof constitute sole and entire agreement between parties and that no modification thereof shall be binding on either party unless in writing and signed by seller can have no bearing in a case where fraud to induce the contract is at issue. Spires v. Relco, Inc., 165 Ga. App. 4, 299 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

In a dispute over installment contract to purchase land, evidence of alleged oral agreement between the parties, which the buyer partially performed and the seller accepted the benefits of, was not violative of the parol evidence rule and helped to prove the existence of the oral agreement as the buyer alleged. Hernandez v. Carnes, 290 Ga. App. 730, 659 S.E.2d 925 (2008).

Rebuttal of fraud. — Parol evidence rule has no application when the defendant introduces testimony for the purpose of rebutting one of the elements of fraud, not for altering the instrument. Friendly Fin. Co. v. Stover, 109 Ga. App. 21, 134 S.E.2d 837 (1964).

Lack of valid agreement. — Parol evidence may be used to show no valid agreement ever existed. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Williams, 147 Ga. App. 205, 249 S.E.2d 289 (1978).

Lack of consideration. — While it is never allowable, under the guise of inquiring into the consideration of a valid written contract, to vary or contradict the terms or conditions of the instrument, it is permissible to show by parol evidence which does not vary or contradict the terms and conditions of the writing that it was never a contract for want of consideration. Miller v. Whitesburg Banking Co., 58 Ga. App. 84, 197 S.E. 906 (1938).

Oral contract as inducement for written contract. — Collateral oral agreement, not inconsistent with a written contract, is not necessarily merged into the written contract, and one contract may be the consideration for another contract and may induce the execution of the other contract; such independent oral contract may be proved and enforced. Diamondhead Corp. v. Robinson, 144 Ga. App. 60, 240 S.E.2d 572 (1977).

Verbal agreement independent of written contract. — When a verbal agreement is an independent and complete contract within itself and forms no part of the written contract, it does not come within the operation of the parol evidence rule. Diamondhead Corp. v. Robinson, 144 Ga. App. 60, 240 S.E.2d 572 (1977).

Subsequent agreement. — Rule is not violated by proof of a new and distinct subsequent agreement in the nature of a novation. Wimberly v. Tanner, 34 Ga. App. 313, 129 S.E. 306 (1925); Mutual Furn. Co. v. Moore, 60 Ga. App. 655, 4 S.E.2d 711 (1939); Long Tobacco Harvesting Co. v. Brannen, 98 Ga. App. 142, 105 S.E.2d 390 (1958), later appeal, 99 Ga. App. 541, 109 S.E.2d 90 (1959).

Evidence of nondelivery. — It is no contradiction of a written agreement, which does not of itself purport to have been delivered, to assert its nondelivery, and therefore parol evidence is admissible to disprove the fact of delivery. Nalley Land & Inv. Co. v. Merchants' & Planters' Bank, 178 Ga. 818, 174 S.E. 618 (1934), later appeal, 187 Ga. 142, 199 S.E. 815 (1938) (decided under former § 2283 of the Civil Code of 1910).

Implication or rebuttal of trust. — Parol evidence rule does not prevent the introduction of evidence to show the nature of the transaction or the circumstances or conduct of the parties, either to imply or rebut a trust, although the effect is to alter or vary a written instrument. Hodges v. Hodges, 221 Ga. 587, 146 S.E.2d 313 (1965).

Identification of real party in interest. — Parol evidence is admissible when not a variance with a written contract to identify the real party in interest. Contractors Mgt. Corp. v. McDowell-Kelley, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 116, 220 S.E.2d 473 (1975).

Proof of signature. — Although under O.C.G.A. §§ 13-2-2(1) and 24-6-1, parol evidence was inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary a written contract, it was properly admitted to show that a promisor who died signing a guaranty had actually signed the guaranty. A store employee testified that the employee witnessed the store owner sign the guaranty. John Deere Co. v. Haralson, 278 Ga. 192, 599 S.E.2d 164 (2004).

Lack of malice. — When evidence is not offered for the purpose of altering the substantive rights of the parties under a written sales contract, but for the purpose of establishing that one party did not act maliciously and oppressively, and if the evidence is probative on that issue, it should be admitted.

Oden & Sims Used Cars, Inc. v. McMullen, 153 Ga. App. 127, 264 S.E.2d 580 (1980).

Division of consideration. — While proof of parol contemporaneous agreements is generally inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary a written contract, the allegations of the petition setting forth the division to be made of the consideration to be paid to the co-obligees under the contract do not come within the inhibition of the parol evidence rule since such alleged facts do not add to, take from, or vary the terms of the written instrument, but merely set forth the respective interests of the obligees. Bernstein v. Fagelson, 38 Ga. App. 294, 143 S.E. 237 (1928).

Waiver of stipulation of contract. — While parol evidence is inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary a written contract, the parol evidence rule has no application to a case if waiver of a stipulation of the contract is being asserted. Henry v. Hemingway, 159 Ga. App. 375, 283 S.E.2d 341 (1981).

2. Notes

Contract partly in parol. — Parol evidence is admissible not only when a promissory note is obtained by fraud, but when the note is not the entire contract between the parties, and when the contract is partly in parol and partly in writing. Crooker v. Hamilton, 3 Ga. App. 190, 59 S.E. 722 (1907).

Inquiry into consideration. — When a promissory note recited no consideration except in the words “for value received,” the real consideration of the note may be inquired into as far as may be necessary to the defense pleaded. Dunson & Bros. Co. v. Smith Seed Co., 26 Ga. App. 585, 106 S.E. 914 (1921).

Failure of consideration. — In a suit on an unconditional promise to pay, although the consideration may not be expressed in the instrument, it is ordinarily permissible for the defendant to plead, and to prove by parol, that the consideration supporting the promise has failed either in whole or in part. Tyre v. Price, 52 Ga. App. 526, 183 S.E. 843 (1936).

Note placed as collateral. — When there was evidence of a parol agreement on the part of the payee of the collateral note that a note should be held as collateral, which was itself a fact not affecting the contents of the writing, and which, if credible, tended to show that the note had been placed as collateral, the fact as to the pledge, being entirely independent from the contents of the note, could properly be shown by parol. Buffington v. Bank of College Park, 157 Ga. 570, 122 S.E. 50 (1924).

When the alleged oral agreement was entered into subsequent to the execution of the promissory note. O.C.G.A. § 24-6-1 does not stand as a barrier to the agreement's enforcement. South Atl. Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Gibbs, 257 Ga. 521, 361 S.E.2d 167 (1987).

3. Deeds

Creation of trust. — Deed absolute in form may be shown by parol evidence to have been made in trust for the benefit of the grantor if the maker remains in possession of the land. Hall v. Turner, 198 Ga. 763, 32 S.E.2d 829 (1945).

Clerical error. — In view of the particular statement in a deed that the tract conveyed was bounded on the east and south by lands of named owners, parol evidence was admissible for the purpose of applying the description to the intended subject matter and to show that the statement as to the district number was a clerical error. Smith v. Federal Land Bank, 181 Ga. 1, 181 S.E. 149 (1935).

4. Other Agreements

Receipt in full. — Receipt for money in full of all demands is always open to contradiction or explanation. Walters v. Odom, 53 Ga. 286 (1874).

Implied trust. — While an express trust must be created by writing and cannot be proved by parol, implied trusts may be established by parol evidence, although the effect of such evidence is to alter or vary a written instrument, and although the defendant sets up and insists upon the statute of frauds. Hall v. Turner, 198 Ga. 763, 32 S.E.2d 829 (1945).

Implied warranty. — In an action to recover the purchase price of defective goods, testimony that defendant told plaintiff the goods would give satisfactory service and that defendant would give a one-year warranty with reference to the service was admissible to show the alleged breach of an implied contract and the trial court did not err in failing to charge the general rule concerning parol evidence. Cloud v. Stewart, 92 Ga. App. 247, 88 S.E.2d 323 (1955).

Surety induced by false representation. — Plea to the effect that a surety was induced to sign by a false representation that a surety whose name appeared as such had already signed the contract of suretyship is not an effort to vary the terms of a written contract. W.T. Rawleigh Co. v. Kelly, 78 Ga. App. 10, 50 S.E.2d 113 (1948).

Assignment of salary as cover for usurious loan. — Parol evidence is admissible to show that a purported assignment of salary is but a cover for a usurious loan, notwithstanding its recitals to the contrary. Hinton v. Mack Purchasing Co., 41 Ga. App. 823, 155 S.E. 78 (1930).

Variance in deposit slip. — When husband had withdrawn money from wife's account, in subsequent suit by wife against the bank to recover money, evidence offered by the defendant bank, to the effect that while the deposit slip showed the money deposited to the separate account of the wife, such money was in fact placed to the credit of a joint business enterprise of the husband and wife, and thereafter drawn out on checks against this account by the plaintiff and her husband, was admissible in support of the defense urged by the defendant bank. Greeson v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank, 50 Ga. App. 566, 179 S.E. 191 (1935).

Bill of sale. — Court erred in admitting parol evidence that a "bill of sale" was not intended to transfer ownership of a boat, the bill being executed on the regular required Coast Guard form, and all language therein relating to a sale and conveyance, the other provisions merely relating to the method of payment. Peterson v. Lexington Ins. Co., 753 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1985).

Conversations supplementing recertification documents for lease. — When a public housing lease required information about family size and income annually, but the lease did not indicate that completion of the recertification documents was a condition precedent to renewal of the lease, the recertification document was not an agreement and was not merged with the lease so as to make admission of conversations supplementing the information contained in the recertification documents a violation of the parol evidence rule. Decatur Hous. Auth. v. Christian, 182 Ga. App. 270, 355 S.E.2d 764 (1987).

Collective bargaining agreement. — In action by retired employees to prevent the corporation from modifying their health insurance benefits, the fact that both parties offered reasonable interpretations of a collective bargaining agreement that gave full effect to one clause and qualified the other was sufficient to establish that the contract was ambiguous and that the trial court should have considered extrinsic evidence. Stewart v. KHD Deutz of Am., Corp., 980 F.2d 698 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 930, 117 S. Ct. 300, 136 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1996).

Not admissible if contract unambiguous. — Trial court properly struck a paragraph in an estate executrix's affidavit in opposition to the decedent's nephew's motion for summary judgment, arising from an action regarding estate assets and joint venture agreements, as the executrix's assertions regarding a handwritten note by the husband constituted parol evidence which could not be used to alter the meaning of the unambiguous language of the agreements, and necessity was not shown for admission of the hearsay evidence, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 13-2-2(1), 24-3-1(b), 24-6-1, and 24-6-2; accordingly, the handwritten notation that the properties at issue were to be sold for "market value" could not change the contractual language that indicated that the properties would be sold for a predetermined price. Zaglin v. Atlanta Army Navy Store, Inc., 275 Ga. App. 855, 622 S.E.2d 73 (2005).

Life insurance beneficiary designation form. — Trial court erred by granting summary judgment to a child in a suit brought by a sibling seeking a determination that the sibling was the sole beneficiary of their parent's life insurance policy as the sibling sufficiently alleged fraud and/or forgery with regard to a second beneficiary designation form allegedly signed by the parent. As such, the trial court should have permitted the sibling to introduce two affidavits that supported the sibling's allegations that the second beneficiary designation form was void. Weatherly v. Weatherly, 292 Ga. App. 879, 665 S.E.2d 922 (2008).

Applicability of parol evidence to written listing agreement of real estate broker, 38 ALR2d 542.

Admissibility of extrinsic evidence to explain or contradict bank deposit slips, deposit entries in passbooks, certificate of deposit, or similar instruments, 42 ALR2d 600.

Admissibility of parol evidence of election officials to impeach election returns, 46 ALR2d 1385.

Admissibility of parol evidence as to proceedings at meetings of stockholders or directors of private corporations or associations, 48 ALR2d 1259.

Parol evidence to show that lease of personality, absolute on its face, is conditional sale, 57 ALR2d 1076.

Applicability of parol evidence rule to agreement between stockbroker and customer, 60 ALR2d 1135.

Admissibility of parol evidence with respect to reservations or exceptions upon conveyance of real property, 61 ALR2d 1390.

Admissibility of parol evidence as to limitation on cost structure in builder's action on written cost-plus-fee construction contract, 84 ALR2d 1324.

"Merger" clause in written contract as precluding conviction for false pretenses based on earlier oral false representations, 94 ALR2d 570.

Applicability of parol evidence rule in favor of or against one not a party to contract of release, 13 ALR3d 313.

Parol exception of fixtures from conveyance or lease, 29 ALR3d 1441.

Application of parol evidence rule in action on contract for architect's services, 69 ALR3d 1353.

Modern status of rules governing legal effect of failure to object to admission of extrinsic evidence violative of parol evidence rule, 81 ALR3d 249.

Admissibility of evidence to establish oral antenuptial agreement, 81 ALR3d 453.

Liability in tort for interference with physician's contract or relationship with hospital, 7 ALR4th 572.

24-6-2. Proof of unwritten portions of contract admissible where not inconsistent.

If the writing does not purport to contain all the stipulations of the contract, parol evidence shall be admissible to prove other portions thereof not inconsistent with the writing; so collateral undertakings between parties of the same part among themselves would not properly be looked for in the writing. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3726; Code 1868, § 3750; Code 1873, § 3803; Code 1882, § 3803; Civil Code 1895, § 5204; Civil Code 1910, § 5791; Code 1933, § 38-504.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Requirements for application. — To bring a case within the rule admitting parol evidence to complete an entire agreement of which a writing is only a part, two things are essential. First, the writing must appear on inspection to be an incomplete contract; and second, the parol evidence must be consistent with and not contradictory of the written instrument. Forsyth Mfg. Co. v. Castlen, 112 Ga. 199, 37 S.E. 485, 81 Am. St. R. 28 (1900); McCreary v. Acton, 29 Ga. App. 162, 114 S.E. 230 (1922). See also Rauschenberg v. Peebles, 30 Ga. App. 384, 118 S.E. 409 (1923); Bowen v. Swift & Co., 52 Ga. App. 793, 184 S.E. 625 (1936); Harden v. Orr, 219 Ga. 54, 131 S.E.2d 545 (1963).

Writing must have essential elements of contract. — While it is true that parol evidence as to all attendant and surrounding facts and circumstances may be admitted to explain ambiguities in a written contract and that if it appears from the contract itself that it was not intended that the instrument should embrace the entire agreement, parol evidence is admissible to set up collateral agreements not inconsistent with the terms of the writing, in order for these principles of law to have application, the instrument relied on must embrace within itself the essential elements of a contract. Jones v. Knight Mercantile Co., 51 Ga. App. 57, 179 S.E. 569 (1935).

Mere unsigned slip of paper, although in the handwriting of the president of the plaintiff corporation, containing only the words "Contract price, $2,950 — J.A. Glass, carpenter, San Verner, plumber and elect," wholly failed to disclose the subject matter of the alleged contract, did not purport to bind anyone with reference thereto, and cannot be construed as such an instrument as, when aided by parol, would constitute a binding agreement. Jones v. Knight Mercantile Co., 51 Ga. App. 57, 179 S.E. 569 (1935).

Contracts within the statute of frauds. — Parol evidence rule does not apply to contracts covered by the statute of frauds. Douglass v. Bunn, 110 Ga. 159, 35 S.E. 339 (1900); Shinall Bros. v. Skelton, 28 Ga. App. 527, 112 S.E. 163 (1922).

Provision of O.C.G.A. § 24-6-2 that if a writing does not purport to be entire agreement between parties, parol evidence is admissible to prove other portions thereof not inconsistent with the writing, is inapplicable to a contract of guaranty, because such contracts are required to be entirely in writing under O.C.G.A. § 13-5-30(2), statute of frauds. Builder's Supply Corp. v. Taylor, 164 Ga. App. 127, 296 S.E.2d 417 (1982).

In action to recover on contract of guaranty, parol evidence was not admissible to prove identity of principal debtor, the identity not having been provided by subject written agreement. Builder's Supply Corp. v. Taylor, 164 Ga. App. 127, 296 S.E.2d 417 (1982).

Contract, partly oral and partly written, for a period of one year is valid and enforceable. Empire Box, Inc. v. Moore, 87 Ga. App. 57, 73 S.E.2d 63 (1952).

Collateral agreement which is inducement for written agreement. — Distinct, collateral oral agreement that is consistent with and usually forms part of the consideration or inducement for the second written agreement, may be established by parol evidence. Diamondhead Corp. v. Robinson, 144 Ga. App. 60, 240 S.E.2d 572 (1977).

When the evidence showed the existence of a separate and independent collateral agreement, the renewal of which, for three consecutive years, induced appellee to renew a written agreement with appellant and that appellant honored this agreement, appellant could not now keep the agreement from evidence under the sanction of the parol evidence rule. Diamondhead Corp. v. Robinson, 144 Ga. App. 60, 240 S.E.2d 572 (1977).

Filling blanks. — Parol evidence is admissible to fill blanks in the writing not inconsistent with the writing itself. Westbrook v. Griffin, 24 Ga. App. 808, 102 S.E. 453 (1920).

When, in a special contract in writing between a common carrier and a shipper of livestock, the amount of freight is left blank, the blank may be filled by parol evidence showing the actual amount contracted for and paid by the shipper. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Reid, 91 Ga. 377, 17 S.E. 934 (1893).

Subscription for stock. — Parol evidence rule applies to a written subscription for stock. Hendrix v. Academy of Music, 73 Ga. 437 (1884).

Receipt given by attorney. — Parol evidence rule applies to a receipt given by an attorney for a note placed in the attorney's hands for collection. Barclay v. Hopkins, 59 Ga. 562 (1877).

Contract excluding other representations. — If a written contract of sale stated that the writing was "made under inducements and representations herein expressed and no others," it could not be proved by parol that plaintiff's agent made any other representation or warranty. Shinall Bros. v. Skelton, 28 Ga. App. 527, 112 S.E. 163 (1922).

Unambiguous maturity date not waived. — O.C.G.A. § 24-6-2 permits parol evidence of collateral undertakings between the parties only when the writing does not purport to contain all the stipulations of the contract and only when such evidence is not inconsistent with the writing. In this case, defendant's testimony that the maturity date was waived by parol agreement is directly inconsistent with the certain and unambiguous maturity date stipulated in the written note. Moreover, the general rule prohibiting parol evidence may not be avoided on the theory of a confidential or fiduciary relationship between the parties. Barton v. Marubeni Am. Corp., 204 Ga. App. 346, 419 S.E.2d 342 (1992).

Letter reciting writer's understanding of oral contract. — Letter written by vice-president of corporation reciting the vice-president's understanding of the oral contract of employment between president of corporation and recipient of letter, since it did not purport to be the contract itself, did not prevent the use of parol evidence to show what the full contract was. Marston v. Downing Co., 73 F.2d 94 (5th Cir. 1934).

When written part may be varied. — When a contract is entire, part of which is in writing and part in parol, the written part cannot be varied by parol evidence in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake. Rauschenberg v. Peeples, 30 Ga. App. 384, 118 S.E. 409 (1923).

Contract held complete on its face. — See McCann v. Glynn Lumber Co., 199 Ga. 669, 34 S.E.2d 839 (1945) (timber lease).

Effect of part performance. — Acceptance of the benefits and part performance of the contract by plaintiff would preclude the defendant from attacking the alleged oral portion of a contract which appeared to be an explanation of the entire contract rather than conflicting with any written provisions. Consumers Fin. Corp. v. Lamb, 217 Ga. 359, 122 S.E.2d 101 (1961).

Admitting contract in answer. — When the defendants admitted in their answer that the written order and notes constituted the entire contract, the defendants were precluded from offering evidence of any other contract. Shinall Bros. v. Skelton, 28 Ga. App. 527, 112 S.E. 163 (1922).

Assignment of note to secure assignor's debts to bank. — For application of O.C.G.A. § 24-6-2 to situation where debts secured by assignment of note included only assignor's debts on notes signed by assignor as maker or also to notes on which assignor might be liable as an endorser or accommodation party, see National City Bank v. Busbin, 175 Ga. App. 103, 332 S.E.2d 678 (1985).

Promissory note held complete. — If the promissory note constituted an unconditional promise to pay, defendants were prohibited from proving lender's alleged oral promise which, if proven, would clearly have contradicted the terms of the note requiring payment. Devin Lamplighter, Ltd. v. American Gen. Fin., Inc., 206 Ga. App. 747, 426 S.E.2d 645 (1992).

Written part may not be varied. — Trial court properly struck a paragraph in an estate executrix's affidavit in opposition to the decedent's nephew's motion for summary judgment, arising from an action regarding estate assets and joint venture agreements, as the executrix's assertions regarding a handwritten note by the husband constituted parol evidence which could not be used to alter the meaning of the unambiguous language of the agreements, and necessity was not shown for admission of the hearsay evidence, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 13-2-2(1), 24-3-1(b), 24-6-1, and 24-6-2; accordingly, the handwritten notation that the properties at issue were to be sold for "market value" could not change the contractual language that indicated that the properties would be sold for a predetermined price. Zaglin v. Atlanta Army Navy Store, Inc., 275 Ga. App. 855, 622 S.E.2d 73 (2005).

ANALYSIS

WRITINGS EXPLAINING EACH OTHER

One writing purports to contain the entire understanding. — Contemporaneous writings should be considered even if one of the writings purports to contain the entire understanding of the parties in the transaction contemplated and even if the writings are not cross-referenced. Duke v. KHD Deutz of Am. Corp., 221 Ga. App. 452, 471 S.E.2d 537 (1996).

Affidavits admissible. — Summary judgment was proper and parol evidence was admissible to show the meaning of a separation agreement when a former wife's affidavits established that four certificates of deposit were purchased with the proceeds from the sale of her premarital property and were her separate property and decedent husband's redemption of one of the CD's was in contravention of their separation agreement. Bradley v. Frank, 264 Ga. App. 772, 592 S.E.2d 138 (2003).

Admissibility of parol evidence of site plan to show nonexistence of use restriction. — In a land use restriction action, a trial court erred by failing to consider a 1997 site plan, which allowed the parties to seek to amend the use of the land at issue and future development of the land; therefore, the trial court erred in enjoining a developer from constructing condominium towers since no such use restriction existed. CPI Phipps, LLC v. 100 Park Ave. Partners, L.P., 288 Ga. App. 614, 654 S.E.2d 690 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 286 (Ga. 2008).

App. 480, 585 S.E.2d 911 (2003).

Writings Explaining Each Other

Contract is not necessarily contained in a single paper, and law provides that all contemporaneous writings shall be admissible to explain each other. Manry v. Hendricks, 66 Ga. App. 442, 18 S.E.2d 97 (1941).

Legal effect of two writings. — If it takes both writings to make the real contract of the parties, the legal effect is the same as if one paper held the contents of the note and the contemporaneous writing. Jewell v. Norrell, 66 Ga. App. 11, 16 S.E.2d 797 (1941).

Terms of contract cannot be varied by parol. — When a written contract is expressly entered into on terms and conditions expressed and stated in two papers which constituted but one entire written contract, a party cannot change such terms and conditions in the written contract and set up terms and conditions by parol which are contrary to the written terms. Jewell v. Norrell, 66 Ga. App. 11, 16 S.E.2d 797 (1941).

“Contemporaneous” means, literally, according to Webster, “living, existing, or occurring at the same time,” but numerous authorities could be cited to the effect that the word does not connote perfect or absolute coincidence in point of time. One thing is contemporaneous with a given transaction when it is so related in point of time as reasonably to be said to be a part of such transaction. Manry v. Hendricks, 66 Ga. App. 442, 18 S.E.2d 97 (1941).

Letters to explain note. — When a promissory note did not express within itself the entire contract between the parties, but the remainder thereof was contained in letters written by the parties in connection with the making of the note, such letters were admissible in evidence in a suit between the maker and one who took the note after maturity. Marietta Sav. Bank v. Janes, 66 Ga. 286 (1881).

Documents properly construed together. — Trial court correctly evaluated an asset purchase agreement between a buyer and the owners of a dialysis center, including a doctor’s spouse, a covenant not to compete, and a medical director agreement between a doctor and a buyer, all signed the same day, together under O.C.G.A. § 24-6-3 as related to the sale of a business as the doctor was integral to the continued success of the center, and the doctor’s execution of the medical director agreement was integral to the execution of the asset purchase agreement. Martinez v. DaVita, Inc., 266 Ga. App. 723, 598 S.E.2d 334 (2004).

In a breach of contract action arising from a guaranty agreement between a guarantor and a retail space owner, the trial court properly granted summary judgment in the owner’s favor as the court properly construed contemporaneous written agreements, which were executed on the same date, at the same time, and at the same location, despite a misnomer contained therein, as such did not render the agreement unenforceable. Thus, it was not erroneous for the court to correct an obvious error in the agreement, specifically, the failure to substitute one entity’s name for another as the parties intended, and interpret the guaranty accordingly. C.L.D.F., Inc. v. Aramore, LLC, 290 Ga. App. 271, 659 S.E.2d 695 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 668 (Ga. 2008).

Description of property in separate writing. — When at the time of making a written contract for the sale of coal, the parties also executed a contemporaneous writing as to the kind of coal to be furnished, both writings should be considered together to determine the true intent of the parties. National Rosin Oil & Size Co. v. South Atl. Coal Co., 23 Ga. App. 87, 97 S.E. 559 (1918).

Note, warranty deed, and agreement concerning a real estate transaction were all dated on the same day; therefore, the note and deed could be considered to establish the missing property description in the agreement. Owenby v. Holley, 256 Ga. App. 13, 567 S.E.2d 351 (2002).

Deed construed with petition. — Deed by a wife to her husband was construed together with a petition that she be allowed to execute the deed. McCreary v. Gewinner, 103 Ga. 528, 29 S.E. 960 (1898).

Use restriction in easement not applicable to deeds. — As there were no restrictions on use in warranty deeds that a property owner conveyed to a city, a restrictive use that was in a contemporaneously-executed easement could not be imposed on the deeds pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-6-3(a). White House Inn & Suites, Inc. v. City of Warm Springs, 285 Ga. 322, 676 S.E.2d 178 (2009).

Pleading contemporaneous writings. — It is not intimated in law that in order for contemporaneous writings to be admitted in evidence, even though the writings may govern and control the contract, the writings must be pleaded in the plaintiff’s petition. International Harvester Co. of Am. v. Morgan, 19 Ga. App. 716, 92 S.E. 35 (1917).

Contemporaneous writings need not be cross-referenced. — If all the necessary terms of an agreement are contained in signed contemporaneous writings, the statutory requirements and purpose of the statute of frauds have been met whether or not the writings are cross-referenced. Baker v. Jellibbeans, Inc., 252 Ga. 458, 314 S.E.2d 874 (1984); Harris v. Distinctive Bldrs., Inc., 249 Ga. App. 686, 549 S.E.2d 496 (2001).

Writings Explaining Each Other (Cont'd)

Parol evidence is admissible to explain an ambiguity in a writing. Chero-Cola Bottling Co. v. Southern Express Co., 29 Ga. App. 656, 116 S.E. 325 (1923); Commercial Credit Co. v. Lewis, 59 Ga. App. 144, 200 S.E. 566 (1938); Hanson v. Stern, 102 Ga. App. 341, 116 S.E.2d 237 (1960); R.C. Craig, Ltd. v. Ships of Sea, Inc., 401 F. Supp. 1051 (S.D. Ga. 1975); Fruin-Colnon Corp. v. Air Door, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 804, 278 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Parol evidence is admissible to explain an ambiguity in a written contract, although such evidence is inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary the writing itself. Andrews v. Skinner, 158 Ga. App. 229, 279 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

If parties have reduced to writing what appears to be a complete and certain agreement, it will, in the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, be conclusively presumed that the writing contains the entire contract, and parol evidence of prior or contemporaneous representations or statements is inadmissible to add to, take from, or vary the written instrument. Andrews v. Skinner, 158 Ga. App. 229, 279 S.E.2d 523 (1981).

Language clear and unambiguous may not be contradicted by parol evidence of custom, surrounding circumstances, or intent. Daniel & Daniel, Inc. v. Cosmopolitan Co., 146 Ga. App. 200, 245 S.E.2d 885 (1978).

When the words and phrases are not technical nor in any sense ambiguous, a witness cannot, as an expert or otherwise, give the witness's opinion of the meaning of the instrument. Chero-Cola Bottling Co. v. Southern Express Co., 29 Ga. App. 656, 116 S.E. 325 (1923).

Parol evidence inadmissible in unambiguous contract. — Rule that the construction put upon the contract by the parties before or after the contract's execution may be considered in arriving at the contract's true meaning does not apply to an unambiguous contract. Alexander Film Co. v. Brittain, 63 Ga. App. 384, 11 S.E.2d 66 (1940).

If the provisions of a deed to land are plain and unambiguous, parol evidence is not admissible for the purpose of showing an intent at variance with the plain terms of the deed. Rowland v. Sumner, 201 Ga. 317, 39 S.E.2d 655 (1946).

In the absence of fraud, parol evidence is not admissible to overcome the express unambiguous language of a contract. Wilson v. Sheppard, 136 Ga. App. 475, 221 S.E.2d 671 (1975).

Parol evidence cannot be employed to add to, take from, or vary the terms of the written instrument. R.C. Craig, Ltd. v. Ships of Sea, Inc., 401 F. Supp. 1051 (S.D. Ga. 1975); Kellos v. Parker-Sharpe, Inc., 245 Ga. 130, 263 S.E.2d 138 (1980).

When the contract is complete on the contract's face and the evidence offered to explain the ambiguity contradicts the terms of the written instrument, parol evidence should not be admitted. American Cyanamid Co. v. Ring, 248 Ga. 673, 286 S.E.2d 1 (1982).

"Ambiguity" defined. — "Ambiguity" is defined as duplicity, indistinctness, an uncertainty of meaning or expression. Novelty Hat Mfg. Co. v. Wiseberg, 126 Ga. 800, 55 S.E. 923 (1906); Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 199 Ga. 461, 34 S.E.2d 688 (1945).

"Ambiguity" also signifies doubtful or uncertain nature; wanting clearness or definiteness; difficult to comprehend or distinguish; of doubtful purport; open to various interpretations. Novelty Hat Mfg. Co. v. Wiseberg, 126 Ga. 800, 55 S.E. 923 (1906).

Ambiguity refers to words or phrases of duplicitous, indistinct, or uncertain meanings which may fairly be understood in more ways than one. Contractors Mgt. Corp. v. McDowell-Kelley, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 116, 220 S.E.2d 473 (1975).

Intent of parties. — If a written contract is ambiguous as to the intention of the parties, evidence, otherwise competent, of acts and transactions between the parties, tending to show the construction the parties themselves put upon the agreement when the agreement was executed, whether occurring prior to or subsequently to the execution of the contract, is admissible. Armistead v. McGuire, 46 Ga. 232 (1872); Georgia Iron & Coal Co. v. Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corp., 133 Ga. 326, 65 S.E. 775 (1909).

Even if the instrument is ambiguous, the testimony of one party as to that party's intent, undisclosed to the other, is not competent. National Manufacture & Stores Corp. v. Dekle, 48 Ga. App. 515, 173 S.E. 408 (1934).

If the language of the contract defining what interest the petitioners were buying is ambiguous, the court does not err in admitting testimony of the petitioners of what the petitioners thought the petitioners were buying. Manning v. Carroll, 204 Ga. 100, 48 S.E.2d 737 (1948), later appeal, 206 Ga. 158, 56 S.E.2d 278 (1949).

Through the proper admission of parol evidence, the intent of the parties can be determined and any ambiguity present can be resolved by the jury in the trial. Wright v. Piedmont Eng'r & Constr. Corp., 106 Ga. App. 401, 126 S.E.2d 865 (1962).

If a release is ambiguous on the question of whether a plaintiff released a defendant from claims arising out of defendant's relationship with a corporation, parol evidence may be introduced on the issue of the parties' intent. Southern Stone Co. v. Singer, 665 F.2d 698 (5th Cir. 1982).

Trial court was authorized to construe the commercial lease and the shareholder buyout agreements between a lessor and a lessee together as multiple documents executed during the course of a single transaction; in so doing, the court's finding that the agreement was linked to the lease's 10-year term upheld the contract as a whole, reflected the parties' intent as expressed in the testimony and documentary evidence offered at trial, and was supported by all the attendant and surrounding circumstances proved in this case. Allen v. Harkness Stone Co., 271 Ga. App. 397, 609 S.E.2d 647 (2004).

Contract of goods over $50.00. — Law applies to a contract of goods over $50.00, even in view of the statute of frauds. Wilson v. Coleman & Ray, 81 Ga. 297, 6 S.E. 693 (1888).

Contract with contradictory terms. — When a contract embodied in two separate written instruments, simultaneously executed and delivered, contains contradictory and ambiguous terms, parol evidence is admissible to explain the contradiction and remove the ambiguity. Cable Co. v. McFeeley, 7 Ga. App. 435, 66 S.E. 1103 (1910).

Where the clause of sales contract referring to the amount of the purchase price is rendered ambiguous by contradictory statements as to the amount, the trial judge does not err in permitting defendant purchaser to testify, in explanation of the ambiguity, that at the time the defendant entered into the contract, the defendant had a conversation with the seller's agent and that it was distinctly understood that the items of insurance, carrying charges, and interest were included. Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 199 Ga. 461, 34 S.E.2d 688 (1945).

If a written contract incorporates an ambiguous condition, parol evidence is admissible to aid in the construction of the condition. Columbia Nitrogen Corp. v. Dean's Power Oil Co., 136 Ga. App. 879, 222 S.E.2d 602 (1975).

Effect of "whole agreement" clause in contract. — If a contract is in fact ambiguous as to some matters, a stipulation in the contract to the effect that the contract expresses "the whole agreement" and that there is no agreement or modification of any kind in connection therewith that is not expressly set forth therein, will not prevent explanation in the usual manner. Wood v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 199 Ga. 461, 34 S.E.2d 688 (1945); Baker v. Jellibeans, Inc., 252 Ga. 458, 314 S.E.2d 874 (1984).

Abbreviations. — When a writing is obscure or ambiguous, by reason of an unfamiliar abbreviation, what it means is for the jury and to arrive at the meaning, clear and intelligible expressions in the instrument may be compared with facts otherwise proved. Holland v. Long & Bro., 57 Ga. 36 (1876).

Letters "O.K." being ambiguous, their meaning may be explained by parol evidence. Penn Tobacco Co. v. Leman & Co., 109 Ga. 428, 34 S.E. 679 (1899).

Capacity of signer. — When there is a written contract, not under seal and not containing a so-called integration or "entire agreement" clause, parol is admissible to show the capacity in which one signed such agreement. Evans v. Smithdeal, 143 Ga. App. 287, 238 S.E.2d 278 (1977).

Descriptions in instruments. — If, for want of fullness of statement, the writing be indefinite or uncertain, parol evidence is admissible, not to vary, add to, or take from the writing, but to explain and so illuminate the writing as to make the real intention of the parties apparent. So parol evidence is admissible to explain ambiguous descriptive terms in a written instrument and to apply the same to their subject matter. Georgia Iron & Coal Co. v. Ocean Accident & Guar- antee Corp., 133 Ga. 326, 65 S.E. 775 (1909). See also Walnut Creek Milling Co. v. Smith Bros. Co., 178 Ga. 341, 173 S.E. 95, answer conformed to, 49 Ga. App. 116, 174 S.E. 255 (1934).

When a grant was issued to a name and there was no such person, this made a case of latent ambiguity, and aliunde evidence was admissible to show who was the person meant. Bowen v. Slaughter, 24 Ga. 338, 71 Am. Dec. 135 (1858).

It is admissible to apply, by parol testimony, the description given in an instrument so as to ascertain the particular person or persons intended to be embraced in that description. Indeed, parol evidence is admissible to explain all such ambiguities. Houston v. Bryan, 78 Ga. 181, 1 S.E. 252, 6 Am. St. R. 252 (1887).

Parol evidence was admissible to show that contract for sale of "Snoflour" contemplated a grade of flour equal to another brand with which the vendee was familiar. Walnut Creek Milling Co. v. Smith Bros. Co., 178 Ga. 341, 173 S.E. 95, answer conformed to, 49 Ga. App. 116, 174 S.E. 255 (1934).

Description in lease. — If a lease contains a general descriptive phrase, the meaning of which was presumably well known to both the contracting parties, parol evidence is admissible for the purpose of applying the description to the subject matter, but any attempt to prove that at the time of the execution of the contract the parties had an oral understanding as to the meaning of such phrase would clearly violate the statute of frauds, as well as the parol evidence rule. Dorsey v. Clements, 202 Ga. 820, 44 S.E.2d 783 (1947).

Descriptions in real property transactions.

— If there is a discrepancy as to a party's name in a plat and grant, this is a patent ambiguity and explainable by parol evidence. Ferrell v. Hurst, 68 Ga. 132 (1881).

If the description in a deed is ambiguous but sufficient to furnish a key to the boundary, extrinsic evidence may be used to correctly apply the description to the true boundary intended by the parties. Miller v. Rackley, 199 Ga. 370, 34 S.E.2d 438 (1945).

When the descriptive averments contained in a deed are sufficient to furnish a key whereby the land which the grantor intended to convey may be ascertained, parol evidence which does not add to, enlarge, or in any way change the description is admissible for the purpose of identifying the conveyed land. Gainsville M.R.R. v. Tyner, 204 Ga. 535, 50 S.E.2d 108 (1948). See also Haygood v. Duncan, 204 Ga. 540, 50 S.E.2d 214 (1948).

If a property description in a written contract is ambiguous, in that it can be interpreted as referring to more than one piece of property, parol evidence is admissible to explain the ambiguity and the contract is not rendered unenforceable for vagueness. Tuggle v. Wilson, 248 Ga. 335, 282 S.E.2d 110 (1981).

Claim of title in deed. — Any ambiguities in a deed may be explained by parol, if the evidence can be applied to elucidate the claim of title. Daniels v. Cagle, 180 Ga. 853, 181 S.E. 178 (1935).

Receipts. — Parol evidence was admissible to show whether the parties intended the receipt given to the defendant by the assignee of the leased contract, to be a settlement of all future liability of the defendants for rent, or was only meant as a discharge of whatever the assignee could claim by the transfer to them, and was not to affect the rights of the lessor under a reassignment of the lease to the lessor. Bell v. Boyd & Brumby, 53 Ga. 643 (1875).

Whether a receipt of a promissory note amounts to the payment of a preexisting debt depends upon the intention of the parties. If such intention can be gathered with certainty from the papers themselves, resort need not be had to the attending circumstances. If the papers are ambiguous, parol evidence is admissible to establish intent. Hall's Self-Feeding Cotton Gin Co. v. Black, 71 Ga. 450 (1883).

Receipt in full given by the administrator de bonis non with the will annexed, to the administratrix of the deceased executor, was open to explanation in view of the parol evidence rule. Watts v. Baker, 78 Ga. 622, 3 S.E. 773 (1887).

Release. — Parol evidence is admissible to explain ambiguous language in a release. In determining the existence of an ambiguity in a release, reference is permitted only to the face of the document. Southern Stone Co. v. Singer, 665 F.2d 698 (5th Cir. 1982).

Bill of sale. — Court erred in admitting parol evidence that a "bill of sale" was not intended to transfer ownership of a boat, the bill being executed on the regular required Coast Guard form, and all language therein relating to a sale and conveyance, the other provisions merely relating to the method of payment. Peterson v. Lexington Ins. Co., 753 F.2d 1016 (11th Cir. 1985).

Construction of insurance policy is for the court, generally. Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Thrift-Mart, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 874, 285 S.E.2d 566 (1981).

Auctioneer's memorandum of sale. — Rule as to the admissibility of parol evidence to explain a patent ambiguity in a deed to land applies with equal force to an auctioneer's memorandum of the sale of land. Mohr v. Dillon, 80 Ga. 572, 5 S.E. 770 (1888); Wilson v. Coleman & Ray, 81 Ga. 297, 6 S.E. 693 (1888).

Submission to award. — Ambiguities in a submission to award which describes the subject matter of controversy are explainable by parol evidence. Riley v. Hicks, 81 Ga. 265, 7 S.E. 173 (1888).

Whether lease included in contract. — Parol evidence was admissible to explain an ambiguity as to whether the lease of a building was also included in the terms of the contract sued on. Vaughn v. Castleberry, 24 Ga. App. 496, 101 S.E. 299 (1919).

A lease ambiguous as to time may be explained by parol. Carmichael v. Brown, 97 Ga. 486, 25 S.E. 357 (1895).

If the date of an entry is uncertain because of illegibility of the handwriting, this would constitute an ambiguity, and make a jury question. Bolton v. Keys, 38 Ga. App. 573, 144 S.E. 406 (1928).

Particular phrases. — Expression, "value received," is a patent ambiguity, and the expression may be explained, and failure of consideration shown by parol. Pitts v. Allen, 72 Ga. 69 (1883); Waller v. Martin-Senour Co., 45 Ga. App. 808, 166 S.E. 53 (1932); Building Assocs. v. Crider, 141 Ga. App. 825, 234 S.E.2d 666 (1977).

One clause in a written contract providing for the payment of a certain sum "as hereafter agreed," parol evidence was admissible to explain the ambiguity, and to show not only the date but the conditions, if any, on which such payment was to be made. Morrison v. Dickey, 119 Ga. 698, 46 S.E. 863 (1904). See also Morrison v. Dickey, 122 Ga. 417, 50 S.E. 178 (1905).

Term "good cotton" was subject to parol explanation to show the term's meaning as used in the contract. Ford & Co. v. Lawson, 133 Ga. 237, 65 S.E. 444 (1909).

Determining meaning of ambiguous language. — If the language of an instrument in writing is ambiguous and may be fairly understood in more ways than one, it should be taken in the sense put upon it by the parties at the time of its execution, and the court will hear evidence as to the facts and surroundings, and decree according to the truth of the matter. Irwin v. Young, 212 Ga. 1, 90 S.E.2d 22 (1955).

Unpriced, unexecuted damages provision. — In a claim for damages resulting from delays in the performance of a construction contract, parol evidence was relevant to construe the intent of the parties to incorporate and be bound by an unexecuted contract form containing an unpriced damages provision. Atlanta Economic Dev. Corp. v. Ruby-Collins, Inc., 206 Ga. App. 434, 425 S.E.2d 673 (1992).

Parol evidence inadmissible for guaranty. — Lessor was not entitled to recover on an equipment lease guaranty because the guaranty was unenforceable since it omitted essential elements and under O.C.G.A. § 24-6-3(a), the lease could not supply the missing elements since this required consideration of parol evidence, which was inadmissible for a contract required by the statute of frauds to be in writing. Dabbs v. Key Equip. Fin., Inc., No. A10A0825, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 379 (Apr. 7, 2010).

Jury question. — As a general rule, the construction of a contract is a question for the court; but if the terms of a written instrument are ambiguous, the contract's meaning should be left to the jury. Illges v. Dexter, 77 Ga. 36 (1886).

Contracts, even when ambiguous, are to be construed by the court and no jury question is presented unless after application of applicable rules of construction an ambiguity remains. Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Thrift-Mart, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 874, 285 S.E.2d 566 (1981).

Effect of part performance. — Acceptance of the benefits and part performance of the contract by plaintiff would preclude the defendant from attacking the alleged oral portion of a contract which appeared to be an explanation of the entire contract rather than conflicting with any written provisions. Consumers Fin. Corp. v. Lamb, 217

Ga. 359, 122 S.E.2d 101 (1961).

Contract not ambiguous. — See McCann v. Glynn Lumber Co., 199 Ga. 669, 34 S.E.2d 839 (1945) (timber lease).

24-6-4. Circumstances surrounding execution of contracts.

The surrounding circumstances are always proper subjects of proof to aid in the construction of contracts. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3727; Code 1868, § 3751; Code 1873, § 3804; Code 1882, § 3804; Civil Code 1895, § 5205; Civil Code 1910, § 5792; Code 1933, § 38-505.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

When statute applies. — Law applies only if a contract is of doubtful meaning; but a plain and unambiguous contract cannot be contradicted by parol. Ward v. Campbell, 73

Ga. 97 (1884); Kellos v. Parker-Sharpe, Inc., 245 Ga. 130, 263 S.E.2d 138 (1980).

Ambiguities are explainable by the surrounding circumstances. Armistead v.

McGuire, 46 Ga. 232 (1872); National Manufacture & Stores Corp. v. Dekle, 48 Ga. App. 515, 173 S.E. 408 (1934).

When the language of the written instrument may be fairly understood in more ways than one, it should be taken in the sense put upon it by the parties at the time of its execution, and the court will hear evidence as to the facts and surroundings. National Manufacture & Stores Corp. v. Dekle, 48 Ga. App. 515, 173 S.E. 408 (1934); Irwin v. Young, 212 Ga. 1, 90 S.E.2d 22 (1955).

Circumstances accompanying making of note. — Parol evidence was admissible to show the circumstances under which notes were made, and to explain the consideration and show the year in which the consideration appearing on the face of the notes was actually advanced. Anderson v. Brown, 72 Ga. 713 (1884); Camp v. Matthews, 143 Ga. 393, 85 S.E. 196 (1915).

Admissibility of parol evidence of site plan to show nonexistence of use restriction. — In a land use restriction action, a trial court erred by failing to consider a 1997 site plan, which allowed the parties to seek to amend the use of the land at issue and future development of the land; therefore, the trial court erred in enjoining a developer from constructing condominium towers since no such use restriction existed. CPI Phipps, LLC v. 100 Park Ave. Partners, L.P., 288 Ga. App. 614, 654 S.E.2d 690 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 286 (Ga. 2008).

Improper admission. — If surrounding circumstances were improperly admitted, it was harmless error since substantially the same facts had already been established by the evidence of the plaintiff. Wells v. Gress, 118 Ga. 566, 45 S.E. 418 (1903).

24-6-5. Known usage.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

To make a proof of a custom as such proper testimony, it should appear by the proof itself that such custom is a general one, and that it is so well known and recognized within the sphere of its operation, as to be usually considered a part of all contracts made in that particular locality, in business transactions to which such custom relates. Hardeman v. English, 79 Ga. 387, 5 S.E. 70 (1887).

Custom can only be proved by word of mouth from the men engaged in the business. Wood v. Frank Graham Co., 91 Ga. App. 621, 86 S.E.2d 691 (1955).

Evidence thereof is necessarily in parol. Wood v. Frank Graham Co., 91 Ga. App. 621, 86 S.E.2d 691 (1955).

Testimony of custom as matter of fact. — If a witness is shown to have knowledge of a custom, the witness can state what it is, not as a matter of opinion or law, but as a fact. Farmers Ginnery & Mfg. Co. v. Thrasher, 144 Ga. 598, 87 S.E. 804 (1916).

Custom is inadmissible when agreement is unambiguous. — Custom or usage, while admissible to explain an ambiguous written agreement, is inadmissible if repugnant to or inconsistent with a clear, express agreement. Stamey v. Western Union Tel. Co., 92 Ga. 613, 18 S.E. 1008, 44 Am. St. R. 95 (1894).

When the intent and meaning of the parties are clear, evidence of a usage to the contrary is irrelevant and unavailing. Newark Fire Ins. Co. v. Smith, 176 Ga. 91, 167 S.E. 79 (1932); TBS v. Europe Craft Imports, Inc., 186 Ga. App. 286, 367 S.E.2d 99 (1988).

While proof of a custom is sometimes admissible to aid in the construction of a contract, such proof is not admissible when the contract is clear and unambiguous. Atlantic Fertilizer Co. v. Southern States Phosphate & Fertilizer Co., 53 Ga. App. 798, 187 S.E. 237 (1936).

Law cannot be changed. — Custom may sometimes be invoked as entering into a contract or supplying incidents, but not to change the law. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Butler, 130 Ga. 225, 60 S.E. 851, 16 L.R.A. (n.s.) 994 (1908); Happ Bros. Co. v. Hunter Mfg. & Comm'n Co., 145 Ga. 836, 90 S.E. 61 (1916).

Usage cannot make a contract when there is none nor prevent the effect of the settled rules of law. Newark Fire Ins. Co. v. Smith, 176 Ga. 91, 167 S.E. 79 (1932).

In the absence of knowledge of the existence of the custom, it cannot be said that there was any meeting of the minds on this item. Franco v. Bank of Forest Park, 118 Ga. App. 700, 165 S.E.2d 593 (1968).

If there is no evidence tending to show a contract by known and established usage, it is error to charge on known usage or custom. Craig v. Augusta Roofing & Metal Works, Inc., 78 Ga. App. 514, 51 S.E.2d 565 (1949).

Signing other party's name to contract. — It is not admissible to show that it was the custom in a particular business for one party making sales, or its agent representing it in such a transaction, to sign the name of the other party to a contract therefor, so as to bind the latter. Happ Bros. Co. v. Hunter Mfg. & Comm'n Co., 145 Ga. 836, 90 S.E. 61 (1916).

Time of performance of contract. — Usage in business as to time of performance of contract for services is admissible in suit for breach thereof. Beck v. Thompson & Taylor Spice Co., 108 Ga. 242, 33 S.E. 894 (1899).

Customs of warehousemen. — On the trial of a suit against warehousemen to recover the value of certain cotton which had been burned, and which plaintiff alleged the warehousemen had agreed to keep insured for plaintiff's benefit, but had failed to do so, proof, in their behalf, that it was their custom to insure cotton only to the extent of the advances the warehousemen had made thereon and for the warehousemen's own benefit, unless instructed by the customer to insure for full value, was primarily inadmissible; but after testimony had been allowed, without objection, in favor of plaintiff, tending to show it was the warehousemen's custom to insure cotton on which the warehousemen had made advances to its full value, such proof was properly admitted. Hardeman v. English, 79 Ga. 387, 5 S.E. 70 (1887).

If a general custom existed on the part of the warehouses in a certain municipality to insure to its full value the cotton of patrons stored with them with the necessary characteristics, patrons who stored cotton with one of such warehousemen, knowing of the custom, and relying upon the custom, can assert a duty on the part of such warehouseman to so insure one's cotton. Farmers Ginnery & Mfg. Co. v. Thrasher, 144 Ga. 598, 87 S.E. 804 (1916).

It is not necessary that a witness should be a warehouseman in order to have sufficient knowledge to render the witness competent to testify as to the existence of such usage or custom among the warehouses of a particular town or city. If a person has been accustomed to deal with such warehouses, and to deposit cotton with those warehouses, so as to know those warehouses usage or custom on that subject, the witness is competent to testify as to that usage or custom. Farmers Ginnery & Mfg. Co. v. Thrasher, 144 Ga. 598, 87 S.E. 804 (1916).

Customs of insurance companies. — It is well settled that insurers are bound to know the customs of a place where insurers transact business; and are assumed to have made contracts in reference to such customs. Todd v. German-American Ins. Co., 2 Ga. App. 789, 59 S.E. 94 (1907).

In this state, where life insurance companies deal with the assured for a time sufficient to make it their usage and custom to give notice to the assured of the date when the premiums fall due, and fail to give notice thereof, the policy will not be forfeited, if, within a period so reasonably short as to show an intent to continue one's policy, the assured take steps to inquire and pay the premium. Grant v. Alabama Gold Life Ins. Co., 76 Ga. 575 (1886).

Mitchell*, 129 Ga. App. 192, 198 S.E.2d 919 (1973); Puritan Mills, Inc. v. Pickering Constr. Co., 152 Ga. App. 309, 262 S.E.2d 586 (1979).

Discharge of Contract

Plea of accord and satisfaction may be supported by parol evidence that the notes sued on were paid in full and satisfied by the surrender of the property described in the mortgage deed (given to secure the debt) in full and complete satisfaction of the debt; that the owner and holder of the note accepted the property in settlement of the notes sued on; and that the settlement was beneficial to the then owners and the holders of the notes, in that it enabled the owners to obtain property without the expense of foreclosure. Butts v. Maryland Cas. Co., 52 Ga. App. 838, 184 S.E. 774 (1936).

Subsequent Agreement

Admissible testimony generally. — When there is strong presumptive evidence that, subsequently to the execution of a written contract, the parties agreed orally upon a new contract, which was a modification of the former, testimony may be received of negotiations and conversations between these parties previous to the written contract for the purpose of throwing light upon, and showing more clearly, the nature and character of the subsequent agreement. Collins v. Lester, 16 Ga. 410 (1954). See also Cartright v. Clopton, 25 Ga. 85 (1858).

Agreement must be based on valuable consideration. — While parol evidence is admissible to prove a new and distinct agreement subsequent to the original written contract in reference to the same subject matter, such new agreement must be based upon a valuable consideration. Phelps v. Belle Isle,

Agreement must embody essentials of new contract. Phelps v. Belle Isle, 29 Ga. App. 571, 116 S.E. 217 (1923); Guthrie v. Rowan, 34 Ga. App. 671, 131 S.E. 93 (1925).

All previous verbal negotiations respecting a sale are merged in the subsequently written contract, and it is not permissible to prove a prior or contemporaneous parol agreement which has the effect of varying the terms of the written contract. Cottle v. Tomlinson, 192 Ga. 704, 16 S.E.2d 555 (1941).

Agreement to give collateral security. — A parol agreement of parties subsequent to the execution of a contract of sale that the purchaser would turn over to the vendor a certain paper as collateral security is admissible. Loveless v. Bridges, 136 Ga. 338, 71 S.E. 166 (1911).

Agreement as to time of delivery. — When a written contract for the purchase and sale of goods fixed no time for performance, it will be construed as implying that delivery will be made and accepted within a reasonable time, but parol evidence is admissible to prove a new and distinct subsequent agreement, mutually acted upon, that the deliveries will be made in installments at certain stated intervals. Breman v. Rodbell, 31 Ga. App. 358, 120 S.E. 697 (1923).

24-6-7. Proof of mistake in deed or written contract.

Parol evidence is admissible to prove a mistake in a deed or any other contract required by law to be in writing. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3051; Code 1868, § 3063; Code 1873, § 3118; Code 1882, § 3118; Civil Code 1895, § 3975; Civil Code 1910, § 4572; Code 1933, § 38-510.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general. — If the description in a deed is unambiguous, extrinsic evidence cannot be resorted to, except for the purpose of reforming the deed so as to make the deed express the real intention of the parties and correct a mutual mistake of fact. Miller v. Rackley, 199 Ga. 370, 34 S.E.2d 438 (1945).

Resort to parol evidence is necessary to reform an instrument. — Written instrument is evidence of what the parties intend to do; but when a party seeks information of an instrument, the instrument is not the best evidence in such controversy. The very purpose of resorting to parol evidence is to contradict the instrument. Nelson v. Spence, 129 Ga. 35, 58 S.E. 697 (1907); Gaulding v. Baker, 9 Ga. App. 578, 71 S.E. 1018 (1911); Green v. Johnson, 153 Ga. 738, 113 S.E. 402 (1922); Sapp v. Ritch, 169 Ga. 33, 149 S.E. 636 (1929); *Head v. Because the decedent's offspring sought reformation of the option contract entered into with the decedent on the basis of mutual mistake of fact due to a scrivener's error mistakenly describing the property to be sold, parol evidence of the real terms of the agreement was admissible. Morris v. Morris, 282 Ga. App. 127, 637 S.E.2d 838 (2006).

Parol evidence admissible. — Grant of summary judgment to a corporation was vacated as reformation was a possible remedy against a corporation since an owner's warranty deed to a buyer contained a mistaken descriptor; the owner could seek reformation against the corporation as the corporation bought the property from the buyer under the same mistake and parol evidence was admissible in such a reformation action, even though the owner and the corporation were never parties to the same transaction. Amin v. Guruom, Inc., 280 Ga. 873, 635 S.E.2d 105 (2006).

24-6-8. Original or subsequent voidness of writing.

Parol evidence shall be admissible to show that a writing either was originally void or subsequently became so. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3725; Code 1868, § 3749; Code 1873, § 3802; Code 1882, § 3802; Civil Code 1895, § 5203; Civil Code 1910, § 5790; Code 1933, § 38-503.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Failure of consideration. — It may be shown that a note sued on was in fact without legal consideration of any kind, and that the actual basis of the undertaking was wholly illegal and the resultant promise absolutely void. Simmons v. International Harvester Co. of Am., 22 Ga. App. 358, 96 S.E. 9 (1918). See also Miller v. Whitesburg Banking Co., 58 Ga. App. 84, 197 S.E. 906 (1938); S. & S. Bldrs., Inc. v. Equitable Inv. Corp., 219 Ga. 557, 134 S.E.2d 777 (1964).

A writing which undertakes to contract about a fictitious thing, even though it be denominated a consideration in the writing is in fact without consideration, is void, and the fact that it is void may be shown by parol under the rule of evidence. Jewell v. Norrell, 66 Ga. App. 11, 16 S.E.2d 797 (1941).

When the promise as stated in the writing is admitted, the promisor can show that there was no consideration or that there was a consideration which has failed wholly or in part, and therefore the promise is no longer supported, and must fail either in whole or in part, according to the facts. First Nat'l Bank v. Harrison, 408 F. Supp. 137 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 529 F.2d 1350 (5th Cir. 1976).

The consideration of a contract may be always inquired into in order to show that the promise is no longer binding according to its tenor; but in inquiring into the consideration the promisor cannot deny that the promisor made the promise evidenced by the writing. First Nat'l Bank v. Harrison, 408 F. Supp. 137 (N.D. Ga. 1975), aff'd, 529 F.2d 1350 (5th Cir. 1976).

Different consideration may be shown by parol evidence. Harris v. Tisereau, 52 Ga. 153 (1874).

Nonperformance of condition precedent. — Written document may by parol or other extrinsic evidence be shown not to be a contract at all because of the nonperformance of a condition precedent as to which the writing is silent. Rudder v. Belle Isle, 46 Ga. App. 336, 167 S.E. 753 (1933).

Violation of public policy. — When a contract apparently valid on the contract's face is attacked on the ground that the contract was entered into in violation of public policy, a court, when called upon to approve such a contract, will closely examine the terms of the contract and the circumstances under which the contract was entered into, before permitting the agreement to be made the judgment of the court. Beverly v. Beverly, 209 Ga. 468, 74 S.E.2d 89 (1953); Funderburk v. Funderburk, 229 Ga. 457, 192 S.E.2d 262 (1972).

Fraud. — Parol evidence is admissible to show that a writing was void on account of fraud. Hinkle v. Hixon, 154 Ga. 193, 113 S.E. 805 (1922); Johnson v. Sherrer, 197 Ga. 392, 29 S.E.2d 581 (1944); S. & S. Bldrs., Inc. v. Equitable Inv. Corp., 219 Ga. 557, 134 S.E.2d 777 (1964); Hinson v. Hinson, 221 Ga. 291, 144 S.E.2d 381 (1965); Cone Mills Corp. v. A.G. Estes, Inc., 399 F. Supp. 938 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Lewis v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 139 Ga. App. 855, 229 S.E.2d 765 (1976); Thompson v. Wilkins, 143 Ga. App. 739, 240 S.E.2d 183 (1977).

Trial court erred by granting summary judgment to a child in a suit brought by a sibling seeking a determination that the sibling was the sole beneficiary of their parent's life insurance policy as the sibling sufficiently alleged fraud and/or forgery with regard to a second beneficiary designation form allegedly signed by the parent. As such, the trial court should have permitted the sibling to introduce two affidavits that supported the sibling's allegations that the second beneficiary designation form was void. Weatherly v. Weatherly, 292 Ga. App. 879, 665 S.E.2d 922 (2008).

Promise by bank not to enforce promissory note. — There is no confidential relationship between a bank and a customer borrowing funds and therefore an oral agreement not to enforce a promissory note, which is a contract in writing, is not a type of fraud constituting an exception to the parol evidence rule. Boatman v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 155 Ga. App. 848, 273 S.E.2d 190 (1980).

Colorable scheme between husband and wife. — If a wife did not in fact purchase and was not to receive the machinery under the contract sued on, but the whole transaction was merely a colorable scheme or device by which the wife was induced by the plaintiff to assume the previous debt of the husband, without any consideration flowing to her, she would have the right to repudiate the entire illegal and void transaction, no matter by what device its true inwardness and purpose had been concealed. Simmons v. International Harvester Co. of Am., 22 Ga. App. 358, 96 S.E. 9 (1918).

Evidence that party signed blank paper. — Evidence tending to prove that a party only signed a blank sheet of paper, instead of signing a written and printed contract, was admissible. Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Butler, 139 Ga. 816, 78 S.E. 244 (1913).

Contract to evade usury, penalty, or forfeiture. — Parol evidence was admissible to show the circumstances attending the execution of papers and the sayings of the parties at the time, for the purpose of ascertaining their intention as to a shipment of the cotton, and enabling a jury to determine whether the contract of shipment was a device to evade the law relating to usury. Dwelle & Daniel v. Blackwood, 106 Ga. 486, 32 S.E. 593 (1899).

While a valid written contract cannot be contradicted or varied by parol, it is competent by such evidence to show that the writing is but a cover for usury, penalty, or forfeiture. Lytle v. Scottish Am. Mtg. Co., 122 Ga. 458, 50 S.E. 402 (1905).

What is called rent may be shown to have been really a part of the purchase money, or a device to obtain a penalty. Lytle v. Scottish Am. Mtg. Co., 122 Ga. 458, 50 S.E. 402 (1905).

It is always permissible to show by parol evidence that a paper is but a cover for usury, penalty, forfeiture, or other illegal advantage to one of the parties. For if the law did not sedulously disregard form and seek for substance, nothing would be easier than its evasion by giving innocent names to prohibited acts. Flood v. Empire Inv. Co., 35 Ga. App. 266, 133 S.E. 60 (1926).

24-6-9. Explanation or denial of receipts.

Receipts for money are always only prima-facie evidence of payment and may be denied or explained by parol. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3730; Code 1868, § 3754; Code 1873, § 3807; Code 1882, § 3807; Civil Code 1895, § 5208; Civil Code 1910, § 5795; Code 1933, § 38-508.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Definition. — A receipt is a written admission or acknowledgment of payment or delivery. It is not required by law to be in a particular form. Crider v. City Supply Co., 16 Ga. App. 377, 85 S.E. 350 (1915).

A receipt is not a contract, but merely an admission in writing of the fact of payment or other settlement between debtor and creditor. Hamlin v. Lupo, 24 Ga. App. 408, 101 S.E. 5 (1919).

Exception to general rule. — Receipt for money mentioned in this statute is, as a general rule, an exception to the principle that parol evidence is inadmissible to explain or contradict a writing. Dunagan v. Dunagan, 38 Ga. 554 (1868); Jewell v. Norrell, 66 Ga. App. 11, 16 S.E.2d 797 (1941) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-6-9).

Unless receipt is also contract. — See Dunagan v. Dunagan, 38 Ga. 554 (1868).

If a receipt is a contract and not simply a receipt, there is no reason why the receipt should be susceptible of attack or explanation by parol more than any other contract. Jewell v. Norrell, 66 Ga. App. 11, 16 S.E.2d 797 (1941).

No receipt is conclusive evidence, and evidence may be introduced to show the receipt does not correctly express the truth of the case. Parker v. Wellons, 43 Ga. App. 721, 160 S.E. 109 (1931).

Receipt may be explained. — It was held not error to permit the maker of a receipt in evidence to explain the items in the receipt, or to cast upon the various amounts and testify to the sum total for which the receipt was given. Bigham v. Coleman, 71 Ga. 176 (1883).

Defendant may show that the defendant received less on certain promissory notes made by the defendant the receipt shows. New England Mtg. Sec. Co. v. Gay, 33 F. 636 (S.D. Ga. 1888), dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, 145 U.S. 123, 12 S. Ct. 815, 36 L. Ed. 646 (1892).

On an action on an open account, the trial court did not violate the parol evidence rule by admitting evidence that explained a "paid" notation on invoices. An invoice for goods delivered on open account was not "a valid written instrument" as that term was used in O.C.G.A. § 24-6-1; furthermore, O.C.G.A. § 24-6-9 specifically provided that receipts for money were always only prima facie evidence of payment and could be denied or explained by parol. Wheeler v. IDN-Armstrong's, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 253, 653 S.E.2d 835 (2007).

Combination receipt and contract. — Written instrument may sometimes partake of the nature of both a receipt and a contract. Insofar as it is merely a receipt, this statute is applicable; but insofar as it is a contract, it cannot be changed, modified, or have its terms enlarged by parol evidence. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Smith, 129 Ga. 558, 59 S.E. 215 (1907); Graham v. Peacock, 131 Ga. 785, 63 S.E. 348 (1909). See also Riverside Milling & Power Co. v. Bank of Cartersville, 141 Ga. 578, 81 S.E. 892 (1914) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-6-9).

Acknowledgment in form of affidavit. — Fact that an acknowledgment of payment is in the form of an affidavit does not render the affidavit inadmissible when offered in evidence as a receipt. Crider v. City Supply Co., 16 Ga. App. 377, 85 S.E. 350 (1915).

Letter and a reply amounting to nothing more than a receipt is explainable by parol evidence. Halls Self-Feeding Cotton Gin Co. v. Black, 71 Ga. 450 (1883).

Ancient receipt. — When a receipt, as any other written instrument, is more than 30 years old, the receipt's execution need not be proved to admit the receipt in evidence, although the subscribing witness may be living. Settle v. Alison, 8 Ga. 201, 52 Am. Dec. 393 (1850).

Administrator's receipt. — Receipt in full given by the administrator de bonis non with the will annexed, to the administratrix of the deceased executor, was open to explanation. Watts v. Baker, 78 Ga. 622, 3 S.E. 773 (1887).

Receipts by wards to guardian. — Receipts in full by wards to their guardian, which, in express terms, discharge the guardian from all liability, may be explained by parol evidence. Alexander v. Alexander, 46 Ga. 283 (1872).

Attorney's receipts. — When an attorney gave a receipt for a note to collect, in which the note is described, but omitting the fact that the note was endorsed in an action for damages, it was competent to prove by parol, the fact of the indorsement. Cox v. Sullivan, 7 Ga. 144, 50 Am. Dec. 386 (1849); Barclay v. Hopkins, 59 Ga. 562 (1877).

Recital in lease that rent paid. — When a written lease states that the rent is a certain amount and contains a mere recital that it is paid, it is permissible to show by parol testimony that only a part of the rent was paid at the execution of the agreement and that the balance is still unpaid. Google v. York, 38 Ga. App. 62, 142 S.E. 562 (1928).

Words in a release placed upon a recorded security instrument importing payment of the secured indebtedness are not a contract but constitute a receipt, or evidence of payment of money, and can be contradicted by parol evidence. Security Fin. Corp. v. Blackwood, 111 Ga. App. 850, 143 S.E.2d 515 (1965).

Parol agreement at variance with contract as to time of payment. — When a contract calls for the payment of money at a certain time, evidence of a parol agreement at variance with the writing as to such matter is not admissible. Google v. York, 38 Ga. App. 62, 142 S.E. 562 (1928).

Effect of accepting incorrect receipt. — When a passenger accepts an incorrect receipt for fare paid, the passenger is not estopped from asserting that the passenger paid a different amount. Atlantic C.L.R.R. v. Thomas, 14 Ga. App. 619, 82 S.E. 299 (1914).

Province of jury to disregard receipt. — If an explanation given by authority of the law is satisfactory, the receipt may be disregarded by the jury. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Blalock, 8 Ga. App. 44, 68 S.E. 743 (1910).

As receipts for money are only prima facie evidence of payment and may be denied or explained by parol, if an explanation is given, the existence of the receipt may be disregarded by the trier of fact. Meadows v. Phillips, 188 Ga. App. 377, 373 S.E.2d 27 (1988).

Instructions. — Court should instruct the jury, in addition to the statutory language, that it is a question for the jury to say whether or not the party's evidence sufficiently explained the receipts. McJenkin Ins. & Realty Co. v. Thompson, 79 Ga. App. 473, 54 S.E.2d 336 (1949).

O.C.G.A. § 24-6-9 was applied in the following cases. — See Newsom v. Reynolds Chevrolet Co., 43 Ga. App. 376, 158 S.E. 763 (1931) (recital in written contract of sale of personalty concerning purchase-money); Greeson v. Farmers' & Merchants' Bank, 50 Ga. App. 566, 179 S.E. 191 (1935) (deposit slip).

24-6-10. Explanation of blank endorsements.

Blank endorsements of negotiable paper may always be explained between the parties themselves or those taking with notice of dishonor or of the actual facts of such endorsements. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3731; Code 1868, § 3755; Code 1873, § 3808; Code 1882, § 3808; Civil Code 1895, § 5209; Civil Code 1910, § 5796; Code 1933, § 38-509.)

an endorsement unless instrument clearly indicates that signature was made in some other capacity, § 11-3-402.

Only blank endorsements affected by statute. — Law of blank endorsements changes the rule that even a blank endorsement was not subject to be modified in the endorsement's legal effect by parol evidence, but the law does not expose any other endorsements to like modification. Meador v. Dollar Sav. Bank, 56 Ga. 605 (1876); Jones v. Commercial Credit Co., 52 Ga. App. 796, 184 S.E. 652 (1936).

Application to parties or those taking with notice. — As between the parties themselves, or those taking with notice of dishonor or of the actual facts of the endorsement, parol evidence is admissible to explain the endorsement. Pickett v. Bank of Ellijay, 182 Ga. 540, 186 S.E. 426, answer conformed to, 53 Ga. App. 607, 186 S.E. 746 (1936); Hopkins Auto. Equip. Co. v. Lyon, 59 Ga. App. 468, 1 S.E.2d 460 (1939). See also Massell v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 57 Ga. App. 460, 196 S.E. 115 (1938).

But not to innocent third parties. — Law is plain and emphatic that a blank endorsement may be explained by parol, except as against subsequent holders for value, bona fide and without notice. McMillan v. Fourth Nat'l Bank, 17 Ga. App. 590, 87 S.E. 843 (1916).

Law has application between the parties, or those taking with notice of dishonor, or of the actual facts of such endorsement, and has no application to the rights of third parties. Pickett v. Bank of Ellijay, 182 Ga. 540, 186 S.E. 426, answer conformed to, 53 Ga. App. 607, 186 S.E. 746 (1936).

As against a third party, the holder of the note before maturity, for value, and without notice of dishonor or of the actual facts of the endorsement, parol evidence is not admissible to contradict or explain the capacity in which such written endorsement was signed, but the construction thereof is for the court. Guaranty Mtg. Co. v. National Life Ins. Co., 55 Ga. App. 104, 189 S.E. 603 (1936), aff'd, 184 Ga. 644, 192 S.E. 298 (1937). See also Hopkins Auto. Equip. Co. v. Lyon, 59 Ga. App. 468, 1 S.E.2d 460 (1939).

Endorsements within statute. — This rule is not confined to technical endorsements, i.e., endorsements essential to transfer of title, but extends to endorsements in the broader sense which are irregular and unnecessary to pass title. Atkinson v. Bennett, 103 Ga. 508, 30 S.E. 599 (1898).

This rule is not confined merely to blank endorsements in the strict sense, as where the endorser writes only the endorser's name upon the negotiable instrument; the rule relates to all endorsements which are not full or complete. McMillan v. Fourth Nat'l Bank, 17 Ga. App. 590, 87 S.E. 843 (1916); Procter v. Royster Guano Co., 21 Ga. App. 617, 94 S.E. 821 (1918); Bowden v. Owens, 33 Ga. App. 700, 127 S.E. 664 (1925).

Agreement to endorse. — An agreement to endorse may be construed as a contract of guarantee. Georgia Cas. Co. v. Dixie Trust & Sec. Co., 23 Ga. App. 447, 98 S.E. 414 (1919).

Endorsement in full. — If an endorsement in blank had been partially completed by a subsequent endorser writing the words, “without recourse,” and signing the endorser’s name, it was not an endorsement in full, and parol evidence was admissible. West Yellow Pine Co. v. Kendrick, 9 Ga. App. 350, 71 S.E. 504 (1911).

When the endorsement is one “in full,” though followed by the words “without recourse,” parol evidence is not admissible to explain any unambiguous terms. Odom Realty Co. v. Central Trust Co., 22 Ga. App. 711, 97 S.E. 116 (1918).

Endorsement for special purpose. — It may be shown by parol evidence that the endorsement of a note was made for a special purpose. Carhart Bros. & Co. v. Wynn, 22 Ga. 24 (1857).

Transfer for collection. — When the payee of a note, payable to the payee or order, transfers the note in writing to a third person, without recourse, and signs the transfer, parol evidence is admissible, at the instance of the payee or the payee’s executors to show that such transfer was made for collection. This was the rule at common law; and the statute was not intended to abrogate this principle of the common law, the purpose of the statute being, not to narrow the admission of parol evidence when it was permissible by common law, but to extend the admission of such evidence to the explanation of endorsements in blank, which was not permissible by that law. Sanders v. Ayers, 155 Ga. 630, 117 S.E. 651 (1923). See also Carhart Bros. & Co. v. Wynn, 22 Ga. 24 (1857).

Accommodation endorsements. — Law applies to accommodation endorsements. Taff v. Larey, 29 Ga. App. 631, 116 S.E. 866 (1923).

An accommodation endorser has the right to stipulate the character of the liability which the endorser assumes in signing a particular paper. Taff v. Larey, 29 Ga. App. 631, 116 S.E. 866 (1923).

Endorsements to pass title merely. — Parol evidence is, in any given instance, admissible to show that such an endorsement upon a promissory note was made simply to pass title and not to create liability in the endorser. Bryan v. Windsor, 99 Ga. 176, 25 S.E. 268 (1896); Cowart Co. v. Sheffield, 18 Ga. App. 512, 89 S.E. 1101

(1916). See also Stapler v. Burns, 43 Ga. 382 (1871); Galceran v. Noble, 66 Ga. 367 (1881) (suit by plaintiff who took note after dishonor).

In a suit by the payee of a promissory note signed in the name of a corporation as maker, a plea by certain individuals who had signed their names in blank upon the back of the note, to the effect that their names were so placed upon the instrument “only for the purpose of perfecting title and passing title, and upon the distinct understanding that they were not to be held liable thereon in any way,” does not set up a good defense. Proctor v. Royster Guano Co., 21 Ga. App. 617, 94 S.E. 821 (1918).

Assuming that the contract of suretyship or accommodation endorsement sued on should be taken as having been signed in blank, a plea merely denying all liability thereunder, without showing any bona fide reason why the endorsement was entered for a purpose other than that of incurring liability, cannot be taken as an effort to explain the true nature and intent of the contract, as is permitted by this statute, and does not set up a good defense. Pearce v. Swift & Co. Fertilizer Works, 21 Ga. App. 622, 94 S.E. 915 (1918). See also Proctor v. Royster Guano Co., 21 Ga. App. 617, 94 S.E. 821 (1918) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-6-10).

Capacity of signers. — When a promissory note is upon the note’s face payable to the order of the payee at a chartered bank, though reading “we promise to pay,” etc., and signed by one person only, the prima facie import of an endorsement thereon in blank by a third person is that such endorser undertakes to be liable as a second endorser, and not as a joint maker. The true intent of the parties, however, in an action by the payee upon the instrument, is open to explanation by parol evidence. Neal & Co. v. Wilson, 79 Ga. 736, 5 S.E. 54 (1887).

Party signing negotiable paper in blank may show by parol that the party is a surety only. Sibley v. American Exch. Nat’l Bank, 97 Ga. 126, 25 S.E. 470 (1895).

When several parties are sued on a check, one as maker and the others as endorsers, the payee can show by parol that those signing apparently as endorsers are in fact sureties or joint makers. James v. Calder, 7 Ga. App. 707, 67 S.E. 1125 (1910).

Evidence could not be introduced, as against third persons, to show a different capacity, but could be introduced to show as between the immediate parties, an agreement that the person signing should be bound in a capacity different from that shown by the instrument. Massell v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 57 Ga. App. 460, 196 S.E. 115 (1938).

Showing agency of drawer. — Agency of the drawer and knowledge by the payee and endorsee cannot be shown by parol in defense to a suit on a draft. Bedell v. Scarlett, 75 Ga. 56 (1885).

Endorsement of mortgage note. — Blank endorsement of a mortgage note may be explained by parol to show an agreement that an indebtedness of the mortgagee was to be first satisfied out of the mortgaged property. Willingham & Cone v. Huguenin, 129 Ga. 835, 60 S.E. 186 (1908).

Cited in Eppens, Smith & Weimann v. Forbes & Co., 82 Ga. 748, 9 S.E. 723 (1889); Atkinson v. Bennett, 103 Ga. 508, 30 S.E. 599 (1898); Winnebago Nat'l Bank v. Woodliff, 145 Ga. 239, 88 S.E. 973 (1916); Bowden v. Owens, 33 Ga. App. 700, 127 S.E. 664 (1925); Cantrell v. Byars, 66 Ga. App. 672, 19 S.E.2d 44 (1942); Jordan v. Daniel, 94 Ga. ARTICLE 1 24-7-1. Production of writing and proof of execution required generally.

Generally, an original writing shall be produced and its execution proved. Exceptions are prescribed by law. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3754; Code 1868, § 3778; Code 1873, § 3831; Code 1882, § 3831; Civil Code 1895, § 5239; Civil Code 1910, § 5828; Code 1933, § 38-701.)

ANALYSIS

PROOF OF AUTHENTICITY OF WRITING

In general. — Law applies only where the contents of the missing writing are in issue. Springer v. State, 238 Ga. 81, 230 S.E.2d 883 (1976); Pryor v. State, 238 Ga. 698, 234 S.E.2d 918, overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 935, 98 S. Ct. 422, 54 L. Ed. 2d 294 (1977).

Document in possession of opposing party. — When the document was in the defendant's possession, a witness for the plaintiff in fi. fa. was not allowed to testify as to the witness's examination of the document since the document itself is the best evidence. Hawes v. Red Oak Hauling Co., 116 Ga. App. 302, 157 S.E.2d 38 (1967).

Copies. — Original papers, if to be procured, are always better evidence than copies; and the latter are allowed only from necessity or convenience. Dobbs v. Justices of Inferior Court, 17 Ga. 624 (1855).

Copies made in same operation. — Court did not err in admitting in evidence copies or duplicate licenses for operation of hotel when the city clerk testified that the duplicate documents were made at the same time as the originals, with the same operation. Hannifin v. Wolpert, 56 Ga. App. 466, 193 S.E. 81 (1937).

Alterations in original writing. — It is presumed, absent a contrary showing, or a denial by the signer, that alterations, erasures, or corrections in a writing were made prior to the signing of the writing. Kingston v. State, 127 Ga. App. 660, 194 S.E.2d 675 (1972).

Writings admitted as evidence. — When a plea of guilty from a prior criminal case is admitted in a subsequent civil case for impeachment, the plea was not admitted as a court paper but as a private writing. Webb v. May, 91 Ga. App. 437, 85 S.E.2d 641 (1955).

Admission of prejudicial hearsay testimony held harmless error. — Because the trial court's admission of prejudicial hearsay testimony regarding the victim's ministry ordination certificates was harmless error, given the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, a voluntary manslaughter conviction, as a lesser-included offense of murder, was upheld on appeal. Smith v. State, 283 Ga. App. 722, 642 S.E.2d 399 (2007).

Lease need not be introduced in action for rent. — When the landlord's testimony that the tenant has not paid the tenant's rent as agreed under the lease is based on the tenant's personal knowledge, this is primary evidence and there is no reason why the original writing need be produced. McKinnon v. Shoemaker, 166 Ga. App. 231, 303 S.E.2d 770 (1983).

Cited in Burt v. Gooch, 37 Ga. App. 301, 139 S.E. 912 (1927); A.B. & C.R.R. Benefit Ass'n v. South, 49 Ga. App. 659, 175 S.E. 924 (1934); Brewer v. Commercial Credit Co., 66 Ga. App. 138, 17 S.E.2d 243 (1941); Goettee v. Carlyle, 68 Ga. App. 288, 22 S.E.2d 854 (1942); Stow v. Hargrove, 203 Ga. 735, 48 S.E.2d 454 (1948); Warren v. Gray, 90 Ga. App. 398, 83 S.E.2d 86 (1954); State Hwy. Dep't v. Alexander, 222 Ga. 354, 149 S.E.2d 788 (1966); American San. Servs., Inc. v. EDM of Tex., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 662, 229 S.E.2d 136 (1976); Dillard v. State, 147 Ga. App. 587, 249 S.E.2d 640 (1978); Rollins, Inc. v. Tennant Co., 170 Ga. App. 641, 317 S.E.2d 659 (1984); Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984).

Kinds of proof acceptable. — Execution of a deed may be proven by: (1) its ancientness and self-contained evidence of genuineness; (2) by admission of the opposite party; (3) by registration according to law; and (4) by witnesses. Gibson v. Causey, 223 Ga. 135, 153 S.E.2d 704 (1967).

Ancient documents. — Deed more than 30 years old, having the appearance of genuineness on inspection, and coming from the proper custody, if possession had been consistent therewith, is admissible in evidence without proving the deed's execution. McArthur v. Morrison, 107 Ga. 796, 34 S.E. 205 (1899).

Letter received in mail. — Letter received through the mail is not admissible in evidence when offered by the recipient, without proof of the letter's authenticity, but proof of the letter's execution may be shown by circumstantial evidence. Deaderick v. Deaderick, 182 Ga. 96, 185 S.E. 89 (1936).

Email not properly authenticated. — In a child molestation prosecution, an email that the defendant claimed the victim sent, which the defendant sought to introduce for impeachment, was properly excluded. The victim denied writing the email, and the only proof the defendant offered to authenticate the email was the fact that the email came from the victim's email address, which did not prove the email's genuineness. Hollie v. State, 298 Ga. App. 1, 679 S.E.2d 47 (2009).

Admission of opposite party. — When the plaintiff admitted the execution of the deed offered in evidence by the defendant, further proof of execution is unnecessary. Ward-Truitt Co. v. Nicholson, 23 Ga. App. 672, 99 S.E. 153 (1919).

Circumstantial evidence. — Genuineness of a writing may be proved by circumstantial evidence. State v. Smith, 246 Ga. 129, 269 S.E.2d 21 (1980).

Possession combined with other circumstances required. — While possession alone is insufficient to establish a prima facie showing of authenticity, possession, together with other circumstances, may meet the burden. Martin v. State, 135 Ga. App. 4, 217 S.E.2d 312 (1975); State v. Smith, 246 Ga. 129, 269 S.E.2d 21 (1980); Hull v. State, 265 Ga. 757, 462 S.E.2d 596 (1995).

Burden of proof. — Burden of proving the genuineness of a writing rests upon the party introducing the writing. Anderson v. Cuthbert, 103 Ga. 767, 30 S.E. 244 (1898); State v. Smith, 246 Ga. 129, 269 S.E.2d 21 (1980).

Laying a proper foundation. — When a writing other than an original is introduced into evidence, a proper foundation must be laid including evidence that the original is not available and that the evidence being introduced is a fair and correct representation of what it purports to show. Matthews & Son v. Richards, 13 Ga. App. 412, 79 S.E. 227 (1913), later appeal, 19 Ga. App. 489, 91 S.E. 914 (1917); Ward-Truitt Co. v. Nicholson, 23 Ga. App. 672, 99 S.E. 153 (1919); Swiney v. State Hwy. Dep't, 116 Ga. App. 667, 158 S.E.2d 321 (1967).

24-7-2. When material alterations to be explained.

If a paper appears to have been altered materially, unless it is the paper sued on and no plea of non est factum is filed, the party offering it in evidence shall explain the alteration unless the paper comes from the custody of the opposite party. GENERAL CONSIDERATION BURDEN OF PROOF

Law does not apply to registered deeds. Gilmer v. Harrison, 146 Ga. 721, 92 S.E. 67 (1917).

Entering alterations in record. — If an instrument offered in evidence is objected to on account of interlineations, what the interlineations were should be entered in the record. Reinhart v. Miller, 22 Ga. 402, 68 Am. Dec. 506 (1857).

Failure to object to altered writing. — When a writing is introduced in evidence it is not necessary to submit proof of nor to explain alterations without an objection under oath. Tedlie v. Dill, 2 Ga. 128 (1847); May v. Sorrell, 153 Ga. 47, 111 S.E. 810 (1922).

Materiality of an alteration is a question of law for the court. Winkles v. Guenther & Co., 98 Ga. 472, 25 S.E. 527 (1896).

Explanation is question for jury. — When the genuineness of the instrument is denied under oath, the time when, and the intention with which, a change was made in the instrument, are questions for a jury. Reinhart v. Miller, 22 Ga. 402, 68 Am. Dec. 506 (1857); Winkles v. Guenther & Co., 98 Ga. 472, 25 S.E. 527 (1896).

Ga. App. 375, 422 S.E.2d 68 (1992).

Burden of Proof

Alterations presumed to precede execution. — It is presumed, absent a contrary showing, or a denial by the signer, that alterations, erasures, or corrections in a writing were made prior to the signing of the writing. Craig v. National City Bank, 26 Ga. App. 128, 105 S.E. 632 (1921); Kingston v. State, 127 Ga. App. 660, 194 S.E.2d 675 (1972).

Overcoming presumption of valid alterations. — Presumption that alterations were made before execution is overcome when a special plea of non est factum under oath is entered, admitting the signing of the paper, but plainly and distinctly attacking the instrument as having been fraudulently and materially altered. Craig v. National City Bank, 26 Ga. App. 128, 105 S.E. 632 (1921).

Burden is on party relying on alterations. — Plea of non est factum forces the plaintiff to prove the execution of the altered writing sued on but when the defendant by a plea of non est factum sets up material alterations not apparent on the face of the writing the defendant has the burden to prove that the document sued on is materially different from the writing signed. Winkles v. Guenther & Co., 98 Ga. 472, 25 S.E. 527 (1896); Craig v. National City Bank, 26 Ga. App. 128, 105 S.E. 632 (1921).

ANALYSIS

WRITINGS PRODUCED UNDER NOTICE

SPECIFIC WRITINGS PRODUCED UNDER NOTICE

General Consideration

Writing with subscribing witnesses. — When a writing was offered in evidence, to which there was a subscribing witness, the latter must be produced in all cases, except in the five instances specified in former Civil Code 1910, § 5833 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-4), and those named in former Civil Code 1910, § 5832 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-3). Lamb v. Empire Life Ins. Co., 143 Ga. 180, 84 S.E. 439 (1915).

Reliance on writing creates presumption of validity. — Reason of this statute is founded in the fact that when a paper is drawn out from the possession of a party claiming title or other benefit under the paper, that the presumption of the law is that one relies upon its genuineness and validity, and, therefore, the producing dispenses with the proof. Campbell v. Roberts, 66 Ga. 733 (1881) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-3).

Failure to prove execution. — There was no error in admitting in evidence a document sued on, over the objection that the document's execution had not been sufficiently shown at the time, notwithstanding the general rule that "where the execution of a note is denied by a plea of non est factum, the note will not be received until some extrinsic evidence of its execution has been submitted." Mendel v. Converse & Co., 30 Ga. App. 549, 118 S.E. 586 (1923).

Claim of benefit. — To hold a paper as a receipt or voucher is a sufficient claim of benefit under it to meet the requirements of law. Louisville & N.R.R. v. Yudelson, 135 Ga. 731, 70 S.E. 576 (1911).

Writings Produced Under Notice

Objection to writing produced under notice. — Production under notice provided by law does not affect the right of the party against whom the paper is offered to object to the paper's introduction in evidence on account of irrelevancy, or because of the paper's secondary nature. Fraternal Relief Ass'n v. Edwards, 9 Ga. App. 43, 70 S.E. 265 (1911); Mendel v. Converse & Co., 30 Ga. App. 549, 118 S.E. 586 (1923).

Use at subsequent trials. — While writings produced on notice and inspected will thereby become evidence for the producing party without further proof on all trials of the same case, this will not suffice on the trial of a subsequent case, though brought for the same cause of action. Wooten & Co. v. Nall, 18 Ga. 509 (1855); Cushman v. Coleman, 92 Ga. 772, 19 S.E. 46 (1894).

Specific Writings Produced Under Notice

Irrelevant paper. — Production of a paper, upon notice that is not relevant to the issue, but which recites another paper that is pertinent and material, will not overcome the necessity of proof of execution of the latter paper that is material. Doe v. Guthry, 32 Ga. 307 (1861).

Book of ordinances. — In a suit against a municipality to enjoin the enforcement of an ordinance, where the plaintiff serves the municipality with notice to produce its book of ordinances, and the book is produced under notice, inspected by the plaintiff, and so much of the book as contains a certain ordinance is offered in evidence by the plaintiff, it is the right of the defendant to offer in evidence the book to prove any other ordinance therein, without further identification which may be relevant. Stone v. Town of Tallulah Falls, 131 Ga. 452, 62 S.E. 592 (1908).

Printed circular. — When a printed circular, produced by the defendant under notice from the complainants, was offered in evidence by the latter, it must first be proved that defendants had issued and circulated the paper before the paper could be read in evidence against the defendants. Berry v. Mathewes, 7 Ga. 457 (1849).

Bond for title. — Bond for title produced pursuant to notice from the opposite party claiming an interest need not be proved. Beverly v. Burke, 9 Ga. 440, 54 Am. Dec. 351 (1851); McMath v. Teel, 64 Ga. 595 (1880).

ANALYSIS

ANCIENT WRITINGS

SUBSCRIBING WITNESSES NOT AVAILABLE

WRITING ONLY COLLATERALLY MATERIAL

TESTIMONY BY PARTY EXECUTING WRITING

Production of subscribing witnesses. —

When a writing, to which there is a subscribing witness, is offered in evidence the witness must be produced except in the five instances specified by statute. Watts v. Kilburn, 7 Ga. 354 (1849); Lamb v. Empire Life Ins. Co., 143 Ga. 180, 84 S.E. 439 (1915); Wooten v. Life Ins. Co., 93 Ga. App. 665, 92 S.E.2d 567 (1956).

Other witnesses with more knowledge. —

Fact that others may know more of the transaction will not dispense with testimony of attesting witnesses. Ellis v. Doe, 10 Ga. 253 (1851).

One witness to bill of sale. — Bill of sale to personalty though attested by two subscribing witnesses, is admissible in evidence upon due proof of its execution by only one of them, without calling or accounting for the other. Cooper v. O'Brien, 98 Ga. 773, 26 S.E. 470 (1896).

Copy of lost original. — Lost original having been accounted for and the copy being relevant to the issue, the latter was admissible in evidence under this provision over an objection that there was no proof of the existence and execution of the original. The handwriting of the subscribing witnesses to an inaccessible paper could not possibly be proved. Baker v. Adams, 99 Ga. 135, 25 S.E. 28 (1896).

Failure to object to writing. — When a proper plea of non est factum has not been filed, proof of execution of the instrument on which suit is based is not necessary. Diversified Growth Corp. v. Equitable Leasing Corp., 140 Ga. App. 511, 231 S.E.2d 505 (1976).

Witnesses not infallible. — Witness can never testify truthfully as to any past transaction with which the witness was connected, except from the witness's recollection, and so a jury is not required to find against the declared recollection of a witness merely because the witness states that the witness may be in error and cannot swear positively — thus recognizing that the witness's memory may not be infallible. Saliba v. Saliba, 202 Ga. 791, 44 S.E.2d 744 (1947).

Witnesses were required to authenticate a material writing in the following cases. — See Barron v. Walker, 80 Ga. 121, 7 S.E. 272 (1888); Coody v. Gress Lumber Co., 82 Ga. 793, 10 S.E. 218 (1889) (contract of sale);

Summerour v. Felker, 102 Ga. 254, 29 S.E. 448 (1897); Thornton v. Martin, 116 Ga. 115, 42 S.E. 348 (1902); Singer Sewing Mach. Co. v. Wardlaw, 29 Ga. App. 626, 116 S.E. 207 (1923); Commercial Credit Co. v. Grant, 33 Ga. App. 31, 125 S.E. 382 (1924) (conveyance not recorded); Hines v. Moore, 168 Ga. 451, 148 S.E. 162 (1929).

Parks*, 46 Ga. App. 749, 169 S.E. 208 (1933); McDay v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 51 Ga. App. 791, 181 S.E. 871 (1935); Newmans v. State, 65 Ga. App. 288, 16 S.E.2d 87 (1941); Bloodworth v. McCook, 193 Ga. 53, 17 S.E.2d 73 (1941); Brewer v. Commercial Credit Co., 66 Ga. App. 138, 17 S.E.2d 243 (1941); Peters v. Adcock, 196 Ga. 118, 26 S.E.2d 342 (1943); Gibson v. Causey, 223 Ga. 135, 153 S.E.2d 704 (1967); Martin v. State, 135 Ga. App. 4, 217 S.E.2d 312 (1975); Cambron v. Canal Ins. Co., 246 Ga. 147, 269 S.E.2d 426 (1980); National Bank v. Hill, 161 Ga. App. 499, 288 S.E.2d 365 (1982); Burke County Dialysis Center, Inc. v. Walters, 194 Ga. App. 535, 391 S.E.2d 33 (1990).

Writing more than 30 years old. — When a receipt or other written instrument is more than 30 years old, the receipt's execution need not be proved to admit the receipt in evidence, although the subscribing witness may be living. Settle v. Alison, 8 Ga. 201, 52 Am. Dec. 393 (1850).

Subscribing witness alive and available. — An ancient writing is admissible in evidence though an attesting witness is still alive and accessible, and is not examined. Settle v. Alison, 8 Ga. 201, 52 Am. Dec. 393 (1850); Gardner v. Grannis, 57 Ga. 539 (1876).

Subscribing Witnesses Not Available

Names of witnesses unknown. — In view of the statute when a deed has been lost, and the subscribing witnesses are unknown, proof of the deed's existence and due execution may be made by any witness who knows the facts. Turner v. Cates, 90 Ga. 731, 16 S.E. 971 (1893). See also Felton v. Pitman, 14 Ga. 530 (1854).

Witness not in county. — Fact that a witness is not in the county will not (without more) lay the foundation for receiving other evidence. Baker & Swain v. Massengale, 83 Ga. 137, 10 S.E. 347 (1889).

Witness not in state. — If the subscribing witnesses to a deed reside out of the state, secondary evidence may be resorted to in order to prove the deed's execution. Harris v. Cannon, 6 Ga. 382 (1849).

Writing Only Collaterally Material

Bond for title. — When a bond for title admitted over objection is only collaterally material, the bond falls within this exception. Chance v. Chance, 163 Ga. 267, 135 S.E. 923 (1926).

Contract on action on check. — Since this was an action on the check itself, the contract between the purchaser and the seller was only incidentally or collaterally involved, and proof of the proper execution of the check was neither necessary nor material to the case. Dealers Dist. & Inv. Co. v. Mitchell Motors, Inc., 101 Ga. App. 900, 115 S.E.2d 420 (1960).

Contract of sale. — Contract of sale, whereby the sole stockholder of the old corporation transferred part of the stockholder's interest therein, established no rights between the parties to a pending suit by a new corporation, to recover the unpaid purchase-money on a contract of sale entered into between the corporation and the defendant, and is therefore only incidentally and collaterally material to the suit. Permitting proof of the execution of a contract otherwise than by the testimony of the subscribing witnesses thereto was not error. Johnson-Battle Lumber Co. v. Emanuel Lumber Co., 33 Ga. App. 517, 126 S.E. 861 (1925).

Landlord's lien. — When the existence of a landlord's lien for supplies is directly in issue, a writing attested by a subscribing witness and purporting to create such a lien is not admissible in evidence without proof by such witness of the writing's execution or duly accounting for nonproduction in view of the statute. Baker & Swain v. Massengale, 83 Ga. 137, 10 S.E. 347 (1889).

Transfer of mortgage. — When the transfer of a mortgage, if material at all, is simply incidentally or collaterally relevant to the real issues in the case, as a mere circumstance which may tend to throw some light upon a question of fact involved in the case it is not necessary to produce a subscribing witness, in view of the law. Prescott v. Fletcher, 133 Ga. 404, 65 S.E. 877 (1909).

Testimony by Party Executing Writing

Accounting for absence of party executing. — On trial of a suit by a beneficiary in a life-insurance policy, it was error to receive in evidence secondary evidence respecting the execution of the application to reinstate without preliminary proof accounting for the subscribing witness thereto. Lamb v. Empire Life Ins. Co., 143 Ga. 180, 84 S.E. 439 (1915).

Deed not recorded. — Deed need not be recorded to be admissible if proper foundation is laid; such foundation can be laid if party executing deed testifies to the deed's execution in accordance with the law or witnesses to deed are examined as to the deed's execution. Smith v. Forrester, 156 Ga. App. 79, 274 S.E.2d 101 (1980).

Time of execution. — When the subscribing witnesses to a deed were called to prove the deed's execution, but because of failure of memory were unable to locate the time of the deed's execution, the deed was, even before the passage of this provision, competent for the alleged maker to testify that the deed was in fact made at the time the deed purported on the deed's face to have been executed. Kelly v. William Sharp Saddlery Co., 99 Ga. 393, 27 S.E. 741 (1896).

Signature to blank paper. — When the maker of an instrument testified that the maker's signature thereto was genuine, the court properly admitted the instrument in evidence, notwithstanding the fact that in the same breath the maker testified that when the maker put the maker's signature on this paper it was a blank piece of paper, that the maker did not make the statements contained in this paper, and knew nothing of the contents thereof. Campbell v. State, 157 Ga. 233, 121 S.E. 306 (1924).

Transfer of note by corporation. — Execution of a written transfer of a promissory note by a corporation as the payee, denied on oath, is proved by the undisputed evidence of the president of the corporation that as president and duly authorized agent of the corporation the written transfer of the note was executed, for and in the name of the corporation. Christie v. Shingler, 10 Ga. App. 529, 73 S.E. 751 (1912).

Bill of sale not acknowledged. — It was not error to admit in evidence a paper purporting to be a bill of sale, over objection that the paper appeared to have been recorded but not to have been acknowledged before a notary public; there being testimony that the maker signed the paper, and the maker as a witness admitting so signing. James v. Bettis, 21 Ga. App. 170, 94 S.E. 85 (1917).

Deed. — Between the parties, the testimony of the maker is sufficient proof of execution of a deed. Vizard v. Moody, 119 Ga. 918, 47 S.E. 348 (1904).

24-7-5. Proof of execution where subscribing witnesses inaccessible; primary evidence; secondary evidence.

Whenever the subscribing witnesses to an instrument in writing are dead, insane, incompetent, or inaccessible or, being produced, do not recollect the transaction, proof of the actual signing by or the handwriting of the alleged maker shall be received as primary evidence of the fact of execution. If such evidence shall not be attainable, the court may admit evidence of the handwriting of the subscribing witnesses or other secondary evidence to establish the fact of execution. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3761; Code 1868, § 3785; Code 1873, § 3838; Code 1882, § 3838; Ga. L. 1895, p. 90, § 1; Civil Code 1895, § 5245; Civil Code 1910, § 5834; Code 1933, § 38-707.)

History of Code section. — The language of this Code section is derived in part from the decision in McVicker v. Conkle, 96 Ga. 584, 24 S.E. 23 (1895).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Origin of statute. — Prior to the 1895 amendment to this statute where the writing could not be proven by the subscribing witnesses, first resort was to proof of the handwriting of the witnesses, but the Supreme Court suggested the change on a rational basis and the change was made and inserted into the Code of 1895. McVicker v. Conkle, 96 Ga. 584, 24 S.E. 23 (1895); Strickland v. Babcock Lumber Co., 142 Ga. 120, 82 S.E. 531 (1914) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-5).

Any competent evidence admissible. — While it is incumbent upon a party offering in evidence a paper the execution of which the party is required to prove, and which purports to have been attested by a subscribing witness, to introduce or account for such witness, if the latter upon examination does not remember or denies that the witness attested the instrument, the execution thereof may then be proved by any other competent evidence. Buchanan v. Simpson Grocery Co., 105 Ga. 393, 31 S.E. 105 (1898).

Circumstantial evidence. — Existence and genuineness of a deed may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Campbell v. Sims,

Witness attending school in another state.

— When it appeared that the subscribing witness to a written instrument was attending school in another state at the time of the trial, the witness's absence was sufficiently accounted for, and the execution of the instrument could be proved otherwise than by the witness's testimony. Terry v. Broadhurst, 127 Ga. 212, 56 S.E. 282 (1906).

Ancient writings. — An instrument may be properly admitted as having been sufficiently proved irrespective of whether or not there was a sufficient compliance with the rule admitting ancient writings without proof. Rieves v. Smith, 184 Ga. 657, 192 S.E. 372 (1937).

Witnesses to last writing unknown. —

When the witnesses, if any, are unknown, it is not necessary to prove that the alleged lost original writing was executed with any particular formality in order to admit secondary evidence of the writing's contents. Sharp v. Autry, 185 Ga. 160, 194 S.E. 194 (1937).

Death of subscribing witnesses. — When an affidavit of forgery was filed to a recorded deed, after having shown death of the two attesting witnesses, the plaintiff should introduce proof of actual signing by the alleged maker or of the genuinenesses of the maker's signature fixed thereto, or that such evidence was not attainable. Strickland v. Babcock Lumber Co., 142 Ga. 120, 82 S.E. 531 (1914).

Proof of handwriting. — When the alleged maker of an unrecorded deed, who signed by the maker's mark, and the two subscribing witnesses to the instrument are dead, proof that the signature of the two latter upon the instrument are in their genuine handwriting is evidence of the fact of execution; and the charge of the court, which in effect instructed the jury that such proof was prima facie evidence of the fact of the execution of the deed, was not contrary to law. Edenfield v. Brinson, 149 Ga. 377, 100 S.E. 373 (1919).

24-7-6. Proof of handwriting.

Proof of handwriting may be resorted to in the absence of direct evidence of execution. In such case, any witness who shall swear that he knows or would recognize the handwriting shall be competent to testify as to his belief. The source of his knowledge shall be a question for investigation and shall go entirely to the credit and weight of his evidence. (Orig. General Consideration

Handwriting inadmissible without proof.

— Writing, alleged to be in the handwriting or signature of a party, is inadmissible unless the writing is proved or acknowledged to be genuine. Gunter v. State, 243 Ga. 651, 256 S.E.2d 341 (1979).

Witnesses to the authenticity of handwriting may be illiterate. Smith v. State, 77 Ga. 705 (1886).

Circumstantial evidence. — Authenticity of the writing may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Gunter v. State, 243 Ga. 651, 256 S.E.2d 341 (1979).

Presumption of authenticity. — When a witness swears positively to the genuineness of handwriting and when other handwriting by the same author is submitted to the jury for comparison, an inference of genuineness is proper. Boggus v. State, 34 Ga. 275 (1866) (Admission of author); Gatlin v. State, 18 Ga. App. 9, 89 S.E. 345 (1916).

Witness must express opinion. — Before the testimony of a witness as to the identity of handwriting can go to the jury, the witness must express what amounts to an opinion, one way or the other, at the time when the witness is testifying, under the circumstances then existing. Foster v. Jenkins & Belt, 30 Ga. 476 (1860).

Comparison with signature on pleading in case. — Defendant's handwriting may not be measured in genuineness by a comparison with defendant's signature to a plea filed in the case, merely because such plea is in the case. Washington v. State, 124 Ga. 423, 52 S.E. 910 (1905).

Writings admitted solely for comparison.

— Former Code 1933, § 38-708 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-6), together with former Code 1933, § 38-709 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-7), may be applied to writings not normally admissible under former Code 1933, § 38-418 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21) if the documents were not to be used for their content, but rather for the limited use of a comparison of the handwritings. Guy v. State, 138 Ga. App. 11, 225 S.E.2d 492 (1976).

Authenticity is question for jury. — Statement that the handwriting is that of a certain person is to be taken not as a conclusion but merely as an opinion the weight of which is a matter entirely for the jury. Borders v. City of Macon, 18 Ga. App. 333, 89 S.E. 451 (1916); Bates v. State, 18 Ga. App. 718, 90 S.E. 481 (1916); Rogers v. Rogers, 52 Ga. App. 548, 184 S.E. 404 (1936); Notis v. State, 84 Ga. App. 199, 65 S.E.2d 622 (1951); Gaulding v. Courts, 90 Ga. App. 472, 83 S.E.2d 288 (1954).

Improperly admitted testimony harmless when relevant only to counts on which defendant acquitted. — When handwriting testimony is improperly admitted but is relevant only to those counts of the indictment of which defendant was acquitted, the admission of such testimony is clearly harmless. Dowdy v. State, 159 Ga. App. 805, 285 S.E.2d 764 (1981).

Cited in Brown v. McBride, 129 Ga. 92, 58 S.E. 702 (1907); Finch v. Hayes, 147 Ga. 147, 93 S.E. 89 (1917); Guthrie v. Harper, 167 Ga. 588, 146 S.E. 320 (1928); Wilson-Weesner-Wilkinson Co. v. Collier, 62 Ga. App. 457, 8 S.E.2d 171 (1940); Stow v. Hargrove, 203 Ga. 735, 48 S.E.2d 454 (1948); Walker v. State, 127 Ga. App. 460, 193 S.E.2d 892 (1972); Martin v. State, 135 Ga. App. 4, 217 S.E.2d 312 (1975); Gross v. State, 161 Ga. App. 489, 288 S.E.2d 733 (1982); Jones v. State, 165 Ga. App. 498, 299 S.E.2d 920 (1983); Goodman v. State, 167 Ga. App. 378, 306 S.E.2d 417 (1983); Centennial Life Ins. Co. v. Smith, 210 Ga. App. 194, 435 S.E.2d 498 (1993); Flanders v. State, 217 Ga. App. 73, 456 S.E.2d 604 (1995); Parker v. State, 283 Ga. App. 714, 642 S.E.2d 111 (2007); Rollins, Inc. v. Warren, 288 Ga. App. 184, 653 S.E.2d 794 (2007).

Knowledge from business correspondence. — When a witness testifies that from business correspondence the witness is acquainted with the handwriting of the writer of a letter received by due course of mail, such testimony is enough to carry to the jury as evidence, and the court was right to admit the evidence. Pearson & Co. v. McDaniel, 62 Ga. 100 (1878).

Witness comparing by recollection. — It is not competent for a witness to testify as to the genuineness of a signature to a lost writing when all the knowledge that the witness has upon the subject is based upon a comparison of the witness's recollection of such signature with writing proved by other witnesses to be that of the person whose name was signed to the lost instrument. Gress Lumber Co. v. Georgia Pine Shingle Co., 120 Ga. 751, 48 S.E. 115 (1904).

Manner in which a witness acquires knowledge of a person's handwriting is immaterial. Reid v. State, 20 Ga. 681 (1856); Bruce v. Crews, 39 Ga. 544, 99 Am. Dec. 467 (1869); Shaw v. Chiles, 9 Ga. App. 460, 71 S.E. 745 (1911); Notis v. State, 84 Ga. App. 199, 65 S.E.2d 622 (1951).

Expert Witnesses

Handwriting expert may testify as to the genuineness of handwriting. Borders v. City of Macon, 18 Ga. App. 333, 89 S.E. 451 (1916).

When handwriting expert's testimony is based upon the expert's comparison between admitted exemplars of defendant's handwriting and other unadmitted documents, introduction of such testimony into the record is error. Dowdy v. State, 159 Ga. App. 805, 285 S.E.2d 764 (1981).

Nonexpert Witnesses

Basis for testimony of nonexpert witness. — Anyone familiar with the handwriting of another may testify as to an opinion of the authenticity to the best of that person's knowledge and belief. Bates v. State, 18 Ga. App. 718, 90 S.E. 481 (1916); Waddell v. Watkins Medical Co., 25 Ga. App. 657, 104 S.E. 250 (1920); Haygood v. Clark Co., 27 Ga. App. 101, 107 S.E. 379 (1921); Copeland v. State, 66 Ga. App. 142, 17 S.E.2d 288 (1941); Gaulding v. Courts, 90 Ga. App. 472, 83 S.E.2d 288 (1954); Wooten v. Life Ins. Co., 93 Ga. App. 665, 92 S.E.2d 567 (1956); Kinney v. Youngblood, 216 Ga. 354, 116 S.E.2d 608 (1960).

Nonexpert witness may identify the handwriting of a particular individual (as the witness would identify the individual personally), provided the witness knows the handwriting or is so familiar with the handwriting that the witness would recognize the handwriting. Quick v. State, 256 Ga. 780, 353 S.E.2d 497 (1987); Summerour v. State, 211 Ga. App. 65, 438 S.E.2d 176 (1993).

Availability of direct evidence of execution. — O.C.G.A. § 24-7-6 does not exclude opinion testimony on the authenticity of a signature when direct evidence of execution is available. Ham v. Ham, 257 Ga. App. 415, 571 S.E.2d 441 (2002).

Nonexpert witness must have reasons for recognizing the writing in question. Bruce v. Crews, 39 Ga. 544, 99 Am. Dec. 467 (1869); Wimbish v. State, 89 Ga. 294, 15 S.E. 325 (1892); Haygood v. Clark Co., 27 Ga. App. 101, 107 S.E. 379 (1921).

Comparison with other handwriting. — Nonexpert witness may not testify as to the identity of handwriting if the witness's opinion is based solely on comparison with handwriting proved to be genuine. Copeland v. State, 66 Ga. App. 142, 17 S.E.2d 288 (1941), for comment, see 4 Ga. B.J. 53 (1942).

Trial court did not err in allowing a police detective, who gained knowledge of defendant's signature by witnessing the defendant sign the arraignment form, from identifying the signature on an indictment from a prior conviction; the source of the detective's knowledge was a proper question for investigation and went entirely to the credit and weight of the detective's evidence. Williams v. State, 259 Ga. App. 742, 578 S.E.2d 128 (2003).

Employee's recognition of supervisor's signature. — Employee's testimony that the employee transmitted a document to a supervisor and received the document back with the supervisor's signature and that the employee recognized the signature as that of the supervisor because the employee was familiar with the signature satisfied the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 24-7-6. Malin v. Servisco, Inc., 172 Ga. App. 418, 323 S.E.2d 278 (1984).

For proof necessary to authenticate an unsigned letter, see Rumph v. State, 91 Ga. 20, 16 S.E. 104 (1892).

Last letters. — Contents of a lost note are not proven when the witness can give no evidence of knowledge of the handwriting of the person alleged to have written the note. Bone v. State, 86 Ga. 108, 12 S.E. 205 (1890).

Possession not proof of authenticity. — Proof that letters were found in the defendant's possession is not proof that the handwriting in the letters was defendant's handwriting. McCombs v. State, 109 Ga. 496, 34 S.E. 1021 (1900).

Authentication sufficient. — Testimony by the recipient of a letter that the handwriting on the letter appeared to be that of the defendant was sufficient authentication of the letter to allow the letter's admission against defendant during defendant's trial for aggravated assault. Harrison v. State, 253 Ga. App. 179, 558 S.E.2d 760 (2002).

Handwritten note, in which the first of two defendants admitted to killing the victim in order to prevent the victim from testifying was properly authenticated because the letter was consistent with prior conversations involving the non-accomplice witness and the first defendant, and was personally addressed to the non-accomplice. Williams v. State, 280 Ga. 584, 630 S.E.2d 370 (2006).

Trial court did not err in the admission of two letters handwritten by the defendant that were used by the state to cast doubt on the defendant's mental retardation claim with regard to the defendant's murder conviction and the death sentence imposed as a Department of Corrections employee authenticated the letters after testifying that the employee would recognize the defendant's handwriting because the employee observed the defendant sign the defendant's name and had received written communications from the defendant. The employee's statement that the handwriting in the body of the letters "appears to be that of" the defendant did not render the employee's testimony too tentative to support a finding of authenticity. Rogers v. State, 282 Ga. 659, 653 S.E.2d 31 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1311, 128 S. Ct. 1882, 170 L. Ed. 2d 747; reh'g denied, U.S. , 128 S. Ct. 2988, 171 L. Ed. 2d 907 (2008).

Any error in the admission of a defendant's response to a detective's statement that the co-indictee had implicated the defendant in a murder and robbery made before Miranda warnings were administered was harmless as the statement was cumulative of a non-expert's admissible testimony authenticating letters from the defendant to the co-indictee under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-6 containing a certain racial epithet also used by the defendant in the response. Phillips v. State, 285 Ga. 213, 675 S.E.2d 1 (2009).

Documents admitted for comparison only.

— Law may be applied to writings not normally admissible if the documents are to be used for a comparison of handwriting and not for documents' content. Mitchell v. State, 89 Ga. App. 80, 78 S.E.2d 563 (1953); Guy v. State, 138 Ga. App. 11, 225 S.E.2d 492 (1976).

Document to show that party can sign name in writing and not by mark is admissible. Stewart v. White, 143 Ga. 22, 84 S.E. 63 (1915); Corley v. Parson, 236 Ga. 346, 223 S.E.2d 708 (1976).

Submission of Writings to Opposite Party

In general. — Under the wording of this statute, writings tendered for the purpose of proving handwriting by comparison are inadmissible unless submitted to the opposite party before that party announces oneself ready for trial. Georgia Masonic Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 52 Ga. 640 (1874); Axson v. Belt, 103 Ga. 578, 30 S.E. 262 (1898); Moultrie Repair Co. v. Hill, 120 Ga. 730, 48 S.E. 143 (1904); Gress Lumber Co. v. Georgia Pine Shingle Co., 120 Ga. 751, 48 S.E. 115 (1904); Ginn v. Ginn, 142 Ga. 420, 83 S.E. 118 (1914); Thomas v. State, 39 Ga. App. 659, 148 S.E. 277 (1929); Notis v. State, 84 Ga. App. 199, 65 S.E.2d 622 (1951); Padula v. State, 119 Ga. App. 562, 167 S.E.2d 696 (1969); Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 226, 225 S.E.2d 744 (1976); Henderson v. State, 145 Ga. App. 597, 244 S.E.2d 136 (1978).

Documents not submitted to the adverse party prior to announcing ready for trial are

Substantial compliance with O.C.G.A. § 24-7-7 is not countenanced unless documents are presented to other side well in advance of trial. Painter v. State, 159 Ga. App. 479, 283 S.E.2d 695 (1981).

Writings acknowledged as authentic must be submitted to the opposite party. Marietta Fertilizer Co. v. Gary, 22 Ga. App. 604, 96 S.E. 711 (1918); Beeland v. Clark, 47 Ga. App. 77, 169 S.E. 681 (1933).

Submission of the same documents in another case does not put the defendant on notice that such documents are intended to be used in the case on trial, and does not give the defendant notice as contemplated by law. Mitchell v. State, 89 Ga. App. 80, 78 S.E.2d 563 (1953).

Writings offered in evidence without objection need not have been offered to opposite party prior to trial. Thomas v. State, 59 Ga. 784 (1877).

Document not previously revealed to the opposite party admissible for the purpose of showing that a party can write and that the party can sign one's name in writing and not by mark. Corley v. Parson, 236 Ga. 346, 223 S.E.2d 708 (1976).

Failure to submit may not be raised initially on appeal. — When the defendant contends that exhibits used for comparison purposes should not have been admitted into evidence because the exhibits were not submitted prior to trial, but the defendant made no objection at trial, the objection could not be raised for the first time on appeal. McDaniel v. State, 169 Ga. App. 254, 312 S.E.2d 363 (1983).

Writing must be either proven or acknowledged before admissible in evidence for comparison. McVicker v. Conkle, 96 Ga. 584, 24 S.E. 23 (1895); Vizard v. Moody, 119 Ga. 918, 47 S.E. 348 (1904); Chicago Bldg. & Mfg. Co. v. Butler, 139 Ga. 816, 78 S.E. 244 (1913); Ginn v. Ginn, 142 Ga. 420, 83 S.E. 118 (1914); Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 226, 225 S.E.2d 744 (1976); Gunter v. State, 243 Ga. 651, 256 S.E.2d 341 (1979).

An ancient deed was so far proven to be the genuine deed of the grantor, and so far established the genuineness of the grantor's signature thereto as to authorize the deed's admission in evidence for the purpose of a comparison of handwriting, upon the trial of a cause involving the question of the genuineness of the signature of such grantor to another instrument. Goza v. Browning, 96 Ga. 421, 23 S.E. 842 (1895).

Circumstantial evidence. — Genuineness of the writing may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Gunter v. State, 243 Ga. 651, 256 S.E.2d 341 (1979).

Circumstantial evidence of a postmark and a return address for a handwritten letter, along with a witness's testimony that the witness received the letter in the mail, was not sufficient authentication of the letter. Ross v. State, 194 Ga. App. 464, 390 S.E.2d 671 (1990).

Possession not proof of authenticity. — Possession of letters is not of itself sufficient to prove that the possessor wrote letters, and thus establish the handwriting thereof as a standard with which to compare the handwriting. McCombs v. State, 109 Ga. 496, 34 S.E. 1021 (1900).

Plea in another action. — When the deed was signed by mark instead of by the signature of the vendor, and it was shown that the vendor could write, it was not error to allow the plaintiff to introduce in evidence the original plea, filed in another suit brought against the vendor about the time of the execution of the deed alleged to be forged, with the signature of the vendor affixed to such plea, for the purpose of showing that the vendor could write and that the vendor signed the vendor's name in writing and not by mark. Stewart v. White, 143 Ga. 22, 84 S.E. 63 (1915).

Nonexpert Witnesses

In general. — A nonexpert witness may identify the handwriting of a particular individual (as the witness would identify the individual personally), provided the witness knows the handwriting or is so familiar with the handwriting that the witness would recognize the handwriting, but such witness may not testify as to the identity of handwriting if the witness's opinion is founded solely on a comparison of a handwriting brought into court and proved to be genuine with the handwriting in question. Copeland v. State, 66 Ga. App. 142, 17 S.E.2d 288 (1941), for comment, see 4 Ga. B.J. 53 (1942).

Expert Witnesses

In general. — When two other letters, purporting to come from the same source as the first, were shown to experts, who compared the letters with the first letter and testified that the experts were of the opinion that the letters were all in the same handwriting, this was sufficient to admit the letters in evidence. Smith v. State, 77 Ga. 705 (1886).

Trial court did not err in admitting in evidence two notebooks, representing handwriting samples, for comparison with the kidnapping ransom note, and in refusing to strike the testimony of the state's expert witness as to comparison of these notebooks with the ransom note. Gross v. State, 161 Ga. App. 489, 288 S.E.2d 733 (1982).

Documents Affecting Party's Character or Reputation

In general. — Upon the trial of one accused of murder it was not error to admit signatures of defendant on two pleas of guilty on two indictments for check forgery for comparison over the objection that this evidence put the defendant's character in issue. Hyde v. State, 196 Ga. 475, 26 S.E.2d 744 (1943) (even though other samples of defendant's handwriting were available); Watkins v. State, 151 Ga. App. 496, 260 S.E.2d 547 (1979).

Documents showing another crime. — Checks which were the basis for a prior forgery conviction could be offered for a comparison with the handwriting on the 34 checks at issue in the forgery case on trial as those checks had a direct relevancy to the case and, therefore, were not objectionable because those checks also tended to show a distinct and separate crime on the part of appellant. Watkins v. State, 151 Ga. App. 510, 260 S.E.2d 547 (1979).

Authenticity Is Question for Jury

In general. — It is the duty of the jury to compare the disputed writing with admittedly or proven authentic writings and then determine the authenticity of the disputed writing. Boggus v. State, 34 Ga. 275 (1866); Bruce v. Crews, 39 Ga. 544, 99 Am. Dec. 467 (1869); Collins v. Glisson, 35 Ga. App. 111, 132 S.E. 114 (1926); Rogers v. Rogers, 52 Ga. App. 548, 184 S.E. 404 (1936).

Jury instructions. — If any specific instruction was desired as to the jury's duty to compare such writings with the signature on the note alleged to have been forged, a special written request should have been made. McRae v. Wilby, 59 Ga. App. 401, 1 S.E.2d 77 (1939).

C.J.S. — 32 C.J.S., Evidence, § 820 et seq.

ALR. — Admissibility in evidence, for purpose of comparison, of writing made by accused person at request of public authorities, 1 ALR 1304.

Use of photographs in examination and comparison of handwriting or typewriting, 31 ALR 1431; 72 ALR2d 308.

Changes in handwriting as evidence of change in physical or mental condition, 134 ALR 641.

Admissibility in evidence of enlarged photographs or photostatic copies, 72 ALR2d 308.

Mode and degree of proof required to establish genuineness of handwriting offered as standard or exemplar for comparison with a disputed writing or signature, 41 ALR2d 575.

Competency, as a standard of comparison to establish genuineness of handwriting, of writings made after controversy arose, 72 ALR2d 1274.

Propriety of jury, or court sitting as trier of facts, making a comparison of a disputed writing with a standard produced in court, without the aid of an expert witness, 80 ALR2d 272.

24-7-8. Proving medical records or reproductions.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term “medical records” means all written clinical information which relates to the treatment of individuals, when such information is kept in an institution.

(b) Medical records or reproductions thereof, when duly certified by their custodians, need not be identified at the trial and may be used in any manner in which records identified at the trial by the custodian could be used. (Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, §§ 1, 2.)

Purpose. — Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, §§ 1 and 2 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-8) and Ga. L. 1970, p. 225, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-9) deal with the method of authenticating records which are otherwise admissible and are not new rules of admissibility eliminating the hearsay rule. Moody v. State, 244 Ga. 247, 260 S.E.2d 11 (1979).

Rules of evidence apply. — Admissibility of the contents of hospital records is governed by the rules of admissibility and not by the manner in which the records are obtained, whether the records be obtained through certification, or through subpoena, or notice to produce. Dennis v. Adcock, 138 Ga. App. 425, 226 S.E.2d 292 (1976).

In a premises liability suit, the trial court properly excluded certified copies of some of an invitee’s medical records under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-8 because the invitee had not provided the requisite 60-day notice under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-18. Section 24-7-8 concerned only the authentication of medical records and did not allow the invitee to circumvent other evidentiary rules; furthermore, the invitee failed to provide a record citation for the specific medical records that the invitee claimed should have been admitted and thus it was unclear whether those records were narratives, to which § 24-3-18(a) applied, or other types of records. Fuller v. Flash Foods, Inc., 298 Ga. App. 217, 679 S.E.2d 775 (2009).

Hearsay rule applicable. — O.C.G.A. § 24-7-8 deals with the authentication of medical records which are otherwise admissible, and does not eliminate the rule against hearsay or create a new one. Giles v. Taylor, 166 Ga. App. 563, 305 S.E.2d 154 (1983).

Statutes which pertain to the authentication of documents do not remove hearsay considerations. Manning v. State, 231 Ga. App. 584, 499 S.E.2d 650 (1998).

Effect of certification is to dispense with preliminary proof of authenticity on the part of the custodian of the records, but not to make admissible any matter contained in the reports which is otherwise subject to objection. Smith v. State, 141 Ga. App. 720, 234 S.E.2d 385 (1977); Adams v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 246 Ga. App. 698, 542 S.E.2d 130 (2000).

Certification by custodian. — If a hospital record contains diagnostic opinions and conclusions, the record cannot, upon proper objection, be admitted into evidence unless and until the person who entered such diagnostic opinions and conclusions upon the record qualifies as an expert and relates the facts upon which the entry was based. Dennis v. Adcock, 138 Ga. App. 425, 226 S.E.2d 292 (1976).

Relevant portion of records admissible. — Records which contain diagnostic opinions, conclusions, and other statements of third parties not before the court are still not admissible if tendered in toto though relevant portions of such records not subject to such defects may be. Dennis v. Adcock, 138 Ga. App. 425, 226 S.E.2d 292 (1976); Moody v. State, 244 Ga. 247, 260 S.E.2d 11 (1979).

Photographs are admissible to show the condition of the body of the deceased and the nature and extent of the deceased's wounds, and when used to illustrate medical testimony as to the cause of death of the deceased, photographs are not inadmissible because the photographs might inflame the jury, but are relevant and material to the issue. Sirmans v. State, 229 Ga. 743, 194 S.E.2d 476 (1972).

Testimony of preparer of records unnecessary. — When the records in question were certified as accurate by the custodian of the treating hospital and contained no inadmissible hearsay evidence, it was not necessary for foundation to be laid for admitting records in evidence by offering testimony of examining doctor or medical personnel who prepared the records. Venenga v. State, 163 Ga. App. 161, 293 S.E.2d 553 (1982); Wilson v. Childers, 174 Ga. App. 179, 329 S.E.2d 503 (1985).

24-7-9. Identification of medical bills; expert witness unnecessary.

(a) Upon the trial of any civil case involving injury or disease, the patient or the member of his family or other person responsible for the care of the patient shall be a competent witness to identify bills for expenses incurred in the treatment of the patient upon a showing by such witness that the expenses were incurred in connection with the treatment of the injury, disease, or disability involved in the subject of litigation at trial and that the bills were received from:

- (1) A hospital;
- (2) An ambulance service;

(3) A pharmacy, drugstore, or supplier of therapeutic or orthopedic devices; or

(4) A licensed practicing physician, chiropractor, dentist, orthotist, podiatrist, or psychologist.

(b) Such items of evidence need not be identified by the one who submits the bill, and it shall not be necessary for an expert witness to testify that the charges were reasonable and necessary. However, nothing in this Code section shall be construed to limit the right of a thorough and sifting cross-examination as to such items of evidence. (Code 1933, § 38-706.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1970, p. 225, § 1; Ga. L. 1983, p. 525, § 1; Ga. L. 1987, p. 3, § 24.)

Law reviews. — For article, "An Analysis of Georgia's Proposed Rules of Evidence," see 26 Ga. St. B.J. 173 (1990).

Purpose. — Law creates a stream-lined procedure permitting laymen to introduce bills incurred for treatment of injuries resulting from the subject of litigation without requiring an expert witness to testify that such charges were reasonable and necessary. Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972); Piggly-Wiggly S., Inc. v. Tucker, 139 Ga. App. 873, 229 S.E.2d 804 (1976).

O.C.G.A. § 24-7-9 is only a statutory rule of evidence regarding the admission of medical bills. It does not purport to obviate a plaintiff's further satisfaction of the evidentiary obligation to demonstrate the liability of the defendant for the damages being sought. Eberhart v. Morris Brown College, 181 Ga. App. 516, 352 S.E.2d 832 (1987).

Chiropractors' bills are not medical bills that the legislature has declared may be admitted without proof by an expert witness as to their reasonableness and necessity. Giles v. Taylor, 166 Ga. App. 563, 305 S.E.2d 154 (1983) (decided prior to 1983 amendment).

Scope. — Law accomplishes three goals: (1) it eliminates the necessity of having the person submitting the bill to testify; (2) it makes it unnecessary to produce an expert witness to prove such charges were reasonable and necessary; and (3) it makes laymen competent witnesses to identify such bills.

Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972).

Statute not exclusive. — Law was not intended as the sole means of proving medical damages in personal injury suits. Piggly-Wiggly S., Inc. v. Tucker, 139 Ga. App. 873, 229 S.E.2d 804 (1976).

Rules of evidence apply. — Ga. L. 1970, p. 225, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-9) and Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, §§ 1 and 2 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-8) deal with the method of authenticating records which are otherwise admissible and are not new rules of admissibility eliminating the hearsay rule. Dennis v. Adcock, 138 Ga. App. 425, 226 S.E.2d 292 (1976); Moody v. State, 244 Ga. 247, 260 S.E.2d 11 (1979).

Right to cross-examine not limited. — Law allows a thorough and sifting cross-examination for the purpose of undermining the credibility of the lay witness, but the fact that the witness's accuracy is impugned does not affect the admissibility of the exhibits. Atlanta Transit Sys. v. Smith, 141 Ga. App. 87, 232 S.E.2d 580 (1977).

Law does not require the showing that a hospital is licensed as a prerequisite to admission of hospital and medical bills from that institution. Kamman v. Seabolt, 149 Ga. App. 167, 253 S.E.2d 842 (1979).

Irrelevant items in records. — When a submitted bill includes without differentiation items having no relevance to the automobile collision, the proffered evidence not only fails to meet the statutory requisites but may be properly rejected under the rule that testimony offered as a whole without separating the relevant from that which is irrelevant and inadmissible is to be repelled in its entirety. Maloy v. Dixon, 127 Ga. App. 151, 193 S.E.2d 19 (1972); Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972); Jordan v. Hagewood, 133 Ga. App. 958, 213 S.E.2d 85 (1975).

A trial court properly admitted a deceased patient's medical bills in support of the patient's claims against a nursing home under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-9, because the patient's expert subtracted from the total hospital bills the amount that would have been incurred had the patient remained in the nursing home receiving treatment for previous problems. Tucker Nursing Ctr., Inc. v. Mosby, No. A09A1756, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 277 (Mar. 24, 2010).

Physician's action for services. — Physician in an action to recover for professional services rendered has the burden of proving the value as represented by the ordinary and reasonable fee for the services, despite this statute whereby in certain cases it shall not be necessary for an expert to testify that the medical charges were reasonable and necessary. Bouldin v. Baum, 134 Ga. App. 484, 214 S.E.2d 734 (1975) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-9).

Authentication of canceled checks. — Law does not mention authentication of canceled checks and, as a result, canceled checks may be authenticated in the traditional manner. Piggly-Wiggly S., Inc. v. Tucker, 139 Ga. App. 873, 229 S.E.2d 804 (1976).

Canceled checks as evidence. — Since neither the spirit nor the literal application of this statute places a limitation upon the admission of canceled checks in evidence, the checks' admission would be assessed by the jury in light of testimony showing the checks had been drawn for payment of treatment of injuries which plaintiff received due to defendant's negligence. Piggly-Wiggly S., Inc. v. Tucker, 139 Ga. App. 873, 229 S.E.2d 804 (1976) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-9).

Testimony on reasonableness of charges. — When testimony of plaintiff describes the plaintiff's injuries arising out of an auto collision and number of visits to a named doctor for treatment and the spouse identifies the doctor's bill and states the spouse's payment thereof, it is not necessary to have the physician testify that the charges were reasonable and necessary. Rutledge v. Glass, 125 Ga. App. 549, 188 S.E.2d 261 (1972).

Testimonial foundation was sufficient for the admission of evidence. — See Harper v. Samples, 164 Ga. App. 511, 298 S.E.2d 29 (1982); Zack's Properties, Inc. v. Gafford, 241 Ga. App. 43, 526 S.E.2d 80 (1999).

Testimonial foundation was insufficient for admission of evidence. — Plaintiff in a personal injury action failed to lay the proper foundation for admission of a summary of plaintiff's medical expenses, where the plaintiff introduced a summary sheet that listed only the medical providers by name, a range of dates, the total amount per provider, and the final total of services from multiple sources, but the plaintiff admitted that the plaintiff did not and could not compile the totals, and the plaintiff did not provide specific testimony substantiating the various subtotals. Hossain v. Nelson, 234 Ga. App. 792, 507 S.E.2d 243 (1998).

Error in admission of bills held harmless. — See Binns v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 168 Ga. App. 261, 308 S.E.2d 674 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 289, 313 S.E.2d 104 (1984).

Medical bills not speculative evidence. — In a personal injury suit brought by a married couple, evidence of the cost of medical treatment that the injured spouse received from all of the various medical providers was not speculative and was properly considered by the jury when the injured spouse testified as to the medical treatment received and introduced the medical bills into evidence. Hart v. Shergold, 295 Ga. App. 94, 670 S.E.2d 895 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0582, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 230 (Ga. 2009).

Expert medical testimony not required to withstand defendant's motion for directed verdict. — A causal connection, requiring expert medical testimony, must be established when the "potential continuance of a disease" is at issue. However, if there is no significant lapse of time between the injury sustained and the onset of the physical condition for which the injured party seeks compensation, and the injury sustained is a matter which jurors must be credited with knowing by reason of common knowledge, expert medical testimony is not required in order for a plaintiff to establish a personal injury case sufficient to withstand a defendant's motion for directed verdict. Jordan v. Smoot, 191 Ga. App. 74, 380 S.E.2d 714 (1989).

Chiropractors not licensed physicians. — A chiropractor is not a licensed practicing physician, and a chiropractor's bills are not admissible. Dilliplane v. Henderson, 141 Ga. App. 684, 234 S.E.2d 357 (1977).

Clarification of opposing counsel's semantics argument did not impact testimony on medical bills. — In a premises liability case, the trial court did not prevent an invitee from identifying the invitee's medical bills through the invitee's own testimony. This contention was clearly belied by the record which demonstrated that the trial court simply clarified opposing counsel's semantics argument but allowed the invitee to testify regarding the invitee's medical bills and the total dollar amount incurred. Fuller v. Flash Foods, Inc., 298 Ga. App. 217, 679 S.E.2d 775 (2009).

Editor's notes. — This section and Code Section 24-5-20, being so closely allied, and so often construed together by the courts, the notes to one will be found helpful in construing the other.

Nothing in O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20 requires that certified copies be photostatic copies of original documents. Cook v. State, 255 Ga. 565, 340 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1986).

Objection to admission of record. — It is too late to object to a record for want of proper authentication after the record has been admitted and read to the jury without objection. Williams v. Rawlins, 33 Ga. 117 (1861).

Clerical error in a certified copy of the sentence of one convicted of crime will not render the paper inadmissible in evidence if it clearly appears from the context what the true purport of the document was. Daniel v. State, 114 Ga. 533, 40 S.E. 805 (1902).

Validity of record certified. — In action for alimony when plaintiff introduces a certified copy of marriage certificate, no issue as to validity of marriage is made in the absence of a direct attack on the record by the defendant. Guess v. Guess, 202 Ga. 364, 43 S.E.2d 326 (1947).

Authentication does not automatically establish admissibility. — O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20 does not address hearsay concerns; the statute does not require the admission of hearsay merely because the hearsay has been recorded in a court of record. McGaha v. State, 221 Ga. App. 440, 471 S.E.2d 533 (1996).

"Public Officer" Defined

Commission not required. — "Public officer," whose certification authenticates copies of records, is not expressly required to be commissioned by the Governor. Cowan v.

State, 130 Ga. App. 320, 203 S.E.2d 311 (1973); Waddill v. Waddill, 143 Ga. App. 806, 240 S.E.2d 129 (1977).

Deputies authorized to certify. — Certificate need not be by a public officer personally, rather than by a deputy officer who certifies that the deputy is the custodian of the records. Musgrove v. State, 230 Ga. 46, 195 S.E.2d 407 (1973); Cowan v. State, 130 Ga. App. 320, 203 S.E.2d 311 (1973); Waddill v. Waddill, 143 Ga. App. 806, 240 S.E.2d 129 (1977); Blackmon v. State, 153 Ga. App. 359, 265 S.E.2d 320 (1980) (decided prior to 1980 amendment to former Code 1933, § 68B-215 (see § 40-5-2)).

Court reporters are not authorized to certify. Hardeman v. English, 79 Ga. 387, 5 S.E. 70 (1888).

Clerk of court authorized to certify. — Any witness who has read the records in the clerk's office can testify as to what was found or not found but only the certificate of the clerk is sufficient to authenticate any record existing in the clerk's office. Hines v. Johnston, 95 Ga. 644, 23 S.E. 970 (1895).

Federal officers and employees are not authorized to certify. O'Connor v. United States, 11 Ga. App. 246, 75 S.E. 110 (1912); Edmonds v. State, 201 Ga. 108, 39 S.E.2d 24 (1946); Pressley v. State, 207 Ga. 274, 61 S.E.2d 113 (1950); Mach v. State, 109 Ga. App. 154, 135 S.E.2d 467 (1964); Cowan v. State, 130 Ga. App. 320, 203 S.E.2d 311 (1973).

Municipal officer not included. — Law applies exclusively and in terms to the public officers of this state and the several counties thereof, and therefore can have no reference to certificates signed by municipal officers. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Bond, 111 Ga. 13, 36 S.E. 299 (1900).

In addition to officers specifically mentioned in the above cases several by implication are authorized to certify public records within their custody. Shivers v. State, 53 Ga. 149 (1874). But this rule is now modified by § 24-7-21; Clark v. Empire Lumber Co., 87 Ga. 742, 13 S.E. 826 (1891); Cannon v. Gorham, 136 Ga. 167, 71 S.E. 142, 1912C Ann. Cas. 39 (1911) (Comptroller General); Ferrell v. Hurst, 68 Ga. 132 (1881); Berry v. Clark, 117 Ga. 964, 44 S.E. 824 (1903) (Secretary of State); Jett v. Hart, 152 Ga. 266, 109 S.E. 654 (1921) (tax receiver).

Certificate and Seal

Form of certificate. — Certificate in the following form: "The above and foregoing is a true copy," etc., is a sufficient authentication of a record. Harden v. Webster, Parmelee & Co., 29 Ga. 427 (1859).

Sufficiency of certificate. — To make a certificate from the Executive Department admissible in evidence, it is not necessary that the certificate should give a copy of that to which it relates. It is sufficient that it gives, substantially, the contents, or a part of the contents, of the thing to which it relates. Henderson v. Hackney, 16 Ga. 521 (1854).

Contents of record. — Statute merely requires a certificate or attestation, without specifying any detail as to the location and length of the record, by reference to the number of pages, minute book, case number, and similar details. McIntyre v. Balkcom, 229 Ga. 81, 189 S.E.2d 445 (1972) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20).

Seal not required. — Statute requires a certificate or attestation without specifying the necessity for the seal by a court reporter. Kinney v. Avery & Co., 14 Ga. App. 180, 80 S.E. 663 (1914); Canal Ins. Co. v. Tate, 111 Ga. App. 377, 141 S.E.2d 851 (1965); McIntyre v. Balkcom, 229 Ga. 81, 189 S.E.2d 445 (1972) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20).

Federal Records

Elements of authentication, the authority, the incumbency, and the genuineness of the signature of the certifying custodian, are applicable to records of the federal, not the state, government. O'Connor v. United States, 11 Ga. App. 246, 75 S.E. 110 (1912); Edmonds v. State, 201 Ga. 108, 39 S.E.2d 24 (1946); Pressley v. State, 207 Ga. 274, 61 S.E.2d 113 (1950); Mach v. State, 109 Ga. App. 154, 135 S.E.2d 467 (1964); Cowan v. State, 130 Ga. App. 320, 203 S.E.2d 311 (1973).

Court Records

In general. — Clerk of court may certify a copy or transcript of the court record but the clerk's certificate of the nonexistence on the records of certain facts is not admissible. Miller v. Reinhart, 18 Ga. 239 (1855); Dillon v. Mattox, 21 Ga. 113 (1857); Martin v. Anderson, 21 Ga. 301 (1857); Walker v. Logan, 75 Ga. 759 (1885); Lamar v. Pearre,

Court Records (Cont'd)

90 Ga. 377, 17 S.E. 92 (1892); Hines v. Johnston, 95 Ga. 644, 23 S.E. 470 (1895); Greer v. Ferguson, 104 Ga. 552, 30 S.E. 943 (1898); but see for contra implication, Thompson v. Cheatham, 244 Ga. 120, 259 S.E.2d 62 (1979).

Court proceedings. — The only legal way to prove proceedings of the superior court is by an extract from the minutes of that court duly certified by the court's clerk. Bowden v. Taylor, 81 Ga. 199, 6 S.E. 277 (1888); Weaver v. Tuten, 138 Ga. 101, 74 S.E. 835 (1912).

Criminal proceedings. — Exemplification of the record of an illegality case, under the hand and seal of the clerk, exhibiting among other things, the assignment by the plaintiff of the writ of fi. fa., is admissible in evidence to prove the transfer. Napier v. Neal, 3 Ga. 298 (1847).

Guilty plea. — Trial court properly used a prior guilty plea to sentence the defendant as a recidivist when the state had presented a certified copy of the plea that was signed and initialed by defense counsel along with a plea hearing transcript; even if the plea hearing transcript was uncertified and unauthenticated, the certified copy of the plea was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20, and the defendant did not produce evidence of invalidity once the fact of conviction was proved and the state showed that the defendant was represented by counsel. Moorer v. State, 286 Ga. App. 395, 649 S.E.2d 537 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 806 (Ga. 2007).

Proceedings in same court. — Original papers of proceedings in the court are admissible in another case in the same court where otherwise relevant. Sellers v. Page, 127 Ga. 633, 56 S.E. 1011 (1907); Woods v. Travelers Ins. Co., 53 Ga. App. 429, 186 S.E. 467 (1936); Clarkum v. State, 55 Ga. App. 44, 189 S.E. 397 (1936); Williford v. State, 55 Ga. App. 40, 192 S.E. 93 (1937); Brantley v. State, 121 Ga. App. 79, 172 S.E.2d 852 (1970); Thompson v. Cheatham, 244 Ga. 120, 259 S.E.2d 62 (1979).

Proceedings in other courts. — Statute makes provision for exemplification by certificate of any public officer of authenticity of any copy or transcript of any record, but has no relation to the court record in another case or cases pending in the same court in which the records are offered in evidence. Brantley v. State, 121 Ga. App. 79, 172 S.E.2d 852 (1970) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20).

Certification of nonconforming record. — Certification by the clerk of court shall speak the truth, and the clerk may not be required by a mandamus, or otherwise, to certify an instrument that does not conform to the records in the clerk's office. Touchton v. Echols County, 211 Ga. 85, 84 S.E.2d 81 (1954).

Judgment. — Introduction of a certified copy of a judgment against a party is sufficient evidence to prove the existence of that judgment. Gowdey v. Rem Assocs., 176 Ga. App. 83, 335 S.E.2d 309 (1985).

Conviction records from a North Carolina court identified the court, contained a filed and date stamp, certified that each record was "a true copy of the original filed in this office" under the signature of the clerk of superior court whose authority was indicated by the initials following the clerk's signature, and contained the raised seal of the clerk; accordingly, the North Carolina convictions were properly authenticated under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20. Horner v. State, 257 Ga. App. 12, 570 S.E.2d 94 (2002).

Treatment of Specific Records

Acknowledgment of service. — There was no error in admitting in evidence the certified copy of an acknowledgment of service. James v. Edward Thompson Co., 17 Ga. App. 578, 87 S.E. 842 (1916).

Administrative records. — Properly authenticated administrative records are admissible. Niehaus v. State, 149 Ga. App. 575, 254 S.E.2d 895 (1979).

Conditional sales contract. — Conditional sales contract duly recorded and on its face properly executed and attested is admissible in evidence. Central Bank & Trust Co. v. Creede, 103 Ga. App. 203, 118 S.E.2d 844 (1961).

County bonds. — It is the duty of the clerk of the superior court to sign a validation certificate and attach the seal of the clerk's office to all county bonds regularly validated. Touchton v. Echols County, 211 Ga. 85, 84 S.E.2d 81 (1954).

Distribution of estate. — When a division in kind is made between heirs and distributees of a decedent, a certified copy of the return of the commissioners, and of the order of the court approving the return, are admissible in evidence in an action involving title to the land covered by the award. Bell v. Cone, 208 Ga. 467, 67 S.E.2d 558 (1951).

Fertilizer analysis record. — A certified copy of an analysis of fertilizers to be used in an action for false or incorrect branding should not contain a statement as to the penalty or damage for which the manufacturer or dealer might be deemed to be liable; only the mathematical result of the chemical analysis should be stated. Georgia Fertilizer Co. v. Walker, 45 Ga. App. 68, 163 S.E. 277 (1932).

Map of county. — Properly certified copy of a map of a county, in the office of the Secretary of State, is admissible in evidence without proof of the correctness or existence of the original. Berry v. Clark, 117 Ga. 964, 44 S.E. 824 (1903).

Marriage record. — Public record of a ceremonial marriage is conclusive evidence of such marriage, in the absence of a timely direct attack on such record, which attack must be supported by proper proof. Guess v. Guess, 202 Ga. 364, 43 S.E.2d 326 (1947).

Intoxilyzer report. — Defendant's conviction for driving under the influence to the extent that defendant's blood-alcohol content exceeded the legal limit was reversed as the trial court erroneously admitted a copy of the Intoxilyzer report over a best evidence objection; the state was unable to explain the absence of the original, the state presented no evidence that the state made any effort to locate the original, and O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20 did not apply. Lumley v. State, 280 Ga. App. 82, 633 S.E.2d 413 (2006).

Traffic citation indicating guilty plea admissible. — In a suit for damages sustained in an automobile collision, alleging that the defendant negligently failed to yield the right-of-way at a stop sign, the trial court did not err by admitting evidence of a traffic citation issued against the defendant in conjunction with the accident. The citation noted entry of a guilty plea, but also indicated the defendant was found guilty by the municipal court. Though ambiguous and subject to conflicting interpretations, the citation was relevant if interpreted by the jury as a plea of guilty. Hunter v. Hardnett, 199 Ga. App. 443, 405 S.E.2d 286, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 286 (1991).

Pleading not used as court record. —

When a plea of guilty, in a prior criminal proceeding arising from the same occurrence, was admitted in evidence in the subsequent civil case for its impeaching value, the plea was not admitted as a court paper, and this statute did not apply. Webb v. May, 91 Ga. App. 437, 85 S.E.2d 641 (1955) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20).

Book-in photographs. — Although the appellate court found that book-in photographs which the state offered to prove that defendant was the same person who was convicted of a prior felony, albeit under a different name, could have been admitted under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20, and the appellate court recommended that practice, the appellate court held that the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion during the sentencing phase of defendant's trial when the court admitted the photographs and used them to determine that defendant was subject to a sentence of life in prison without parole, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(c), because defendant had prior felony convictions. Farmer v. State, 268 Ga. App. 831, 603 S.E.2d 16 (2004).

Record of conviction. — Certification and seal on record of conviction furnished by an officer of the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Corrections) who was required by law to keep the records on file was sufficient to qualify the record for admission into evidence to establish the fact of lawfulness of incarceration even though the certification was not by the Superior Court of Whitfield County, the source of the original document. Ward v. State, 165 Ga. App. 163, 300 S.E.2d 528 (1983).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court excluded a document purported to be the codefendant's felony conviction, as the document was not a properly certified copy and was unauthenticated. McClendon v. State, 276 Ga. App. 543, 623 S.E.2d 738 (2005).

Search warrants. — Rule that a public record can be proved only by a duly certified copy thereof, in the absence of admission in open court that the document is an original public record does not apply to search warrants. DePalma v. State, 228 Ga. 272, 185 S.E.2d 53 (1971).

Secretary of State's office records. — A certified copy of a record in the office of the Treatment of Specific Records (Cont'd)

Secretary of State was held admissible on the question as to who was the grantee of land from the state. Ferrell v. Hurst, 68 Ga. 132 (1881).

Former homeowner was required to give notice to a defendant under O.C.G.A. § 10-1-399 even though the defendant was incorporated and had its principal place of business in a different state. There was no evidence that the defendant did not maintain a place of business in Georgia or keep some assets in Georgia, and the homeowner's contention was predicated on uncertified computer printouts from the Secretary of State's website, which were inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20. Steed v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Corp., 301 Ga. App. 801, 689 S.E.2d 843 (2009).

Transcript of tax records. — Upon the trial of a tax collector for embezzlement, transcripts from the books of the Comptroller General and former Treasurer of the State, certified under statute, are admissible in evidence to show a failure on the part of such defendant to pay over the taxes collected by the defendant tax collector. Shivers v. State, 53 Ga. 149 (1874).

Tax returns. — It was not error to allow material portions of certified copies of tax returns of the defendant in ejectment, as to the number of acres of land given in by the defendant and the value thereof for certain years, to be received in evidence over the objection that the copies were certified to by the tax receiver, and not by the tax collector; that the original returns themselves, and not certified copies of the returns, should be produced in evidence. Jett v. Hart, 152 Ga. 266, 109 S.E. 654 (1921).

Tax return records of state. — Books of tax returns in the office of the Comptroller

General are of equal rank as evidence with those in the proper offices of the respective counties, and the certificate of the Comptroller General touching the contents of such books is no less admissible than the certificates of the proper county officer would be. Clark v. Empire Lumber Co., 87 Ga. 742, 13 S.E. 826 (1891).

Execution for unpaid taxes. — After an execution for unpaid taxes was issued by the Comptroller General against a certain tract of unreturned wild land, and a sale of the land was made thereunder, and the execution was returned to the Comptroller's office with the official entries thereon, it became an office paper, and a certified copy of such execution and entries was admissible in evidence in lieu of the original. Cannon v. Gorham, 136 Ga. 167, 71 S.E. 142, 1912C Ann. Cas. 39 (1911).

Uncertified copies of computer printouts. — Uncertified copies of computer printouts apparently obtained from the Secretary of State's website could not be used as evidence to show a relationship between corporations because the printouts did not contain a certificate or attestation of a public officer and thus were not properly authenticated. Matson v. Noble Inv. Group, LLC, 288 Ga. App. 650, 655 S.E.2d 275 (2007).

Name search records from Secretary of State in form of computer printouts. — Trial court erred in considering name search documents from the Ohio Secretary of State's office because the documents were not properly authenticated under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20. Uncertified copies of computer printouts from a Secretary of State's website were not admissible as evidence unless authenticated. Std. Bldg. Co. v. Wallen Concept Glazing, Inc., 298 Ga. App. 443, 680 S.E.2d 527 (2009).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Statute relates only to the certification of state and county records, and does not embrace federal records. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-176 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20).

General Consideration

In general. — This statute (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-21) came from an Act of Legislature (Ga. L. 1890-91, p. 109). Former Code 1882, § 3816 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-20) applied exclusively to public officers of this state and the several counties thereof and therefore could have no reference to certificates signed by municipal officers. In fact, exemplification of the records of municipal corporations were not admissible at all until made so by this section, and it merely provides that the records shall be admitted in evidence when certified under seal. Metropolitan St. R.R. v. Johnson, 90 Ga. 500, 16 S.E. 49 (1892); Western & Atl. R.R. v. Hix, 104 Ga. 11, 30 S.E. 424 (1898); Farrar Lumber Co. v. City of Dalton, 20 Ga. App. 138, 92 S.E. 946 (1917); Harrison v. Central of Ga. Ry., 44 Ga. App. 167, 160 S.E. 694 (1931); R.O.H. Properties, Inc. v. Westside Elec. Co., 151 Ga. App. 857, 261 S.E.2d 767 (1979).

Certified copy is not the exclusive evidence of the minutes and records of a municipal corporation. Mullis v. State, 197 Ga.

City clerk is the proper person to certify to the ordinance. Cason v. State, 134 Ga. 786, 68 S.E. 554 (1910).

Seal is required. — An exemplification of a municipal record is not admissible in evidence unless duly certified under the corporate seal. Western & Atl. R.R. v. Hix, 104 Ga. 11, 30 S.E. 424 (1898); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Bond, 11 Ga. 13, 36 S.E. 299 (1900); Sewell v. City of Tallapoosa, 145 Ga. 19, 88 S.E. 577 (1916).

Municipality without corporate seal. — When a municipality has no seal, it is not error to admit in evidence an original ordinance if it is admitted to be such. Greenberg v. Rothberg, 72 Ga. App. 882, 35 S.E.2d 485 (1945).

Talley sheets of election. — Exemplifications of "records and minutes" of municipal corporations do not include talley sheets of former municipal elections. Sewell v. City of Tallapoosa, 145 Ga. 19, 88 S.E. 577 (1916).

Trial court properly admitted certified copy of arrest warrant. — See Elliott v. State,

253 Ga. 417, 320 S.E.2d 361 (1984).

Uniform Traffic Citations admissible. — Uniform Traffic Citations that came before the court within the court clerk's file were "certified under seal" as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-7-21. Graves v. State, 227 Ga. App. 628, 490 S.E.2d 111 (1997).

Venue. — Uniform Traffic Citations are not evidence, and thus cannot provide the factual basis necessary to establish venue. Graves v. State, 269 Ga. 772, 504 S.E.2d 679 (1998), overruled on other grounds. Jones v. State, 272 Ga. 900, 537 S.E.2d 80 (2000), reversing Graves v. State, 227 Ga. App. 628, 490 S.E.2d 111 (1997).

Council Records

Action of city council. — Until the contrary appears, the action of a city council is supposed to be in writing; and its book of minutes, properly proved as such, or an exemplification of the record, certified by the clerk or keeper of such records, under seal, is the proper mode of placing the evidence before the court. Farrar Lumber Co. v. City of Dalton, 20 Ga. App. 138, 92 S.E. 946 (1917); Mullis v. State, 197 Ga. 550, 30 S.E.2d 99 (1944).

Original book of minutes. — Official minutes of the city council may be proved by the production of the original book of minutes identified as such by the clerk of the corporation, and shown to have come from the clerk's custody. Mullis v. State, 197 Ga. 550, 30 S.E.2d 99 (1944).

Proving Ordinances1. In General

Two methods of proof of city ordinances are: (1) by an official certified copy thereof under seal as provided by statute; or, (2) by the production of the original book of ordinances, identified as such by the clerk of the corporation and shown to have come from the clerk's custody. Metropolitan St. R.R. v. Johnson, 90 Ga. 500, 16 S.E. 49 (1892); Western & Atl. R.R. v. Hix, 104 Ga. 11, 30 S.E. 424 (1898); Southern Ry. v. Thompson, 96 Ga. App. 305, 99 S.E.2d 845 (1957); R.O.H. Properties, Inc. v. Westside Elec. Co., 151 Ga. App. 857, 261 S.E.2d 767 (1979).

Judicial notice. — Municipal ordinance cannot be judicially noticed by state courts is well settled rule since the ordinances are treated as private statutes, and must be alleged and proved as matters of fact. Greenberg v. Rothberg, 72 Ga. App. 882, 35 S.E.2d 485 (1945).

If a local ordinance is relied on, the ordinance must be pled and proved in the trial court and, absent a properly admitted copy of the ordinance, neither the trial court nor the court of appeals may take judicial notice of the ordinance's existence. In re J.T., 239 Ga. App. 756, 521 S.E.2d 862 (1999).

Parol evidence insufficient. — An ordinance of a municipality cannot be established by parol evidence. Western & A.R.R. v. Peterson, 168 Ga. 259, 147 S.E. 513 (1929); Harrison v. Central of Ga. Ry., 44 Ga. App. 167, 160 S.E. 694 (1931); Greenberg v. Rothberg, 72 Ga. App. 882, 35 S.E.2d 485 (1945); Southern Ry. v. Thompson, 96 Ga. App. 305, 99 S.E.2d 845 (1957).

2. Exemplification Under This Statute

Certification of whole ordinance. — Where it is sought to have the clerk of a municipal corporation certify to a transcript of an ordinance, generally the entire ordinance on the subject in hand should be copied, but the admission of the certified transcript of one section will not always furnish ground for a reversal. Cason v. State, 134 Ga. 786, 68 S.E. 554 (1910).

Codified ordinances. — When city ordinances were codified, and such codification was adopted by an ordinance, and the clerk copied and certified a section of such codification, and also prepared and certified from the record a copy of the adopting ordinance, this was sufficient to authorize the admission in evidence of the copy of the section of the city code. Nashville, C. & St. L.

Ry. v. Peavler, 134 Ga. 618, 68 S.E. 432 (1910); Harrison v. Central of Ga. Ry., 44 Ga. App. 167, 160 S.E. 694 (1931).

Improper certification. — City court did not err in refusing to admit in evidence a copy of an ordinance which copy was not properly exemplified. Carroll v. Yearty, 102 Ga. App. 677, 117 S.E.2d 248 (1960).

Ordinance from published book or pamphlet. — Certification that the alleged ordinance is an exemplification from a book gives it no greater dignity than the book itself as the statute refers to records and minutes and the ordinance without proof of the ordinance's validity in the form of proper records or minutes is inadmissible. Western & A.R.R. v. Peterson, 168 Ga. 259, 147 S.E. 513 (1929); Harrison v. Central of Ga. Ry., 44 Ga. App. 167, 160 S.E. 694 (1931); City of Dalton v. Cochran, 80 Ga. App. 252, 55 S.E.2d 907 (1949); Southern Ry. v. Thompson, 96 Ga. App. 305, 99 S.E.2d 845 (1957).

Constitutionality of ordinance. — When there is no constitutional attack on the statute permitting a local ordinance, the appeals court must hold that a properly certified copy of such ordinance is admissible in evidence on the trial of an automobile negligence case in which it is alleged, and proof is tendered, that the defendants violated such an ordinance. Cambron v. Cogburn, 118 Ga. App. 454, 164 S.E.2d 350 (1968).

Validity of ordinance. — City ordinance certified by the clerk and keeper of the records of the municipality was not subject to the objection that it must be shown that the ordinance was duly and properly adopted. Perry v. State, 78 Ga. App. 273, 50 S.E.2d 709 (1948); Cambron v. Cogburn, 118 Ga. App. 454, 164 S.E.2d 350 (1968).

3. Production of Original

Municipal ordinance may be proved by the production of the original book of ordinances, identified as such by the clerk of the corporation, and shown to have come from the clerk's custody. Harrison v. Central of Ga. Ry., 44 Ga. App. 167, 160 S.E. 694 (1931).

Ordinance proven by original minutes. — It was not error for the court to permit the introduction, under proper proof, of the original minutes showing the adoption of the ordinance in question, rather than to require a certified copy thereof; this was competent evidence of an expression of formal corporate action. Mullis v. State, 197 Ga. 550, 30 S.E.2d 99 (1944).

24-7-22. Judicial notice of ordinance or resolution.

When certified by a public officer, clerk, or keeper of the county or municipal records specified in Code Section 24-7-20 or 24-7-21 and in the absence of contrary evidence, judicial notice may be taken of a copy of any ordinance or resolution included within a general codification required by paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of Code Section 36-80-19 as representing an ordinance or resolution duly approved by the governing authority and currently in force as presented. Any such certified copy shall be self-authenticating and shall be admissible as prima-facie proof of any such ordinance or resolution before any court or administrative body. (Code 1981, § 24-7-22, enacted by Ga. L. 2001, p. 1219, § 1.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1983, p. 884, § 4-2, repealed former Code Section 24-7-22, relating to certified transcript of proceedings in justices' courts. The former Code section was based on Ga. L. 1884-85, p. 100, §§ 1, 2; Civil Code 1895, §§ 5214, 5215;

Civil Code 1910, §§ 5801, 5802; Code 1933, §§ 38-604, 38-605.

24-7-23. Notarial acts proved by notary's certificate, filed in trial court.

All notarial acts of notaries public in relation to bills of exchange, drafts, and promissory notes, required to be done by law, may be proved by the certificate of such notary under his hand and seal, provided that such certificate is filed in the trial court at its first term and permitted to remain there until the trial. (Laws 1836, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 273; Code 1863, § 3753; Code 1868, § 3777; Code 1873, § 3829; Code 1882, § 3829; Civil Code 1895, § 5235; Civil Code 1910, § 5822; Code 1933, § 38-625.)

Certificate of protest. — Certificate of protest by a notary affords prima facie evidence of the facts therein recited. Patton v. Bank of La Fayette, 124 Ga. 965, 53 S.E. 664, 5 L.R.A. (n.s.) 592, 4 Ann. Cas. 639 (1906), overruled on other grounds, Sharpe v. Department of Transp., 267 Ga. 267, 476 S.E.2d 722 (1996).

Scope of certificate. — Notarial certificate alone is not prima facie evidence as to any act of the notary not therein certified to have been performed. Hobbs & Tucker v. Chemical Nat'l Bank, 97 Ga. 524, 25 S.E. 348 (1895).

Two sets of protests. — When two sets of notarial protests upon the same bill are filed both are entitled to be read without further proof by the notary. Southern Bank v. Mechanics Sav. Bank, 27 Ga. 252 (1859).

Failing to file in court. — That a certificate may not have been filed in court and there permitted to remain, agreeably to the provisions of this statute, simply furnished grounds for objecting to the certificate's reception in evidence. Having been regularly admitted in evidence, it was proper for the court to tell the jury what effect the law attaches to a notarial certificate of protest. Patton v. Bank of La Fayette, 124 Ga. 965, 53 S.E. 664, 5 L.R.A. (n.s.) 592, 4 Ann. Cas. 639 (1906), overruled on other grounds, Sharpe v. Department of Transp., 267 Ga. 267, 476 S.E.2d 722 (1996).

Protest rejected for nonfiling. — When considered in connection with the evidence of the notary public who issued a certificate of protest on the paper sued on, the certificate not having been filed in court and permitted to remain there as provided by statute, it was not error to reject the certificate from evidence when offered by the plaintiff. Woods v. Mays, 143 Ga. 209, 84 S.E. 450 (1915).

Protest with notice. — Notarial certificate, which states that a draft was presented at maturity, and payment demanded and refused for want of funds, and that due notice of the nonpayment was given on the same day to all the parties concerned, is sufficient notice of the dishonor thereof. Fields v. Thornton, 1 Ga. 306 (1846).

Law not only makes certificates prima facie evidence of the nonpayment of a note, but evidence of notice also, when so stated in the certificate under the hand and seal of the notary. Walker v. Bank of Augusta, 3 Ga. 486 (1847).

Protest without notice. — But a notarial certificate reciting the fact of protest for nonpayment but silent as to whether or not notice of protest was given to the endorser is no evidence that such notice was in fact given. Hobbs & Tucker v. Chemical Nat'l Bank, 97 Ga. 524, 25 S.E. 348 (1895).

24-7-24. Proof of laws and judicial records of other states, territories, or possessions; full faith and credit.

(a)(1) The acts of the legislature of any other state, territory, or possession of the United States shall be authenticated by affixing the seal of such state, territory, or possession thereto; provided, however, nothing herein shall be construed as repealing or modifying Code Section 9-11-43. The records and judicial proceedings, or copies thereof, of any court of any such state, territory, or possession shall be proved or admitted in other courts within this state by the attestation of the clerk and seal of the court annexed, if a seal exists, together with a certificate of a judge of the court that the attestation is in proper form.

(2) Such acts, records, and judicial proceedings, or copies thereof, so authenticated, shall have the same full faith and credit in every court within this state as they have by law or usage in the courts of such state, territory, or possession from which they are taken.

(b) In lieu of the above, the records and judicial proceedings, or copies thereof, of any court, tribunal, or quasi-judicial agency of any such state, territory, or possession may also be proved or admitted in any court, tribunal, office, or agency in this state when certified under the hand and seal, if any, of the judge, clerk, or other official of such court, tribunal, or quasi-judicial agency and shall be given the same full faith and credit as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section. ANALYSIS

- FULL FAITH AND CREDIT GRANTED
- FULL FAITH AND CREDIT DENIED
- ATTESTATION

General Consideration

In general. — It is usually considered that a substantial compliance with the terms of the statute is sufficient. Drake v. Drake, 187 Ga. 423, 1 S.E.2d 573 (1939).

This full faith and credit statute applies only to state records and proceedings. Edmonds v. State, 201 Ga. 108, 39 S.E.2d 24 (1946).

Georgia law applies in absence of proof of foreign law. — Although an insurance policy provided that the policy should be construed pursuant to another state’s law, upon the failure to prove that state’s law as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24, the law of Georgia was applied. General Am. Life Ins. Co. v. Samples, 167 Ga. App. 622, 307 S.E.2d 51 (1983).

In an action to domesticate a New York default judgment, the trial court properly applied Georgia law because the judgment debtor did not give written notice of intent to rely on foreign law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(c), nor did the debtor prove New York law as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24. Giarratano v. Glickman, 232 Ga. App. 75, 501 S.E.2d 266 (1998).

Child support orders. — Courts of this state are required to give full faith and credit to child support orders from other states that satisfy the jurisdictional due process standards of the federal Full Faith and Credit for Child Support Orders Act (28 U.S.C. § 1738B). Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Pinter, 241 Ga. App. 10, 525 S.E.2d 715 (1999).

Adoption proceedings. — Relatives of the mother of a child born with Fetal Alcohol Syndrome were not required to comply with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 19-8-7, as the father's relinquishment of his rights was valid because it was knowingly and voluntarily made in accordance with New Mexico law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24. Rokowski v. Gilbert, 275 Ga. App. 305, 620 S.E.2d 509 (2005).

Lack of jurisdiction not appearing on face of judgment. — Judgment creditor's evidence showed a prima facie case for domestication where judgment creditor produced an authenticated copy of its Louisiana judgment and the lack of jurisdiction did not appear on the face of the judgment nor did any fact regarding judgment debtor's possible nonresidency. Toledo Center Floor Covering, Inc. v. Richfield Carpet Mills, Inc., 176 Ga. App. 400, 336 S.E.2d 320 (1985).

Statute applicable to state, territorial and possession, but not federal, records, acts, and proceedings. — O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24 applies only to acts, records, and judicial proceedings of states, territories, and possessions of the United States. There is no Georgia statute expressly governing the authentication of copies of federal records. Rice v. State, 178 Ga. App. 748, 344 S.E.2d 720 (1986).

Owner of a lost negotiable promissory note no longer has the option of "establishing" the note pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24. The owner must now bring suit directly on the lost note itself pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 11-3-804. Ballard v. Frey, 179 Ga. App. 455, 346 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

Giving effect to judgment granted in sister state. — Full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution requires the courts of this state to give effect to a judgment granted in a sister state when the same is properly proved in a proceeding in which it may be relevant. Melnick v. Bank of Highwood, 151 Ga. App. 261, 259 S.E.2d 667 (1979).

Case action summary. — Certified copy of Alabama court's case action summary was admissible as proof of defendant's status as a convicted felon in a prosecution for possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Taylor v. State, 249 Ga. App. 5389, 548 S.E.2d 662 (2001).

Prima facie case is made by alleging and proving a properly authenticated copy of the judgment itself. Melnick v. Bank of Highwood, 151 Ga. App. 261, 259 S.E.2d 667 (1979).

Judgment rendered by competent court of another state is conclusive on merits when made basis of action or defense in the courts of Georgia, and the merits cannot be reinvestigated. Melnick v. Bank of Highwood, 151 Ga. App. 261, 259 S.E.2d 667 (1979).

Foreign judgment is conclusive as to all matters which were decided or could have been heard at the time of the obtaining of the foreign judgment. Melnick v. Bank of Highwood, 151 Ga. App. 261, 259 S.E.2d 667 (1979).

Responsibility on party wishing to raise foreign law issue. — Notice of intent is required to raise an issue of foreign law, to establish such law by compliance with statutory means (O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-43(c), 24-1-4, and 24-7-24), or cause a duty to be imposed on a court to judicially recognize any relevant, existing foreign law. Samay v. Som, 213 Ga. App. 812, 446 S.E.2d 230 (1994).

Provisions not exclusive. — This statute is not exclusive but cumulative of the method authorized by statute. Sloan v. Wolfsfeld, 110 Ga. 70, 35 S.E. 344 (1900); Seaboard Air-Line Ry. v. Phillips, 117 Ga. 98, 43 S.E. 494 (1903); Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Lovelace, 1 Ga. App. 446, 58 S.E. 93 (1907) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24).

Responsibility of state. — State cannot by merely failing or refusing to amend the state's code place greater restrictions upon a party seeking to rely on a foreign judgment than are imposed by the procedure enacted by Congress pursuant to the provisions of the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution. Peeples v. Peeples, 103 Ga. App. 462, 119 S.E.2d 710 (1961).

Collateral attack. — An authenticated foreign judgment does not preclude the defendant from pleading any special matter in avoidance of the judgment, such as fraud in the judgment's rendition. Potter v. Potter, 40 Ga. App. 324, 149 S.E. 579 (1929).

Collateral attack upon a petition to domesticate a foreign judgment that it was based on lack of personal jurisdiction is precluded in this state only if the defendant has appeared in the foreign court and has thus had an opportunity to litigate the issue. Maxwell v. Columbia Realty Venture, 155 Ga. App. 289, 270 S.E.2d 704 (1980).

When defense to foreign judgment is made, the responsibility of raising the issue concerning the law of the sister state is upon the plaintiff. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass'n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

Applicability. — Georgia resident's argument that the supplemental affidavit attached to the motion under the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State was inadmissible because it did not comply with O.C.G.A. § 24-7-27 failed because § 24-7-27 provides the method for authenticating out-of-state court records and the affidavit was not a court record. Wollesen v. State, 242 Ga. App. 317, 529 S.E.2d 630 (2000).

Full Faith and Credit Granted

Judicial cognizance taken of substantive Alabama law. — Presenting copies of relevant portions of the Code of Alabama and copies of two decisions of the Alabama Supreme Court published in the Southern Reporter, and requesting that the trial court take judicial notice of the Alabama law, permitted judicial cognizance of the substantive Alabama law. Meeker v. Eufaula Bank & Trust, 208 Ga. App. 702, 431 S.E.2d 475 (1993).

Judicial records and proceedings. — See Jackson v. Johnson, 67 Ga. 167 (1881); Tharpe v. Pearce, 89 Ga. 194, 15 S.E. 46 (1892); McFarland v. Fricks, 99 Ga. 104, 24 S.E. 868 (1896); Sloan v. Wolfsfeld, 110 Ga. 70, 35 S.E. 344 (1900); Hope v. First Nat'l

Prior criminal conviction. — See Strong v. State, 232 Ga. 294, 206 S.E.2d 461 (1974).

When clerk of court in Ohio certified the records of three prior felony convictions of a person with the same name of appellant, the trial court properly admitted the records into evidence because the appellant admitted having lived in Ohio at the time of the convictions and the appellant's name was unusual; moreover, this gave the jury a sufficient basis to find that the appellant actually was a convicted felon for impeachment purposes. Wyley v. State, 169 Ga. App. 106, 311 S.E.2d 530 (1983).

Certified copies of a defendant's out-of-state judgment of conviction, associated complaint, and plea hearing transcript were properly admitted into evidence to show that the defendant was a convicted felon for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-131, which prohibits possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Warren v. State, 289 Ga. App. 481, 657 S.E.2d 533 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 508 (Ga. 2008).

Full Faith and Credit Denied

In suit to domesticate default judgment rendered against defendant in another state, summary judgment was not authorized, it appearing that the copy of the foreign state's return of service which was filed of record in the Georgia case was not properly certified, in that it was not accompanied by the certificate of a judge to the effect that the attestation of the clerk was in proper form, nor was the seal of the foreign court affixed to the clerk's attestation. Without an original signature or court seal, a foreign divorce decree did not meet the statutory requirements for proper domestication. Henderson v. Justice, 223 Ga. App. 591, 478 S.E.2d 434 (1996).

Wills. — See Youmans v. Ferguson, 122 Ga. 331, 50 S.E. 141 (1905).

Authentication not exclusive means of proving law. — Authentication of foreign law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24 renders that evidence of foreign law admissible, and perhaps constitutes the most certain method of proving foreign law, but it is not the exclusive means of introducing foreign law in a case. Meeker v. Eufaula Bank & Trust, 208 Ga. App. 702, 431 S.E.2d 475 (1993).

Elements of authentication. — Establishment of three elements is commonly spoken of as authentication: the authority of the officer issuing the document, the incumbency of the officer, and the genuineness of the officer's signature or seal. Edmonds v. State, 201 Ga. 108, 39 S.E.2d 24 (1946).

Judge's certificate. — Certificate of the judge must affirmatively show that the judge presides in the court from which the record comes, and the judge's omission so to do cannot be supplied by an additional certificate to that effect from the clerk. Taylor v.

McKee, 118 Ga. 874, 45 S.E. 672 (1903).

Clerk's certificate. — A clerical error in a clerk's certificate was held not to vitiate the certificate. Conley v. Chapman, 74 Ga. 709 (1885).

When the clerk's certificate was incomplete, the docket of mayor's court was not given full faith and credit. Mason v. Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry., 135 Ga. 741, 70 S.E. 225, 33 L.R.A. (n.s.) 280 (1911).

There is no requirement that the signature of the clerk be handwritten rather than stamped. Sandifer v. Lynch, 244 Ga. 369, 260 S.E.2d 78 (1979).

Under O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24, the signature of the clerk need not be handwritten, nor is there a requirement that the foreign judgment itself be explicitly mentioned in the clerk's certificate. Foy v. Lewis, 248 Ga. 234, 282 S.E.2d 295 (1981).

24-7-25. Proof of nonjudicial records or books of other states territories, or possessions; full faith and credit.

(a)(1) All nonjudicial records or books, or copies thereof, kept in any public office of any state, territory, or possession of the United States shall be proved or admitted in any court or office in this state by the attestation of the custodian of the records or books, and the seal of his office annexed, if there is a seal, together with a certificate of a judge of a court of record of the county, parish, or district in which such office may be kept, or a certificate of the governor, the secretary of state, the chancellor, or the keeper of the great seal of the state, territory, or possession that the attestation is in due form and by the proper officers.

(2) If the certificate is given by a judge, it shall be further authenticated by the clerk or prothonotary of the court, who shall certify under his hand and the seal of his office that the judge is duly commissioned and qualified; or, if given by the governor, secretary of state, chancellor, or keeper of the great seal, the certificate shall be under the great seal of the state, territory, or possession in which it is made.

(3) Such records or books, or copies thereof, so authenticated, shall have the same full faith and credit in every court and office within this state as they have by law or usage in the courts or offices of the state, territory, or possession from which they are taken.

(b) In lieu of the above, the nonjudicial records or books, or copies thereof, kept in any public office of any state, territory, or possession of the United States may also be proved or admitted in evidence in any court, tribunal, office, or agency in this state when certified under the hand and seal, if any, by the officer or other official having custody or possession of the original thereof and shall be given the same full faith and credit as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section. ARTICLE 1

PUBLIC RECORDS

24-8-1. Establishment of lost records in superior court — Authorization; use as evidence.

Where any public records have been lost, mutilated, stolen, or destroyed, the superior court of the county where the records belong may establish copies. When so established, such records shall be in all respects evidence as the original records would have been. (Ga. L. 1887, p. 112, § 1; Civil Code 1895, § 5223; Civil Code 1910, § 5810; Code 1933, § 38-614.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Separation of powers not violated by establishing version of law. — Application of O.C.G.A. § 24-8-1 in a county's action to establish a copy of a zoning ordinance that had been lost did not violate the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers because the trial court's decree did not have the effect of either adopting or amending any zoning ordinance when the legislative process was complete, and the ordinance from which the alleged illegality arose was, in fact, a law; the supreme court's authority to reestablish a previously adopted ordinance, like its authority to construe statutes, neither violates the constitutional separation of powers nor constitutes an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority. E. Ga. Land & Dev. Co., LLC v. Baker, 286 Ga. 551, 690 S.E.2d 145 (2010).

No violation of zoning procedure law. — Application of O.C.G.A. § 24-8-1 in a county's action to establish a copy of a zoning ordinance that had been lost did not violate the Zoning Procedures Law (ZPL), O.C.G.A. § 36-66-1 et seq., because the trial court's decree did not have the effect of either adopting or amending any zoning ordinance; because it did not constitute final legislative action by a local government resulting in such adoption or amendment, the decree was not a "zoning decision" to which the ZPL applied. E. Ga. Land & Dev. Co., LLC v. Baker, 286 Ga. 551, 690 S.E.2d 145 (2010).

Copy of zoning ordinance. — Superior court did not err in denying a land and development company's motion for involuntary dismissal pursuant to O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-41(b) in a county's action under O.C.G.A. § 24-8-1 to establish a copy of a zoning ordinance that had been lost because the superior court thoroughly reviewed the evidence upon which the court relied, including the testimony of the company's forensic expert and several witnesses who were county officials when the ordinance was enacted and their successors in office, as well as the dovetailing of subsequent amendments to the sections and subsections of the proffered copy; that evidence was sufficient to support the superior court's finding that the copy was a true and correct duplicate of the original ordinance adopted at the meeting of the county board of commissioners. E. Ga. Land & Dev. Co., LLC v. Baker, 286 Ga. 551, 690 S.E.2d 145 (2010).

Superior court did not err in finding that a zoning ordinance was a public record under O.C.G.A. § 24-8-1 and in establishing a copy as an original because the plain language of § 24-8-1 showed that the statute applied to "any public records" and did not include any limitation to court records, and the fact that county ordinances could not normally be proved by parol evidence did not prevent such proof in the proceeding; when a proceeding is instituted to establish a copy of a public record which has been lost for many years, circumstantial evidence must be resorted to, and any circumstance legitimately offering an inference that the record was as contended may be considered, and a lost or destroyed ordinance may be established by parol evidence. E. Ga. Land & Dev. Co., LLC v. Baker, 286 Ga. 551, 690 S.E.2d 145 (2010).

24-8-2. Establishment of lost records in superior court — Petition by judge of probate court; when heard; establishment of records in whole or in part.

The judge of the probate court of the county may bring a petition which may be heard and determined at the first term after or during which the same may be filed. The superior court shall give precedence to the case and proceed with the same as speedily as possible. Upon the hearing it shall be discretionary with the court to order the whole or any part of such records established. (Ga. L. 1887, p. 112, § 2; Civil Code 1895, § 5224; Civil Code 1910, § 5811; Code 1933, § 38-615.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court. — Proceeding which is for the purpose of establishing a copy of a lost record of a will previously probated and admitted to record, and not to probate a copy of a lost or destroyed will, does not fall within the cases of which the Supreme Court has jurisdiction on writ of error. Bond v. Reid, 152 Ga. 481, 110 S.E. 281 (1922).

Transcription prevailing over copy of will. — In a proceeding to establish a copy of a lost or destroyed record of a will theretofore duly probated and admitted to record, a copy which a witness who is neither contradicted nor impeached swears positively was correctly transcribed by the witness from the record of wills in the judge's office, before the will's destruction, must prevail over a copy testified by other witnesses to be a correct copy merely of a will (not of the record thereof), which "will" is not shown to have been probated or recorded. Bond v. Reid, 29 Ga. App. 558, 116 S.E. 318 (1923).

24-8-3. Establishment of lost records in superior court — Contents of petition; copies to conform to originals.

The petition shall set forth the fact that some portion of the records has been lost, mutilated, stolen, or destroyed, specifying as nearly as may be possible the books or parts of the books in which they existed, and shall pray for the establishment of the same. The copies so established, as nearly as may be possible, shall specify and conform to the original book and pages of the same on which they originally existed. (Ga. L. 1887, p. 112, § 3; Civil Code 1895, § 5225; Civil Code 1910, § 5812; Code 1933, § 38-616.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Copy of zoning ordinance. — Superior court did not err in finding that a zoning ordinance was a public record under O.C.G.A. § 24-8-1 and in establishing a copy as an original because the plain language of § 24-8-1 showed that it applied to “any public records” and did not include any limitation to court records, and the fact that county ordinances could not normally be proved by parol evidence did not prevent such proof in the proceeding; when a proceeding is instituted to establish a copy of a public record which has been lost for many years, circumstantial evidence must be resorted to, and any circumstance legitimately offering an inference that the record was as contended may be considered, and a lost or destroyed ordinance may be established by parol evidence. E. Ga. Land & Dev. Co., LLC v. Baker, 286 Ga. 551, 690 S.E.2d 145 (2010).

24-8-4. Establishment of lost records in superior court — Appointment of auditor authorized; auditor’s report; hearing on objections.

The court or the judge thereof may appoint an auditor in all cases where he shall deem it proper, who shall hear evidence, summon witnesses, and compel the production of books and papers, under such rules and regulations as are now practiced in the courts. The auditor shall make his report of such copies of such lost, stolen, mutilated, or destroyed records; when such report is filed, it shall be made the judgment of the court, unless objections are filed to the same or some part thereof as being incorrect, which objections, if any, shall be heard and determined by the court without the intervention of a jury. (Ga. L. 1887, p. 112, § 4; Civil Code 1895, § 5226; Civil Code 1910, § 5813; Code 1933, § 38-617.)

Discretion of trial court. — In equity cases, the Supreme Court will not interfere with the discretion of a trial judge in overruling exceptions of fact to an auditor’s report, unless it appears that there has been a manifest abuse of such discretion. Christian v. Bremer, 199 Ga. 285, 34 S.E.2d 40 (1945).

Copy of zoning ordinance. — Superior court did not err in finding that a zoning ordinance was a public record under O.C.G.A. § 24-8-1 and in establishing a copy as an original because the plain language of § 24-8-1 showed that the statute applied to “any public records” and did not include any limitation to court records, and the fact that county ordinances could not normally be proved by parol evidence did not prevent such proof in the proceeding; when a proceeding is instituted to establish a copy of a public record which has been lost for many years, circumstantial evidence must be resorted to, and any circumstance legitimately offering an inference that the record was as contended may be considered, and a lost or destroyed ordinance may be established by parol evidence. E. Ga. Land & Dev. Co., LLC v. Baker, 286 Ga. 551, 690 S.E.2d 145 (2010).

Burden of proof. — When error is assigned upon the refusal of the judge to approve an exception of fact to an auditor’s report in an equity case, the burden is upon the plaintiff in error to show to the satisfaction of the Supreme Court that the finding of the auditor is unsupported by evidence, the presumption being that the finding is correct; and, if it does not distinctly appear that the finding is unsupported, the judgment refusing to approve the exceptions of fact will be affirmed. Christian v. Bremer, 199 Ga. 285, 34 S.E.2d 40 (1945).

24-8-5. Establishment of lost records in superior court — Auditor's compensation.

The auditor shall receive for his services such compensation as may be allowed by the court, to be paid out of the public funds of the county. (Ga. L. 1887, p. 112, § 5; Civil Code 1895, § 5227; Civil Code 1910, § 5814; Code 1933, § 38-618.)

24-8-6. Establishment of lost records in superior court — Right to file objections; time of filing same; hearing thereon.

Any person who is adversely interested in the report of the auditor or who claims that there is any mistake in the report shall have the right to file objections thereto as specified in Code Section 24-8-4. Said objections shall be filed within 30 days after the filing of the report and shall be heard and determined in the manner prescribed in Code Section 24-8-4. (Ga. GENERAL CONSIDERATION PARTICULAR INSTRUMENTS

General Consideration

Pleadings presumed correct. — Lost pleadings established by the court on motion are presumed to be correct. Southern Fertilizer & Chem. Co. v. Kirby, 52 Ga. App. 688, 184 S.E. 363 (1936); Salter v. Salter, 81 Ga. App. 864, 60 S.E.2d 424 (1950).

Papers lost or unrecorded. — Fact that the papers were not recorded or the record cannot be found is no excuse for not establishing according to law. Eagle & Phenix Mfg. Co. v. Bradford, 57 Ga. 249 (1876).

Proof of contents by parol. — Contents may be proved by parol without establishing the lost or destroyed original. Bridges v. Thomas, 50 Ga. 378 (1873); Saffold v. Banks,

69 Ga. 289 (1882); Lewis v. State Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 23 Ga. App. 647, 99 S.E. 147 (1919).

Notice not indispensably necessary to be given of a motion to the court to establish copies of office papers. Doe v. Roe, 3 Ga. 121 (1847); Eagle & Phenix Mfg. Co. v. Bradford, 57 Ga. 249 (1876).

Rule nisi and notice not required. — Copies of lost papers belonging to or pertaining to a suit pending in court may be established instanter on motion; and it is not indispensably essential to the validity of an order of court establishing lost papers that a formal rule nisi should issue, or that the opposite party should be served with notice of the proceeding. Southern Fertilizer & Chem. Co. v. Kirby, 52 Ga. App. 688, 184 S.E. 363 (1936).

Waiver. — When judgment establishing lost papers rendered in municipal court in a case which had originated in a justice's court and which was transferable to the municipal court, a judgment afterwards rendered in the municipal court against the garnishee on the garnishee's default in answering the summons of garnishment was not illegal and void and subject to be set aside as void on motion in arrest on the ground that the papers had been lost while the case was pending in the justice's court, and before the establishment by the municipal court, and therefore that the municipal court had no jurisdiction to establish the papers, where no attack upon the validity of the order establishing the papers in the municipal court was made by the garnishee on the ground that the papers could not legally have been established in the municipal court. Southern Fertilizer & Chem. Co. v. Kirby, 52 Ga. App. 688, 184 S.E. 363 (1936).

Traverse. — When a motion is made to establish a lost paper and the opposite party files a written traverse, denying the existence of the alleged lost original, it is error to refuse that party the right to offer competent evidence in support of the traverse. Beall v. Patterson, 146 Ga. 233, 91 S.E. 71 (1916).

Variance between original and copy. — Plaintiff having introduced in evidence a copy of the indictment alleged to have been maliciously procured, together with an order of the court thereon, establishing the same as an office paper in lieu of the lost original, and an order of nolle prosequi entered upon the established copy, the court did not err in permitting the defendant to know, by parol, that the established copy was prepared by counsel for the accused, that there was a material variance between it and the original indictment, and that, after being so established, it was nolle prosequi solely because of that variance. O'Berry v. Davis, 31 Ga. App. 755, 121 S.E. 857 (1924).

When case transferred to new county. — When a case is to be transferred from an old county to a new one, lost court papers in the case must be established, before the transfer, in the old county. McDougald v. Maitland, Kennedy & Co., 30 Ga. 703 (1860).

Paper subsequently found. — Superior court has power to rectify an order establishing a lost paper, by the paper itself, when found. Phillips v. Behn & Foster, 19 Ga. 298 (1856).

State as party. — State through its solicitor general (now district attorney) should be a party to all motions to establish lost papers belonging to a state case. Buchanan v. Beckham, 18 Ga. 527 (1855).

Particular Instruments

Bill of exceptions deposited in the clerk's officer but not with the clerk, never became an office paper and the court erred in establishing it in a summary manner. Perry v. Friedin, 17 Ga. App. 417, 87 S.E. 683 (1916).

Certiorari, though sanctioned, which was never in the office of the clerk of the superior court is not an office paper. Lovelady v. Hockenhull, 58 Ga. 469 (1877).

Unfiled certiorari. — Certiorari not marked "filed in office" and which was never in the office of the clerk of the superior court or even in the possession of the clerk at all, is not an office paper so as to be established by copy instanter on motion. Humphries v. Morris, 179 Ga. 55, 175 S.E. 242 (1934).

Claim affidavit. — Claim affidavit transmitted to the superior court became an office paper and could be established instanter. Crawford v. Crawford, 139 Ga. 68, 76 S.E. 564 (1912).

Guardian's bond is not an office paper and cannot be established instanter. Bryant v. Owen, 1 Ga. 355 (1846).

Written sentence in criminal case in the superior court does not cease to be an office paper or record because the sentence has not been recorded in the record book of writs in the office of the clerk of the superior court. Teasley v. Nelson, 164 Ga. 242, 138 S.E. 72 (1927).

Summons and pleadings. — After a suit in a justice's court upon a note has proceeded to judgment and execution issued thereon, the summons, service thereof, and pleas, if any, are office papers, and if lost may be established in that court instantly on motion. Bell v. Bowdoin, 109 Ga. 209, 34 S.E. 339 (1899).

Transcript. — Copy of an official transcript preserved in the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court, duly certified, is competent and sufficient evidence as to contents. Eagle & Phenix Mfg. Co. v. Bradford, 57 Ga. 249 (1876).

Cited in Paschal v. Turner, 116 Ga. 736, 42 S.E. 1010 (1902); Felker v. Johnson, 189 Ga. 797, 7 S.E.2d 668 (1940); Bainbridge Farm Co. v. Bower, 194 Ga. 304, 21 S.E.2d 224 (1942).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Clerk's certification insufficient. — Clerk's certification that the indictment is lost is not sufficient replacement for a certified copy of the actual indictment. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-61.

24-8-21. Summary establishment of lost or destroyed evidence of indebtedness in probate court — Petition; service of notice; hearing and decision; recordation; appeal to superior court.

(a) The owner, agent of the owner, or legal representative of the owner of any bond, bill, note, draft, check, or other evidence of indebtedness which has been lost or destroyed may establish a copy of the same in a summary manner by filing a petition with the judge of the probate court of the county of the residence of the alleged debtor or maker, if he is a resident of this state; and the judge of the probate court is deemed as judicial officer for the purpose of this Code section. The petition shall be sworn to by the party applying and shall contain as full and accurate a description as possible of the lost paper, of the loss and mode of loss, of the inability to find the same and why, along with a prayer for the establishment of a copy setting forth the copy desired to be established.

(b) Upon the filing of a petition, the judge shall issue a citation or notice, to the alleged debtor or maker, requiring him to appear at a day not more than ten days distant and show cause, if he has any, why the copy should not be established in lieu of the lost original. The citation or notice shall be personally served by either the sheriff or bailiff or by a person specially appointed by the judge for the purpose, at least five days before the time of hearing.

(c) If no successful defense is made at the time and place appointed, the judge shall proceed to establish, by an order entered on the petition, the copy so prayed to be established, which shall have all the effect of the original. The petition, notice, and order shall be entered in a book of record specially prepared for the purpose.

(d) If the debtor or maker so served files a defense under oath to the effect that the original never existed as claimed, the judge shall decide, after giving the parties time for preparation and hearing, not to exceed 20 days, upon the case so made. If the judge's decision is in favor of the applicant and no appeal is entered as provided in subsection (e) of this Code section, the decision shall be entered on the petition and the copy so established shall have the same effect as an original. If the judge's decision is in favor of the alleged debtor or maker, the judge shall also enter his decision on the petition. In all cases the proceedings shall be recorded as provided in subsection (c) of this Code section.

(e) Except as provided in Article 6 of Chapter 9 of Title 15, if either party to the proceedings provided for in this Code section is dissatisfied, he may appeal upon giving the usual bond and security for costs, as in cases of appeal from the probate court to the superior court. The appeal shall be tried in the superior court from all the pleadings and proceedings as were before the judge of the probate court. In the superior court the case shall be tried and determined as provided in Code Sections 24-8-24 through 24-8-27.

When the person alleged to be a debtor or maker of a lost or destroyed paper as set forth in Code Section 24-8-21 does not reside in this state, the alleged debtor or maker may be made a party to the proceedings by publication, in a newspaper to be designated by the judge of the probate court, twice a month for two months. Reserved. Repealed by Ga. L. 1983, p. 884, § 4-2, effective July 1, 1983.

24-8-24. Establishment of lost or destroyed paper in superior court — Petition and affidavit; issuance and service of rule nisi.

(a) The owner of a lost or destroyed paper which is not an office paper as defined in Code Section 24-8-20 who desires to establish the same shall present to the clerk of the superior court of the county where the maker of the paper resides, if the maker is a resident of this state, a petition in writing, together with a copy, in substance, of the paper lost or destroyed, as nearly as he can recollect, which copy shall be sworn to by the petitioner, his agent, or his attorney.

(b) Thereupon, the clerk shall issue a rule nisi in the name of the judge of the superior court, calling upon the opposite party to show cause, if he has any, why the copy sworn to should not be established in lieu of the lost or destroyed original. The rule shall be served personally upon the respondent by the sheriff, his deputy, or any constable of this state, if the respondent is found in this state, 20 days before the sitting of the court to which the rule nisi is made returnable. If the respondent cannot be found in this state, the rule shall be published in some public newspaper twice a month for two months before the final hearing of the rule. (Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Effect of establishment. — When once established, the copy is original evidence and is admissible as such in any controversy where the original would be admissible. Leggett v. Patterson, 114 Ga. 714, 40 S.E. 736 (1902) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Remedy cumulative. — An established copy may thereafter afford a basis for an action at law. This procedure, however, is merely cumulative, and not exclusive of the right of the owner or holder of a lost paper to sue upon a copy of the paper, and prove the existence of the lost original if it is disputed. Continental Fertilizer Co. v. Pass, 7 Ga. App. 721, 67 S.E. 1052 (1910) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Petition. — It is not necessary (though it is the better practice) for the petition to allege the loss; and if the loss is proved, the plaintiff may recover upon sufficient evidence of the contents. Trice v. Adams, 33 Ga. App. 257, 125 S.E. 878 (1924) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5314 to 5320).

Allegation of jurisdiction. — Petition must allege that the defendants, or one of the defendants, resides in the county in which the application is made, in order to give that court jurisdiction. Cobb v. Cobb, 10 Ga. 445 (1851) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Copy attached to petition. — Something must be presented in the petition, or annexed to the petition, which is claimed to be a copy in substance of the lost volume or document. Ex parte Calhoun, 87 Ga. 359, 13 S.E. 694 (1891) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Copy of entire instrument. — Copy required by this section must be a copy of the entire instrument. Jefferson v. Bowers, 33 Ga. 452 (1863) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Personal service. — Notice of a proceeding to establish a lost or destroyed paper must be served personally on the party, if to be found within the state; and if a party residing out of the county be served by leaving a copy at the party's residence, the proceeding is void. Bond v. Whitfield, 28 Ga. 537 (1859) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Proper parties. — Law does not contain any provision as to who are proper parties to a suit for the establishment of lost papers. Bogle & Fields v. Maddox, 27 Ga. 472 (1859) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Need not be party. — Procedure need not be by a party but may be by any one who best knows the facts. Banks v. Dixon, 24 Ga. 483 (1858) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Representative of deceased as party. — Legal representatives of deceased makers of a note need not be made parties. Jefferson v. Bowers, 33 Ga. 452 (1863) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Acceptor of draft as party. — If the proceeding be against the drawer of a draft, the acceptors should be made parties. Bond v. Whitfield, 28 Ga. 537 (1859) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Standing of heir. — An heir at law of the grantee in an unrecorded deed conveying land has such an interest in the land as will authorize the heir to maintain an action to establish a copy of the deed after the deed has been lost. Orr v. Dunn, 145 Ga. 137, 88 S.E. 669 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5314-5320).

Res judicata. — Judgment establishing a copy of an alleged lost original constitutes a conclusive determination that a genuine original had in fact existed and is binding upon the parties in that proceeding and upon heirs at law of the alleged deceased grantor since the grantor's administrator was a party defendant therein. Milner v. Allgood, 184 Ga. 288, 191 S.E. 132 (1937) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5314-5320).

Effect of decree. — When in a suit to establish a copy of a lost deed the jury found in favor of the plaintiff's contention as to the character of the deed, and upon such verdict the judge entered a decree that the plaintiff recover the land described, that fee-simple title be vested in the plaintiff, and that the deed attached to the petition be established as prayed, the only effect of the decree was to establish the deed as prayed by the plaintiff, the provisions therein as to recovery of land and decree of title being surplusage. Loftin v. Carroll County Bd. of Educ., 195 Ga. 689, 25 S.E.2d 293 (1943) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5314-5320).

Equitable jurisdiction. — When a petition in equity was consolidated with the petition at law in the same court for the establishment of the lost bond, the fact that law and equity have a concurrent jurisdiction in the establishment of lost instruments would not defeat the equitable jurisdiction of the court or preclude the court from granting all necessary and proper relief to each of the parties. Bainbridge Farm Co. v. Bower, 194 Ga. 304, 21 S.E.2d 224 (1942) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5314-5320).

Appellate jurisdiction. — When a petition in a superior court to establish a copy of a deed claimed to have been lost alleged only that the debtor resided in the county in which the suit was filed, that the debtor had executed to the plaintiff a certain deed, a true copy of which was attached to the petition, and that the deed had been lost, and in which petition the only prayer was that “the clerk of this court issue a rule nisi calling upon (the defendant) to show cause, if any he has, why the copy deed aforesaid should not be established in lieu of said lost original,” such petition was a mere statutory proceeding to establish a copy of the deed claimed to have been lost, and was not a suit in equity such as to grant appellate jurisdiction in the Supreme Court. Loftin v. Carroll County Bd. of Educ., 195 Ga. 689, 25 S.E.2d 293 (1943) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5314-5320).

Establishment as bar to defense on note. — Establishment of a lost note is no bar to any defense that might be set up to the original note. Jenkins v. Forbes, 121 Ga. 383, 49 S.E. 284 (1904) (decided under former Civil Code, 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Schedule and plot in homestead. — After the plot and schedule have been approved by the ordinary (now judge of the probate court) and have been recorded those documents are private papers and may be established. Paschal v. Turner, 116 Ga. 736, 42 S.E. 1010 (1902) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754); Paschal v. Hutchinson, 119 Ga. 243, 46 S.E. 103 (1903) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Lost wills. — Superior courts of this state have no jurisdiction to establish copies of lost wills. Perkins v. Perkins, 21 Ga. 13 (1857) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754); Ponce v. Underwood, 55 Ga. 601 (1876) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

24-8-25. Establishment of lost or destroyed paper in superior court — When continuance granted.

In a proceeding to establish lost papers under Code Section 24-8-24, no continuance shall be granted unless it appears reasonable and just to the court; nor shall a continuance be allowed to the same party more than once, except for providential cause. 24-8-26. Establishment of lost or destroyed paper in superior court — Grant of rule absolute.

When a rule nisi has been duly served as provided in Code Section 24-8-24, the court shall grant a rule absolute establishing the copy of the lost or destroyed paper sworn to, unless good and sufficient cause is shown why the rule absolute should not be granted. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Judgment conclusive. — Judgment establishing a copy of a deed is conclusive, and evidence of nondelivery of the original is excluded. Graham v. Graham, 137 Ga. 668, 74 S.E. 426 (1912).

24-8-27. Establishment of lost or destroyed paper in superior court — Furnishing of certified endorsement of copy.

When the copy of the lost or destroyed paper is established, the clerk of the court in which it is done shall furnish the copy to the party who had it established, with a certified endorsement thereon of the day and term of the court when the rule absolute was granted, provided all costs of the proceeding have been paid. (Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 238, § 5; Code 1863, § 3889; Code 1868, § 3909; Code 1873, § 3985; Code 1882, § 3985; Civil Code 1895, § 4748; Civil Code 1910, § 5317; Code 1933, § 63-206.)

24-8-28. Procedure as to action on lost or destroyed note, bill, bond, or other instrument.

(a) If the paper which has been lost or destroyed is a note, bill, bond, or other instrument upon which an action may be brought, the owner may institute an action thereon as soon as the rule nisi has been issued as provided for in Code Section 24-8-24. The complaint shall set forth that the paper upon which the action is based is lost or destroyed. In no case shall a judgment be entered in the action until it is determined whether the application to establish the paper is granted or not. If the application is granted, then judgment shall be entered as in other cases.

(b) In an action as provided for in subsection (a) of this Code section, production of the paper upon which the action is based shall not be demanded until the time for rendition of judgment in the action; at that time, if the plaintiff produces a copy of the paper with a certified endorsement thereon by the clerk of the court in which it was established, as provided in Code Section 24-8-27, it shall be taken and considered as the original.

(c) This Code section shall not apply to instruments to which Title 11, the "Uniform Commercial Code," is applicable. (Ga. L. 1855-56, p. 238, §§ 6-8; Code 1863, §§ 3890, 3891; Code 1868, §§ 3910, 3911; Code 1873, §§ 3986, 3987; Code 1882, §§ 3986, 3987; Civil Code 1895, §§ 4750, 4751; Civil Code 1910, §§ 5319, 5320; Code 1933, §§ 63-208, 63-209; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4750, 4751 and 4754, and former Code 1933, § 63-207 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Parol evidence. — It is, on the trial of an action upon a promissory note, after showing the loss or destruction thereof, competent to prove by parol that a paper attached as an exhibit to the plaintiff's declaration is a true and correct copy of the lost original. Haug v. Riley, 101 Ga. 372, 29 S.E. 44, 40 L.R.A. 244 (1897) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, § 4750).

Admission of copy. — In answer to a plea of non est factum it is only necessary for the plaintiff to make out a prima facie case to authorize the admission in evidence of the paper alleged to be a substantial copy of the original note. Brown v. Wilson, 55 Ga. App. 262, 189 S.E. 860 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 63-207).

Finding original pending suit. — When proceedings are instituted to establish a lost note, and suit is commenced after the rule nisi has issued and, pending the cause, the original note is found, it is not error to allow plaintiff to amend plaintiff's declaration so as to sue upon the original note thus found, even though there may be some immaterial discrepancies between the original note and the copy which it was sought to establish. Cheney v. Dalton, 46 Ga. 401 (1872).

Judgment on note. — Suit on a lost note is as effectual as a suit upon an established copy if the only purpose of establishing the copy is to obtain judgment upon the note, and fact that there was a plea of non est factum makes no difference; and a suit upon an established copy of a note is as effectual as a suit upon the original. Brown v. Wilson, 55 Ga. App. 262, 189 S.E. 860 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 63-207).

Prior payment on note. — In an action upon an established copy of a lost promissory note, payment made prior to the judgment establishing the copy may be pleaded. Jenkins v. Forbes, 121 Ga. 383, 49 S.E. 284 (1904) (decided under former Civil Code 1895, §§ 4751, 4754).

Owner of a lost negotiable promissory note no longer has the option of "establishing" the note. The owner must now bring suit directly on the lost note itself pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 11-3-804. Ballard v. Frey, 179 Ga. App. 455, 346 S.E.2d 893 (1986).

Dismissal of action. — Although the petition in an action on a lost note might have been subject to a timely demurrer (now motion to dismiss), still the action could not properly be dismissed on oral motion. Witherington v. Ware, 17 Ga. App. 433, 87 S.E. 603 (1916).

24-9-1. Competency of witnesses — Generally.

(a) No person offered as a witness shall be excluded by reason of incapacity, for crime or interest or from being a party, from giving evidence, either in person or by deposition, according to the practice of the court, on the trial of any issue joined, or of any matter or question, or on any inquiry arising in any suit, action, or proceeding, civil or criminal, in any court or before any judge, jury, sheriff, coroner, magistrate, officer, or party having by law or consent of parties authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence; but every person so offered shall be competent and compellable to give evidence on behalf of either or any of the parties to the suit, action, or other proceeding.

(b) This Code section, as revised by an Act approved April 17, 1979 (Ga. L. 1979, p. 1261), shall apply to transactions or occurrences which take place on or after July 1, 1979, and this Code section, as it existed prior to July 1, 1979, shall apply to transactions or occurrences which took place prior to July 1, 1979. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Admissibility not equated with competency. — An objection on the ground of admissibility of the evidence does not raise the issue as to the competency of the witness. Sumter County v. Pritchett, 125 Ga. App. 222, 186 S.E.2d 798 (1971).

Testimony received without objection. — Testimony of an incompetent witness, if it is material, when received without objection, is of probative value, and will be considered and given such weight as the jury deems the testimony entitled to in view of the witness's interest and other circumstances. Brittain Bros. Co. v. Davis, 174 Ga. 1, 161 S.E. 841 (1931).

Competency objection must be distinctly raised. — Witness offered may be permitted to testify, unless there is an objection or exception distinctly raising the question of the witness's competency. Sumter County v. Pritchett, 125 Ga. App. 222, 186 S.E.2d 798 (1971).

Waiver. — Even though a witness may be termed incompetent, unless a question of public policy is involved, the incompetency of the witness may be waived. Williams v. State, 69 Ga. App. 863, 27 S.E.2d 54 (1943).

Competent claimant's testimony not to be ignored. — There was competent evidence to support an award based on claimant's testimony, considering its interpretation and credibility; the superior court's denial of the award solely because of the claimant's statements was reversed. Gasses v. Professional Plumbing Co., 204 Ga. App. 69, 418 S.E.2d 424 (1992).

Lex fori regulates competency. Bowers v. Southern Ry., 10 Ga. App. 367, 73 S.E. 677 (1912).

Prior conviction of felony. — Person convicted of a felony is a competent witness; the fact of the person's conviction only goes to the person's credit. Bowers v. Southern Ry., 10 Ga. App. 367, 73 S.E. 677 (1912); Lewis v. State, 243 Ga. 443, 254 S.E.2d 830 (1979).

Prior adjudication of insanity. — That the chief witness for the state had been adjudicated insane in another state prior to the commission of the offense charged and testified about does not have the effect of denying probative value to the testimony of such witness: such a person is not incompetent to testify and the proof of the commitment for insanity goes to the credit of the witness only. Saxe v. State, 112 Ga. App. 804, 146 S.E.2d 376 (1965).

Impeachment at prior trial. — Fact that a witness for the state had been impeached by the state, as unworthy of belief, in a previous trial of the witness, is not ground for refusing to permit the witness to testify in a present case. Daniel v. State, 118 Ga. App. 370, 163 S.E.2d 863 (1968), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 919, 89 S. Ct. 1193, 22 L. Ed. 2d 453 (1969).

Effect of liability for contempt. — Despite the fact that the witness personally, or others, may be subject to punishment for contempt of court, the testimony will not be excluded. Best v. State, 176 Ga. 46, 166 S.E. 772 (1932).

Testimony concerning adultery. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-1 allows a party to be a witness for oneself on all relevant issues; but O.C.G.A. § 24-9-2 creates an exception for proceedings “instituted in consequence of adultery,” with the result that in such proceedings a party is not competent to testify to that party’s or that party’s spouse’s adultery. Owens v. Owens, 247 Ga. 139, 274 S.E.2d 484 (1981).

Accountant employed under authority of court. — When the judge appointed an auditor to pass upon all questions arising in a case, and authorized the auditor to employ a certified public accountant to assist in examining books, records, and accounts, an accountant who was thereafter so employed, and who had made an examination of books of the plaintiff upon which the defendant relied in part to establish a defense and counterclaim, was not incompetent as a witness to testify as to what the books showed, either because the accountant was employed under authority of the court to assist the auditor, or because the order referring the case to an auditor had been revoked and the objecting party had never had an opportunity to appear before the auditor. Bible v. Somers Constr. Co., 197 Ga. 761, 30 S.E.2d 623 (1944).

Pre-1979 testimony admissible when not against estate’s interests. — Testimony of a transaction alleged to have been undertaken with the deceased in 1978 should have been admitted because it was not against the interest of the estate of the deceased. Bowens v. Holmes, 262 Ga. 179, 415 S.E.2d 632 (1992).

Pre-1979 statement admissible as to appellee’s parents regarding decedent’s statements. — Appellee’s parents were competent witnesses regarding statements made to the parents by the decedent prior to July 1, 1979 to prove that the decedent contracted to adopt the appellee. Morgan v. Howard, 285 Ga. 512, 678 S.E.2d 882 (2009).

Continuing business relationship does not constitute a “transaction” within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-1 and thus testimony as to an alleged oral contract made before July 1, 1979 with a party since deceased, which defined the relationship which extended beyond that date, is not admissible under the former dead man’s statute. Wilson v. Nichols, 253 Ga. 84, 316 S.E.2d 752 (1984).

Former dead man’s statute barred testimony regarding a conversation between plaintiff, plaintiff’s mother, and a person since deceased because the plaintiff’s claim was “against the interest” of the deceased, i.e., the interest of the deceased’s estate. Willis v. Kennedy, 267 Ga. 165, 476 S.E.2d 246 (1996).

Former dead man’s statute rendered a witness incompetent to testify as to a conversation with a person since deceased regardless of whether the testimony might be admissible under other rules of evidence. Willis v. Kennedy, 267 Ga. 165, 476 S.E.2d 246 (1996).

Under former Code 1933, § 38-1603 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-1), neither plaintiff nor his wife could testify as to promise of a “contract for life” allegedly made to plaintiff and plaintiff’s spouse by two deceased officers of defendant corporation. Kitfield v. Henderson, Black & Greene, 231 Ga. App. 130, 498 S.E.2d 537 (1998).

For application of former dead man’s statute in action seeking cancellation of deed allegedly obtained by fraud, see McLendon v. Georgia Kaolin Co., 782 F. Supp. 1548 (M.D. Ga. 1992); Garbutt v. Southern Clays, Inc., 894 F. Supp. 456 (M.D. Ga. 1995).

Exclusion of expert witness improper. — Trial court abused its discretion in excluding a homeowner's expert witness solely on the basis of the expert's alleged interest in the outcome of the case, and because the trial court's unauthorized preemptive protection of the homeowner's attorney immediately led to the dismissal of the claim for damages for failure to produce any expert evidence of causation, the homeowner did not have a day in court; although the expert indicated that, at the time of the expert's deposition, the expert intended to decide how much to bill the homeowner after the trial, based on the expert's own evaluation of whether the expert testimony was "usable," there was no evidence in the truncated voir dire of the expert that the homeowner's attorney agreed to that scheme or otherwise agreed that the expert's compensation would be contingent on the outcome of the case. Meacham v. Franklin-Heard County Water Auth., 302 Ga. App. 69, 690 S.E.2d 186 (2009).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general. Owens v. Owens, 247 Ga. 139, 274 S.E.2d 484 (1981), is no longer applicable in view of the 1982 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-2 which eliminated language excepting certain adultery cases from the broad competency rules of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-1; consequently, in such cases the competency rules of § 24-9-1 are now applicable. 24-9-3. Effect of religious belief.

Religious belief shall go only to the credit of a witness. (Ga. L. 1841, p. 144, § 1; Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 280; Code 1863, § 3772; Code 1868, § 3797; Code 1873, § 3853; Code 1882, § 3853; Civil Code 1895, § 5268; Civil Code 1910, § 5857; Code 1933, § 38-1602.)

Belief in supreme being. — Although desirable, it is not essential to the witness's competency that the witness believe in a supreme being, or that the witness be aware of God's existence. Smith v. State, 247 Ga. 511, 277 S.E.2d 53 (1981).

Individual acts of witness. — It is not competent to take up individual acts of a witness and inquire of the witness as to the significance of such acts when viewed from a religious standpoint. Otherwise, practically every act of a man's life might be taken up and examined into. Eugene v. State, 159 Ga. 604, 126 S.E. 471 (1925).

24-9-4. Physical defects; interpreter allowed.

No physical defect in any of the senses shall incapacitate a witness. An interpreter may explain the evidence of such witness. (Orig. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose. — If a procedure such as provided for by this statute were not permissible, the witness unable to communicate in English or otherwise disabled would never be able to give the witness's testimony. Hensley v. State, 228 Ga. 501, 186 S.E.2d 729 (1972) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-4).

Questions for court and jury. — Use of an interpreter, and the extent to which the examination will be allowed to proceed through the interpreter must necessarily lie within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Whether the evidence elicited be credible is a question for the jury who were there and who observed the witness, the witness's behavior on the stand and response to the questions and the manner of communication between the witness and the interpreter. Hensley v. State, 228 Ga. 501, 186 S.E.2d 729 (1972).

Discretion of trial judge. — Use of an interpreter, and the extent to which the interpreter may be used in the examination of a witness, must necessarily lie within the sound discretion of the trial judge. Reed v. State, 249 Ga. 52, 287 S.E.2d 205 (1982).

Court officer as interpreter. — When the witness in a criminal case is unable from the witness's physical condition to speak audibly, the witness's answers may be communicated in the witness's hearing and presence by a sworn officer of the court. Conner v. State, 25 Ga. 515, 71 Am. Dec. 184 (1858).

24-9-5. Competency of persons without use of reason.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, persons who do not have the use of reason, such as idiots, lunatics during lunacy, and children who do not understand the nature of an oath, shall be incompetent witnesses.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this Code section, in all cases involving deprivation as defined by Code Section 15-11-2, or in criminal cases involving child molestation, and in all other criminal cases in which a child was a victim of or a witness to any crime, any such child shall be competent to testify, and his credibility shall be determined as provided in Article 4 of this chapter. General Consideration

Georgia witness competency statutes present a reasonable requirement regarding the minimal level of understanding for people participating in one of the most important functions of government and do not violate the equal protection clause. Ambles v. State, 259 Ga. 406, 383 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

State had standing to challenge Georgia witness competency statutes. Ambles v. State, 259 Ga. 406, 383 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

No hearing unless specific ground of incompetency alleged. — When, before the defendant's first trial, the defendant made the defendant's "motion to exclude the testimony of the victim on grounds of incompetency . . . pursuant to §§ 24-9-5 & 24-9-7" in the broadest of terms without distinctly alleging what category of "persons who do not have the use of reason" the victim fit into, and at no point in the defendant's first or second trials did the defendant raise a distinct objection to the competency of the witness, but simply requested a hearing without specifying any valid ground of incompetency as applied to the facts and circumstances of the case, the court did not err in refusing to conduct an examination. In addition to the court's observation of the victim and the victim's testimony during the course of the first trial, no applicable specific ground of incompetency was alleged. Webb v. State, 187 Ga. App. 348, 370 S.E.2d 204 (1988).

Trial court determines competency of a witness and jury decides credibility. Bearden v. State, 159 Ga. App. 892, 285 S.E.2d 606 (1981).

Nothing in the record to indicate witness could not understand trial oath. — Ruling that a witness was incompetent to testify under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5(a) failed since there was absolutely nothing in the record to demonstrate that the witness could not understand the nature of the trial oath simply because the witness was originally from Somalia and spoke in halting English. Trueblood v. State, 248 Ga. App. 78, 545 S.E.2d 628 (2001).

Children

Construed with § 24-3-16. — Child “available to testify” in O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 means one competent to testify under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5. For offenses occurring before April 19, 1989, including child molestation, a child incompetent as a witness is not available to testify and any out-of-court statements are not rendered admissible by § 24-3-16. Hunnicut v. State, 194 Ga. App. 714, 391 S.E.2d 790 (1990).

O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-5 and 24-3-16 must be construed together. Bright v. State, 197 Ga. App. 784, 400 S.E.2d 18 (1990); McGarity v. State, 212 Ga. App. 17, 440 S.E.2d 695 (1994).

Child is considered “available to testify” under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 only if the child is “competent” to testify within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5. Shaver v. State, 199 Ga. App. 428, 405 S.E.2d 281, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 907, 405 S.E.2d 281 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5 does not expand the circumstances under which hearsay statements of a child may be admitted in evidence. Thornton v. State, 264 Ga. 563, 449 S.E.2d 98 (1994).

Competency of children to testify in a divorce action could be established only by demonstrating that the children understood the nature of an oath as required by subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5. Woodruff v. Woodruff, 272 Ga. 485, 531 S.E.2d 714 (2000).

Constitutionality of subsection (b). — Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5 does not violate due process; it is not fundamentally unfair to require one accused of child molestation to face one's accuser, even if the accuser is unable to articulate the meaning of an oath, and the defendant has the opportunity to cross-examine the child witness, and test the child's credibility before the jury. Sims v. State, 260 Ga. 782, 399 S.E.2d 924 (1991).

Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5 applies equally to all those accused of child molestation, and therefore does not violate the equal protection clause of the federal constitution. Sims v. State, 260 Ga. 782, 399 S.E.2d 924 (1991).

No required showing child competent to testify. — For offenses involving child victims occurring after April 19, 1989, a determination that the child victim is competent to testify is not necessary; a child witness is “available” for purposes of the Child Hearsay Statute, O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16, as long as the child is physically available to appear at trial. Gibby v. State, 213 Ga. App. 20, 443 S.E.2d 852 (1994).

Statement admissible regardless of child’s age or degree of comprehension. — Out-of-court statements of a victim of child molestation are admissible whenever the victim is available to appear at trial, whether or not the child is capable of understanding the nature of an oath and thus regardless of age or degree of comprehension. Lang v. State, 201 Ga. App. 836, 412 S.E.2d 866 (1991).

Oath not required when child does not comprehend oath’s nature. — Under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5, which provides that in certain limited categories of cases a child is deemed legally competent to testify, the prerequisite administration of the oath otherwise called for by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-60 has been obviated when the child does not comprehend the oath’s nature. The child simply becomes an unsworn witness, made so because incapable of taking an oath. Bright v. State, 197 Ga. App. 784, 400 S.E.2d 18 (1990).

Children who do not understand nature of oath are incompetent. — Porter v. State, 237 Ga. 580, 229 S.E.2d 384 (1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 956, 97 S. Ct. 1603, 51 L. Ed. 2d 806 (1977).

Mentally retarded children subject to competency challenge. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5 is construed as subjecting children to a competency challenge based on the allegation the children do not understand the nature of an oath. Children, like adults, are also subject to a competency challenge on the ground that the children do not have the use of reason because of mental retardation. Sizemore v. State, 262 Ga. 214, 416 S.E.2d 500 (1992).

Determining factor in deciding competency of a witness to testify is not age but rather the ability to understand the nature of an oath. Horton v. State, 35 Ga. App. 493, 133 S.E. 647 (1926); Young v. State, 72 Ga. App. 811, 35 S.E.2d 321 (1945).

Standard of intelligence required to qualify child as a witness is not that the child be able to define the meaning of an oath, nor that the child understand the process under which the oath is administered, but rather that the child know and appreciate the fact that as a witness the child assumes a solemn and binding obligation to tell the truth relative to the case and concerning such matters as the child may be interrogated on, and that if the child violates the obligation the child is subject to be punished by the court. Jones v. State, 219 Ga. 245, 132 S.E.2d 648 (1963); Smith v. State, 247 Ga. 511, 277 S.E.2d 53 (1981); Alvin v. State, 253 Ga. 740, 325 S.E.2d 143 (1985), overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 840 (2006).

Knowledge of nature of oath. — It is enough if children know the mere nature of an oath, regardless of knowledge of the oath’s effects, and whether or not the children have such knowledge is to be determined by the court on a preliminary examination. Peterson v. State, 47 Ga. 524, later appeal, 50 Ga. 142 (1873); Moore v. State, 79 Ga. 498, 5 S.E. 51 (1887); Young v. State, 122 Ga. 725, 50 S.E. 996 (1905); Beebee v. State, 124 Ga. 775, 53 S.E. 99 (1906); Young v. State, 125 Ga. 584, 54 S.E. 82 (1906); Richardson v. State, 141 Ga. 782, 82 S.E. 134 (1914); Reece v. State, 155 Ga. 350, 116 S.E. 631 (1923).

Challenge for “understanding truth.” — Understanding the truth is one element of understanding the nature of an oath, and as such, subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5 excepts a child from a competency challenge brought on such basis. Norton v. State, 263 Ga. 448, 435 S.E.2d 30 (1993); Jeffries v. State, 272 Ga. 510, 530 S.E.2d 714 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1116, 121 S. Ct. 864, 148 L. Ed. 2d 777 (2001).

Child should not be held competent when the child does not understand nature of oath. — While questions of this character are to be left largely to the discretion of the trial judge, the judge should not hold a child-witness competent when it does not appear that such witness sufficiently understands the nature and obligation of an oath to testify in the case. Pace v. State, 157 Ga. App. 442, 278 S.E.2d 90 (1981).

Children (Cont'd)

It is not necessary for child to understand meaning of the word "oath." Pace v. State, 157 Ga. App. 442, 278 S.E.2d 90 (1981); Raborn v. State, 192 Ga. App. 99, 383 S.E.2d 650 (1989).

It is not necessary that a child understand the penalties for perjury in order for the trial court to rule the child competent to testify. Hill v. State, 251 Ga. 430, 306 S.E.2d 653 (1983).

Age not determinative of competency as a witness. Johnson v. State, 146 Ga. 190, 91 S.E. 42 (1916).

Capacity to commit crime not determinative of competency as a witness. Johnson v. State, 61 Ga. 35 (1878).

Evidence sufficiently reliable. — Record contained sufficient evidence of indicia of reliability where the two girls, who were 12 and 10 years old, were interviewed separately on at least two different occasions, their statements were consistent with each other over time, the state's witnesses were all professionals trained in interviewing victims of child abuse without asking leading questions, and all three considered the girls credible. Gibby v. State, 213 Ga. App. 20, 443 S.E.2d 852 (1994).

Examination sufficient. — When the principal state's witness against a defendant is a child and on examination by the court to determine the child's competency to testify stated the child knew what it meant to tell a lie and that the child was supposed to tell the truth, such examination was sufficient to determine whether the child understood the nature of an oath as required by law. Turpin v. State, 121 Ga. App. 294, 173 S.E.2d 455 (1970); Decker v. State, 139 Ga. App. 707, 229 S.E.2d 520 (1976).

Since each child testified that the child knew the meaning of an oath, the child's belief in God, that it was wrong to lie, and that the child would tell the truth, the fact-finder and the district attorney could decide such statements were sufficient to establish the child understood the nature of the child's oath. Bearden v. State, 159 Ga. App. 892, 285 S.E.2d 606 (1981).

When the record revealed that, during the trial the prosecuting attorney asked the victim, nearly nine years old, a series of questions, the answers to which clearly demonstrated that the child understood both the difference between truth and falsehood and the importance of telling only the truth, and the record further revealed that the defendant's counsel failed to question the witness following the examination by the state, or to object at that time on competency grounds, counsel's conduct amounted to a waiver of the right to raise the issue of the witness's competency on appeal. Wood v. State, 195 Ga. App. 424, 393 S.E.2d 720 (1990).

Since the trial court examined each of three juvenile witnesses at the beginning of his or her testimony to ascertain that the child knew the difference between telling the truth and telling a lie and understood why telling the truth was better than telling a falsehood, and obtained from each witness a promise to tell the truth in response to questions from counsel, it was not an abuse of discretion to allow the children to testify. Carter v. State, 195 Ga. App. 489, 393 S.E.2d 746 (1990).

Since the 15-year-old victim of a sexual abuse testified at trial that the victim knew it was bad to tell a lie, that the victim would be punished if the victim did so and that the victim also understood the importance of telling the truth, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to strike the victim's testimony. Lott v. State, 206 Ga. App. 886, 426 S.E.2d 667 (1992).

Presumption not conclusive. — Child over 14 is presumed competent to testify, but to hold that this presumption is so conclusive that the court is inhibited from examining the witness on this point unless objection has been specifically made on one of the grounds stated in this statute would be to circumscribe the authority of the court to elicit the truth, and would seriously impede the administration of justice. Schamroth v. State, 84 Ga. App. 580, 66 S.E.2d 413 (1951) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5).

It is left to sound discretion of trial court to determine whether or not a child of tender years is a competent witness; and when the court examines a child as to the child's understanding of the nature of an oath and decides that the child is competent to testify, this court will not interfere, if it does not appear that such discretion has been manifestly abused. Gordon v. State, 186 Ga. 615, 198 S.E. 678 (1938); Young v. State, 72 Ga. App. 811, 35 S.E.2d 321 (1945);

Russell v. State, 83 Ga. App. 841, 65 S.E.2d 264 (1951); Middleton v. State, 194 Ga. App. 815, 392 S.E.2d 293 (1990) (prior to 1989 amendment).

Competency of a child as a witness is within the sound discretion of the court, and the court's ruling will not be disturbed unless there is a manifest abuse of discretion. Adams v. State, 166 Ga. App. 807, 305 S.E.2d 651 (1983).

Trial court has sound discretion to determine whether a child is competent to testify. Hill v. State, 251 Ga. 430, 306 S.E.2d 653 (1983).

Once a child's competency has been thoroughly tested in court, it is within the sound discretion of the trial court whether or not to rule the child competent to testify as a witness. Pope v. State, 167 Ga. App. 328, 306 S.E.2d 326 (1983).

Failure of trial court to conduct examination on the issue of whether the witness understands the nature of an oath is reversible error when the witness is under 14 years of age. Bennett v. State, 145 Ga. App. 56, 243 S.E.2d 265 (1978).

Testimony admitted erroneously. — When an examination by the court shows that the child has no knowledge of the nature of an oath, it is error to permit the child to testify over proper objection. Horton v. State, 35 Ga. App. 493, 133 S.E. 647 (1926).

Infant's admission against interest. — While the decision of whether a child, or "infant," is competent to testify is one made in the sound discretion of the judge, based upon the capacity of the child to know the nature of the oath rather than upon the child's years, the admission in evidence of an infant's admission against interest must be very carefully scanned because of the child's immaturity and the deleterious effect such admissions would have. Howard v. Hall, 112 Ga. App. 247, 145 S.E.2d 70 (1965).

No error in refusing to give statute in charge. — Since the question of the competency of a victim's ten-year-old brother is one of law for the trial court to determine, the court does not err in refusing to give in charge to the jury the requested language contained in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5 which was relevant only to that issue. Dennis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 142, 279 S.E.2d 275 (1981).

Inconsistency in a child's testimony does not render the child incompetent to testify, but goes to the child's credibility as a witness. Pendergrass v. State, 168 Ga. App. 190, 308 S.E.2d 585 (1983).

Any apparently inconsistent testimony presented by children does not render such children incompetent to testify as a matter of law, but is a matter for consideration by the trial court in making the court's determination of competency and by the jury in determining the credibility of the witnesses. Thomas v. State, 168 Ga. App. 587, 309 S.E.2d 881 (1983).

When a four-year-old victim expressed the victim's understanding of the difference between the truth and a lie and of the importance of telling the truth, expressed a fear of punishment if the victim did not tell the truth, and stated that the victim would tell the truth, there was no abuse of the trial court's discretion in the court's determination that the child was competent to testify, even though there may have been some inconsistency in the child's responses. Hutton v. State, 192 Ga. App. 239, 384 S.E.2d 446 (1989).

Child witness's unresponsiveness to a number of questions as put by defendant did not constitute a deprivation of defendant's constitutional confrontation right so as to require that the witness's out-of-court statements be stricken since defendant was not denied the right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of a witness who appeared to answer as well as the witness was capable of answering. Bright v. State, 197 Ga. App. 784, 400 S.E.2d 18 (1990).

Defendant's right to confront and cross-examine a child witness was protected in spite of the child's unresponsiveness on cross-examination as to the merits of the case brought against the defendant; the child's unresponsiveness did not preclude the defendant from thoroughly cross-examining the child as to the veracity of hearsay statements made against the defendant's interests by the child's parents and the caseworker. Byrd v. State, 204 Ga. App. 252, 419 S.E.2d 111 (1992).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in ruling competent to testify children who witnessed a crime since the children testified that to tell the truth means "to tell what really happened" as opposed to "making something up," and also testified that the children understand the significance of their oath to tell the truth while testifying in court and that if the children lied they would "get in big trouble." Hill v. State, 251 Ga. 430, 306 S.E.2d 653 (1983).

When a child was examined at length by the court and by counsel, and the court found that the child was inattentive and not responsive, and also found that there were inconsistencies in the testimony of the child, there was no abuse of discretion in the court refusing to allow the child to testify. Batton v. State, 260 Ga. 127, 391 S.E.2d 914 (1990).

After two videotapes of interviews with a child were showed to a jury, the child was called as the court's witness and testified similarly, and the child was examined by all parties, there was no abuse of the court's discretion in finding the child qualified to testify, nor in admitting the videotapes. Frazier v. State, 195 Ga. App. 109, 393 S.E.2d 262 (1990) (Trial held prior to April 19, 1989).

For illustrations of preliminary examination to test a child's competency, see Minton v. State, 99 Ga. 254, 25 S.E. 626 (1896); Gaines v. State, 99 Ga. 703, 26 S.E. 760 (1896); Miller v. State, 109 Ga. 512, 35 S.E. 152 (1900).

Children held competent in the following cases. — See Johnson v. State, 76 Ga. 76 (1885) (child of six); Marshall v. State, 74 Ga. 26 (1884) (child of seven); Minton v. State, 99 Ga. 254, 25 S.E. 626 (1896) (child of eight); Hicks v. State, 105 Ga. 627, 31 S.E. 579 (1898) (child of ten); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Skandamis, 40 Ga. App. 78, 149 S.E. 60 (1929) (child of twelve); Thurmond v. State, 220 Ga. 227, 138 S.E.2d 372 (1964) (child of eight); Perryman v. State, 244 Ga. 720, 261 S.E.2d 588 (1979) (victim's nine-year-old daughter); Brown v. State, 167 Ga. App. 245, 306 S.E.2d 361 (1983) (child of seven); Aleywine v. State, 169 Ga. App. 805, 315 S.E.2d 35 (1984) (child of eight); Westbrook v. State, 186 Ga. App. 493, 368 S.E.2d 131, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 919, 368 S.E.2d 131 (1988) (child of five); Syfrett v. State, 210 Ga. App. 185, 435 S.E.2d 470 (1993) (child of nine).

Testimony of competent child, not formerly sworn, admitted. — Testimony of a child witness who, in response to questioning by the state, demonstrated that the child was aware that the child was under an obligation to tell the truth and could have been punished for not doing so, and who was shown to be competent, was properly admitted although the child was not sworn, where, after the preliminary questioning by the state, the defendant failed to request that the child be formally sworn and did not object to the child's testifying. Hilson v. State, 204 Ga. App. 200, 418 S.E.2d 784 (1992).

Parent's objection to competency of child rejected. — In an action wherein two parents were found to have deprived an adopted child due to one parent's sexual abuse of the child and the other parent's failure to protect the child from such abuse, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion by allowing the testimony of a forensic interviewer regarding statements made by the child as the Child Hearsay Statute, O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16, permitted such testimony, despite the parents' challenges to the competency of the child. In the Interest of B.H., 295 Ga. App. 297, 671 S.E.2d 303 (2008).

Jury judges child's credibility. — Thrust of the child witness statute, O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16, is to allow the jury, which must be convinced of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, to judge the credibility of a child's accusations. If a child, who has reported child molestation to an adult permitted to testify to the out-of-court statement at trial, is incapable of reiterating the accusation at trial or is unresponsive or evasive during cross-examination, the jury must decide the child's credibility. Jones v. State, 200 Ga. App. 103, 407 S.E.2d 85 (1991).

Insane Persons

Rules applicable to idiots and lunatics are analogous to those applicable to children. Langston v. State, 153 Ga. 127, 111 S.E. 561 (1922).

An insane person is not always incompetent. Watkins v. State, 19 Ga. App. 234, 91 S.E. 284 (1917).

No presumption of incompetency. — There was no presumption that the declarant was so bereft of reason as to forbid the reception of evidence concerning the declarant's declarations, although it was admitted that before the making thereof the declarant had been adjudged insane and committed to an asylum. Fountain v. McCallum, 194 Ga. 269, 21 S.E.2d 610 (1942).

Insane persons not always incompetent. — Person who has been adjudged insane is not, in all cases, incompetent as a witness. The person's testimony is admissible if the person has sufficient understanding to apprehend the obligations of an oath and to be capable of giving a correct account of the matters the person has seen or heard in reference to the questions at issue; and whether the person has that understanding is a question to be determined in each case, the weight to be given to the person's testimony being finally a question for the jury. Cuesta v. Goldsmith, 1 Ga. App. 48, 57 S.E. 983 (1907); Watkins v. State, 19 Ga. App. 234, 91 S.E. 284 (1917).

Prior adjudication of insanity. — Mere fact that the declarant had been adjudged insane and placed in a lunatic asylum previously to the time that the declarant is alleged to have been the declarant, the declarant at that time not being in the asylum, was not in itself a reason why the testimony should have been excluded. Fountain v. McCallum, 194 Ga. 269, 21 S.E.2d 610 (1942).

Continuation of mental state. — Witness had been previously adjudged insane, and the jury was authorized to find that this mental state still existed, and to reject the witness's testimony for that reason. Harris v. Folsom, 17 Ga. App. 676, 87 S.E. 1090 (1916).

Questions for court and jury. — Competency of a witness is a question generally to be determined by the court; the jury may consider such evidence only for the purpose of affecting the credibility of such witness. Bonner v. State, 59 Ga. App. 737, 1 S.E.2d 768 (1939).

Question of sanity for jury. — Witness having been examined on interrogatories by commission duly issued, the witness was, prima facie, mentally competent to testify, and evidence subsequently taken tending to show that the witness was insane when examined, was for consideration by the jury under proper instructions from the court, and not for final adjudication by the judge presiding, there being also testimony in favor of insanity. Formby v. Wood, 19 Ga. 581 (1856); Mayor of Gainesville v. Caldwell, 81 Ga. 76, 7 S.E. 99 (1888).

Statement admitted when no motion to strike made. — When a defendant objected to admitting a statement made to police implicating the defendant in a murder for reason that the defendant was insane at the time the defendant made the statement, but offered no evidence concurrent with the objection to prove insanity, the trial court properly admitted the statement because no motion was made to strike the statement following the statement's introduction into evidence. Kimbell v. State, 252 Ga. 65, 311 S.E.2d 465 (1984).

Illustrations. — See Ray v. State, 32 Ga. App. 513, 124 S.E. 57 (1924) (woman 21 years old declared incompetent in bastardy proceeding); Ravenel v. State, 153 Ga. 130, 111 S.E. 643 (1922) (female victim in rape case held competent).

Retarded Persons

Witness somewhat retarded. — Though there was evidence that the witness was "somewhat retarded," where in response to questions by the court the witness testified that the witness went through the eighth grade in school, attended church and Sunday school, and knew that it was right to tell the truth, the trial court was correct in determining that the witness was competent to testify. Lee v. State, 108 Ga. App. 97, 132 S.E.2d 107 (1963).

Evidence of competency. — After the 22-year-old retarded victim indicated the victim knew how to tell the truth and the victim's mother and sister testified the victim knew the difference between right and wrong, such evidence was sufficient to show that the victim had an appreciation for the truth and could testify. Dumas v. State, 239 Ga. App. 210, 521 S.E.2d 108 (1999).

Time of drunkenness. — Evidence that the witness is in a drunken condition when the witness undertakes to testify goes to the witness's competency, while proof that the witness was drunk on the occasion concerning which the witness testifies goes only to the witness's credit. Whitus v. State, 222 Ga. 103, 149 S.E.2d 130 (1966).

24-9-7. Competency decided by court; how and when objection to competency considered; restoration of competency.

(a) The competency of a witness shall be decided by the court. The court shall by examination decide upon the capacity of one alleged to be incompetent from idiocy, lunacy, insanity, drunkenness, or infancy.

(b) If an objection to competency is known, it shall be taken before the witness is examined at all. It may be proved by the witness himself or by other testimony. If proved by other testimony, the witness shall be incompetent to explain it away.

(c) Any fact which in the judgment of the court removes the ground of incompetency shall restore the competency of the witness. (Orig. ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION CHILDREN

General Consideration

Georgia witness competency statutes present a reasonable requirement regarding the minimal level of understanding for people participating in one of the most important functions of government and do not violate the equal protection clause. Ambles v. State, 259 Ga. 406, 383 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

State had standing to challenge Georgia witness competency statutes. Ambles v. State, 259 Ga. 406, 383 S.E.2d 555 (1989).

Everyone is presumed competent to testify, and even if a person is shown to have been insane, or to have been adjudged insane previously and is presently in a state mental hospital, this does not necessarily render the person incompetent to testify. Redfield v. State, 240 Ga. 460, 241 S.E.2d 217 (1978).

There is no presumption that a witness is incompetent; and a witness offered may be permitted to testify, unless there is an objection or exception distinctly raising the question of the witness's competency. Dowdy v. Watson & Lewis, 115 Ga. 42, 41 S.E. 266 (1902).

Defendant's girlfriend, the victim, was not presumed to be incompetent to testify under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-7 simply because of the victim's mental disability; absent an objection by the defendant, it was not error to allow the victim to testify without first determining the victim's competence. Austin v. State, 286 Ga. App. 149, 648 S.E.2d 414 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 687 (Ga. 2007).

Jurisdiction of court and jury generally. — Questions as to the relevancy and admissibil-ity of the testimony are properly for the court. Its sufficiency and effect belong exclusively to the jury. Hotchkiss v. Newton, 10 Ga. 560 (1851).

Trial court determines the competency of the witness and the jury decides credibility. Bearden v. State, 159 Ga. App. 892, 285 S.E.2d 606 (1981).

Competency for court. — Question of competency is one of law for the trial judge to determine in the judge's discretion. Cooper v. Simmons, 50 Ga. App. 130, 177 S.E. 263 (1934); Ellison v. State, 197 Ga. 129, 28 S.E.2d 453 (1943); Gilstrap v. State, 90 Ga. App. 12, 81 S.E.2d 872 (1954); Porter v. State, 237 Ga. 580, 229 S.E.2d 384 (1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 956, 97 S. Ct. 1603, 51 L. Ed. 2d 806 (1977).

After an objection as to the competency of a witness, the duty to examine the witness and determine the witness's competency rests with the trial court. Dennis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 142, 279 S.E.2d 275 (1981).

No hearing unless specific ground of incompetency alleged. — When, before the defendant's first trial the defendant made his "motion to exclude the testimony of the victim on grounds of incompetency ... pursuant to §§ 24-9-5 & 24-9-7" in the broadest of terms without distinctly alleging what category of "persons who do not have the use of reason" the victim fit into, and at no point in the defendant's first or second trials did the defendant raise a distinct objection to the competency of the witness, but simply requested a hearing without specifying any valid ground of incompetency as applied to the facts and circumstances of the case, the court did not err in refusing to conduct an examination. In addition to the court's observation of the victim and the victim's testimony during the course of the first trial, no applicable specific ground of incompetency was alleged. Webb v. State, 187 Ga. App. 348, 370 S.E.2d 204 (1988).

Court may allow attorneys to pose questions to determine competency of witnesses. — Fact that the court allowed the attorneys representing both sides to actually pose the questions in a proceeding to determine competency of witnesses did not diminish the function or abdicate responsibility for making the decision based on evidence produced before the court and the court's observations. Sprayberry v. State, 174 Ga. App. 574, 330 S.E.2d 731 (1985); Vaughn v. State, 226 Ga. App. 318, 486 S.E.2d 607 (1997).

Parameters of examination by counsel. — When counsel is permitted to examine witness as to issue of competency, parameters of such inquiry rest within broad discretion of trial court. Dennis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 142, 279 S.E.2d 275 (1981).

Decision of court will not be overturned. — Decision of the trial court regarding competency will not be overturned in absence of abuse of discretion. Cooper v. Simmons, 50 Ga. App. 130, 177 S.E. 263 (1934); Porter v. State, 237 Ga. 580, 229 S.E.2d 384 (1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 956, 97 S. Ct. 1603, 51 L. Ed. 2d 806 (1977); Whitehead v. State, 144 Ga. App. 836, 242 S.E.2d 754 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Miller v. State, 250 Ga. 436, 298 S.E.2d 509 (1983); Herron v. State, 155 Ga. App. 791, 272 S.E.2d 756 (1980).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-7 vests the trial court with discretion to determine the competency of witnesses, and, absent abuse, that discretion will not be overruled. Gallagher v. State, 196 Ga. App. 153, 395 S.E.2d 358 (1990).

Credibility for jury. — Although after a preliminary examination the court may hold a child competent to testify, the credibility of the witness is for the jury; and in determining whether or not the jury will credit the testimony of such witness, the age of the witness and the witness's understanding or lack of understanding as to the nature of an oath, as developed on the examination before the jury, are matters for the consideration of the jury. Frasier v. State, 143 Ga. 322, 85 S.E. 124 (1915).

Jury may not decide competency. — When the trial court without any examination whatever permits the jury to pass upon the competency of a witness who has been objected to as incompetent at the time the witness was offered, on the ground that the witness has been adjudged insane and not restored to sanity, a new trial will be granted. Gilstrap v. State, 90 Ga. App. 12, 81 S.E.2d 872 (1954).

Disputed facts. — If the determination of the question as to whether a witness is competent to testify depends upon the decision of disputed facts, the proper practice is for the judge, after a preliminary examination, to decide the questions of fact thus arising; but the judge may in the judge's discretion take the opinion of the jury thereon. Dowdy v. Watson & Lewis, 115 Ga. 42, 41 S.E. 266 (1902).

Evidence during trial touching competency. — If a witness has been declared to be competent by the court, and during the progress of the trial evidence should be introduced which would make the witness's competency doubtful, the jury should be instructed to determine this question of fact, and, if the jury should find that the witness is incompetent, not to consider the witness's testimony on the points concerning which the witness was not competent to testify. Dowdy v. Watson & Lewis, 115 Ga. 42, 41 S.E. 266 (1902).

When preliminary examination required. — Once an objection is interposed to the calling of a witness to testify as being incompetent on the ground of having been adjudicated insane, the trial judge must conduct a preliminary examination of the witness and then rule upon the witness's competency. Bryant v. State, 236 Ga. 790, 225 S.E.2d 309 (1976).

Examination may be unnecessary. — There may be situations where the trial judge would not have to examine the potential witness. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530 (1981).

Ex parte statements insufficient. — Trial court erred in making a determination that a prospective witness was incompetent to testify based on ex parte statements made by the administrator of the institution where the prospective witness was confined. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530 (1981).

Partly competent testimony. — If a witness is competent as to some matters and incompetent as to others, the objection may be taken under statute at the time the witness offers to testify as to the matters concerning which the witness is incompetent. Dowdy v. Watson & Lewis, 115 Ga. 42, 41 S.E. 266 (1902).

Witness under influence of alcohol or drugs. — Law requires the trial court to determine the competency to testify of a witness who is under the influence of alcohol or other drugs. Geter v. State, 231 Ga. 615, 203 S.E.2d 195 (1974).

Expert witness. — Question of qualification as expert witness is one of discretion with the trial court judge. Wilkie v. State, 153 Ga. App. 609, 266 S.E.2d 289 (1980).

Witness testifying to market value. — Competency of the witness to testify as to market value is for the court. Williams v. Colonial Pipeline Co., 110 Ga. App. 824, 140 S.E.2d 150 (1964).

Effect of insanity. — One may be medically or metaphysically insane, yet be capable in law of making a contract, a will, or of giving competent testimony in the trial of a case; from a legal standpoint there can be no satisfactory definition of insanity, but each case must be determined from the case's own peculiar facts. The law adopts as a general standard: the ability of the witness to understand the obligation of an oath and the ability to give a correct account of the matters the witness has seen or heard in reference to the questions at issue; the fact that a person has previously been adjudged insane upon an inquisition is by no means conclusive that the person is incompetent to testify. Bonner v. State, 59 Ga. App. 737, 1 S.E.2d 768 (1939).

Effect of dissociative state. — Trial court did not abuse court's discretion in admitting the testimony statements of a sexual abuse victim in a dissociative state because their nonvolitional nature rendered statements made while in such a state inherently more reliable than comparable statements made in a hypnotic trance. Moreover, the testimony indicated that the witness was sufficiently competent to understand the witness's obligation to tell the truth, and that in a dissociative state, the witness could remember what happened to the witness previously in a dissociative state and truthfully relate this material evidence to the jury. Dorsey v. State, 206 Ga. App. 709, 426 S.E.2d 224 (1992).

Effect of drunkenness. — Evidence that the witness is in a drunken condition when the witness undertakes to testify goes to the witness's competency, while proof that the witness was drunk on the occasion concerning which the witness testifies goes only to the witness's credit. Whitus v. State, 222 Ga. 103, 149 S.E.2d 130 (1966).

Alzheimer's disease. — When an attorney-in-fact sought to enjoin the attorney-in-fact's siblings from enforcing a revocation of their parent's durable health care power of attorney, the trial court did not err in determining that the parent, who had Alzheimer's disease, was not competent, as well as in refusing to allow the siblings to present the ailing parent as a witness, given the evidence of the parent's seriously impaired mental capacity. Luther v. Luther, 289 Ga. App. 428, 657 S.E.2d 574 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 520 (Ga. 2008).

Identity of confidential informant. — Trial court did not err by refusing to allow defendant to learn the identity of the confidential informant on grounds that identity was defendant's sole defense, and the confidential informant was the one who "fingered" defendant as a drug dealer, given the state's interest in retaining the informant's confidentiality because of other, ongoing investigations and the fact that the evidence as to defendant's identity was overwhelming in that two police officers positively identified defendant. Wilson v. State, 191 Ga. App. 833, 383 S.E.2d 197 (1989).

Instruction unnecessary. — In the absence of a written request, the trial judge does not ordinarily charge the jury concerning the witness's competency, and it is never error for the judge to omit to instruct the jury concerning the credibility of a witness. Whitus v. State, 222 Ga. 103, 149 S.E.2d 130 (1966).

Appointment of guardian. — Trial court did not err by allowing the victim to testify in a prosecution for aggravated assault, notwithstanding the fact that a probate judge had appointed a guardian for the victim's person and property after the victim's injuries, since the trial court questioned the victim outside the presence of the jury and determined that the victim was competent to testify. McClain v. State, 248 Ga. App. 338, 545 S.E.2d 926 (2001).

Competency for court. — It is left to the sound discretion of the trial court to determine upon preliminary examination whether or not a child of tender years is a competent witness. Moore v. State, 79 Ga. 498, 5 S.E. 51 (1887); Beebee v. State, 124 Ga. 775, 53 S.E. 99 (1906); Young v. State, 125 Ga. 584, 54 S.E. 82 (1906); Richardson v. State, 141 Ga. 782, 82 S.E. 134 (1914). Once a child's competency has been thoroughly tested in court, it is within the sound discretion of the trial court whether or not to rule the child competent to testify as a witness. Pope v. State, 167 Ga. App. 328, 306 S.E.2d 326 (1983).

Decision of court will not be disturbed. — When the court examines a child as to the child's understanding of the nature of an oath and decides that the child is competent to testify, the appellate court will not interfere, when it does not appear that such discretion has been manifestly abused. Moore v. State, 79 Ga. 498, 5 S.E. 51 (1887), see also Peterson v. State, 47 Ga. 524, later appeal, 50 Ga. 142 (1873); Beebee v. State, 124 Ga. 775, 53 S.E. 99 (1906); Young v. State, 186 Ga. 615, 198 S.E. 678 (1938); Carver v. State, 60 Ga. App. 593, 4 S.E.2d 474 (1939); Young v. State, 72 Ga. App. 811, 35 S.E.2d 321 (1945); Russell v. State, 83 Ga. App. 841, 65 S.E.2d 264 (1951); Askins v. State, 210 Ga. 532, 81 S.E.2d 471 (1954); Lashley v. State, 132 Ga. App. 427, 208 S.E.2d 200 (1974); Bradley v. State, 148 Ga. App. 727, 252 S.E.2d 648 (1979); Allen v. State, 150 Ga. App. 605, 258 S.E.2d 285 (1979).

Competency of seven-year-old as a witness is decided by the trial court, and an appellate court will overrule that determination only if there is an abuse of discretion. Lancaster v. State, 250 Ga. 871, 301 S.E.2d 882 (1983).

Any apparently inconsistent testimony presented by children does not render such children incompetent to testify as a matter of law, but is a matter for consideration by the trial court in making the court's determination of competency and by the jury in determining the credibility of the witnesses. Thomas v. State, 168 Ga. App. 587, 309 S.E.2d 881 (1983).

Inconsistency in a child's testimony does not render the child incompetent to testify, nor is it necessary for a child to understand the meaning of the word "oath." Sprayberry v. State, 174 Ga. App. 574, 330 S.E.2d 731 (1985).

When the trial court used suggested questions from the Criminal Benchbook for Georgia Superior Courts (p. 166) to examine a seven-year-old as to the child's understanding of the nature of an oath and the necessity for telling the truth and found the child competent, there was no abuse of discretion. Lancaster v. State, 250 Ga. 871, 301 S.E.2d 882 (1983).

Failure of trial court to conduct examination on the issue of whether the witness understands the nature of an oath is reversible error if the witness is under 14 years of age. Young v. State, 122 Ga. 725, 50 S.E. 996 (1905); Bennett v. State, 145 Ga. App. 56, 243 S.E.2d 265 (1978).

Examination during testimony. — When the competency of a child is questioned, the better practice is for the court to make, or cause to be made, a preliminary examination of the child, for the purpose of testing the child's competency; but the failure of the court to do so will not be reversible error since it appears that the witness was fully examined on this point in the presence of the jury during examination on the main issue. Webb v. State, 7 Ga. App. 35, 66 S.E. 27 (1909).

When preliminary examination of a 12-year-old witness was made and showed that the witness knew what it was to swear to tell the truth, understood the object of testifying, and the consequences of telling the truth and of telling a lie, the court properly held that the witness was competent. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Skandamis, 40 Ga. App. 78, 149 S.E. 60 (1929).

When each child testified that each child knew the meaning of an oath, the child's belief in God, that it was wrong to lie, and the child would tell the truth, the fact-finder and the district attorney could decide such statements were sufficient to establish the child understood the nature of the child's oath. Bearden v. State, 159 Ga. App. 892, 285 S.E.2d 606 (1981).

Sufficient evidence to determine child met required standard of intelligence. — Although a child witness said the witness did not know the meaning of the word "oath," there was sufficient evidence, including testimony on direct and cross-examination that the witness knew right from wrong and that the witness had to tell the truth when the witness was in court, to determine that the child met the standard of intelligence required to qualify the child as a witness. Maynard v. State, 171 Ga. App. 605, 320 S.E.2d 806 (1984).

Trial court did not err by not conducting a preliminary hearing before determining that two minor witnesses were competent to testify since the record shows that one witness was seventeen years old and the other was fourteen. Johnson v. State, 195 Ga. App. 385, 393 S.E.2d 712 (1990).

Insufficient intelligence. — When a child of five years was not shown to possess sufficient intelligence to understand the nature of an oath or the penalty for the oath's violation, it was held that the court erred in permitting the witness to testify. Edwards v. State, 162 Ga. 204, 132 S.E. 892 (1926).

Mental illness. — Fourteen-year-old witness suffered from hyperactivity, seizures, and schizophrenia, but took medication for these problems; since the trial judge questioned this witness outside of the jury's presence about the witness's understanding of the difference between the truth and a lie, and there was no basis to inquire further into the witness's competency, allowing the witness to testify was not an abuse of discretion. Simmons v. State, 251 Ga. App. 682, 555 S.E.2d 59 (2001).

Infant's admission against interest. — While the decision of whether a child, or "infant," is competent to testify is one made in the sound discretion of the judge, based upon the capacity of the child to know the nature of the oath rather than upon the child's years, the admission in evidence of an infant's admission against interest must be very carefully scanned because of the infant's immaturity and the deleterious effect such admissions would have. Howard v. Hall, 112 Ga. App. 247, 145 S.E.2d 70 (1965).

Trial court did not err by allowing the victim, a five-year-old child, to testify since although the child was unable to define the meaning of an oath or of the truth, it was demonstrated that the child appreciated the difference between the truth and a lie and that the child knew the child was obligated to tell the truth on the witness stand. Akers v.

Fact that five-year-old victim may have testified inconsistently did not render the victim incompetent to testify as a matter of law. Akers v. State, 179 Ga. App. 529, 346 S.E.2d 861 (1986).

Court did not err in finding nine-year-old child competent to testify, since where the child testified as to the child's grade in school, the child's teacher's name, that it was good to tell the truth and bad to tell a lie, that the child would get a whipping if the child told a lie, and that the child was going to tell the truth in court. Hester v. State, 187 Ga. App. 873, 371 S.E.2d 684 (1988).

No error in refusing to charge jury that child's testimony should be corroborated. — When competency of victim's ten-year-old brother has been determined as a matter of law by the trial court, there is no error in the trial court's refusal to charge the jury that testimony of a child of such tender age should be corroborated by other testimony. Dennis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 142, 279 S.E.2d 275 (1981).

Failure to object to incompetency at trial waives issue on appeal. — When defendant contends that the complaining witnesses, two girls, ages nine and 13, were incompetent to testify due to their infancy, but there was no objection on that ground in the trial court, no issue regarding the witness's competency is properly before the Court of Appeals. Keasler v. State, 165 Ga. App. 561, 301 S.E.2d 915 (1983).

24-9-20. Testimony of criminal defendant.

(a) No person who is charged in any criminal proceeding with the commission of any indictable offense or any offense punishable on summary conviction shall be compellable to give evidence for or against himself.

(b) If a defendant in a criminal case wishes to testify and announces in open court his or her intention to do so, the defendant may so testify in his or her own behalf. If a defendant testifies, he or she shall be sworn as any other witness and may be examined and cross-examined as any other witness. The failure of a defendant to testify shall create no presumption against him or her, and no comment shall be made because of such failure. (Ga. L. 1866, p. 138, § 2; Ga. General Consideration

Editor's notes. — Prior to the 1962 amendment of former Code 1933, § 38-415, a defendant in a criminal case could not give sworn testimony but could make an unsworn statement in the defendant's behalf. Between 1962 and 1973, a defendant had the option of making an unsworn statement or giving sworn testimony. Effective July 1, 1973, unsworn statements were abolished. Although many of the cases noted below pertain to the making of unsworn statements, the notes have been retained as those cases seem to have continued validity under the present law.

Constitutionality. — See Williams v. State, 220 Ga. 766, 141 S.E.2d 436 (1965).

Grand jury proceedings. — Grand jury has no lawful right to call the accused before the grand jury while considering the bill of indictment against the accused, and swear or question the accused regarding such charge. It is against the public policy of this state. Jenkins v. State, 65 Ga. App. 16, 14 S.E.2d 594 (1941).

Statute is not relevant to a probation revocation hearing since such a hearing is not a criminal trial. Sellers v. State, 107 Ga. App. 516, 130 S.E.2d 790 (1963).

Statute not implicated when defendant not in police custody. — Because the defendant was not in police custody at the time of the defendant's secretly taped telephone conversation with a coconspirator, O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 was not implicated. Thorpe v. State, 285 Ga. 604, 678 S.E.2d 913 (2009).

Unsworn statements. — Although a crime is alleged to have been committed prior to the effective date (July 1, 1973) of the law abolishing unsworn statements, the abolition can be applied to defendant without violating the prohibition against ex post facto laws. Walker v. State, 132 Ga. App. 274, 208 S.E.2d 5 (1974); Eades v. State, 232 Ga. 735, 208 S.E.2d 791 (1974).

Testimony not under oath. — Defendant should not have testified without being under oath; however, because the defendant could not show that the defendant was harmed, the error did not require a new trial. Bell v. State, 226 Ga. App. 271, 486 S.E.2d 422 (1997).

If defendant chose to testify in an effort to make defendant's prima facie case of justification, the defendant was subject to cross examination as are other witnesses. Walden v. State, 267 Ga. 162, 476 S.E.2d 259 (1996).

When a defendant voluntarily testifies to matters on direct examination, the defendant can be cross-examined, and required to give a physical demonstration concerning the matters to which the defendant testified on direct examination. Scott v. State, 270 Ga. 93, 507 S.E.2d 728 (1998).

Sobriety test. — Defendant was not in custody nor compelled by force or threats to perform roadside sobriety tests in violation of the defendant's right against self incrimination. Sisson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 61, 499 S.E.2d 422 (1998).

Prosecutor's improper comments during closing is not automatically reversible error.

— Even though prosecutorial errors in closing arguments may have occurred, including commenting on defendant's failure to testify and references to matters not in evidence, defendant was not entitled to reversal because curative instructions were given and there was overwhelming evidence from eye-witnesses and other physical evidence of defendant's guilt to shooting at deputies, killing one and injuring another. Georgia does not follow a cumulative error rule of prejudice, so the number of errors committed was not reversible error. Al-Amin v. State, 278 Ga. 74, 597 S.E.2d 332, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 992, 125 S. Ct. 509, 160 L. Ed. 2d 380 (2004).

Self-Incrimination1. In General

Failure to give Miranda warnings. — Since the driver was only given a breath test, but was not given Miranda warnings while the driver was in custody, evidence of the driver's refusal to undergo additional testing was inadmissible. State v. Warmack, 230 Ga. App. 157, 495 S.E.2d 632 (1998).

An arrestee is not, under Georgia constitutional or statutory law, entitled to Miranda warnings before deciding whether to submit to the state's request for an additional test of breath, blood, or urine. State v. Coe, 243 Ga. App. 232, 533 S.E.2d 104 (2000), overruling State v. Warmack, 230 Ga. App. 157, 495 S.E.2d 632 (1998).

Trial court's suppression of urine test results could not be sustained on the ground that Miranda warnings were not given to a DUI arrestee before the arrestee decided to submit to a urine test after taking a breath or blood test. State v. Coe, 243 Ga. App. 232, 533 S.E.2d 104 (2000), overruling State v. Warmack, 230 Ga. App. 157, 495 S.E.2d 632 (1998).

Officer's comment to defendant that "I'm just going to shut your car door so some other drunk doesn't take it off," was insufficient to cause a reasonable person to believe that defendant's detention would not have been temporary, and a trial court erred in excluding on the basis of a Miranda violation evidence of the results of roadside sobriety tests performed on defendant thereafter. State v. Pierce, 266 Ga. App. 233, 596 S.E.2d 725 (2004).

Noncustodial defendant. — Defendant whose license was taken and who was placed temporarily in a patrol car for the defendant's own safety was not in custody and, therefore, evidence of the defendant's statements was admissible as was evidence of the defendant's refusals to submit to alco-sensor and HGN tests and of the defendant's failure of other tests administered before the defendant's arrest. Turner v. State, 233 Ga. App. 413, 504 S.E.2d 229 (1998).

After defendant was stopped for a traffic violation and before defendant's Miranda rights were read defendant was told that a DUI task force officer had been called because defendant was under suspicion of DUI, defendant was allowed to walk around, and was not placed in the back of the police car nor handcuffed, defendant's detention had not ripened into an arrest before the sobriety tests were conducted. Harper v. State, 243 Ga. App. 705, 534 S.E.2d 157 (2000).

Striking testimony after claim. — When the defendant asserted a possessory interest in a suit case, the ownership of the suit case was not a collateral matter and was a proper subject of cross-examination but once the defendant claimed the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, it was proper to strike testimony concerning the case. Rasnake v. State, 164 Ga. App. 765, 298 S.E.2d 42 (1982), cert. denied, 462 U.S. 1132, 103 S. Ct. 3114, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1368 (1983).

Refusal to consent to urine test inadmissible. — In a prosecution for driving under the influence, when defendant was deprived by the totality of the inaccurate, misleading, and/or inapplicable information given to the defendant by the arresting officer of making an informed choice under the implied consent statute, the defendant's refusal to consent to a urine test was rendered inadmissible. State v. Leviner, 213 Ga. App. 99, 443 S.E.2d 688 (1994).

Use of substances excreted from the body. — Use of a substance naturally excreted by the human body does not violate a DUI suspect's constitutional rights, and therefore there is no requirement that the suspect be informed of the suspect's right against self-incrimination by a police officer giving the suspect the implied consent notice. Nawrocki v. State, 235 Ga. App. 416, 510 S.E.2d 301 (1998).

Evidence voluntarily produced from body cavity. — After a small piece of plastic containing cocaine residue was produced by defendant from a body cavity in acquiescence to a search warrant for the defendant's person while the defendant was in lawful detention, the evidence was admissible. Scott v. State, 216 Ga. App. 692, 455 S.E.2d 609 (1995).

Implied consent warnings administered. — Implied consent warnings administered to motorists suspected of driving under the influence need not inform the motorists of the privilege against self-incrimination. Heller v. State, 234 Ga. App. 630, 507 S.E.2d 518 (1998).

Field sobriety tests given to a person under arrest, without first giving a Miranda warning, were inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. State v. O'Donnell, 225 Ga. App. 502, 484 S.E.2d 313 (1997).

After defendant agreed to submit to field sobriety tests, which defendant understood to be voluntary, defendant was not therefore under arrest and the results of the officer's investigation should not be suppressed because defendant was not given the Miranda warnings prior to the tests. Lyons v. State, 244 Ga. App. 658, 535 S.E.2d 841 (2000).

Defendant was not in custody when the officer administered field sobriety tests, nor was defendant compelled by force or threats to perform roadside field sobriety tests in violation of defendant's right against self-incrimination; the officer's admonishment as defendant left the bar that defendant would be arrested if defendant drove was insufficient to turn the subsequent stop into a custody situation. State v. Foster, 255 Ga. App. 704, 566 S.E.2d 418 (2002).

Breath test results. — Admission into evidence of the defendant's consent to a chemical breath test and the results of that test did not violate the statute since, although the defendant was in custody, the defendant was not charged in a criminal proceeding when the defendant consented to take and took the chemical breath test. Scanlon v. State, 237 Ga. App. 362, 514 S.E.2d 876 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1078, 120 S. Ct. 795, 145 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2000).

DNA tests. — In convictions of aggravated sodomy, kidnapping, burglary, and aggravated assault, use of evidence comparing DNA on lip balm found at the crime scene with defendant's blood sample and with evidence retained from a prior rape prosecution that resulted in defendant's acquittal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 et seq., did not violate defendant's right against self-incrimination under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(a). Fortune v. State, 300 Ga. App. 550, 685 S.E.2d 466 (2009).

Waiver of privilege. — Allowing a codefendant to give testimony regarding the substance of defendant's prior testimony at a probation revocation hearing, after defendant elected not to take the stand at trial, did not violate the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination since defendant waived the privilege by testifying voluntarily on the defendant's behalf at the prior hearing. Bobbitt v. State, 215 Ga. App. 131, 449 S.E.2d 674 (1994).

Corporate document not protected by self-incrimination privilege. — Defendant in a criminal case, an attorney who was the sole shareholder of a professional corporation, was properly held in civil contempt for not producing a noncompetition agreement between the corporation and a former employee. The agreement was a corporate document, and the defendant had been subpoenaed to produce the document as a corporate agent; thus, the defendant could not assert the defendant's personal right against self-incrimination and the small size of the corporation was immaterial. Thompson v. State, 294 Ga. App. 363, 670 S.E.2d 152 (2008).

2. Compelling Evidence

Courts should liberally construe provision against compelling the accused to be a witness against oneself, and refuse to permit any first or doubtful steps which may invade one's rights in this respect. Underwood v. State, 13 Ga. App. 206, 78 S.E. 1103 (1913).

Law embodies constitutional right against self-incrimination. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977), vacated as to sentence sub nom., 243 Ga. 244, 253 S.E.2d 707 (1979).

Law is governed by same standards as U.S. Const., amend. 5. Jordan v. State, 239 Ga. 526, 238 S.E.2d 69 (1977); Classic Art Corp. v. State, 245 Ga. 448, 265 S.E.2d 577 (1980).

Scope of statute. — Constitutional guarantee protects one from being compelled to furnish evidence against oneself, either in the form of oral confessions or incriminating admissions of an involuntary character, or of doing an act against one's will which is incriminating in its nature. Day v. State, 63 Ga. 667 (1879); Calhoun v. State, 144 Ga. 679, 87 S.E. 893 (1916); Smith v. State, 17 Ga. App. 693, 88 S.E. 42 (1916); Walter v. State, 131 Ga. App. 667, 206 S.E.2d 662, appeal dismissed, 233 Ga. 10, 209 S.E.2d 605 (1974).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)2. Compelling Evidence (Cont'd)

Compelled evidence is inadmissible. — Evidence of guilt which a defendant, either directly or indirectly, is compelled to disclose is not admissible in a criminal prosecution against the defendant. Hughes v. State, 2 Ga. App. 29, 58 S.E. 390 (1907); Davis v. State, 4 Ga. App. 318, 61 S.E. 404 (1908).

Forcing defendant to submit to act permitted. — Although evidence may be compulsorily adduced from an accused, it is constitutionally impermissible to compel an accused to perform an act which results in the production of incriminating evidence; the distinction is between forcing an accused to do an act against the accused's will and requiring an accused to submit to an act; the latter "takes evidence from the defendant" and is constitutionally acceptable, the former compels defendant, in essence, to give evidence which violates an individual's right not to incriminate oneself. State v. Armstead, 152 Ga. App. 56, 262 S.E.2d 233 (1979).

Although evidence may be compulsorily adduced from an accused, it is constitutionally impermissible to compel an accused to perform an act which results in the production of incriminating evidence. The distinction is between forcing an accused to do an act against one's will and requiring an accused to submit to an act. Hambrick v. State, 204 Ga. App. 668, 420 S.E.2d 308, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 420 S.E.2d 308 (1992).

Direct tendency to incriminate not required. — Protection is not limited to cases where the question or answer has a direct tendency to incriminate defendant, or to expose the defendant to a penalty or forfeiture; the defendant is protected from answering any question which may form a link in the chain by which such cases are to be established. Simpson v. Simpson, 233 Ga. 17, 209 S.E.2d 611 (1974).

Provision applies where fine, forfeiture, or penalty involved. — In a proceeding against road commissioners for neglect of duty, it is error to compel the defendants to answer under oath questions, the answer to which may subject the defendants to a fine, forfeiture, or penalty. Bryan v. State, 40 Ga. 688 (1870).

Right applies during pendency of new trial motion. — In the trial of a codefendant, it was not error for the court to refuse to require a defendant who had been previously tried and convicted, and whose motion for new trial was then pending, to answer a question tending to incriminate that defendant. Stallings v. State, 136 Ga. 131, 70 S.E. 1015 (1911).

Fact defendant had a pending motion for new trial which, if granted by the trial court or required by the appellate court, would have subjected the defendant to the self-incrimination choice once again, did not preclude compelled testimony via immunity in the codefendant's trial. Lee v. State, 191 Ga. App. 882, 383 S.E.2d 366 (1989).

Use of incriminating statement on second trial. — When a witness was informed that the witness would not be required to give any answer that would tend to incriminate the witness in reference to a given transaction, and the circumstances were such as to indicate that the witness appreciated the prejudicial effect that might result from an answer to a given question, the statement in the answer was admissible against the witness in a subsequent trial, although it tended to connect the witness with the transaction which was the foundation of the indictment upon which the witness was being tried. Davis v. State, 122 Ga. 564, 50 S.E. 376 (1905).

Witness decides whether question is incriminating. — When the witness is otherwise competent, the witness may decline to answer questions which tend to incriminate the witness; and in this event the witness, and not the judge, is to determine whether the answer to the question propounded to the witness will have the effect of subjecting the witness to punishment for crime. Empire Life Ins. Co. v. Einstein, 12 Ga. App. 380, 77 S.E. 209 (1913). See also Wilburn v. State, 141 Ga. 510, 81 S.E. 444 (1914).

Defendant compelled to reenact crime. — It was erroneous to admit testimony that the accused, while in the custody of the sheriff under arrest made without a warrant, was carried by the sheriff to the house alleged to have been burglarized, and there placed by the sheriff in a position at a window through which the house had been entered, and in which position an occupant of the house claimed to be able to identify the accused as the burglar, although the occupant was unable to do so before the accused was placed in this position, and that the sheriff placed the accused there at the occupant's request, for the purpose of enabling the occupant to identify the accused as the burglar. Aiken v. State, 16 Ga. App. 848, 86 S.E. 1076 (1913), later appeal, 17 Ga. App. 721, 88 S.E. 210 (1916).

To compel handwriting exemplar is to impermissibly compel the defendant to do an act, not to submit to an act. State v. Armstead, 152 Ga. App. 56, 262 S.E.2d 233 (1979).

When defendant was asked to submit to a handwriting exemplar act, which defendant readily agreed to do and was not compelled to do so, there was no violation of the Georgia constitutional right nor of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Hambrick v. State, 204 Ga. App. 668, 420 S.E.2d 308, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 420 S.E.2d 308 (1992).

Removal of bullet from defendant. — Constitutional rights of defendant were not violated by the state in requiring removal of a bullet from the defendant's body. Creamer v. State, 229 Ga. 511, 192 S.E.2d 350 (1972), cert. dismissed, 410 U.S. 975, 93 S. Ct. 1454, 35 L. Ed. 2d 709 (1973).

Compulsion by threat of force. — When a police officer compels defendant to produce, against the will of defendant, illegal lottery tickets by threat and by placing the officer's hand on a pistol, the method of forcing defendant to produce this evidence violates defendant's constitutional rights in that it compels the defendant to produce evidence to incriminate oneself. Grant v. State, 85 Ga. App. 610, 69 S.E.2d 889 (1952).

Drug testing provision of probationary sentence. — Defendant's probation officer was authorized to request defendant to produce a blood specimen for analysis under the terms of a drug testing provision of defendant's probationary sentence. Toth v. State, 213 Ga. App. 247, 444 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

Submitting to blood-alcohol tests. — Since, under the Constitution of Georgia, the state may constitutionally take a blood sample from a defendant without the defendant's consent, O.C.G.A. §§ 40-5-55 and 40-6-392 grant, rather than deny, a right to a defendant by providing for refusal to take such a test. Allen v. State, 254 Ga. 433, 330 S.E.2d 588 (1985).

Choice provided to a DUI defendant under Georgia law—submitting to a blood-alcohol test or refusing to submit, with resultant sanctions—is not so painful, dangerous, or severe, or so violative of religious beliefs, that no choice actually exists, and does not amount to compulsion on behalf of the state or a violation of due process. Allen v. State, 254 Ga. 433, 330 S.E.2d 588 (1985).

Field sobriety tests may be asked of noncustodial defendant. — There was no violation of defendant's right against self-incrimination since the defendant was not formally arrested until after the field sobriety test. Lankford v. State, 204 Ga. App. 405, 419 S.E.2d 498 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1051, 113 S. Ct. 972, 122 L. Ed. 2d 127 (1993); State v. Sumlin, 224 Ga. App. 205, 480 S.E.2d 260 (1997).

Driver could not assert right against self-incrimination to suppress results of field sobriety test, since the driver was not a person "charged in a criminal proceeding" at the time the test was given, the driver was not in police custody at that time, and no force or threat of penalty was used against the driver. Montgomery v. State, 174 Ga. App. 95, 329 S.E.2d 166 (1985); Keenan v. State, 263 Ga. 569, 436 S.E.2d 475 (1993); Bravo v. State, 249 Ga. App. 433, 548 S.E.2d 129 (2001).

Alco-sensor screening. — Defendant's refusal to submit to the alco-sensor screening could be admitted without proof that the device had been approved by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 426, 602 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Alphabet test and physical dexterity tests are not inadmissible under the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution because those tests are not evidence of a testimonial or communicative nature. Smith v. State, 202 Ga. App. 701, 415 S.E.2d 495 (1992); Lankford v. State, 204 Ga. App. 405, 419 S.E.2d 498 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1051, 113 S. Ct. 972, 122 L. Ed. 2d 127 (1993).

Defendant who entered plea of nolo contendere could not be forced to testify in the sentencing hearing. Fuller v. State, 244 Ga. App. 618, 536 S.E.2d 296 (2000).

Nontestifying defendant need not be advised of right. — Since defendant did not testify and was not cross-examined, there was no harm in the trial court's failure to advise defendant of the defendant's right not to be compelled to testify under oath. Coonce v. State, 171 Ga. App. 20, 318 S.E.2d 763 (1984).

Grand jury testimony. — Trial court committed reversible error by granting defendant's plea in abatement to an indictment charging defendant with reckless conduct, based on the ground that defendant was forced by the grand jury to give testimony against oneself, where the only proposed indictment before the grand jury at the time defendant was called as a witness was for the offense of feticide, allegedly committed by defendant's spouse, and the defendant did not claim defendant's privilege against self-incrimination. State v. Butler, 177 Ga. App. 594, 340 S.E.2d 214 (1986).

Burden on defendant to show self-incrimination. — When three defendants, one of whom was plaintiff in error, were charged in the indictment with arson, and that defendant's name along with six other names appeared on back of the indictment, there was no presumption that defendant was examined against oneself, and the burden was on the defendant to show that the defendant gave evidence to incriminate oneself. Cowart v. State, 51 Ga. App. 199, 179 S.E. 823 (1935).

Jury instructions. — It is proper for the court to give a charge on defendant's failure to testify without a request and it is not reversible error to fail to give the charge if defendant does not request the charge. Stapleton v. State, 235 Ga. 513, 220 S.E.2d 269 (1975).

Waiver. — If a defendant is fully apprised of the defendant's fifth amendment rights by the trial judge and by the defendant's attorney prior to the defendant's taking the stand for cross-examination, any objection to the procedure must be considered as waived at trial. Everett v. State, 238 Ga. 80, 230 S.E.2d 882 (1976).

3. Comments

It is error for prosecutor to comment to the jury on defendant's exercise of the defendant's constitutional right to remain silent. Marlow v. State, 152 Ga. App. 218, 262 S.E.2d 460 (1979).

Rigid adherence to rule. — Rule that defendant's failure to make a statement cannot be commented upon has been rigidly adhered to since it was laid down in Bennet v. State, 86 Ga. 401, 12 S.E. 806, 22 Am. St. R. 465, 12 L.R.A. 449 (1890); Moore v. State, 10 Ga. App. 805, 74 S.E. 315 (1912).

Rule applies to judge as well as prosecutor. — Law prohibits any comment on the failure of defendant to testify in a criminal case; this inhibition applies to both prosecutor and judge. Thomas v. State, 234 Ga. 615, 216 S.E.2d 859, answer conformed to, 136 Ga. App. 165, 220 S.E.2d 736 (1975).

Comment by prosecutor cuts down on privilege against self-incrimination by making its assertion costly. Gosha v. State, 239 Ga. 37, 235 S.E.2d 527 (1977).

Rule applies only if defendant fails to testify. — Statutory prohibitions upon comment on defendant's failure to testify are applicable only when defendant fails to testify. Gosha v. State, 239 Ga. 37, 235 S.E.2d 527 (1977).

Statute plainly prohibits any attempt to discredit defendant in the eyes of the jury by the making of any comment upon the exercise of defendant's right not to be sworn. Ward v. State, 123 Ga. App. 216, 180 S.E.2d 280 (1971).

What is prohibited is a comment on the failure to testify. Roberts v. State, 231 Ga. 395, 202 S.E.2d 43 (1973).

What is prohibited is a comment that the defendant could have denied, explained, or otherwise disputed the state's case against the defendant. Woodard v. State, 234 Ga. 901, 218 S.E.2d 629 (1975); Graham v. State, 156 Ga. App. 538, 275 S.E.2d 114 (1980).

Remarks made by the court to defendant in presence of jury which serve to invite attention and emphasize the defendant's failure to defend oneself under oath are precisely what the statute prohibits, even if the remarks are intended to insure that defendant understands defendant's rights. Roberts v. State, 231 Ga. 395, 202 S.E.2d 43 (1973).

Indirect reference to defendant's silence. — When the district attorney directly refers to silence as an indication of guilt, error has obviously been committed; when an indirect reference to this fact is made a more marginal question is involved. Redding v. State, 151 Ga. App. 140, 259 S.E.2d 146 (1979).

Reference to defendant's contentions through counsel or by defendant's plea is not a comment on defendant's failure to testify. Bailey v. State, 142 Ga. App. 202, 235 S.E.2d 650 (1977).

Comment on failure to rebut incriminating evidence. — Prosecution is not permitted to refer to the fact that defendant has not made a statement, but may properly comment upon the fact that defendant has failed to adduce testimony in rebuttal of evidence introduced by the state, tending to show defendant's guilt. Saffold v. State, 11 Ga. App. 329, 75 S.E. 338 (1912). See also Caesar v. State, 125 Ga. 6, 53 S.E. 815 (1906); Battle v. State, 155 Ga. App. 541, 271 S.E.2d 679 (1980).

It is not error for the prosecutor to reflect upon failure of the defense to present any evidence to rebut the proof adduced by the state. Brown v. State, 157 Ga. App. 473, 278 S.E.2d 31 (1981).

Trial judge does not violate O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 where the court's instruction given prior to the closing statements by either side merely informs the jury of the general procedure to be followed and does not amount to a comment on the defendant's failure to testify and defendant raises no objection. Fletcher v. State, 157 Ga. App. 707, 278 S.E.2d 444 (1981).

Comment on failure of defendant as witness to rebut evidence. — When defendant testifies in defendant's own behalf, there is no violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 when the district attorney comments upon defendant's failure, when the defendant testified, to explain or deny the testimony of particular witnesses. Gosha v. State, 239 Ga. 37, 235 S.E.2d 527 (1977).

Prosecutor's statement that defendant had no excuse constituted an impermissible comment upon defendant's failure to testify. Spann v. State, 126 Ga. App. 370, 190 S.E.2d 924 (1972).

Prosecutor's statement that only two people knew what went on in the room where an assault occurred, the victim and defendant, did not violate defendant's rights against self-incrimination. Neal v. State, 198 Ga. App. 518, 402 S.E.2d 114 (1991).

Prosecutor's comment that defendant "didn't take the stand" was an improper comment on defendant's failure to testify, under O.C.G.A., § 24-9-20(b). Raheem v. State, 275 Ga. 87, 560 S.E.2d 680 (2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1021, 123 S. Ct. 541, 154 L. Ed. 2d 429 (2002); overruled on other grounds, Patel v. State, 282 Ga. 412, 651 S.E.2d 55 (2007).

Impermissible comment mitigated by ample alternative evidence. — Since defendant offered no evidence on a robbery trial and the statement of the district attorney in closing argument was that the testimony of the victim stood unrefuted, this language did not constitute reversible error if other evidence was ample to support a guilty verdict. Redding v. State, 151 Ga. App. 140, 259 S.E.2d 146 (1979).

Comment that defendant's testimony would exculpate codefendant. — Statement by counsel for codefendant when counsel sought to call defendant as a witness after objection was sustained was not a prohibited comment since counsel said that nothing would come from counsel's questions that would do anything other than exculpate the codefendant. Graham v. State, 156 Ga. App. 538, 275 S.E.2d 114 (1980).

Prosecutor's acknowledgement that defendant had the right to present evidence and subpoena witnesses was not a comment upon defendant's failure to testify. Hutchinson v. State, 179 Ga. App. 485, 347 S.E.2d 315 (1986).

Prosecutor's questions constituted improper comment upon criminal defendant's failure to produce evidence. Creamer v. State, 168 Ga. App. 790, 310 S.E.2d 560 (1983); Brewster v. State, 205 Ga. App. 770, 424 S.E.2d 8 (1992).

Comment on failure to take test proper. — Prosecutor's comment on the defendant's failure to take a chemical test at the time of defendant's arrest was not an impermissible reference to the defendant's right to remain silent under the fifth amendment and was a proper subject for comment in closing argument. Givens v. State, 199 Ga. App. 709, 405 S.E.2d 898 (1991).

Proper instructions. — Charge that the jury is to make no assumption or draw any conclusions from defendant's failure to testify would not have been error. Woodard v. State, 234 Ga. 901, 218 S.E.2d 629 (1975).

It is permissible for the trial court to charge that the jury is to make no assumption or draw any conclusions from defendant's failure to testify. Also permissible would be a charge that defendant's failure to testify creates no presumption against the defendant and the burden of proving defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt cannot be presumed to be carried because of the defendant's failure to testify. Marlow v. State, 152 Ga. App. 218, 262 S.E.2d 460 (1979).

It is error for court to deny defendant's request for a charge that the defendant's failure to testify creates no presumption against the defendant. Marlow v. State, 152 Ga. App. 218, 262 S.E.2d 460 (1979).

Impermissible comment cured by instructions. — While counsel for the state should not argue to the jury from the omission of defendant to make a statement, the effect of such impropriety may be obviated by an appropriate charge from the court. Robinson v. State, 82 Ga. 535, 9 S.E. 528 (1889). See also Minor v. State, 120 Ga. 490, 48 S.E. 198 (1904).

After one of the state's counsel remarked that defendant did not even make a statement in the defendant's own behalf, and the court immediately rebuked counsel and thereafter during the charge instructed the jury that it should not take into consideration the fact that the defendant did or did not make a statement, the refusal of the trial court to grant a mistrial would not be reversed. Parks v. State, 208 Ga. 508, 67 S.E.2d 716 (1951).

Evidence of Character or Other Crimes1. In General

Nature of good character defense. — Defense of good character, which the law designates as a substantive fact, and which may itself alone be sufficient to generate a reasonable doubt, is that reputation for good character which surrounds the defendant previous to the transaction under consideration; it is the reputation for previous good character. Eidson v. State, 66 Ga. App. 765, 19 S.E.2d 373 (1942).

Probative connection required. — Evidence of prior difficulties between defendant and the alleged victim was not admissible because the evidence did not have a probative connection with the incident giving rise to the case being tried. Carr v. State, 267 Ga. 701, 482 S.E.2d 314 (1997). But see Clark v. State, 271 Ga. 6, 515 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

Character evidence generally inadmissible. — Evidence regarding the character of a defendant is generally inadmissible unless the defendant puts the defendant's character in issue, and evidence of independent offenses committed by a defendant is generally inadmissible due to its inherently prejudicial nature and minimal probative value. Henderson v. State, 204 Ga. App. 884, 420 S.E.2d 813 (1992).

In criminal trials, state cannot introduce evidence of defendant's character unless the defendant has personally first put it in issue; the state may then disprove or rebut, by competent evidence, that which the defendant has seen cause to assert. Clarke v. State, 52 Ga. App. 254, 183 S.E. 92 (1935); Robinson v. State, 62 Ga. App. 355, 7 S.E.2d 758 (1940); Posey v. State, 152 Ga. App. 216, 262 S.E.2d 541 (1979).

In a criminal case, the state cannot rebut or question the presumption of the defendant's good character unless the defendant discards the presumption thus afforded and elects to put the defendant's actual character in issue by evidence or by the defendant's statement to the jury. Murray v. State, 157 Ga. App. 596, 278 S.E.2d 2 (1981).

State cannot rebut or question the presumption of a defendant's good character unless the defendant first chooses to place the defendant's character in issue. Arnold v. State, 193 Ga. App. 206, 387 S.E.2d 417 (1989).

Unless and until the accused introduces evidence of the accused's own character or reputation, the state may not show that the accused's general reputation for peaceableness and violence was bad, and evidence of the accused's general reputation for violence is legally irrelevant and the testimony is inadmissible. Ledford v. State, 202 Ga. App. 694, 415 S.E.2d 693 (1992).

Impeachment by cross-examination. — Use of cross-examination in a good faith attempt to impeach a defendant, who on direct examination has voluntarily given testimony on direct examination obviously calculated to impress the jury as to certain traits of defendant's character, is not prohibited. Butts v. State, 193 Ga. App. 824, 389 S.E.2d 395 (1989).

Even though defendant did not, merely by volunteering that defendant had been incarcerated, put defendant's character "in issue" within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 so as to permit rebuttal by the state, defendant nevertheless raised an issue which could be fully explored by the state on cross-examination. Wilkey v. State, 215 Ga. App. 354, 450 S.E.2d 846 (1994); Roman v. State, 245 Ga. App. 225, 537 S.E.2d 684 (2000).

Testimony of defendant on direct examination regarding prior criminal conduct did not place defendant's character in issue, but did raise issues which could be fully explored by the state on cross-examination. Franklin v. State, 224 Ga. App. 578, 481 S.E.2d 852 (1997).

Evidence that defendant knew that defendant would be incarcerated for 90 days beginning one week after the offense charged contradicted defendant's testimony that defendant expected to be steadily employed in the weeks following the offense; accordingly, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the evidence to impeach defendant's testimony. Cooper v. State, 272 Ga. App. 209, 612 S.E.2d 42 (2005).

Proof of other crimes to show bad character generally. — Proof of other crimes is never admissible (except in cases where defendant has personally put one's character in issue) where its chief or only probative value consists in showing that defendant is, by reason of defendant's bad character (demonstrated through a criminal career), more likely to have committed the crime than defendant otherwise would have been; to admit such evidence, it must have relevancy and probative value from some other point of view. Chambers v. State, 76 Ga. App. 269, 45 S.E.2d 724 (1947); Carroll v. State, 155 Ga. App. 514, 271 S.E.2d 650 (1980).

Good character is a substantive fact, like any other fact tending to establish defendant's innocence, and ought to be so regarded by the court and jury; like all other facts proved in the case, it should be weighed and estimated by the jury, for it may render that doubtful which otherwise would be clear. Sims v. State, 84 Ga. App. 753, 67 S.E.2d 254 (1951).

Good character may of itself generate reasonable doubt in the minds of the jury as to defendant's guilt, and for this reason defendant is allowed when defendant sees fit to offer defendant's good character in issue. Clarke v. State, 52 Ga. App. 254, 183 S.E. 92 (1935); Walker v. State, 199 Ga. 418, 34 S.E.2d 446 (1945); Sims v. State, 84 Ga. App. 753, 67 S.E.2d 254 (1951).

Evidence admissible despite tendency to introduce character. — Evidence showing intent, motive, plan, scheme, and bent of mind is admissible although such evidence may also place in issue character of defendant. Causey v. State, 154 Ga. App. 76, 267 S.E.2d 475 (1980).

Evidence admissible to show motive is not rendered inadmissible because it incidentally places the defendant's character in issue. Brock v. State, 179 Ga. App. 519, 347 S.E.2d 230 (1986).

Defendant's response about whether it took a long time to make a drug transaction did not place defendant's character in issue, since the defendant only hypothetically referred to a criminal act; such testimony was relevant to the alibi defense maintained by the defendant at hearing and was not evidence of general bad character admitted in violation of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Johnson v. State, 204 Ga. App. 277, 419 S.E.2d 118 (1992).

Evidence that is material in explaining the conduct of the witness does not become inadmissible simply because defendant's character is incidentally put in issue. Hall v. State, 264 Ga. 85, 441 S.E.2d 245 (1994).

In a prosecution for simple assault, rape and battery, although defendant did not place defendant's character in question when defendant testified on cross-examination that "it wasn't in my nature to hurt [the victim]," testimony of a police officer that the officer had dealt with defendant two or three times, and that one time it took four officers to control defendant without their getting hurt, was admissible to prove the falsity of defendant's specific testimony. Height v. State, 214 Ga. App. 570, 448 S.E.2d 726 (1994).

Testimony of the only witness who could identify defendant that the witness had spent time in jail with defendant was admissible. Kellibrew v. State, 239 Ga. App. 783, 521 S.E.2d 921 (1999).

Evidence of Character or OtherCrimes (Cont'd)*1. In General (Cont'd)

Testimony of victim that, before shooting the victim, defendant stated that defendant "can't go back to jail" was clearly admissible as part of the res gestae even if such evidence incidentally placed defendant's character in evidence. Kellibrew v. State, 239 Ga. App. 783, 521 S.E.2d 921 (1999).

Evidence of defendant's financial problems and money mismanagement was admissible to show defendant's alleged financial motive for the murders of defendant's children by burning down defendant's trailer, and evidence about defendant's marital problems and romantic relationships was admissible to show that defendant viewed the children as a source of friction between defendant and a girlfriend and to establish how defendant's wife and previous live-in girlfriend were able to see the relationship with the girlfriend, hear defendant's threats towards the children, and see how defendant treated the children; testimony as to prior difficulties between defendant and defendant's children, such as threats to kill the children made to other people and defendant's indifference to the children's welfare, was admissible to show motive and intent. Riley v. State, 278 Ga. 677, 604 S.E.2d 488 (2004).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion in limine to exclude evidence of defendant's prior incarceration in a criminal trial on new charges, although evidence of prior conviction or general bad character was generally inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b), as the criminal history record was redacted, and the evidence was submitted for the relevant purpose of establishing a timeline in order to refute defendant's alibi that defendant was in another state at the time of the new incident, and further, to show that defendant was called by an alias name, which was used during the incident as well. Copprue v. State, 279 Ga. 771, 621 S.E.2d 457 (2005).

Evidence of specific acts to show bad character. — When defendant puts defendant's general good character in issue, the state may rebut it by evidence as to defendant's general bad character but not by specific acts apart from proof of prior convictions. Folds v. State, 90 Ga. App. 849, 84 S.E.2d 584 (1954); Smith v. State, 91 Ga. App. 360, 85 S.E.2d 623 (1955) (giving certain exceptions).

When defendant puts defendant's character in issue in defendant's statement regarding a specific transaction and place, the state can then rebut a statement regarding such transaction and place referred to. Folds v. State, 90 Ga. App. 849, 84 S.E.2d 584 (1954).

While the impeachment of a defendant's general credibility by proof of general bad character and of prior convictions is prohibited, impeachment of the specific testimony of a criminal defendant (e.g., "I never hurt nobody") may be accomplished by testimony that defendant did, in fact, hurt another, or by a certified copy of a conviction for a crime of physical violence. Williams v. State, 257 Ga. 761, 363 S.E.2d 535 (1988).

Evidence showing intent, bent of mind, and disposition. — Evidence of defendant's lawful consensual sexual relationship with a minor could be used as similar transaction evidence to establish defendant's intent, bent of mind, and lustful disposition. Phagan v. State, 268 Ga. 272, 486 S.E.2d 876 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1128, 118 S. Ct. 1079, 140 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1998).

General reputation of one held by community in which one lives is of the best evidence going to show general character. Clarke v. State, 52 Ga. App. 254, 183 S.E. 92 (1935).

Good character may be proved only by testimony of a witness as to the reputation of the person whose character is in issue; subject to minor exceptions, the opinion of a witness as to character based on personal observation is not an approved way of introducing evidence of character. Taylor v. State, 176 Ga. App. 567, 336 S.E.2d 832 (1985).

Voluntary statement by defendant. — Regardless of whether a statement by the defendant about defendant's sexual relationship with someone not connected with the case was voluntarily given, since the evidence was not relevant nor admissible for impeachment or for any other proper purpose (e.g., to show motive, scheme, or plan), its only purpose was to attempt to show bad character, and, in the absence of interjection of the issue of character by the defendant, this evidence was inadmissible and the admission required reversal. Duke v. State, 256 Ga. 671,

Defendant's testimony regarding never being in trouble. — It was not error to admit evidence of defendant's prior assault conviction because the conviction was offered as impeachment evidence rather than as evidence of bad character after defendant testified, and defendant's counsel emphasized, that defendant had "never been in trouble." Walker v. State, 260 Ga. App. 241, 581 S.E.2d 295 (2003).

When the defendant testified that the defendant had previously been convicted of theft by receiving because the defendant was an innocent victim of circumstance, the defendant opened the door to the prosecution's cross examination concerning the defendant's other convictions for giving a false name and entering an auto. Cobb v. State, 251 Ga. App. 697, 555 S.E.2d 79 (2001).

Statement by ex-wife/victim's mother inadmissible. — In a child molestation prosecution, testimony by defendant's ex-wife, who was also the victim's mother, regarding her fear of defendant was not evidence of similar transactions as provided in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Keanum v. State, 212 Ga. App. 662, 442 S.E.2d 790 (1994).

Conduct of family members. — Trial court erred in allowing the state's attorney to cross-examine the defendant, who was accused of possession of marijuana, as to whether other members of the defendant's family had "been in trouble for marijuana." Hill v. State, 176 Ga. App. 509, 336 S.E.2d 276 (1985).

State's reference in the opening statement to defendant's wife's employment as an exotic dancer was followed with testimony about that employment, which was relevant to the question of the couple's need for money, and therefore, the apparent motive for the crimes, which the state was authorized to present even if the evidence directly involved the defendant's wife's participation in an unsavory activity. Thomas v. State, 274 Ga. 156, 549 S.E.2d 359 (2001).

Testimony concerning marital status. — Trial court did not abuse court's discretion by allowing testimony concerning defendant's marital status, the number of times the defendant was divorced, and the fact that the defendant did not maintain a checking account. Grady v. State, 212 Ga. App. 118, 441 S.E.2d 253 (1994).

Statement in defendant's pretrial statement that defendant had a "drinking problem" and that defendant had been "busted for burglary" did not violate the prohibition in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 against admission of evidence of a defendant's general bad character unless the defendant puts defendant's character in issue. Stitt v. State, 256 Ga. 156, 345 S.E.2d 578 (1986).

District attorney's reference to an indictment was an inappropriate means of impeaching, by contradictory evidence, defendant's statement that defendant had never hurt anyone. Williams v. State, 257 Ga. 761, 363 S.E.2d 535 (1988).

Gang membership. — Prosecutor's questions to an officer regarding defendant's gang affiliation and attire worn in committing the crime was properly allowed as such was relevant to the issue of identity and defendant's gang membership was admissible to show motive. Johnson v. State, 261 Ga. App. 98, 581 S.E.2d 715 (2003).

Duty to instruct when character evidence wrongly admitted. — It is error in a criminal case for the state to place the defendant's character in issue when the defendant has not voluntarily chosen to do so. If the prosecutor solicits excluded testimony, the trial court is, upon objection and if it chooses not to declare a mistrial, required to direct the jury to disregard such testimony. Harris v. State, 251 Ga. App. 879, 555 S.E.2d 485 (2001).

Proper instruction should be given in every case where defendant puts his character in issue; but in the absence of a timely request, an omission to give a specific charge on the subject will not require a new trial. It is only in exceptional cases where the court fails to charge relatively to the good character of defendant that a new trial should be granted. Widner v. State, 197 Ga. 542, 30 S.E.2d 97 (1944); Mangrum v. State, 155 Ga. App. 334, 270 S.E.2d 874 (1980) (further holding that if defendant asserted another defense, denial of the instruction on character was not error).

Written request to charge. — Barring exceptional circumstances, there must be a written request to charge on principles of law regarding good character; otherwise, the failure to do so will not require a new trial. Taylor v. State, 176 Ga. App. 567, 336 S.E.2d 832 (1985).

1. In General (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for mistrial after witness made statements about defendant dealing in drugs on previous occasions as the statements were unsolicited, the trial court gave immediate instructions to disregard the testimony, the witness did not tell the jury anything it did not already know about defendant, and defendant did not show the harm necessary to require the reviewing court to reverse based on the failure to grant the motion for mistrial. McCollum v. State, 258 Ga. App. 574, 574 S.E.2d 561 (2002).

Instructions when defendant's character evidence is uncontradicted. — When defendant puts the defendant's character in issue and offers testimony in support thereof, and the state offers no evidence in contradiction, and no contradiction has arisen from within defendant's testimony, it is error for the court to charge the jury that "the state has introduced evidence to the contrary." Eidson v. State, 66 Ga. App. 765, 19 S.E.2d 373 (1942).

Even if the denial of mistrial was error, it was highly probable that the complained-of character evidence did not contribute to the verdict because the evidence against defendant was overwhelming; the state presented two police officer witnesses who identified defendant as the gunman shown in the videotape of the armed robbery and the state introduced defendant's statement, wherein defendant admitted that defendant robbed the store. Torres v. State, 258 Ga. App. 393, 574 S.E.2d 438 (2002).

2. Putting Character in Issue

In general. — Only when the defendant makes an election to place defendant's good character in issue may the state offer evidence of the defendant's general bad character or defendant's prior convictions. Jones v. State, 257 Ga. 753, 363 S.E.2d 529 (1988).

When the defendant offers testimony of a witness as to defendant's general good reputation in the community, the state may prove the defendant's general bad reputation in the community and may additionally offer evidence that the defendant has been convicted of prior offenses. Jones v. State, 257 Ga. 753, 363 S.E.2d 529 (1988).

When the defendant testifies in the defendant's own behalf and "falsely denies past criminal conduct or past misdeeds," the state may introduce evidence reflecting negatively on the defendant's character only insofar as that evidence proves the falsity of specific testimony of the defendant. Jones v. State, 257 Ga. 753, 363 S.E.2d 529 (1988).

When the defendant elects to place defendant's character in evidence within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20, the state may offer evidence of the defendant's prior convictions. Strong v. State, 263 Ga. 587, 436 S.E.2d 213 (1993).

Character not "put in issue" by inadvertent statements. — Trial court did not err in failing to give a jury charge on the defendant's good character. Character was not "put in issue," within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 by inadvertent statements regarding the defendant's good conduct. Character, in order to be charged, should have been placed in evidence as an affirmative defense. Johnson v. State, 261 Ga. 419, 405 S.E.2d 686 (1991); Keef v. State, 220 Ga. App. 134, 469 S.E.2d 318 (1996).

Trial court correctly refused to allow defendant to impeach codefendants by proof of the codefendants' prior convictions since the codefendants had not placed the codefendants' own character into evidence. Morris v. State, 204 Ga. App. 437, 419 S.E.2d 733 (1992).

It was not necessary to determine whether defendant's testimony on direct examination had "opened the character door," since it was defendant who introduced the defendant's character into evidence by discussing the defendant's criminal record in the response defendant chose to give to the prosecutor's proper cross-examination as to defendant's direct examination testimony. Mitchell v. State, 193 Ga. App. 214, 387 S.E.2d 425 (1989).

When reference to defendant's criminal history was fleeting and incomplete, and the trial court immediately instructed the jurors to disregard the reference, the court did not abuse the court's discretion in electing to give curative instructions rather than granting a mistrial. Smith v. State, 244 Ga. App. 165, 534 S.E.2d 903 (2000).

It was error under earlier provisions of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b) to question the defendant about the defendant's history of misdemeanor arrests as the defendant's remark that the defendant was not a violent person was at best an inadvertent statement of the defendant's good character, not an election to place the defendant's character in evidence; furthermore, the defendant had not testified untruthfully about the defendant's criminal record and had not testified that the defendant had no prior arrests. Lindsey v. State, 282 Ga. 447, 651 S.E.2d 66 (2007).

Defendant was not entitled to a mistrial simply because a state's witness, in a nonresponsive answer, mentioned that defendant did not want to go back to jail. The mere mention that the defendant had been in jail did not place defendant's character at issue, and a nonresponsive answer to a question impacting negatively on the defendant's character did not place the defendant's character in issue under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b). Mathis v. State, 299 Ga. App. 831, 684 S.E.2d 6 (2009).

Testimony of previous "trouble" did not place character in issue. — Defendant's testimony on direct examination that defendant had previously been in "some trouble" did not place defendant's character in issue. Richardson v. State, 173 Ga. App. 695, 327 S.E.2d 813 (1985).

Subsequent conduct did not place character in issue. — Trial court erred in admitting detective's testimony that, when the detective questioned defendant seven weeks after the shooting, defendant appeared "to be high" and told the detective that the defendant had been smoking marijuana-laced cigars. Weems v. State, 269 Ga. 577, 501 S.E.2d 806 (1998).

Evidence used to impeach specific testimony. — There are numerous instances when the state may offer evidence of prior crimes or bad acts committed by a defendant for a purpose other than to show that the defendant is a person of bad character, including instances when such evidence is necessary and relevant to impeach the defendant's specific testimony. Crane v. State, 263 Ga. 518, 436 S.E.2d 216 (1993).

Trial court properly allowed a prosecutor to question defendant about any prior positive drug screens as the purpose was to impeach defendant's unsolicited assertion that the drug screen that was the basis of defendant's prosecution was defendant's only positive drug screen; accordingly, although character and conduct in other transactions is generally irrelevant unless defendant first puts defendant's character in issue, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-2-2 and 24-9-20(b), evidence may be used for impeachment purposes in order to disprove facts testified to by defendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82. Lockaby v. State, 265 Ga. App. 527, 594 S.E.2d 729 (2004).

Since, in cross-examining a friend of the defendant, defense counsel engaged in questioning about the defendant's church attendance, and since the only purpose of these questions was to elicit testimony about the defendant's character, the trial court properly allowed evidence of defendant's previous license suspensions and insurance cancellations as rebuttal evidence on the same subject. Donaldson v. State, 279 Ga. App. 407, 631 S.E.2d 443 (2006).

Negative impact of nonresponsive answer. — Even when a witness's nonresponsive answer impacts negatively on the defendant's character, it does not place the defendant's character in issue under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Williams v. State, 214 Ga. App. 834, 449 S.E.2d 532 (1994); Williams v. State, 269 Ga. 827, 504 S.E.2d 441 (1998); Watkins v. State, 241 Ga. App. 251, 526 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

Evidence of prior difficulties between defendant and victim is admissible to show the relationship between the defendant and the victim, and does not place the defendant's character in evidence within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. McKissick v. State, 263 Ga. 188, 429 S.E.2d 655 (1993). But see Clark v. State, 271 Ga. 6, 515 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

Eliciting evidence on direct examination that defendant had been "ripped off" by the victim in previous drug dealings was not an improper introduction of bad character evidence, but was evidence of motive for the crimes committed. Holcomb v. State, 268 Ga. 100, 485 S.E.2d 192 (1997).

Testimony that a photograph is a "mug shot" from the files of the police department does not put the defendant's character in issue. Seals v. State, 176 Ga. App. 67, 335 S.E.2d 306 (1985).

2. Putting Character in Issue (Cont'd)

Admission of photograph from website.

— In a defendant's trial for vehicular homicide, for which the defendant was convicted, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in permitting the state to introduce photographs of the defendant in jail clothing, playfully posing for the camera from a website created by the defendant as the defendant testified how remorseful the defendant was for killing the victim and referenced the specific date that the website photographs were taken; therefore, the defendant opened the door for the state to admit the photographs of the defendant. Merritt v. State, 288 Ga. App. 89, 653 S.E.2d 368 (2007).

Evidence that an accused is presently confined or was in jail does not place the accused's character in evidence. Fields v. State, 176 Ga. App. 122, 335 S.E.2d 466 (1985).

Copies of sexually oriented magazines were not inadmissible at defendant's trial for child molestation and sodomy on grounds the magazines placed defendant's character in issue since the evidence was admitted to show defendant's motive generally and defendant's state of mind and lustful disposition. Stamey v. State, 194 Ga. App. 305, 390 S.E.2d 409 (1990), cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 912, 390 S.E.2d 409 (1990), 498 U.S. 843, 111 S. Ct. 123, 112 L. Ed. 2d 91 (1990).

Defendant's character incidentally put in issue. — When testimony of a witness for the state of what defendant stated to the witness shortly after the homicide was admissible to show the state of mind and intentions of defendant toward the deceased, the fact that such testimony incidentally put defendant's character in issue did not render the testimony inadmissible. Tiller v. State, 196 Ga. 508, 26 S.E.2d 883 (1943).

In prosecution of defendant for the shooting death of his wife, testimony of defendant's sister-in-law to effect that she had seen defendant strike victim on two separate occasions was relevant to issue of defendant's motive in killing his wife, and was not rendered inadmissible because it incidentally placed defendant's character in issue. Hales v. State, 250 Ga. 112, 296 S.E.2d 577 (1982).

Defendant, in prosecution for armed robbery, injected defendant's character into issue after defendant stated defendant did not commit "wrong" which, viewed in the totality of defendant's testimony, was a general declaration of defendant's own good character. Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. App. 102, 311 S.E.2d 537 (1983).

Armed robbery defendant's statement that the reason defendant took a car was because defendant thought there was a warrant for defendant and defendant would "disappear for a while" was relevant to motive, intent, and course of conduct and was not rendered inadmissible because the statement incidentally placed the defendant's character in issue. Millis v. State, 196 Ga. App. 799, 397 S.E.2d 71 (1990).

In prosecution for armed robbery and related crimes, evidence of defendant's prior negotiations about the sale of a machine gun only incidentally placed defendant's character in evidence. Samuels v. State, 223 Ga. App. 275, 477 S.E.2d 414 (1996).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 by admitting evidence which suggested that defendant had lied to friends about age and background and that defendant failed to grieve for the victim, because the evidence was relevant to the case and was not rendered inadmissible by the fact that the evidence incidentally placed defendant's character in issue. Mullinax v. State, 273 Ga. 756, 545 S.E.2d 891 (2001).

Trial court properly admitted evidence of defendant's conversations with a police officer, wherein the defendant related that the defendant was carjacked, in an attempt to retrieve the defendant's car that had been involved in a high speed chase with police after robbery and other crimes had been committed, as the conversations were relevant to show that the defendant had given a false account to police; although character evidence that reflected poorly on the defendant was also admitted with those statements, such as the defendant's admission to police that the defendant spent a night with a female who was not defendant's wife, such admission was proper despite the fact that the defendant had not first put the defendant's character in issue, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b). Nashid v. State, 271 Ga. App. 202, 609 S.E.2d 106 (2004).

Evidence admissible as part of res gestae. — A rape victim's statement, in response to a prosecutor's question regarding whether the defendant had threatened to kill the victim during the attack, that "He told me that he was going to kill me. He told me that he'd done it before and that he had no problem doing it," was admissible as part of the res gestae. Even if it placed the defendant's character in issue, the defendant's counsel agreed to a curative instruction, and it was highly probable that the statement did not contribute to the verdict. Dixon v. State, No. A10A0085, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 381 (Apr. 7, 2010).

Character questioned by drug evidence.

— Improper admission of witness's character evidence indicating that defendant was a "source" of cocaine was harmless error in light of evidence that defendant was observed giving the witness a package containing cocaine. Baptiste v. State, 190 Ga. App. 451, 379 S.E.2d 165, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 897, 379 S.E.2d 165 (1989).

Although defendant did not put defendant's character into issue within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20, it was proper to allow evidence of defendant's prior drug possession charge to disprove statements that the defendant did not use drugs. King v. State, 203 Ga. App. 287, 416 S.E.2d 842 (1992).

While it was error to allow reference by a witness to defendant's purported need for cocaine after committing a crime, in view of the unintentional nature of the statement and overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt, the motion for mistrial was properly denied. White v. State, 268 Ga. 28, 486 S.E.2d 338 (1997).

Fact that the defendant possessed a bag of marijuana at the time of defendant's arrest was admissible in defendant's prosecution for robbery and kidnapping, even though this evidence incidentally put the defendant's character in evidence. Reynolds v. State, 234 Ga. App. 884, 508 S.E.2d 674 (1998).

Defendant's testimony that "I don't carry no drugs" clearly implied that defendant was neither in possession of drugs at the time in question nor on other occasions and, thus, defendant's prior convictions involving possession of cocaine were properly admitted as impeachment evidence. Porter v. State, 240 Ga. App. 554, 524 S.E.2d 259 (1999).

Admission of evidence relevant to every aspect of crime charged. — Custodial statement in which the defendant admitted having turned over an electric meter used in the manufacture of drugs was properly admitted at the defendant's trial and did not improperly introduce character evidence against the defendant since even though a defendant is not charged with every crime committed during a criminal transaction, every aspect relevant to the crime charged may be presented at trial. Ward v. State, 285 Ga. App. 574, 646 S.E.2d 745 (2007).

Defense counsel opening door. — When defense counsel first opened door pertaining to circumstances surrounding appellant's purchase of vehicle from witness by first asking the latter whether or not the vehicle had been stolen, the state's inquiry on rebuttal as to whether appellant knew that the vehicle had been stolen simply informed jury of true nature of that transaction, and the fact that this testimony may have incidentally placed appellant's character in issue did not render the testimony inadmissible. Mulkey v. State, 250 Ga. 444, 298 S.E.2d 487 (1983).

When defense counsel initiated the issue of defendant's propensity for violence during cross-examination of a witness, the prosecution was authorized to further explore that area. Jordan v. State, 267 Ga. 442, 480 S.E.2d 18 (1997).

Trial court did not err when the court allowed the admission of evidence of the defendant's bad character since the defendant opened the door to such evidence when, during cross-examination of the witness, defense counsel introduced three letters from the witness to the defendant and one of those letters referred to the defendant having stolen a car. Thomas v. State, 247 Ga. App. 798, 545 S.E.2d 354 (2001).

Defense counsel opened the door to the prosecution exploring defendant's criminal history at trial based on the cross-examination of an investigating officer in which counsel asked the officer if defendant had ever been convicted of child molestation previous to the allegations of child molestation that were then pending against defendant; the exploration was not limited to defendant's criminal history with respect to sex crimes. Kimmons v. State, 267 Ga. App. 790, 600 S.E.2d 783 (2004).

Evidence of Character or Other

Crimes (Cont'd)

2. Putting Character in Issue (Cont'd)

Defense of entrapment. — Defendant's assertion of defense of entrapment, in and of itself, does not have effect of placing defendant's character in issue. Johns v. State, 164 Ga. App. 133, 296 S.E.2d 638 (1982).

Character put in issue. — Defendant in prosecution for illegal possession of alcohol in defendant's statement injected defendant's character into issue after defendant stated: "I work for a living and I don't now fool with the liquor business." Dukes v. State, 90 Ga. App. 50, 81 S.E.2d 864 (1954).

After a witness testified that the witness had identified appellant to police from the witness's picture in "some mug books," and after the prosecutor thereafter asked the police officer to explain what "mug books" were, defendant's character was placed in evidence. Stanley v. State, 250 Ga. 3, 295 S.E.2d 315 (1982).

Trial court did not err by allowing the state to introduce evidence of two prior convictions of defendant after defendant testified that defendant was in Tallahassee, Florida, purchasing drugs to sell, at the time the offenses charged were committed, although defendant argued that this was alibi evidence, not character evidence, and was not offered to show that defendant was of such good character that defendant could not have committed the offense charged. Laidler v. State, 180 Ga. App. 213, 348 S.E.2d 739 (1986).

When a defendant admits any prior criminal conduct less than all defendant's criminal offenses, defendant has put defendant's character in issue within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20, with the result that the prosecutor may cross-examine the defendant as to such conduct and may prove other prior convictions. Spencer v. State, 180 Ga. App. 498, 349 S.E.2d 513 (1986).

When during counsel's cross-examination of the victim, defense counsel elicited testimony from the victim that when the victim was two years old the victim's family's house caught on fire because the victim's father had been sniffing gas, and the victim and the victim's mother then left him, and where, in cross-examining defendant, the prosecuting attorney began asking him about the victim's testimony in regard to his sniffing gas, defendant opened the door to such evidence through defense counsel's cross-examination of the victim and the testimony given by the defendant on direct. Atwell v. State, 204 Ga. App. 187, 419 S.E.2d 77 (1992).

When prior to the state's questioning of defendant about defendant's demotion, defendant's trial counsel, upon inquiry by the trial court, told the court that counsel anticipated putting defendant's character into evidence, the facts demonstrated that defendant, by way of counsel's statements voluntarily elected to place defendant's character in issue prior to any introduction of character evidence on the part of the state. Canup v. State, 216 Ga. App. 828, 456 S.E.2d 215 (1995).

Defendant cannot intentionally testify regarding defendant's community volunteer work with the youth and the elderly in the community and then argue that defendant did not intentionally put defendant's character in issue. Campbell v. State, 221 Ga. App. 105, 470 S.E.2d 503 (1996).

With numerous questions to the state's and defendant's own witnesses, defendant opened the door to defendant's character; thus, the state was permitted to respond with evidence of the prior conviction. Hill v. State, 243 Ga. App. 124, 532 S.E.2d 491 (2000).

Trial court did not err in permitting the admission of evidence during cross-examination of the defendant about a prior conviction based on a nolo contendere plea to the offense of giving false information to an officer since, on direct examination, the defendant stated that the defendant had the "most respect for police officers" and that the defendant used to be a corrections officer. Payne v. State, 248 Ga. App. 158, 545 S.E.2d 336 (2001).

When defendant testified that defendant never confronted anyone, always walked away from violent confrontations, and was known in the community as a nonviolent person, defendant placed defendant's character in issue, allowing the admission of defendant's prior convictions for violent crimes under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b). Carswell v. State, 263 Ga. App. 833, 589 S.E.2d 605 (2003).

By stating that the defendant was a person who tried not to hurt anyone, the defendant put the defendant's character into issue under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b). Accordingly, it was not error to allow the state to introduce evidence of the defendant's armed robbery convictions. Allen v. State, 292 Ga. App. 133, 663 S.E.2d 370 (2008), aff'd, 286 Ga. 273, 687 S.E.2d 417 (2009).

Mistrial required. — Trial court erred in denying a mistrial for the injection of character after a state's witness was allowed to state that defendant told the witness that the defendant had been in court "too many times before." Ochle v. State, 218 Ga. App. 69, 459 S.E.2d 560 (1995).

Jury instruction on good character. — While testimony as to specific acts may not always be used to raise the character issue, after a defendant personally provides such testimony and is available to the state for cross-examination as to the defendant's own actions and disposition, the defendant's testimony is admissible to show the defendant's good character. As the testimony was admissible and sufficient to raise the character issue, a substantive issue in the case, the trial court should have given a jury charge, following the defendant's request, to consider evidence of the defendant's good character in reaching the jury's decision. State v. Braddy, 254 Ga. 366, 330 S.E.2d 338 (1985).

Character not put in issue. — Testimony by one of the officers who had a search warrant that the officer was there because complaints had been made against defendant was not harmful to defendant, and did not tend to put defendant's character in issue. Lester v. State, 90 Ga. App. 43, 81 S.E.2d 894 (1954).

Defendant's statement that defendant lived in a certain county all defendant's life and had not had any whisky trouble there, that defendant had never been arrested for whisky, never been searched, and defendant's house had never been searched, did not put defendant's general character in issue. Folds v. State, 90 Ga. App. 849, 84 S.E.2d 584 (1954).

Since defendant did not by defendant's statement put defendant's character in issue but merely denied guilt of the crime with which defendant was charged, the introduction into evidence of defendant's prior guilty pleas was error. Smith v. State, 141 Ga. App. 64, 232 S.E.2d 401 (1977).

Defendant's character was not impermissibly placed in issue when a police officer testified at trial that the officer found an available photograph of the subject to show to certain potential witnesses for purposes of identifying defendant, on grounds that such testimony indicated that defendant's photograph was already in police records, implying that defendant had been previously arrested or convicted of another crime. Woodard v. State, 155 Ga. App. 533, 271 S.E.2d 671 (1980).

Detective's testimony that the police identified defendant's fingerprint by comparing the fingerprint to a print that the police already had on file did not inject defendant's character into evidence. Lewis v. State, 255 Ga. 681, 341 S.E.2d 434 (1986).

During a trial for possession of cocaine, the state offered the defendant's prior conviction for forgery into evidence, arguing that defendant's admission of possessing a gun was illegal by a convicted felon, which was prior criminal conduct and defendant had thus placed defendant's character in issue, but no criminal conduct could be shown until after the prior conviction was admitted into evidence over the objection of the defense counsel, because possession of a gun is presumptively lawful, allowing the prior conviction into evidence in order to place the defendant's character in issue demanded circular logic and defied even the broad parameters of the "simple rule" that when a defendant admits any prior criminal conduct, the prosecutor may cross-examine the defendant as to such conduct and may prove other prior convictions. Hall v. State, 180 Ga. App. 210, 348 S.E.2d 736 (1986).

Prosecution did not place a rape defendant's character in issue by questioning the defendant about information in a police accident report on which defendant relied and based defendant's alibi but merely exercised the prosecution's right to cross-examine and attempt to impeach defendant as any other witness could be impeached. Middlebrooks v. State, 184 Ga. App. 791, 363 S.E.2d 39 (1987).

When the defendant testifies and admits prior criminal conduct, defendant has not placed defendant's character "in issue" within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Rather, the defendant has raised an issue which may be fully explored by the state on cross-examination. Jones v. State, 257 Ga. 753, 363 S.E.2d 529 (1988); Weston v. State, 216 Ga. App. 806, 456 S.E.2d 214 (1995); Warren v. State, 232 Ga. App. 488, 502 S.E.2d 336 (1998).

It is only when a defendant has "put his character in issue," as that term is defined in the context of O.C.G.A. §§ 24-2-2 and 24-9-20(b), that the court is required to give a charge on good character, and when, in a trial for aggravated battery, the defendant's statement that defendant never shot anybody was not responsive to the direct question relating to defendant's defenses of accident and self-defense, which the court did fully charge, the volunteered additional statement, merely repeated on redirect, was not legally sufficient to put defendant's character in issue. Williams v. State, 187 Ga. App. 355, 370 S.E.2d 210 (1988).

Defendant's statement that defendant was "not that kind of person" did not operate to place defendant's character in issue so as to open the door to proof of defendant's past criminal record at defendant's trial for rape and aggravated sodomy. McGuire v. State, 188 Ga. App. 891, 374 S.E.2d 816 (1988).

When, on direct examination, defendant attempted to explain that defendant possessed marijuana for medicinal purposes, and that defendant smoked marijuana on occasion to relieve headaches and eye problems, this testimony did not place defendant's character in issue within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Houston v. State, 192 Ga. App. 73, 383 S.E.2d 571 (1989).

Defendant's testimony that defendant had smoked marijuana and that "I ain't done no burglary. I never have." did not put defendant's character in issue at defendant's trial for burglary so as to permit the introduction of convictions for shoplifting and marijuana-related violations. Hurst v. State, 189 Ga. App. 748, 377 S.E.2d 519 (1989).

When defendant appeals convictions of possession of cocaine, possession of less than one ounce of marijuana, and driving under the influence of alcohol, the trial court erred in allowing the state to introduce evidence that the defendant had been convicted, some three years previously, of the offense of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, since the state asserted that the prior conviction was admissible to impeach the defendant's testimony, elicited both on direct and on cross-examination, that defendant did not smoke marijuana, despite defendant's objection. Moses v. State, 190 Ga. App. 699, 379 S.E.2d 819 (1989).

Witnesses' testimony of prior difficulties between defendant and the victim may have reflected negatively on defendant, but did not place defendant's character in evidence within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Rotino v. State, 259 Ga. 295, 380 S.E.2d 261 (1989).

In prosecution for armed robbery, questioning directed at defendant's reasons for defendant's "flight" was not rendered improper by the defendant's disclosure that defendant was on parole. Jones v. State, 205 Ga. App. 711, 423 S.E.2d 393 (1992).

Because defendant had not placed defendant's character "in issue" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20, the state properly introduced evidence of a prior drug conviction to negate defendant's specific testimony that defendant had never been in the drug business. Howard v. State, 206 Ga. App. 610, 426 S.E.2d 181 (1992).

In a trial for sex offenses, denial of the defendant's motion for a mistrial was proper since the motion was based upon the improper placement of defendant's character in issue when a detective testified about one victim's speculation that the defendant devised defendant's plan to molest the victim while the defendant was in jail. Shropshire v. State, 210 Ga. App. 241, 435 S.E.2d 700 (1993).

When defendant did not testify either on direct- or cross-examination in such a way as to admit prior criminal conduct and did not testify in a manner implying that the defendant had no criminal record, the defendant did not place the defendant's character in issue and the trial court erred in admitting the records of defendant's previous convictions. Hancock v. State, 210 Ga. App. 528, 437 S.E.2d 610 (1993).

When the apparent intent of the questioning was not to impugn defendant's character but rather to cast doubt on the witness's credibility, including the witness's denial that any money bag was brought into the witness's apartment, by showing the witness's bias in favor of the witness's brother and the witness's history of coming to the brother's aid, the defendant's character was not put in issue; moreover, even if the jury could infer from the colloquy that defendant had a prior brush with the law, it did not improperly place defendant's character in evidence. Norman v. State, 212 Ga. App. 105, 441 S.E.2d 94 (1994).

Defendant did not open the door to evidence of prior convictions when, in a rambling, somewhat unresponsive answer to a question about the defendant having enough money to live on defendant's own, defendant said defendant didn't "convert himself to a criminal life." Stinson v. State, 221 Ga. App. 758, 472 S.E.2d 538 (1996).

In a prosecution for trafficking in cocaine, defendant's character was not placed in issue when a police officer was asked if it would have been unusual to find a razor blade in defendant's pocket and the officer replied "No, not in this particular incident." Menefee v. State, 226 Ga. App. 725, 487 S.E.2d 489 (1997).

When the defendant testifies and admits prior criminal conduct, the defendant has not placed defendant's character in issue within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20; rather, defendant has raised an issue which may be fully explored by the state on cross-examination. Davidson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 605, 499 S.E.2d 697 (1998).

In a prosecution for Medicaid fraud, testimony of defendant's employee that defendant put too much pressure on the employee and didn't respect the employee as a person did not rise to the level of general bad character evidence. Bullard v. State, 242 Ga. App. 843, 530 S.E.2d 265 (2000).

Police officer's testimony that the officer understood an informant's reference to defendant as "Man" to be the use of defendant's street name did not place defendant's character in evidence as there was no evidence indicating how the officer knew defendant's nickname or that defendant had any history with the officer's drug task force, and, thus, did not require the mistrial defendant requested. Carter v. State, 261 Ga. App. 204, 583 S.E.2d 126 (2003).

Defendant claimed that another person agreed to pay defendant to take that person to an informant's home, and denied that drugs found in the defendant's cell phone cover belonged to the defendant or that the defendant went to the informant's home to sell drugs; these responses at trial did not raise the question of the defendant's character, and the trial court improperly admitted defendant's prior convictions. King v. State, 270 Ga. App. 399, 606 S.E.2d 616 (2004).

Jury was improperly charged that a witness could be impeached by proof that the witness had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude since the defendant was the only witness for whom a certified copy of a previous conviction was introduced into evidence and the defendant's conviction should not have been admitted as the defendant had not placed the defendant's character into issue. However, there was not reversible error as the defendant requested the charge on impeachment that included the language the defendant challenged. Miller v. State, 281 Ga. App. 354, 636 S.E.2d 60 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 106 (Ga. 2007).

Child molestation defendant did not put the defendant's good character into issue so as to require a jury charge; the defendant's testimony regarding the defendant's attempts to help the victim was more reasonably construed as an explanation for the inordinate amount of time the defendant spent with the victim than as evidence of good character, and the defendant's testimony regarding the defendant's two part-time jobs only inadvertently placed the defendant's good character into issue. Kurtz v. State, 287 Ga. App. 823, 652 S.E.2d 858 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 184 (Ga. 2008).

In a joint trial wherein a defendant and two codefendants were convicted of armed robbery, the trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a new trial based on the trial court allegedly erroneously admitting character evidence of the defendant as the mere mention that the defendant had been in jail fell short of placing the defendant's character at issue, and a witness's nonresponsive answer to a question did not impact negatively on the defendant's character nor placed defendant's character in issue. Mathis v. State, No.

A09A0215; No. A09A0308; No. A09A0358, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 586 (May 20, 2009).

Character not in issue but allowed admission of prior conviction. — Defendant's statement that defendant did not sell drugs did not place defendant's character in issue, but did provide a basis for the admission of evidence of defendant's prior conviction for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute. Jester v. State, 229 Ga. App. 490, 494 S.E.2d 284 (1997).

Defendant's character put in issue by prosecution witness. — Rule which permits the prosecution to rebut evidence adduced for the purpose of proving defendant's good character is not affected by the fact that the witness used for the purpose of showing good character was called to the stand by the state. Johnson v. State, 84 Ga. App. 745, 67 S.E.2d 246 (1951).

Defendant placing character in issue. — When, during cross-examination, defendant described defendant's characteristics and testified to the lack of past misdeeds, the state was entitled to explore the truth of the statements regardless of whether defendant had placed defendant's character in issue within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Bryant v. State, 226 Ga. App. 135, 486 S.E.2d 374 (1997).

Defendant's statement on cross-examination that defendant "didn't rob nobody" opened the door to defendant's character and inquiries about defendant's prior armed robbery convictions. Morrison v. State, 232 Ga. App. 846, 502 S.E.2d 470 (1998).

Because defendant admitted to using drugs on direct examination, the state was entitled to fully explore this issue on cross-examination and was entitled to explore the possibility of defendant's desire for drugs as a motive for robbery, even if it incidentally put defendant's character in issue. Maddox v. State, 238 Ga. App. 598, 521 S.E.2d 581 (1999).

Trial court did not err in allowing evidence of defendant's prior conviction into evidence because the fact that defendant was on probation was brought out on direct examination by defendant's own attorney and the defense informed the court that they would call the probation officer as a witness. Williams v. State, 246 Ga. App. 347, 540 S.E.2d 305 (2000).

Questions and responses alluding to prior arrests impermissibly placed defendant's character in issue, and when the trial court failed to take any corrective action in fulfillment of the court's duty, the defendant was denied a fair trial. Richardson v. State, 199 Ga. App. 10, 403 S.E.2d 877 (1991).

Trial court erred in allowing the state's attorney to question the defendant regarding several previous occasions on which defendant had been arrested on the theory that defendant's character had been placed in issue during an exchange between the state's attorney and the defendant's grandfather. Parker v. State, 198 Ga. App. 838, 403 S.E.2d 897 (1991).

Instructions. — It is reversible error for the court to charge the jury that defendant has "undertaken" to put defendant's character in issue, when as a matter of fact defendant in defendant's statement did put defendant's character in issue. Spikes v. State, 72 Ga. App. 537, 34 S.E.2d 561 (1945).

Charge on impeachment by proof of conviction was not reversible error even though defendant had not placed defendant's character in issue because of the overwhelming evidence of the appellant's guilt. Peterson v. State, 212 Ga. App. 147, 441 S.E.2d 481 (1994).

Whenever there is evidence to support a charge on good character and defendant requests that such a charge be given, the jury must be instructed that the jury may consider good character evidence in the jury's deliberations. Sapp v. State, 271 Ga. 446, 520 S.E.2d 462 (1999).

Tendency to put character in issue mitigated by instructions. — Upon the trial of one accused of murder, it was not error to admit signatures to pleas of guilty on two indictments admittedly signed by defendant as a standard for comparison with handwriting on an envelope and letter also introduced in evidence by the state and contended by the state to be in the handwriting of defendant, but denied by defendant, over the objection that this evidence would put defendant's character in issue, even though the indictments themselves also went out to the jury, since the jury was instructed that the jury were not to consider anything in the two indictments other than signatures of defendant appearing thereon, and only for the purpose of comparison, and that the indictments and pleas of guilty should not be considered by the jury as affecting the character or reputation of defendant. Hyde v. State, 196 Ga. 475, 26 S.E.2d 744 (1943).

It was not erroneous for the trial judge to overrule a motion for a mistrial, when, in answer to a question propounded by the prosecution, evidence was elicited from a witness (regarding a prior shooting by the accused) which tended to put the character of the accused in issue, when, upon objection by counsel for the accused, such evidence was excluded and the jury was instructed to disregard the question and the responsive answer. Joyner v. State, 208 Ga. 435, 67 S.E.2d 221 (1951).

When during cross-examination counsel for defendant asked a question, the answer to which was complained of as tending to put defendant's character in evidence, and the trial judge, acting immediately, ruled out the evidence, thereby removing the evidence from consideration of the jury, court would not say, under the circumstances, that this action by the trial judge did not afford defendant all the protection to which defendant was entitled under law. Hubbard v. State, 208 Ga. 472, 67 S.E.2d 562 (1951).

Evidence of victim's character. — In a homicide prosecution, defendant can introduce proof that deceased was a person of violent and turbulent character only when it is shown prima facie that defendant had been assailed by deceased and was honestly seeking to defend oneself. Robertson v. State, 124 Ga. App. 119, 183 S.E.2d 47 (1971).

Victim's violent character and general reputation for violence were admissible after the codefendant arguably made a showing that the defendant was honestly seeking to defend oneself rather than to act as the aggressor. Smith v. State, 267 Ga. 372, 477 S.E.2d 827 (1996).

Harmless error. — Evidence showing that defendant was willing to be a "bigtime" cocaine dealer was erroneously admitted, but, when the evidence of defendant's guilt was ample and it was highly probable that the placing of defendant's character in issue did not contribute to the jury's verdict, the error was not harmful. Hargrove v. State, 188 Ga. App. 336, 373 S.E.2d 44 (1988).

Failure to give defendant's requested charge on good character was harmless error since it was likely that the jury would not have relied upon defendant's good character to acquit defendant since the state presented evidence of defendant's prior convictions and the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming. Duvall v. State, 259 Ga. 801, 387 S.E.2d 880 (1990).

Improper admission of testimony placing defendant's character in evidence was not reversible error since the trial judge gave adequate curative instructions, and the evidence against defendant was overwhelming. Ayers v. State, 194 Ga. App. 301, 390 S.E.2d 432 (1990).

When a defendant did not voluntarily place defendant's character in issue, the particular facts and circumstances of this case made it highly probable that testimony regarding the defendant's violent character when drinking did not contribute to the verdict. The erroneously-admitted evidence was cumulative of a fact which had already been established beyond a reasonable doubt. Washington v. State, 194 Ga. App. 756, 391 S.E.2d 718 (1990).

Although the defendant's prior burglary conviction, admitted by stipulation of counsel for the purpose of establishing modus operandi, could not be considered by the jury for purposes of impeaching the defendant's testimony, the error did not require reversal due to the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Howard v. State, 202 Ga. App. 574, 415 S.E.2d 45 (1992).

Any error in instructing the jury that a witness could be impeached upon proof of general bad character was harmless as the only person possibly impeached was defendant, who testified that defendant had been admitted to a club although defendant was underage because defendant knew the bouncer; the testimony was so innocuous as to not amount to evidence of bad character as defendant did not state that defendant lied to get in, cheated to get in, or broke any laws. Young v. State, 272 Ga. App. 304, 612 S.E.2d 118 (2005).

In the absence of evidence connecting the defendant to the injuries depicted in a photograph of the defendant's love interest, the photo was not appropriate impeachment evidence, and the trial court erred in admitting it; however, the error was harmless because eyewitness testimony identified the defendant as the person who shot the victim multiple times while the victim lay on the ground partially paralyzed, and it was highly probable that the erroneous admission of the photograph into evidence did not contribute to the jury's verdict and the judgment of conviction entered against the defendant. Coleman v. State, 286 Ga. 291, 687 S.E.2d 427 (2009).

3. Use of Evidence of Other Crimes

Evidence of codefendant's transactions admissible. — There was no call for a mistrial based on evidence of similar transactions since the state never suggested, nor would it be inferable from any of the evidence, that defendant was implicated in any way in the second count in which defendant's codefendant was charged. Ealy v. State, 203 Ga. App. 219, 416 S.E.2d 559 (1992).

Prior conviction admissible to rebut specific testimony. — Although the defendant did not put the defendant's "character into issue" within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20, it was proper to allow evidence of a prior drug possession charge to disprove defendant's statement that the defendant did not use drugs. The introduction of the prior conviction was permissible since the state was rebutting specific testimony. Sanders v. State, 199 Ga. App. 671, 405 S.E.2d 727 (1991); Thrasher v. State, 243 Ga. App. 702, 534 S.E.2d 439 (2000).

Evidence of independent crimes is admissible for limited purposes if two conditions are met: first, there must be evidence that the defendant was in fact the perpetrator of the independent crime. Second, there must be sufficient similarity or connection between the independent crime and the offense charged, that proof of the former tends to prove the latter. If these conditions are satisfied, evidence concerning the independent crimes may be admitted for the purposes of showing, among other things, identity, motive, plan, scheme, bent of mind, intent, and course of conduct. Kilgore v.

State, 251 Ga. 291, 305 S.E.2d 82 (1983); Lord v. State, 199 Ga. App. 814, 406 S.E.2d 137 (1991).

Evidence of independent offenses may be admitted if the state introduces the evidence for a proper purpose, if there is sufficient evidence to establish that the defendant actually committed the independent offenses, and if there is sufficient similarity between the charged offense and the independent offenses. Henderson v. State, 204 Ga. App. 884, 420 S.E.2d 813 (1992).

Conviction improperly admitted for impeachment. — Defendant's prior conviction was improperly admitted as the timing of defendant's prior conviction was not inconsistent with defendant's trial testimony that defendant was "in the Persian Gulf" at the time of the codefendant's prior drug offense; the error was not harmless as the evidence of defendant's cocaine trafficking conviction, while sufficient, was not overwhelming. Patten v. State, 275 Ga. App. 574, 621 S.E.2d 550 (2005).

Use of evidence of other crimes held proper. — Question to one of defendant's witnesses who had testified as to defendant's good character, on cross-examination by counsel for the state, as to whether it would affect the witness's opinion of defendant's reputation if the witness knew that the defendant carried a pistol in defendant's bosom since there was evidence by at least one witness that defendant was carrying a pistol around in the bosom of the defendant's dress prior to the homicide, was a proper one under the circumstances in which it was asked. Jones v. State, 88 Ga. App. 330, 76 S.E.2d 810 (1953).

When defendant was on trial for the offense of murder, and there was evidence tending to show that the defendant killed the deceased in the commission of a robbery, and also that on the occasion in question the defendant came to the home of the deceased in an automobile and left by the same conveyance, evidence that the defendant later admitted stealing the automobile in a different county tended to illustrate defendant's state of mind at the time of the homicide, and to corroborate the other evidence tending to show robbery as the motive, and was not subject to objection on the grounds that it was irrelevant and prejudicial, and placed defendant's character in issue. Emmett v. State, 195 Ga. 517, 25 S.E.2d 9, cert. denied, 320 U.S. 774, 64 S. Ct. 76, 88 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1943), overruled on other grounds, 237 Ga. 471, 228 S.E.2d 860 (1976).

In the defendant's prosecution for the murder of his present wife, evidence that the defendant had shot his former wife in the shoulder with a pistol was admissible to show malice, intent, motive, and bent of mind and did not impermissibly place the defendant's character in issue. Clark v. State, 255 Ga. 370, 338 S.E.2d 269 (1986).

Evidence of similar crimes held to be properly admitted. — See Anderson v. State, 184 Ga. App. 293, 361 S.E.2d 270 (1987); Flowers v. State, 191 Ga. App. 396, 381 S.E.2d 768 (1989).

When a defendant, on trial for trafficking in cocaine, volunteered that the defendant tried to flee in a prior similar transaction case because the defendant was on parole, the trial court did not err in permitting the state to ask what crime the defendant had been paroled from, once the defendant had interjected the fact. Head v. State, 195 Ga. App. 445, 393 S.E.2d 730 (1990).

When defendant was prosecuted for a drug offense arising out of defendant's attempt to deliver cocaine concealed in a box of toothpaste to a jail inmate, evidence of a similar transaction involving the defendant's codefendant at the jail five months later was admissible. Riley v. State, 196 Ga. App. 148, 395 S.E.2d 394 (1990).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence, failure to stop at a stop sign, violating the open container law, and improper lane usage, evidence that defendant previously drove while under the influence of alcohol, and with an open container in the car, was admissible as circumstantial evidence of the defendant's bent of mind and course of conduct on the night in question. McCullough v. State, 230 Ga. App. 98, 495 S.E.2d 338 (1998).

Mistrial was not required in a prosecution for selling and trafficking in cocaine since the defendant testified at length on direct examination that the defendant arranged numerous drug buys for the police and that the defendant was threatened and attacked by individuals who were arrested as a result of the defendant's aid and such testimony opened the door to the prosecutor's questions about how the defendant was able to arrange those drug buys and whether any danger the defendant faced could have come from the defendant's involvement in other drug transactions. Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. App. 479, 546 S.E.2d 859 (2001).

Because defendant's prior guilty pleas were made with assistance of counsel and were voluntary, the trial court did not err in admitting the pleas to show aggravating circumstances during sentencing. Sampson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 206, 609 S.E.2d 110 (2004).

Evidence of more convictions than defendant testified to. — When defendant testified to three prior convictions, the court properly allowed evidence of a fourth conviction as impeachment. Bounds v. State, 207 Ga. App. 665, 428 S.E.2d 673 (1993). But see Felix v. State, 271 Ga. 534, 523 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Evidence of incarceration admissible. — Evidence introduced regarding defendant's incarceration under another name was relevant to the charge of giving a false name and was not objectionable based upon O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Agony v. State, 226 Ga. App. 330, 486 S.E.2d 625 (1997).

Evidence of parole status. — Assuming that defendant did not, merely by volunteering that defendant was on parole, place defendant's character "in issue" within the meaning of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 so as to permit rebuttal by the state, defendant nevertheless subjected oneself to a through and sifting cross-examination by the state on that point. Wilson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 525, 499 S.E.2d 911 (1998).

Similarity to previous offenses. — There is no requirement that a previous offense be absolutely identical to the one being prosecuted so as to make the offense admissible. Blige v. State, 205 Ga. App. 133, 421 S.E.2d 547 (1992), aff'd, 263 Ga. 244, 430 S.E.2d 761 (1993).

Similarity to other conduct. — Showing excerpt of a videotape found in defendant's possession which depicted the conduct with which defendant was charged was not error since it was relevant to defendant's bent of mind and modus operandi. Rushin v. State, 269 Ga. 599, 502 S.E.2d 454 (1998).

Trial court did not err in admitting the similar transaction evidence as the evidence described acts remarkably similar to those with which defendant was charged; the victims' older sister testified that defendant had forced her to have intercourse with him in a manner similar to that testified to by the victims, and defendant's wife testified that he performed the same deviant sexual act upon her that the victims testified he performed upon them, thus, the evidence was admissible to show defendant's bent of mind, course of conduct, and lustful disposition with respect to the offenses alleged against him. Beck v. State, 263 Ga. App. 256, 587 S.E.2d 316 (2003).

Evidence of Character or Other Crimes (Cont'd)
3. Use of Evidence of Other Crimes (Cont'd)

Remoteness in time. — Testimony concerning a prior shooting incident (six years before the killing) involving the defendant and the defendant's subsequent murder victim is not too remote in time to have been admissible. Thurman v. State, 255 Ga. 286, 336 S.E.2d 746 (1985).

Permitting the prosecutor to ask defendant if the defendant had been arrested on a sex charge subsequent to the incident in question at defendant's trial for child molestation and enticing a child for indecent purposes was reversible error since the sole issue in the case was the credibility of defendant and the alleged victim. Thomas v. State, 178 Ga. App. 674, 344 S.E.2d 496 (1986).

Proof of forgery conviction prejudicial. — When evidence of defendant's prior conviction of forgery was admitted during defendant's trial for possession of a controlled substance, since forgery is a crime of moral turpitude which goes directly to the defendant's truthfulness and veracity, the Court of Appeals could not say with certainty that the defendant's conviction for possession of a controlled substance was not unduly influenced by inadmissible evidence of defendant's prior criminal record, and the judgment was reversed. Hall v. State, 180 Ga. App. 210, 348 S.E.2d 736 (1986).

Relevance of evidence concerning a previous altercation between defendant and defendant's subsequent murder victim wherein defendant cut the victim with a knife many times on the face and arm (for which defendant was convicted of simple battery) outweighs the possible prejudicial effect of such evidence since it sheds light on the defendant's conduct toward the victim. Cooper v. State, 256 Ga. 234, 347 S.E.2d 553 (1986).

Possession of firearm by convicted felon. — It is proper under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 to try a firearms possession charge, which requires evidence of a prior felony conviction, together with a marijuana and a burglary charge. State v. Santerfeit, 163 Ga. App. 627, 295 S.E.2d 756 (1982).

In a prosecution for assault and possession of a pistol by a convicted felon, the testimony of an officer to show defendant's possession of the pistol prior to the date of the assault was admissible. Fulton v. State, 232 Ga. App. 898, 503 S.E.2d 54 (1998).

Evidence of defendant's narcotic use admissible to show motive for burglaries. — When a defendant is charged with the robbery or burglary of a pharmacy or drug store, evidence that the defendant used narcotics is admissible since that evidence is relevant to the defendant's motive for committing the crime. Brock v. State, 179 Ga. App. 519, 347 S.E.2d 230 (1986).

Court's admission of evidence of prior sexual contact was not error since both the prior incident and the charged crime involved nonconsensual sexual conduct related to younger females in defendant's household, and the prior incident occurred in the same time frame as the onset of the charged crimes. Yelverton v. State, 199 Ga. App. 41, 403 S.E.2d 816 (1991).

Proof of crimes involving moral turpitude is admissible to impeach witness who places the witness's character in issue through testimony given by the witness on direct examination. Emmett v. State, 199 Ga. App. 650, 405 S.E.2d 707, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 405 S.E.2d 707 (1991).

Admission of fingerprint card was error. — In a prosecution for possession of marijuana, it was reversible error to introduce a fingerprint card of defendant that showed the date of a prior arrest and listed charges against the defendant. Jinks v. State, 229 Ga. App. 18, 493 S.E.2d 214 (1997).

Parole records admissible. — It was not error to allow the state to introduce into evidence defendant's parole documents after these were taken from defendant's person upon arrest. Dowdy v. State, 209 Ga. App. 95, 432 S.E.2d 827 (1993).

Evidence of probation violation. — Record did not support defendant's claim that the state violated O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 by introducing the issue of defendant's probation violation during cross-examination to show that defendant had prior convictions, and the appellate court found that the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying defendant's motion for a mistrial. Fernandez v. State, 263 Ga. App. 750, 589 S.E.2d 309 (2003).

Admissible in cross-examination when defendant raised probation status on direct. — When defendant admitted that defendant was on probation for prior criminal conduct during defendant's direct testimony, it was admissible for the trial court to allow the state, on cross-examination, to explore the nature of defendant's prior probation, including the fact that defendant was on probation for having previously fled from the police, which was what the present trial was about; accordingly, there was no error in this admission of evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b). Dyer v. State, 261 Ga. App. 289, 585 S.E.2d 81 (2003).

No cross-examination on unproved crimes, violent acts. — When the state cross-examines a character witness, the prosecutor may not ask questions as to unproved crimes or acts of violence which are inflammatory, prejudicial, and suggestive of facts not in evidence. Chisholm v. State, 199 Ga. App. 746, 406 S.E.2d 112 (1991).

Evidence of specific acts to rebut defendant's character evidence held harmless error. — When defendant's character has been put in issue, it is not permissible in rebuttal to prove specific acts of bad character, except on cross-examination for the purpose of testing the witness's knowledge or to impeach defendant's statement; nevertheless, admission of evidence that the police officer had received reports concerning liquor violations by defendant in rebuttal of evidence that defendant had never been previously arrested for liquor violations, the defendant conceding that the defendant had placed defendant's character in issue as to liquor violations, was not such error as to require reversal. Johnson v. State, 84 Ga. App. 745, 67 S.E.2d 246 (1951).

Because the trial court did not commit reversible error when the court erroneously allowed the state to introduce evidence of defendant's prior misdemeanor convictions under O.C.G.A. §§ 24-2-2 and 24-9-20(b), defendant failed to show that counsel's trial strategies constituted ineffective assistance. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. 522, 615 S.E.2d 532 (2005).

Argument to Jury

Editor's notes. — See editor's note at beginning of Judicial Decisions.

Rules generally applicable. — Defendant in a criminal case has the right to make, without interruption, such statement to the jury in the defendant's defense as the defendant sees fit and proper to make. Defendant is not circumscribed, governed, or restricted by the rules controlling admissibility of evidence. It is error to interrupt the defendant and exclude from consideration of the jury a portion of defendant's statement, so long as the defendant confines oneself to the transaction under investigation. The court may, however, prevent the defendant from making wholly irrelevant statements entirely inapplicable to the case. Bradford v. State, 67 Ga. App. 462, 21 S.E.2d 108 (1942), later appeal, 69 Ga. App. 856, 26 S.E.2d 848 (1943).

Right to make a statement in the defendant's behalf is a personal right granted to defendant by law, and extends no further than to permit defendant personally to make to the court and jury such statement as defendant deems proper in the defendant's defense. Defendant's counsel has no right to ask the defendant questions while defendant is making defendant's statement. The trial judge, however, in the judge's discretion can permit the defendant's counsel to ask the defendant questions or make suggestions to defendant relating to the defendant's statement, while defendant is making it or when the defendant has concluded it. Williams v. State, 220 Ga. 766, 141 S.E.2d 436, answer conformed to, 111 Ga. App. 588, 142 S.E.2d 409 (1965).

Failure of a defendant's wife to testify is not a legitimate subject matter of argument for counsel for the state; although such a comment does not constitute reversible error when the trial court rebukes the prosecuting attorney immediately in the presence of the jury, instructs the jury that it is not necessary for any defendant or the defendant's spouse ever to take the stand, and that the burden is always upon the state to prove a defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Casey v. State, 167 Ga. App. 437, 306 S.E.2d 683 (1983).

Denial of right is reversible error. — Making of a statement by defendant, where the defendant introduces no other evidence, entitles the defendant to conclude the argument in the case. This is an important right, and the right's denial will generally cause a reversal of the decision of the lower court. The presumption arising from denial of the right is that the party thus deprived has been injured. Kelly v. State, 149 Ga. App. 388, 254 S.E.2d 737 (1979).

Denying defendant the right to make the closing argument was not error since a codefendant had tendered an exhibit into evidence that was admitted without objection during cross-examination of a police officer. Boston v. State, 185 Ga. App. 740, 365 S.E.2d 885 (1988).

Defendants may not suggest in argument what defendants saw fit not to put on stand, that there was other witness testimony favorable to their defense, and to nevertheless have benefit of privilege to open and conclude argument to jury. Sanders v. State, 156 Ga. App. 44, 274 S.E.2d 88 (1980).

Suggestion that defendants sacrificed testimony to preserve argument. — It would not be proper to intimate to jury that defendants had sacrificed valuable defense witness testimony to preserve procedural right to open and conclude argument to jury. Sanders v. State, 156 Ga. App. 44, 274 S.E.2d 88 (1980).

Comment on lack of remorse. — Because there was sufficient evidence for a rational trier of fact to find defendant guilty and a prosecutor's closing argument simply made a reasonable inference based on defendant's lack of remorse, there was no prosecutorial misconduct under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b). Smith v. State, 279 Ga. 48, 610 S.E.2d 26 (2005).

In charging jury upon defendant's right to make statement, it is preferable to confine the instruction to the language of the statute. Garrett v. State, 203 Ga. 756, 48 S.E.2d 377 (1948).

Treatment of Defendant as Witness

Defendants' testimony should be given the same weight and credit and be considered on the same basis and under the same rules as any other witness in the case. Burgan v. State, 59 Ga. App. 524, 1 S.E.2d 603 (1939).

Sworn testimony of defendant has same evidentiary value as testimony of any other witness. Robertson v. State, 124 Ga. App. 119, 183 S.E.2d 47 (1971); Black v. State, 230 Ga. 614, 198 S.E.2d 314 (1973); Jester v. State, 131 Ga. App. 269, 205 S.E.2d 444 (1974) (further holding that instruction on weight to be given defendant's testimony is unnecessary).

Jury is authorized to believe part of defendant's statement, though the whole statement is not credible to the jury; and the same thing is true as to the testimony of each and every witness who appears before the jury. Gray v. State, 77 Ga. App. 747, 49 S.E.2d 829 (1948); Stembridge v. State, 82 Ga. App. 214, 60 S.E.2d 491 (1950); King v. State, 151 Ga. App. 762, 261 S.E.2d 485 (1979).

Cross-examination generally. — Statute specifically permits a defendant to be cross-examined as any other witness except as to general bad character or prior convictions. Such cross-examination may be thorough and sifting. Leonard v. State, 146 Ga. App. 439, 246 S.E.2d 450 (1978).

Permissible questions. — In a shoplifting prosecution, the trial court did not err in permitting the state's attorney, over an objection that the state shifted the burden of proof, to ask defendant whether the defendant attempted to contact anyone at the store who could corroborate the defendant's testimony that the defendant entered the store with a stolen CD player in order to return the CD player. Singleton v. State, 240 Ga. App. 240, 522 S.E.2d 734 (1999).

Permitting cross-examination of defendant before defendant testifies is not necessarily error. Everett v. State, 238 Ga. 80, 230 S.E.2d 882 (1976).

Defendant may offer to subject oneself to cross-examination. — While the prosecution may refuse to cross-examine defendant and defendant has the right to refuse to answer any questions asked of the defendant, defendant, nevertheless, has the right to offer to subject oneself to cross-examination. Smith

v. State, 215 Ga. 51, 108 S.E.2d 688 (1959).

Impeachment generally. — While a criminal defendant is not subject to impeachment by proof of general bad character or prior convictions until defendant puts defendant's general good character in evidence, defendant is subject to impeachment the same as any other witness. Favors v. State, 145 Ga. App. 864, 244 S.E.2d 902 (1978).

24-9-21. Confidentiality of certain communications.

There are certain admissions and communications excluded on grounds of public policy. Among these are:

- (1) Communications between husband and wife;
- (2) Communications between attorney and client;
- (3) Communications among grand jurors;
- (4) Secrets of state;
- (5) Communications between psychiatrist and patient;
- (6) Communications between licensed psychologist and patient as provided in Code Section 43-39-16;
- (7) Communications between patient and a licensed clinical social worker, clinical nurse specialist in psychiatric/mental health, licensed marriage and family therapist, or licensed professional counselor during the psychotherapeutic relationship; and
- (8) Communications between or among any psychiatrist, psychologist, licensed clinical social worker, clinical nurse specialist in psychiatric/mental health, licensed marriage and family therapist, and licensed professional counselor who are rendering psychotherapy or have rendered psychotherapy to a patient, regarding that patient's communications which are otherwise privileged by paragraph (5), (6), or (7) of this Code section.

As used in this Code section, the term "psychotherapeutic relationship" means the relationship which arises between a patient and a licensed clinical social worker, a clinical nurse specialist in psychiatric/mental health, a licensed marriage and family therapist, or a licensed professional counselor using psychotherapeutic techniques as defined in Code Section 43-10A-3 and the term "psychotherapy" means the employment of "psychotherapeutic techniques." (Orig. Code 1863, § 3720; Code 1868, § 3744; Code 1873, § 3797; Code 1882, § 3797; Civil Code 1895, § 5198; Civil Code 1910, § 5785; Code 1933, § 38-418; Ga. L. 1959, p. 190, § 1; Ga. L. 1978, p. 1657, § 1; Ga. L. 1995, p. 858, § 1.)

ANALYSIS

COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE

COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN ATTORNEY AND CLIENT

COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN PSYCHIATRIST AND PATIENT

General Consideration

Privilege is absolute, and if a matter is privileged it is not discoverable. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Privileged communications admissible for limited purpose. — Scope of exclusion of former Code 1933, § 38-413 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21) was the content of the communications, whereas documents sought to be admitted for the limited purpose of comparison of the handwritings were admissible as evidence, as was authorized by former Code 1933, §§ 38-708 and 38-709 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 24-7-6 and 24-7-7). Guy v. State, 138 Ga. App. 11, 225 S.E.2d 492 (1976).

Separating privileged from nonprivileged information. — When any document sought to be produced contains a mixture of privileged and nonprivileged communication or information, ample remedy is provided to delete privileged matter, and this also would be within the inherent power of the court. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

Statute does not simply proscribe the channel through which the evidence reaches the jury, but makes the evidence itself inadmissible. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Waiver of privilege. — Confidential communication, whether orally made or by letter, is privileged, but such privilege may be waived. McCord v. McCord, 140 Ga. 170, 78 S.E. 833 (1913).

Third person overhearing communication. — Statute was not intended to forbid one who overhears a conversation between husband and wife from testifying with respect to the conversation. If they are unsuccessful in keeping secret that which they intend each other shall so regard, the mere fact that they did so intend will not render incompetent the testimony of an outsider. Knight v. State, 114 Ga. 48, 39 S.E. 928, 88 Am. St. R. 17 (1901). See also Ford v. State, 124 Ga. 793, 53 S.E. 335 (1906); Cocroft v. Cocroft, 158 Ga. 714, 124 S.E. 346 (1924); Sims v. State, 36 Ga. App. 266, 136 S.E. 460 (1927).

Time of objection to testimony. — An objection to testimony on the ground that the testimony was in the nature of confidential communications between husband and wife, and therefore to be excluded under the provisions of statute, comes too late when urged for the first time in the brief of counsel for the plaintiff in error in the reviewing court. Holloway v. Hoard, 140 Ga. 380, 78 S.E. 928 (1913); Maxwell v. Maxwell, 177 Ga. 483, 170 S.E. 362 (1933).

Patient-physician communications. — Confidential communications excluded from testimony do not include those made by a patient to a physician. Collins v. Howard, 156 F. Supp. 322 (S.D. Ga. 1957).

Trial court did not err in admitting the testimony of a family practice physician from whom the defendant sought psychiatric referral two days after an alleged rape and who also consulted with the victim and attempted an examination of her pelvic area. Barnes v. State, 171 Ga. App. 478, 320 S.E.2d 597 (1984).

Defendant offered no evidence that the information the defendant provided in the medical questionnaire was ever imparted to a medical professional so it could not be said that the document constituted a privileged communication within the meaning of paragraphs (5) or (6) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21. Manning v. State, 231 Ga. App. 584, 499 S.E.2d 650 (1998).

Examples of nonprivileged communications. — Communications between an applicant for a job and the prospective employer, or between an applicant for unemployment insurance and the State Department of Labor, are not privileged communications for purposes of the statute. Guy v. State, 138 Ga. App. 11, 225 S.E.2d 492 (1976).

Communications between principal and agent are not privileged, even if such communications ultimately reach the principal's attorney and are used in preparing a defense to litigation arising out of the occurrence forming the subject matter of the communications. GMC v. Moseley, 213 Ga. App. 875, 447 S.E.2d 302 (1994).

Open Records Act. — "Secrets of state" privilege did not exempt cost estimates of the DOT from disclosure under the Open Records Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-14-1 et seq. Hardaway Co. v. Rives, 262 Ga. 631, 422 S.E.2d 854 (1992).

Out-of-state order prohibiting unprivileged testimony. — Michigan order, by facially prohibiting former corporate litigation consultant from testifying as to matters outside the scope of any privilege, violated Georgia public policy; therefore, the Full Faith and Credit Clause did not require the federal district court in Georgia to give full effect to the Michigan Court order. Williams v. GMC, 147 F.R.D. 270 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Confidential informants. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying disclosure of the identity of a confidential informant who may have seen defendant in the possession of contraband, but who was not present, did not participate in the arrest, and did not take part in the offense. Leonard v. State, 228 Ga. App. 792, 492 S.E.2d 747 (1997).

Public policy in Georgia favored nondisclosure of the identity of a confidential informant (CI); because a CI did not participate in a controlled drug buy, the defendant's request to disclose the CI's identity was properly denied; while the defendant argued that the CI was a witness to whether or not the defendant consented to a search of the defendant's car, whether the defendant consented was immaterial because an officer was authorized to arrest the defendant for drug possession, and based on that arrest, the officer had the authority to search the car. Little v. State, 280 Ga. App. 60, 633 S.E.2d 403 (2006).

Identity of confidential informant. — In a prosecution for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, the trial court did not err in not revealing the identity of a confidential informant since the informant's testimony was not material to the issue of guilt or punishment as the defendant was not charged with selling cocaine to the informant and the informant was not present during the search and arrest and was neither a participant in nor a witness to the specific offense with which the defendant was charged. Turner v. State, 247 Ga. App. 775, 544 S.E.2d 765 (2001).

School records when mental capacity raised as defense. — Pre-trial discovery of defendant's school records was permissible and not in error because defendant, on trial for murder, raised the issue of mental retardation and put defendant's mental capacity at issue, thus causing the affirmative defense of privilege to be waived. Perkinson v. State, 279 Ga. 232, 610 S.E.2d 533, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 896, 126 S. Ct. 229, 163 L. Ed. 2d 214 (2005).

Communications Between Husband and Wife

General description of privilege. — Meaning of this provision simply is that neither of the married pair shall be permitted to testify as a witness concerning such communications or to furnish to another, for the purpose of being introduced in evidence, writings of any kind received under the seal of confidence during coverture. Knight v. State, 114 Ga. 48, 39 S.E. 928, 88 Am. St. R. 17 (1901); Lowry v. Lowry, 170 Ga. 349, 153 S.E. 11 (1930); Gorman v. State, 183 Ga. 307, 188 S.E. 455 (1936); R. & J. Dick Co. v. Bass, 295 F. Supp. 758 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Rule modified by statute. — Former Code 1933, § 38-1604 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23), which provides that a spouse shall be competent, although not compellable, to testify against the other spouse, has modified former Code 1933, § 38-418 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21). Hubbard v. State, 145 Ga. App. 714, 244 S.E.2d 639 (1978); Chancey v. State, 256 Ga. 415, 349 S.E.2d 717 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1029, 107 S. Ct. 1954, 95 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1987).

Privilege belongs to communicator and is perpetual. — Since the privilege belongs to the communicator, the privilege cannot be waived by the administrator nor by the surviving spouse since communications between husband and wife survive death and are protected forever. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Bank statement addressed to wife did not constitute "communication" between husband and wife. Leventhal v. Seiter, 208 Ga. App. 158, 430 S.E.2d 378 (1993).

Husband and wife communication must be confidential to be privileged. — Paragraph (1) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21 provides that communications between a husband and wife are inadmissible on grounds of public policy; however, for this exclusion to apply, the communications must be confidential. Wilcox v. State, 250 Ga. 745, 301 S.E.2d 251 (1983), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 813 F.2d 1140 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 925, 108 S. Ct. 287, 98 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1987).

Every spoken word between a husband and wife is not confidential; if the communication is an impersonal one not made in reliance on the marital relationship, the communication is not confidential, and no policy reason bars its admissibility. Wilcox v. State, 250 Ga. 745, 301 S.E.2d 251 (1983), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 813 F.2d 1140 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 925, 108 S. Ct. 287, 98 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1987).

Nonprivileged communications generally. — Nonprivileged communications relate to husband-wife conversations through third parties or in the presence of third parties, when the communication constitutes a ground of action by one spouse against the other, or when the conversation was of an impersonal nature spoken or performed without the special confidence one spouse reposes in the other in the marital relation. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

No protection for financial documents prepared by third party. — Although communications between a husband and a wife are confidential and privileged, such protections do not apply to financial documents either prepared or seen by third parties; a trial court did not err in granting a motion to compel an employee and the husband to produce financial documents such as checks, account statements, and tax returns.

Dempsey v. Kaminski Jewelry, Inc., 278 Ga. App. 814, 630 S.E.2d 77 (2006).

Indifference of one spouse to presence of the other. — When the act is done solely for the sake of doing the act, the indications being that the husband is indifferent to the presence of the wife, there is no communication. In such cases the privilege should not be allowed to deprive the court of the evidence. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Presence of third party. — Wife can testify as to what was said by the husband to some other person in the presence of the wife. R. & J. Dick Co. v. Bass, 295 F. Supp. 758 (N.D. Ga. 1968).

Testimony of third party as to communications. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21 does not prohibit testimony about communications between spouses by someone who overheard the communication. Helton v. State, 217 Ga. App. 691, 458 S.E.2d 872 (1995).

Calling wife as defense witness did not waive husband's privilege. — Defendant was entitled to have the testimony of his wife excluded based upon his marital privilege as provided by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21 as proper objection was made at trial. Although under certain circumstances the marital privilege may be waived by the communicator, the act of calling his wife as a defense witness did not, in and of itself, waive his privilege regarding protected confidential communications as the direct examination did not in any way touch on the privileged matters or open the door thereto. White v. State, 211 Ga. App. 694, 440 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

No evidence establishing element of confidentiality. — Though the rule establishes the wife as an incompetent witness for or against the husband in regard to any information derived from his confidence in her, when there is nothing to indicate that the knowledge was derived from any special confidence which one spouse reposed in the other, or that there was any occasion for the one spouse to make to the other any confidential communication concerning the matter, the knowledge gained is not privileged. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Testimony as to injury of husband. — Wife of the injured party is not incompetent to testify as to the nature of the injury received by him and its effect upon his physical condition when there is nothing to indicate that her knowledge on the subject was gained because of any confidence which he reposed in her as his wife. Macon Ry. & Light Co. v. Mason, 123 Ga. 773, 51 S.E. 569 (1905).

Testimony as to child molestation. — With regard to a defendant's conviction on child molestation charges, the defendant's trial counsel was not deficient in failing to object to certain testimony of the defendant's ex-wife, the mother of the victim, concerning a prior bad act on the ground that the testimony violated the marital privilege, because the defendant was not on trial for the prior act; therefore, the ex-wife was competent, although not compellable, to testify concerning the prior act, and thus since the ex-wife did not invoke the privilege and was able to waive the privilege by voluntarily taking the stand and testifying, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony of the ex-wife on the basis of marital privilege. Nichols v. State, 288 Ga. App. 118, 653 S.E.2d 300 (2007).

No privilege for mere acts or gestures. — Husband, who took a container of crack cocaine from an evidence file cabinet in the district attorney's office while his wife was present in the room, could not invoke the husband-wife privilege, where there was no clear proof that his acts or gestures were as much a communication as would have been his words to her describing the act. Brown v. State, 199 Ga. App. 188, 404 S.E.2d 469, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 404 S.E.2d 469 (1991).

Wife's statements in a summary judgment affidavit as to the reasons her husband did not want to buy property were protected by the marital communications privilege. Century 21 Pinetree Properties, Inc. v. Cason, 220 Ga. App. 355, 469 S.E.2d 458 (1996).

Rule was applied to exclude evidence in the following cases. — See Keaton v. McGwier, 24 Ga. 217 (1858) (testimony that might discredit spouse's testimony); McKie v. State, 165 Ga. 210, 140 S.E. 625 (1927) (letters written by wife to husband); Gorman v. State, 183 Ga. 307, 188 S.E. 455 (1936) (facts that might discredit spouse's testimony); Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Boney, 139 Ga. App. 575, 228 S.E.2d 731 (1976) (writing from one spouse to another concerning domestic relationships).

Waiver of privilege. — Spouse may waive his or her privilege by voluntarily taking the stand and testifying. Duncan v. State, 232 Ga. App. 157, 500 S.E.2d 603 (1998).

Trial court did not err in allowing a probationer's spouse to testify without informing the spouse of the marital privilege pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-21 and 24-9-23 because the spouse was aware of the privilege but never asserted it to the trial court, and it was assumed that the spouse waived the right not to testify; the spouse was informed by defense counsel of the spouse's rights under the marital privilege, and the spouse did not assert the privilege even after defense counsel voiced objections to the testimony in the spouse's presence. Geter v. State, 300 Ga. App. 396, 685 S.E.2d 342 (2009).

No common law marriage found. — When there was evidence to support the trial court's finding that defendant and the witness did not have a common law marriage, there was no error in allowing the witness to testify. Abrams v. State, 272 Ga. 63, 525 S.E.2d 86 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Baugh v. State, 276 Ga. 736, 585 S.E.2d 616 (2003).

Announcement of victim's name as witness. — Knowing that the victim was going to invoke the marital privilege, defendant was not entitled to a mistrial because defendant did not timely object to the announcement of defendant's wife's name as a witness; in any event, the mere announcement of the victim's name, without more, did not constitute the creation by the state of an "unwarranted negative inference" against defendant. Carter v. State, 275 Ga. App. 483, 621 S.E.2d 503 (2005).

E-mail communication not subject to marital privilege. — An e-mail from the defendant to the defendant's husband was not evidence given under compulsion by the defendant's spouse and so was not subject to the marital privilege under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23(b) in a case charging the defendant with malice murder and related offenses in connection with the death of the defendant's 11-year-old step-daughter. Reaves v. State, 284 Ga. 236, 664 S.E.2d 207 (2008).

Communications Between Attorney and Client

Purpose of privilege. — Attorney-client privilege is for the protection and benefit of the client, not of the attorney, so that the client's disclosures may not be used against the client in controversies with third persons, and it is designed to secure the client's confidence in the secrecy of the client's communication, and to promote greater freedom of consultation between clients and their legal advisers, and its object is to secure freedom in communication between attorney and client in order that the former may act with full understanding of the matters in which the attorney is employed. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

A narrow construction of the attorney-client privilege, inasmuch as the exercise of the privilege results in the exclusion of evidence, comports with the view that the ascertainment of as many facts as possible leads to the truth, the discovery of which is "the object of all legal investigation." Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Louisiana Forum Corp., 273 Ga. 206, 538 S.E.2d 441 (2000).

Privilege not to be used to carry out crimes. — Privileged communication may be a shield of defense as to crimes already committed, but it cannot be used as a sword or weapon of offense to enable persons to carry out contemplated crimes against society, frauds, or perjuries. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Court should confine the attorney-client privilege to its narrowest permissible limits under the statute of its creation. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Revealing location of victim's body. — While the state is likely correct that the defendant's attorney had a positive obligation to reveal the location of the victim's body to law enforcement officers, it does not follow of necessity that the state should disclose to the jury that the source of the information that led to the discovery of the body was the attorney. Offering such testimony is a dangerous practice, and one the Supreme Court disapproves. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261,

Rule modified by statute. Chancey v. State, 256 Ga. 415, 349 S.E.2d 717 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1029, 107 S. Ct. 1954, 95 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1987).

Privilege extends to attorney's work product. — Once the attorney-client relationship obtains as to a particular matter, the attorney may have investigations made or statements taken under the attorney's direct instruction and supervision, and these may be deemed a part of what the attorney has done, and thus a part of the attorney's work product, which may not be discovered absent a showing of necessity. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Matters communicated to attorney by source other than client. — Attorney-client privilege does not encompass matters of which the attorney has or gains knowledge through some source other than the communications of the attorney's client in preparation for litigation. If the attorney has knowledge from another source, testimony concerning that is proper. Buffington v. McClelland, 130 Ga. App. 460, 203 S.E.2d 575 (1973).

Placing material with attorney does not invoke privilege. — One cannot render privileged that which is otherwise not privileged merely by placing it in the hands of an attorney. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Mere fact of employment between attorney and client is not protected from disclosure. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

Because a client's identity is not covered by the attorney-client privilege, the trial court correctly declined to permit an attorney to use the privilege to justify the attorney's refusal to reveal the identity of a client who has requested that the client's identity be kept confidential. Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Louisiana Forum Corp., 273 Ga. 206, 538 S.E.2d 441 (2000).

Terms of attorney's contract do not come within the statutory privilege. Bank of Lumpkin v. Farmers State Bank, 161 Ga. 801, 132 S.E. 221 (1926).

Facts attending execution of contract. — These provisions have no application to competency of an attorney as a witness with respect to essential facts attending execution of a contract in the preparation and as to the attestation of which the attorney rendered professional service. Jones v. Smith, 206 Ga. 162, 56 S.E.2d 462 (1949); Smith v. Smith, 222 Ga. 694, 152 S.E.2d 560 (1966).

Facts attending execution of will. — Statute has no application to the competency of an attorney as a witness with respect to essential facts attending execution of a will. Manley v. Combs, 197 Ga. 768, 30 S.E.2d 485 (1944).

Attorney-client privilege does not cover the identity of documents a party reviews to prepare for a deposition. McKinnon v. Smock, 264 Ga. 375, 445 S.E.2d 526 (1994).

Relation of attorney and client does not exist between prosecutor and prosecuting witness for the state, and therefore communications had between such witness and the prosecutor are not confidential, and on the trial of the defendant are admissible in evidence to prove contradictory statements. Vernon v. State, 49 Ga. App. 187, 174 S.E. 548 (1934).

Testimony of coconspirator's lawyer barred in criminal proceeding. — Criminal defendant's request to call defendant's coconspirator's counsel to rebut the coconspirator's testimony that the coconspirator had not been offered any "deal" by the state in exchange for the coconspirator's testimony was properly denied because the testimony defendant sought to elicit came within the attorney-client privilege. Avery v. State, 244 Ga. App. 177, 534 S.E.2d 897 (2000).

Presence of third party. — When the communication made by a client to an attorney is in the presence of the other party to a contract, and it comes within the attorney's knowledge, such communication is not embraced in the rule which prohibits that it may be given in evidence by the attorney when called on so to do. Griffin v. Williams, 179 Ga. 175, 175 S.E. 449 (1934).

Corporation can avail itself of the attorney-client privilege. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Burden is upon a corporation seeking to invoke the attorney-client privilege to establish that corporate counsel's advice was privileged legal advice and thus not subject to discovery. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Ash, 192 Ga. App. 24, 383 S.E.2d 579 (1989).

No distinction between advice on specific cases and day-to-day business. — Attorney-client privilege statutes make no distinction between legal advice given to a corporate client in regard to specific cases pending and legal advice concerning day-to-day business matters. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Ash, 192 Ga. App. 24, 383 S.E.2d 579 (1989).

Attorney-client privilege is applicable to a corporate employee's communication if: (1) the communication was made for the purpose of securing legal advice; (2) the employee making the communication did so at the direction of the employee's corporate superior; (3) the superior made the request so that the corporation could secure legal advice; (4) the subject matter of the communication is within the scope of the employee's corporate duties; and (5) the communication is not disseminated beyond those persons who, because of the corporate structure, need to know its contents; moreover, the corporation has the burden of showing that the communication in issue meets all of the above requirements. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Communications between attorney and client are excluded from consideration of public policy and the privilege applies to communications to the officers and employees of a corporate client as well as to individual clients. Associated Grocers Coop. v. Trust Co., 158 Ga. App. 115, 279 S.E.2d 248 (1981).

Habeas proceeding. — Habeas petitioner who asserts a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel makes a limited waiver of the attorney-client privilege and work product doctrine and the state is entitled only to counsel's documents and files relevant to the specific allegations of ineffectiveness. Waldrup v. Head, 272 Ga. 572, 532 S.E.2d 380 (2000).

Where no request is made by accused or accused's counsel to confer privately without the presence of the deputy marshal, the mere existence of such right would not affect the validity of the conviction since there must be denial of such right by the trial judge before the accused may complain.

Fowler v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 84, 31 S.E.2d 174, cert. denied, 323 U.S. 784, 65 S. Ct. 266, 89 L. Ed. 626 (1944).

Statement ceases to be privileged when renounced by client. — When defendant in a murder trial testified, without objection, at defendant's previous trial that defendant had lied to defendant's attorney by telling the attorney that someone at the scene of the shooting had handed defendant the murder weapon, defendant's testimony caused the information to cease to be a privileged communication, and proof of the statement at defendant's later trial became permissible. Felts v. State, 244 Ga. 503, 260 S.E.2d 887 (1979).

Penalties for breaching confidence. — There are no statutory criminal penalties visited upon an attorney who in violation of the attorney's ethical relation to the attorney's client divulges a confidential communication. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

Inadvertent disclosure to defense counsel of a letter from plaintiff to plaintiff's attorneys did not waive the attorney-client privilege. Lazar v. Mauney, 192 F.R.D. 324 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Testimony sought fell within attorney-client privilege. — Testimony that defendant sought from a codefendant's lawyer relating to an alleged deal to provide substantial assistance to the prosecution fell within the attorney-client privilege because there was no evidence of any fraud or crime; although the defendant insisted that the codefendant committed perjury when by testifying that the codefendant's attorney did not discuss "substantial assistance" with the codefendant, these arguments were merely speculative. Pihlman v. State, 292 Ga. App. 612, 664 S.E.2d 904 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 977 (Ga. 2008).

Communications Between Psychiatrist and Patient

Definition of psychiatrist. — "Psychiatrist" in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21 means a person licensed to practice medicine, or reasonably believed by the patient so to be, who devotes a substantial portion of his or her time engaged in the diagnosis and treatment of a mental or emotional condition, including drug or alcohol addiction. Wiles v. Wiles, 264 Ga. 594, 448 S.E.2d 681 (1994).

Prerequisite relationship. — Before the privilege may be invoked, the requisite relationship of psychiatrist and patient must have existed to the extent that treatment was given or contemplated. Massey v. State, 226 Ga. 703, 177 S.E.2d 79 (1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 964, 91 S. Ct. 984, 28 L. Ed. 2d 248 (1971), for comment, see 21 J. of Pub. L. 251 (1972). Strickland v. State, 260 Ga. 28, 389 S.E.2d 230 (1990); Mrozinski v. Pogue, 205 Ga. App. 731, 423 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

When a party goes to a psychiatrist on the party's own volition for the purpose of gaining professional psychiatric assistance, this creates the requisite confidential relationship of psychiatrist and patient to claim the privilege. Kimble v. Kimble, 240 Ga. 100, 239 S.E.2d 676 (1977).

Existence of a "voluntary" psychiatrist-patient relationship renders any testimony whatsoever by the psychiatrist excludable from evidence at the election of the patient. Wilson v. Bonner, 166 Ga. App. 9, 303 S.E.2d 134 (1983).

When the defendant, the father of a child, retained a psychiatrist and paid the psychiatrist's fee for the purpose of obtaining testimony for use in a contempt action for visitation rather than for the purpose of obtaining psychiatric treatment or counseling, no psychiatrist-patient relationship existed as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21 and the psychiatrist was properly permitted to testify in a criminal action against the defendant. Fulbright v. State, 194 Ga. App. 827, 392 S.E.2d 298 (1990).

Communication with referred therapist for evaluation in sexual abuse case was privileged. — Although the mother had been referred to the therapist for evaluation in the sexual abuse case, the mother's communications with the therapist during therapy were privileged under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21; the therapist provided mental health treatment to the mother, as the therapist had seen the mother for counseling for two and a half years, the mother had not missed a session, and the mother found the treatment to have been beneficial. In the Interest of I.M.G., 276 Ga. App. 598, 624 S.E.2d 236 (2005).

Parent's standing to sue for violation of child's privilege. — Father had standing to file suit for unauthorized disclosure of his minor daughter's clinical records and for unauthorized release of privileged material regarding his minor daughter. Mrozinski v. Pogue, 205 Ga. App. 731, 423 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 423 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

Nature of privilege. — As a matter of public policy, Georgia excludes communications between psychiatrist and patient. This privilege is absolute, although it may be waived. Without a waiver, there is no basis for the admission of testimony about communications between psychiatrist and patient. Freeman v. State, 196 Ga. App. 343, 396 S.E.2d 69 (1990).

Protected communications. — Georgia law has an exceedingly strict view as to what are privileged communications; not only “communications” but “admissions” are privileged; what is protected is not merely words, but “disclosures made in confidence.” Mrozinski v. Pogue, 205 Ga. App. 731, 423 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 423 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

Communications with physicians generally distinguished. — Paragraph (5) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21 read with O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40 reflects that the physician shield law applies to physicians generally but requires physicians to release information upon proper order, whereas the confidentiality of communications to psychiatrists is protected by public policy and such communications are expressly excepted from the shield statute. Gilmore v. State, 175 Ga. App. 376, 333 S.E.2d 210 (1985).

Communications with mental health professionals other than psychiatrists or psychologists. — When defendant’s counselors were not psychiatrists nor clinical psychologists, defendant’s communications with the counselors were not privileged. While it is arguable that disclosures made in confidence to mental health professionals other than psychiatrists and psychologists ought to be privileged, the legislature has not seen to make them so. Lipsey v. State, 170 Ga. App. 770, 318 S.E.2d 184 (1984).

Communications absolutely privileged. — When plaintiff’s decedent took an overdose of prescription drugs and subsequently died during hospitalization, prior communications between decedent as patient and de-cedent’s psychiatrist were not discoverable as objective evidence of decedent’s mental state. Dynin v. Hall, 207 Ga. App. 337, 428 S.E.2d 89 (1993).

Communications to coordinate care were proper. — Trial court properly directed a verdict in favor of the defendant, a psychiatrist, with regard to the plaintiff’s invasion of privacy complaint, which asserted that the defendant’s letters to the other treating physicians of the plaintiff violated the plaintiff’s right to privacy, because the evidence established that the information in the three letters disclosed to the plaintiff’s other treating physicians was disclosed in an attempt to coordinate care; the sharing of the information did not amount to a public disclosure and there was no evidence that the other treating physicians shared the information with anyone else. Haughton v. Canning, 287 Ga. App. 28, 650 S.E.2d 718 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 157 (Ga. 2008).

In an action arising from the unauthorized release of plaintiff’s psychiatric records by a hospital authority, under the facts of the case, and because of the strong public policy of maintaining strict compliance with the requirements governing release of psychiatric records, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to defendants. Sletto v. Hospital Auth., 239 Ga. App. 203, 521 S.E.2d 199 (1999).

If nurse is agent of hospital rather than communicant’s doctor, the doctor’s privilege will not protect communications made to the nurse. Myers v. State, 251 Ga. 883, 310 S.E.2d 504 (1984).

Court-appointed psychiatrist may testify. — Psychiatrist appointed by the court for a sanity examination of the defendant may not be regarded as a prosecution witness, but is instead a witness for the court, and the psychiatrist’s testimony as to statements made to the psychiatrist by the defendant during the course of the psychiatrist’s examination of the defendant is admissible. Massey v. State, 226 Ga. 703, 177 S.E.2d 79 (1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 964, 91 S. Ct. 984, 28 L. Ed. 2d 248 (1971). For comment, see 21 J. of Pub. L. 251 (1972).

Privileged relationship between psychiatrist and patient does not exist in criminal cases when defendant has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, and the psychiatrist was appointed by the court to determine the issue of sanity. Kimble v. Kimble, 240 Ga. 100, 239 S.E.2d 676 (1977).

When a psychiatrist or psychologist is appointed by the court to conduct a preliminary examination of a criminal defendant, the psychiatrist or psychologist is a witness for the court, and the privilege concerning communications with a client does not apply. Christenson v. State, 261 Ga. 80, 402 S.E.2d 41 (1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 855, 112 S. Ct. 166, 116 L. Ed. 2d 130 (1991).

Since the psychologist-patient privilege set forth in O.C.G.A. § 43-39-16 arises only when the patient voluntarily seeks treatment, the communications between a mother and a psychologist in the course of a court-ordered mental evaluation were not privileged, and there was no error in admitting evidence of that evaluation. In re L.H., 236 Ga. App. 132, 511 S.E.2d 253 (1999), overruled in part by State v. Herendeen, 279 Ga. 323, 613 S.E.2d 647 (2005).

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel's failure to object to the admission of court-appointed psychologists' statements was indicative of ineffectiveness and was not a conscious and deliberate trial strategy. Johnson v. State, 255 Ga. App. 544, 566 S.E.2d 353 (2002), overruled in part by State v. Herendeen, 279 Ga. 323, 613 S.E.2d 647 (2005).

Objective results of court-ordered examination are admissible. — When the examination of defendant by a physician has been ordered by the court at the request of defendant's counsel, communications between defendant and physician are protected, but the objective result of the examination is not so protected, and the objective result of the examination is admissible. Plummer v. State, 229 Ga. 749, 194 S.E.2d 419 (1972).

In a proceeding to terminate a guardianship proceeding, even if a psychiatrist-patient relationship existed between the doctor and ward, admission of the doctor's opinion that the ward needed a guardian of the ward's estate was harmless because the testimony was cumulative of other evidence which was properly admitted. In re Vincent, 240 Ga. App. 876, 525 S.E.2d 409 (1999).

Cross-examination after testimony about communication. — By calling the doctor as a witness and allowing the doctor to testify as to the mental condition of the accused, the defense waives the right to object to relevant cross-examination of the doctor on the ground that such matter is privileged communication between patient and psychiatrist. Fields v. State, 221 Ga. 307, 144 S.E.2d 339 (1965); Griggs v. State, 241 Ga. 317, 245 S.E.2d 269 (1978).

Prosecutor's reference to defendant's right to have psychiatrist not testify was not a violation of defendant's right against self-incrimination. Willett v. State, 223 Ga. App. 866, 479 S.E.2d 132 (1996).

Since defendant was not at mental hospital for treatment nor did the record reflect that the defendant received any, the psychiatrist-patient privilege does not apply. Moody v. State, 244 Ga. 247, 260 S.E.2d 11 (1979).

Joint counseling statement inadmissible. — Psychiatric-patient privilege applied to statements made by her husband in joint counseling sessions even though the wife requested admission at her trial for his murder. Sims v. State, 251 Ga. 877, 311 S.E.2d 161 (1984).

Joint treatment with other persons. — Psychiatrist-patient privilege is not diminished by the fact that the patient sought or contemplated treatment jointly with other persons, or primarily for the benefit of another person who is in treatment by the same psychiatrist. Mrozinski v. Pogue, 205 Ga. App. 731, 423 S.E.2d 405, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 901, 423 S.E.2d 405 (1992).

Facts of patient treatment and dates not within privilege. — Facts that two hospitals treated defendant as a patient and the dates of those treatments were not within the psychiatrist-patient privilege. Johnson v. State, 254 Ga. 591, 331 S.E.2d 578 (1985), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1072, 109 S. Ct. 2079, 104 L. Ed. 2d 644 (1989).

Clinical record from psychiatric hospital producible, except for privileged communications. — When ex-husband, in a child custody proceeding, duly subpoenaed ex-wife's clinical record from the psychiatric hospital where she had voluntarily admitted herself, that record was producible, except for the portions containing any privileged communications. Weksler v. Weksler, 173 Ga. App. 250, 325 S.E.2d 874 (1985).

Since the mental health records of an incompetent, deaf, and speechless criminal defendant contain both privileged communications under O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-21 and 43-39-16, and nonprivileged communications, records which contain privileged material are not to be produced in response to a request for production, but the remaining documents must be produced. Annandale at Suwanee, Inc. v. Weatherly, 194 Ga. App. 803, 392 S.E.2d 27 (1990).

Trial court erred by not conducting an in-camera inspection of a plaintiff's mental health records to determine whether the records contained any nonprivileged information relevant to the plaintiff's claims for damages in a civil suit. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Ridgeview Inst., Inc., 194 Ga. App. 805, 392 S.E.2d 286 (1990).

Discoverability in nonparty document production request. — Patient's failure to object within 10 days to a request for nonprivileged matter under a nonparty document production request did not amount to an affirmative waiver of privileged communications with the patient's psychiatrist. Hopson v. Kennestone Hosp., 241 Ga. App. 829, 526 S.E.2d 622 (1999), aff'd, 273 Ga. 145, 538 S.E.2d 742 (2000).

Rule that a party's failure to object to a discovery request within the time required generally will result in a waiver of the right to object does not apply to requests under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34(c) to nonparties for the production of documents that are protected by the psychiatrist-patient privilege. Hopson v. Kennestone Hosp., 241 Ga. App. 829, 526 S.E.2d 622 (1999), aff'd, 273 Ga. 145, 538 S.E.2d 742 (2000).

Psychiatric medical records are not absolutely privileged. Donalson v. State, 192 Ga. App. 37, 383 S.E.2d 588 (1989), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1030, 110 S. Ct. 742, 107 L. Ed. 2d 760 (1990).

Contents of a psychiatrist's records were privileged as to communications between the psychiatrist and a patient; however, the privilege did not extend to communications made to nurses or attendants, unless the nurses or attendants were acting as agents of the psychiatrist, nor did it preclude discovery of the fact and dates of treatment. Plunkett v. Ginsburg, 217 Ga. App. 20, 456 S.E.2d 595 (1995).

Psychologist-patient privilege applied to treatment records, regardless of whether that treatment was voluntary; since treatment of children had been directed by a case plan and a juvenile court, an in camera inspection of records sought in a criminal prosecution arising out of facts developed in the dependency investigation was proper, but the case was remanded for the trial court to consider in the court's examination the established parameters of the psychotherapist-patient privilege. Herendeen v. State, 268 Ga. App. 113, 601 S.E.2d 372 (2004), aff'd, 279 Ga. 323, 613 S.E.2d 647 (2005).

In order to abrogate the psychiatrist-patient privilege, the defendant must make a showing of necessity, that is, that the evidence in question is critical to defendant's defense and that substantially similar evidence is otherwise unavailable to the defendant. Bobo v. State, 256 Ga. 357, 349 S.E.2d 690 (1986); King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 957, 122 S. Ct. 2659, 153 L. Ed. 2d 834 (2002).

Fact that plaintiff was seeking to recover damages for injuries of a mental and emotional nature would not constitute a waiver of the privilege to exclude testimony of defendant's psychiatrist. Wilson v. Bonner, 166 Ga. App. 9, 303 S.E.2d 134 (1983).

No psychiatrist/patient relationship is created if: (1) the defendant was not seeking out psychiatric care in the usual sense of the term; and (2) no real treatment was given or contemplated. Rachals v. State, 184 Ga. App. 420, 361 S.E.2d 671 (1987), aff'd, 258 Ga. 48, 364 S.E.2d 867, cert. denied, 487 U.S. 1238, 108 S. Ct. 2909, 101 L. Ed. 2d 941 (1988).

Cross-examination of therapist limited. — In a prosecution for child molestation, the trial court did not err by limiting defendant's cross-examination of the child's therapist and thereby preventing the defendant from engaging in a fishing expedition to dredge up evidence of domestic problems totally unrelated to the act of molestation. Atkins v. State, 243 Ga. App. 489, 533 S.E.2d 152 (2000).

Compositions written by defendant at the request of a psychiatrist were not subject to the evidentiary privilege for "communications between psychiatrist and patient" because the compositions were found in a trash can in defendant's home with no showing that the compositions were ever given to the psychiatrist. Daker v. State, 243 Ga. App. 848, 533 S.E.2d 393 (2000), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1093, 122 S. Ct. 838, 151 L. Ed. 2d 717 (2002), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1093, 122 S. Ct. 838, 151 L. Ed. 2d 717 (2002).

Privilege waived. — Trial court in civil proceeding brought by an injured police officer against an individual who suffered from a mental condition did not err in ruling that the individual lost the statutory psychiatric privilege by involuntary commitment to a state mental health facility. Trammel v. Bradberry, 256 Ga. App. 412, 568 S.E.2d 715 (2002).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in admitting a 1980 report during the defendant's murder trial, which admitted a psychologist's testimony and materials, performed for evaluation purposes, specifically to explore the possibility of an insanity plea, rather than for professional treatment, as under Georgia law, there can be no expectation of confidentiality based on the psychologist/patient privilege when the sole purpose of the relationship is evaluation. Even if such a privilege existed as to the 1980 report, when the defendant raised the claim of mental retardation, putting the defendant's mental capacity at issue, such affirmative defense waived any privilege. Rogers v. State, 282 Ga. 659, 653 S.E.2d 31 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1311, 128 S. Ct. 1882, 170 L. Ed. 2d 747; reh'g denied, U.S. , 128 S. Ct. 2988, 171 L. Ed. 2d 907 (2008).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Attorneys employed by state agencies. — Although state agencies may employ persons with legal training and experience to serve as administrative legal service officers, those persons may not provide legal advice or representation to the agency, and no attorney-client relationship or privilege arises between the legal services officer and other agency officers or employees, or the agency itself. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-1.

Court order or subpoena does not abrogate privilege created by statute relating to the confidentiality of the patient-psychiatrist relationship; any response to a subpoena or court order must take these provisions into consideration. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-86.

24-9-22. Communications to clergyman privileged.

Every communication made by any person professing religious faith, seeking spiritual comfort, or seeking counseling to any Protestant minister of the Gospel, any priest of the Roman Catholic faith, any priest of the Greek Orthodox Catholic faith, any Jewish rabbi, or to any Christian or Jewish minister, by whatever name called, shall be deemed privileged. No such minister, priest, or rabbi shall disclose any communications made to him by any such person professing religious faith, seeking spiritual guidance, or seeking counseling, nor shall such minister, priest, or rabbi be competent or compellable to testify with reference to any such communication in any court. (Ga. L. 1951, p. 468, §§ 1, 2; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1277, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Presence of more than one person. — Clerical privilege is not waived by the presence of more than one person seeking spiritual comfort or counseling. Alternative Health Care Sys. v. McCown, 237 Ga. App. 355, 514 S.E.2d 691 (1999).

Trial court did not err when the court denied defendant's motion to suppress the confession defendant made to the police chaplain because the trial court obviously believed the chaplain's adamant denial that the chaplain had repeated defendant's confession to the police. The testimony revealed that defendant confessed to the police officer in the chaplain's presence. Blocker v. State, 265 Ga. App. 846, 595 S.E.2d 654 (2004).

Pastor who had physical custody of a child for two months was allowed to testify as to the child's condition at a termination of parental rights proceeding since there was no showing that any communications or observations arose from spiritual counseling or as a profession of religious faith. Jones v. Department of Human Resources, 168 Ga. App. 915, 310 S.E.2d 753 (1983).

Inapplicable to "father figure." — Defendant's conversations with a witness who had served as a father figure for defendant throughout defendant's life were not privileged, even though the witness had been ordained two years before defendant committed the murder with which defendant was charged. Morris v. State, 275 Ga. 601, 571 S.E.2d 358 (2002).

Inapplicable to "spiritual advisor" or "psychic." — Statutory privilege does not apply to a "spiritual advisor" or "psychic." Manous v. State, 200 Ga. App. 293, 407 S.E.2d 779 (1991).

Inapplicable to conversational statements to friend. — Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-22, every communication made by any person professing religious faith, seeking spiritual comfort, or seeking counseling to a clergy person shall be deemed privileged; however, if such communications are not made to profess religious faith, or to seek spiritual comfort or guidance, but rather are conversational statements to a friend or frequent companion, the ministerial privilege is not applicable. Parnell v. State, 260 Ga. App. 213, 581 S.E.2d 263 (2003).

Son's statements were not privileged. — Defendant's statements to defendant's father, a minister, were not privileged under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-22 as defendant, in talking to defendant's father, was not seeking comfort or solace of a spiritual nature, but was seeking the help of a parent and a source of secular strength to accompany the defendant to the police station. Parnell v. State, 260 Ga. App. 213, 581 S.E.2d 263 (2003).

Waiver of privilege. — Very general testimony by the plaintiff that a chaplain met with the plaintiff's family and offered spiritual support and comfort, and the plaintiff's deposition statement, in response to the defendants' questioning, that the plaintiff was not upset by anything the chaplain said, did not address in any way the substance of the plaintiff's conversations with the chaplain and did not amount to a waiver of the privilege. Alternative Health Care Sys. v. McCown, 237 Ga. App. 355, 514 S.E.2d 691 (1999).

(a) Husband and wife shall be competent but shall not be compellable to give evidence in any criminal proceeding for or against each other.

(b) The privilege created by subsection (a) of this Code section or by corresponding privileges in paragraph (1) of Code Section 24-9-21 or subsection (a) of Code Section 24-9-27 shall not apply in proceedings in which the husband or wife is charged with a crime against the person of a minor child, but such person shall be compellable to give evidence only on the specific act for which the defendant is charged. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — Prior to the 1957 amendment of former Code 1933, § 38-1604, the spouse of a criminal defendant was not competent and could not be compelled to give evidence in the defendant's trial, except in certain specified cases. Some of the cases noted below were decided under the former rule but have been retained because of their possible applicability to the present statute.

Privilege of refusing to testify belongs to witness and not to accused. James v. State, 223 Ga. 677, 157 S.E.2d 471 (1967); Kellar v. State, 226 Ga. 432, 175 S.E.2d 654 (1970); Young v. State, 232 Ga. 285, 206 S.E.2d 439 (1974); Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 683, 227

S.E.2d 84, aff'd, 237 Ga. 647, 229 S.E.2d 433 (1976); Stanley v. State, 240 Ga. 341, 241 S.E.2d 173 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 218, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978); Carroll v. State, 147 Ga. App. 332, 248 S.E.2d 702 (1978); Wiley v. State, 150 Ga. App. 607, 258 S.E.2d 286 (1979); Morris v. State, 173 Ga. App. 663, 327 S.E.2d 792 (1985); Mapp v. State, 191 Ga. App. 622, 382 S.E.2d 618, cert. denied, 191 Ga. App. 922, 382 S.E.2d 618 (1989); Brown v. State, 261 Ga. 66, 401 S.E.2d 492 (1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 906, 112 S. Ct. 296, 116 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1991); Duncan v. State, 232 Ga. App. 157, 500 S.E.2d 603 (1998).

Defendant had no standing to exclude his wife's testimony at the trial because the privilege against spousal testimony is available only to the witness-spouse. Corn v. Zant, 708 F.2d 549 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1220, 104 S. Ct. 2670, 81 L. Ed. 2d 375 (1984), vacated in part on other grounds sub nom., Corn v. Kemp, 772 F.2d 681 (11th Cir. 1985), judgment vacated, 478 U.S. 1016, 106 S. Ct. 3326, 92 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1986), remanded for further consideration in light of Rose v. Clark, 478 U.S. 570, 106 S. Ct. 3101, 92 L. Ed. 2d 460 (1986), aff'd, 837 F.2d 1474 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1023, 108 S. Ct. 1997, 100 L. Ed. 2d 228 (1988); Chancey v. State, 256 Ga. 415, 349 S.E.2d 717 (1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1029, 107 S. Ct. 1954, 95 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1987).

Trial court did not err in allowing defendant's wife to testify in defendant's trial for shooting their two adult sons to death as the privilege of refusing to testify belonged to the witness, the wife, and not to the accused; moreover, nothing showed that the wife's testimony was not voluntary. Biswas v. State, 255 Ga. App. 339, 565 S.E.2d 531 (2002).

Statements of common-law wife admissible. — In a murder prosecution, where defendant's common-law wife asserted privilege not to testify against the husband, statements the wife made during the official investigation and confirmed at a subsequent pre-trial hearing were admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule without conducting an additional hearing on the statement's reliability. Drane v. State, 265 Ga. 663, 461 S.E.2d 224 (1995). But see Clark v. State, 271 Ga. 6, 515 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

Privilege does not depend upon stability of marriage. — Application of the privilege of refusing to testify does not depend upon the stability of the marriage, either at the time of the communication or at the time the privilege is asserted. Brown v. State, 261 Ga. 66, 401 S.E.2d 492 (1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 906, 112 S. Ct. 296, 116 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1991).

Marital testimonial privilege may be asserted even though the marriage was entered into for the purpose of preventing the spouse's testimony. State v. Peters, 213 Ga. App. 352, 444 S.E.2d 609 (1994).

Privilege may be invoked by spouse who testified at previous hearing. — Privilege not to testify may be invoked by the witness spouse even if he or she has testified for or against the defendant spouse in a previous hearing. Brown v. State, 261 Ga. 66, 401 S.E.2d 492 (1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 906, 112 S. Ct. 296, 116 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1991).

No inference could be drawn about defendant's truthfulness from his wife's failure to take the stand and corroborate his testimony. James v. State, 223 Ga. 677, 157 S.E.2d 471 (1967).

Comments on failure of spouse to testify constituted impermissible argument and warranted reversal. Price v. State, 175 Ga. App. 780, 334 S.E.2d 711 (1985).

Nature of evidence irrelevant. — Statute plainly means that a wife may not, over her objection, be forced to answer any questions or produce any other evidence which would either help or harm her spouse in any criminal proceeding. Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 683, 227 S.E.2d 84, aff'd, 237 Ga. 647, 229 S.E.2d 433 (1976).

No protection for documents prepared by third party. — Although communications between a husband and a wife are confidential and privileged, such protections do not apply to financial documents either prepared or seen by third parties; a trial court did not err in granting a motion to compel an employee and the husband to produce financial documents such as checks, account statements, and tax returns. Dempsey v. Kaminski Jewelry, Inc., 278 Ga. App. 814, 630 S.E.2d 77 (2006).

This statute is applicable "in any criminal proceeding." State v. Smith, 237 Ga. 647, 229 S.E.2d 433 (1976) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23).

In prosecution for manslaughter, marital privilege justified exclusion of suicidal statements the decedent allegedly related to the decedent's spouse on the day that the decedent was shot. Robinson v. State, 221 Ga. App. 865, 473 S.E.2d 519 (1996).

Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23 applies when the victim and spouse are the same person; the victim of statutory rape could be compelled to testify even though the victim and defendant were married at the time of the trial. Hamilton v. State, 210 Ga. App. 398, 436 S.E.2d 522 (1993).

Spouse as victim. — When the victim, defendant's wife, who had refused to testify for the state against her husband, was called by her husband, the fact that she asserted her privilege during the state's case was not conclusive because the privilege not to incriminate one's spouse at the behest of the state is different from the privilege not to testify for one's spouse and she should have been summoned to state her intentions before the presiding judge whether she would testify at the behest of her husband or reassert her privilege. Respres v. State, 244 Ga. App. 689, 536 S.E.2d 586 (2000).

Knowing that the victim was going to invoke the marital privilege, defendant was not entitled to a mistrial because defendant did not timely object to the announcement of defendant's wife's name as a witness; in any event, the mere announcement of the victim's name, without more, did not constitute the creation by the state of an "unwarranted negative inference" against defendant. Carter v. State, 275 Ga. App. 483, 621 S.E.2d 503 (2005).

Grand jury consideration of proposed indictment is part of the criminal proceedings within the meaning of the statute. Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 683, 227 S.E.2d 84, aff'd, 237 Ga. 647, 229 S.E.2d 433 (1976).

Words "for or against each other" must relate to the word "evidence," since a criminal proceeding could not be described as being "for or against each other." State v. Smith, 237 Ga. 647, 229 S.E.2d 433 (1976).

Failure of a defendant's wife to testify is not a legitimate subject matter of argument for counsel for the state, although such a comment does not constitute reversible error where the trial court rebukes the prosecuting attorney immediately in the presence of the jury, instructs the jury that it is not necessary for any defendant or his wife ever to take the stand, and that the burden is always upon the state to prove a defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Casey v. State, 167 Ga. App. 437, 306 S.E.2d 683 (1983).

State may comment generally where defendant relies upon spouse's actions for corroboration. — It does not appear that it is harmful error for the state to comment generally, without direct reference to the exercise of the spousal privilege, upon the fact that it has no power to call a defendant's spouse who has not given direct testimony, but whose words and actions are relied upon by the defendant as being somewhat corroborative of the defendant's own exculpatory testimony. Under these circumstances, such a comment by the state would be no more than a statement informing the jury that the state's failure to call the nontestifying spouse did not necessarily signify an acceptance of or acquiescence in a portion of the defendant's exculpatory version of the events to which defendant has testified. Wynn v. State, 168 Ga. App. 132, 308 S.E.2d 392 (1983).

Testimony when spouse is charged with a crime against a minor child. — When defendant standing trial for child molestation argues that prosecuting attorney improperly questioned the defendant's failure to call his wife as a witness and that such argument constitutes reversible error because the defendant could not compel his wife to testify, there was no reversible error in the state's remarks on defendant's failure to call her as a witness, since spousal immunity does not apply to proceedings in which one spouse is charged with a crime against a minor child under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23. Sosebee v. State, 190 Ga. App. 746, 380 S.E.2d 464, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 933, 110 S. Ct. 323, 107 L. Ed. 2d 313 (1989).

Privilege created by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23 does not apply in proceedings in which the husband or wife is charged with a crime against the person of a minor, albeit testimony is compellable only with respect to the specific act for which the defendant is charged. Pirkle v. State, 234 Ga. App. 23, 506 S.E.2d 186 (1998).

With regard to a defendant's conviction on child molestation charges, the defendant's trial counsel was not deficient in failing to object to certain testimony of the defendant's ex-wife, the mother of the victim, concerning a prior bad act on the ground that the testimony violated the marital privilege, because the defendant was not on trial for the prior act; therefore, the ex-wife was competent, although not compellable, to testify concerning the prior act, and thus since the ex-wife did not invoke the privilege and was able to waive the privilege by voluntarily taking the stand and testifying, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony of the ex-wife on the basis of marital privilege. Nichols v. State, 288 Ga. App. 118, 653 S.E.2d 300 (2007).

An email from the defendant to the defendant's husband was not evidence given under compulsion by the defendant's spouse and so was not subject to the marital privilege under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23(b) in a case charging the defendant with malice murder and related offenses in connection with the death of the defendant's 11-year-old step-daughter. Reaves v. State, 284 Ga. 236, 664 S.E.2d 207 (2008).

Because O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80 prohibits a person from disseminating obscene material of any description, and the definition of obscene material makes no reference to minor, distributing obscene materials is not a crime against the person of a minor child within the plain meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23(b). Peck v. State, 300 Ga. App. 375, 685 S.E.2d 367 (2009).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the victim, who subsequently married the defendant, could be compelled to testify against the defendant with regard to the charge of sexual exploitation of children because that charge qualified as a crime against the person of a minor based upon the public policy expressed in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23(b), the particular pictures involved in the case, and the specific subsection of O.C.G.A. § 16-12-100 with which the defendant was charged; the pictures in the defendant's possession showed the victim personally engaged in sexually explicit conduct. Peck v. State, 300 Ga. App. 375, 685 S.E.2d 367 (2009).

A defendant's alleged violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-70(d), cruelty to children, was a "crime against the person of a minor child" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23(b), which provided an exception to the marital privilege against testifying in cases of crimes against the person of children, even though no physical contact was involved. Therefore, a trial court did not err in compelling defendant's spouse to testify against defendant despite invoking the privilege. Sherman v. State, 302 Ga. App. 312, 690 S.E.2d 915 (2010).

Bigamous defendant. — Law as to competency of a wife to testify against her husband in a criminal case did not apply to a woman married to defendant, where there was uncontradicted testimony that before their marriage he was married to another woman, who was living at the time of the trial and from whom he had not been divorced. Williams v. State, 139 Ga. 591, 77 S.E. 818 (1913); Dickerson v. State, 30 Ga. App. 352, 118 S.E. 67 (1923).

Cohabitation does not render woman incompetent. — If a woman cohabits with a man, under his promise to marry her legally, but finding that he does not take legal steps to do so, quits him and again cohabits with him, she is not his wife and is a competent witness. Hill v. State, 41 Ga. 484 (1871).

Common-law marriage, when recognized, is sufficient to invoke the husband-wife privilege. However, in face of conflicting evidence as to a common-law marriage, the trial court is authorized to find that no common-law marriage exists. Overcash v. State, 239 Ga. 499, 238 S.E.2d 50 (1977); Jordan v. State, 267 Ga. 442, 480 S.E.2d 18 (1997).

Factual determination by the state court that a witness was not the defendant's common-law wife was required to be deferred to by the federal courts in a habeas corpus proceeding; therefore, the testimony of this witness was not a violation of the marital privilege and did not render the defendant's trial fundamentally unfair. Holton v. Newsome, 750 F.2d 1513 (11th Cir. 1985).

There was substantial evidence in support of the trial court's finding that there was no common-law marriage between the trial witness and the defendant. Therefore, the defendant could not assert the marital privilege. Schirato v. State, 260 Ga. 170, 391 S.E.2d 116 (1990).

In view of conflicting evidence, no common-law marriage. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23 was not applicable when, in view of the conflicting evidence as to the existence of a common-law marriage between defendant and the state's witness, the trial court was authorized to find that no common-law marriage existed. Brown v. State, 187 Ga. App. 347, 370 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 907, 370 S.E.2d 203 (1988).

Grant to witness of immunity from prosecution results in compulsory testimony notwithstanding the privilege against being required to testify against one's self. The grant of immunity does not, however, operate to compel one spouse to testify against another. Stanley v. State, 240 Ga. 341, 241 S.E.2d 173 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 218, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

If evidence is in conflict as to existence of marriage, the trial judge may hear evidence to determine whether a marriage exists, and the judge's decision will not be disturbed on appeal if there is any evidence to support the judge's finding or the trial court may submit to the jury with appropriate instructions the question of whether or not a marriage exists. Sheffield v. State, 241 Ga. 245, 244 S.E.2d 869 (1978).

Method of making election to testify or not to testify. — State is not allowed to require the wife to go to the witness stand in presence of the jury and there make her election not to testify against her husband. Colson v. State, 138 Ga. App. 366, 226 S.E.2d 154 (1976).

Lower court should have granted motion in limine instructing prosecuting attorney not to make any reference to communication between wife and defendant or at least had a hearing on the motion out of presence of the jury and allowed the wife to make her election not to testify instead of compelling her to take the witness stand as a sworn witness and compelling her on examination before the jury to refuse to offer testimony. Broome v. State, 141 Ga. App. 538, 233 S.E.2d 883 (1977).

Waiver of privilege presumed. — When the witness voluntarily takes the stand and testifies, it will be presumed that she does so pursuant to waiver of her privilege. Wiley v. State, 150 Ga. App. 607, 258 S.E.2d 286 (1979); Mapp v. State, 191 Ga. App. 622, 382 S.E.2d 618, cert. denied, 191 Ga. App. 922, 382 S.E.2d 618 (1989); White v. State, 211 Ga. App. 694, 440 S.E.2d 68 (1994).

Trial court was not obligated to advise defendant's spouse of the marital privilege under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23(b) relating to the spouse's testimony at defendant's sentencing hearing, and as defendant's spouse testified voluntarily, it was presumed that the spouse waived the marital privilege. Ingram v. State, 262 Ga. App. 304, 585 S.E.2d 211 (2003).

Trial court did not err in allowing a probationer's spouse to testify without informing the spouse of the marital privilege pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-21 and 24-9-23 because the spouse was aware of the privilege but never asserted it to the trial court, and it was assumed that the spouse waived the right not to testify; the spouse was informed by defense counsel of the spouse's rights under the marital privilege, and the spouse did not assert the privilege even after defense counsel voiced objections to the testimony in the spouse's presence. Geter v. State, 300 Ga. App. 396, 685 S.E.2d 342 (2009).

Production of paper belonging to wife, and which is in custody either of herself or her attorney, cannot be compelled for the purpose of using the paper as evidence for the state in the trial of a criminal case against her husband by serving a subpoena duces tecum, or other process, either upon the wife or the attorney, or upon both. Under such circumstances, the paper in question is so far inaccessible as that secondary evidence of its contents is admissible. Farmer v. State, 100 Ga. 41, 28 S.E. 26 (1896).

Admission of documentary and oral evidence as to banking account of defendant's wife was not error as a violation of the husband-wife privilege. Barbour v. State, 66 Ga. App. 498, 18 S.E.2d 40 (1941).

Termination upon death or divorce. — Unlike the evidentiary prohibition of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21(1), excluding interspousal communications, the spousal privilege against compellability in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23 ceases when the marriage is terminated by death or divorce. Chadwick v. State, 176 Ga. App. 296, 335 S.E.2d 674 (1985), aff'd, 255 Ga. 376, 339 S.E.2d 717 (1986).

Defendant's claim that the former wife's testimony was improperly admitted was rejected as the wife's O.C.G.A. § 24-9-23 privilege ceased before the trial when the marriage was terminated by divorce. Young v. State, 280 Ga. 65, 623 S.E.2d 491 (2005).

Spouse's forced testimony not reversible error. — Even if the trial court erred in compelling the defendant's wife to testify concerning an assault of the wife as a similar transaction, such error was not reversible since there was no reasonable possibility of a different verdict; in addition to the wife's testimony, the state also presented testimony of defendant's girlfriend, the victim of defendant's assault, a neighbor who witnessed parts of the altercation, other corroborating witnesses, as well as evidence of prior difficulties between defendant and the girlfriend. Phillips v. State, 278 Ga. App. 439, 629 S.E.2d 130 (2006).

Instructions to jury. — Defendant accused of voluntary manslaughter was entitled to a new trial since the trial court failed to give curative instructions to the jury following closing remarks by the state noting the failure of defendant's wife to testify. Ferry v. State, 161 Ga. App. 795, 287 S.E.2d 732 (1982).

24-9-24. Client's communications to attorney privileged.

Communications to any attorney or to his employee to be transmitted to the attorney pending his employment or in anticipation thereof shall never be heard by the court. The attorney shall not disclose the advice or counsel he may give to his client, nor produce or deliver up title deeds or other papers, except evidences of debt left in his possession by his client. This Code section shall not exclude the attorney as a witness to any facts which may transpire in connection with his employment. (Laws 1850, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 280; Ga. GENERAL CONSIDERATION

COMMUNICATIONS

WHEN PRIVILEGE ATTACHES

DISCLOSURE, PRODUCTION, OR DELIVERY

FACTS IN CONNECTION WITH EMPLOYMENT

WAIVER

General Consideration

Purpose of privilege. — Attorney-client privilege is for the protection and benefit of the client, not of the attorney, so that the client's disclosures may not be used against the client in controversies with third persons, and it is designed to secure the client's confidence in the secrecy of the client's communication, and to promote greater freedom of consultation between clients and their legal advisers, and its object is to secure freedom in communication between attorney and client in order that the former may act with full understanding of the matters in which the attorney is employed. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Who may invoke privilege. — Court did not err in allowing the impeachment of a witness through the testimony of the witness's attorney, nor was defense counsel ineffective in failing to challenge the state's calling the attorney to testify; the rules of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-24 may not be invoked by strangers to the attorney-client relationship. Womack v. State, 260 Ga. 305, 393 S.E.2d 232 (1990).

Rule that communications between an attorney and a client are privileged, and that the attorney is an incompetent witness to testify thereto, cannot be invoked for the benefit of other persons who are strangers to such relationship. Findley v. Davis, 202 Ga. App. 332, 414 S.E.2d 317 (1991).

Communications between principal and agent are not privileged, even if such communications ultimately reach the principal's attorney and are used in preparing a defense to litigation arising out of the occurrence forming the subject matter of the communications. GMC v. Moseley, 213 Ga. App. 875, 447 S.E.2d 302 (1994).

Testimony of coconspirator's lawyer barred in criminal proceeding. — Criminal defendant's request to call the coconspirator's counsel to rebut the coconspirator's testimony that the coconspirator had not been offered any "deal" by the state in exchange for the coconspirator's testimony was properly denied because the testimony defendant sought to elicit came within the attorney-client privilege. Avery v. State, 244 Ga. App. 177, 534 S.E.2d 897 (2000).

Client's identity not covered by privilege.

— Because a client's identity is not covered by the attorney-client privilege, the trial court correctly declined to permit an attorney to use the privilege to justify refusal to reveal the identity of a client who had requested that the client's identity be kept confidential. Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Louisiana Forum Corp., 273 Ga. 206, 538 S.E.2d 441 (2000).

Privilege not to be used to carry out crimes. — Privileged communication may be a shield of defense as to crimes already committed, but it cannot be used as a sword or weapon of offense to enable persons to carry out contemplated crimes against society, frauds, or perjuries. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Crime-fraud exception to privilege. — Under the crime-fraud exception to the attorney-client privilege, the privilege does not extend to communications which occur before perpetration of a fraud or commission of a crime and which relate thereto. In re Fulton County Grand Jury Proceedings, 244 Ga. App. 380, 535 S.E.2d 340 (2000).

Corporation can avail itself of the attorney-client privilege. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Attorney-client privilege is applicable to a corporate employee's communication if: (1) the communication was made for the purpose of securing legal advice; (2) the employee making the communication did so at the direction of a corporate superior; (3) the superior made the request so that the corporation could secure legal advice; (4) the subject matter of the communication is within the scope of the employee's corporate duties; and (5) the communication is not disseminated beyond those persons who, because of the corporate structure, need to know its contents; moreover, the corporation has the burden of showing that the communication in issue meets all of the above requirements. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Communications between attorney and client are excluded from consideration of public policy and the privilege applies to communications to the officers and employees of a corporate client as well as to individual clients. Associated Grocers Coop. v. Trust Co., 158 Ga. App. 115, 279 S.E.2d 248 (1981).

Existence of "open government" does not negate existence of attorney-client privilege as to matters discussed between county officials and county attorney. Dodson v. Floyd, 529 F. Supp. 1056 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Out-of-state order prohibiting unprivileged testimony. — Michigan order, by facially prohibiting former corporate litigation consultant from testifying as to matters outside the scope of any privilege, violated Georgia public policy; therefore, the full faith and credit clause did not require the federal district court in Georgia to give full effect to the Michigan Court order. Williams v. GMC, 147 F.R.D. 270 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Work product rule. — Test to determine whether a document constitutes work product is whether it was prepared by the party or the party's representative because of the prospect of litigation. Shipes v. BIC Corp., 154 F.R.D. 301 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Attorney-client privilege does not cover the identity of documents a party reviews to prepare for a deposition. McKinnon v. Smock, 264 Ga. 375, 445 S.E.2d 526 (1994).

Communications

Rule has broad scope, and is not confined merely to communicated matters, but extends to items as to which the attorney has acquired the attorney's knowledge by the attorney's own observation when this observation was the result of the attorney's professional employment. Taylor v. Taylor, 179 Ga. 691, 177 S.E. 582 (1934).

Burden is upon a corporation seeking to invoke the attorney-client privilege to establish that its counsel's advice was privileged legal advice and thus not subject to discovery. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Ash, 192 Ga. App. 24, 383 S.E.2d 579 (1989).

No distinction between advice on specific cases and day-to-day business. — Attorney-client privilege statutes make no distinction between legal advice given to a corporate client in regard to specific cases pending and legal advice concerning day-to-day business matters. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Ash, 192 Ga. App. 24, 383 S.E.2d 579 (1989).

Rule is not confined to matters relating to litigation, but extends to all cases when the attorney is consulted by a client in the line of the attorney's profession. Taylor v. Taylor, 179 Ga. 691, 177 S.E. 582 (1934).

This privilege must be narrowly confined to statutory language in order to permit liberal discovery. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Mixture of privileged and nonprivileged matter. — When any document sought to be produced contains a mixture of privileged and nonprivileged communication or information, ample remedy is provided to delete privileged matter, and this also would be within the inherent power of the court. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

Joint representation waives privilege. — If two or more persons jointly consult or retain an attorney the communications which either makes to the attorney are not privileged in the event of any subsequent litigation between the parties. In such situations it is considered that the attorney does not have an attorney-client relationship with either of the joint parties. Peterson v. Baumwell, 202 Ga. App. 283, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1991), cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 907, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1992).

If, by consenting to joint representation, the parties waived the attorney-client privilege as to communications affecting the interest of the other, then such communications should be discoverable by each one of them against the other. The fact that there is present in this litigation a third party who will gain access to these communications does not change the fact of the initial waiver. Peterson v. Baumwell, 202 Ga. App. 283, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1991), cert. denied, 202 Ga.

App. 907, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1992).

Conversations not with attorney. — When it appears from a transcript that none of the conversations about which witness is questioned was had with an attorney, the attorney-client privilege is not applicable. Bridges v. State, 242 Ga. 251, 248 S.E.2d 647 (1978).

Communications made for purpose of being imparted by the attorney to others are not privileged. Riley v. State, 180 Ga. 869, 181 S.E. 154 (1935).

Documents obtained from third parties. — Attorney client privilege does not apply to documents obtained by the attorney from a third party, or even documents which a party filters through its attorney. Shipes v. BIC Corp., 154 F.R.D. 301 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Admission of certain letters did not violate privilege. — Admission of three letters from attorneys to the defendant in a malice murder trial did not violate the attorney-client privilege: the first letter was not privileged as the letter merely showed employment of an attorney; the second letter simply forwarded a letter noting the enclosure of a final payment for a real estate transaction; and the third letter was a follow-up letter asking the defendant if there was a mortgage or another indebtedness on the property and whether the defendant had a deed. Bryant v. State, 282 Ga. 631, 651 S.E.2d 718 (2007).

Use of agent to transmit communication. — When legal advice of any kind is sought from a duly accredited professional legal advisor in the advisor's capacity as such, the communications relevant to that purpose, made in confidence by the client, are at the client's instance permanently protected from disclosure by the client, the legal advisor, or the agent of either confidentially used to transmit the communication, unless the client waives the protection; and clearly, therefore, since the client has used a confidential agent of transmission, which, under the circumstances, it was reasonably necessary for the client to do, the client will be protected against betrayal of this confidence by such agent to the same extent as against betrayal of confidence by the client's attorney. Taylor v. Taylor, 179 Ga. 691, 177 S.E. 582 (1934).

Work product rule. — Under the work product rule, the attorney-client privilege protects correspondence between defendant's claims examiners and counsel, letters between inside and outside counsel, correspondence between defendant's employees and insurance carrier, and handwritten notes by inside counsel; but not plaintiff's medical records, statements by plaintiff, or correspondence between defendant's agent and third parties. Shipes v. BIC Corp., 154 F.R.D. 301 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Information obtained for preparing bankruptcy schedules gained during intake interview questioning was protected by the attorney-client privilege. In re Stoutamire, 201 Bankr. 592 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996).

Placing material with attorney invokes no privilege. — It is axiomatic that one cannot render privileged that which is otherwise not privileged merely by placing it in the hands of one's attorney. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Photographs not "communications." — In a prosecution for sexual offenses, photographs given by the defendant to his attorney depicting sexual activity between defendant's wife and a 13-year-old girl were not "communications," but were admissible as evidence of a similar crime. Johnson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 722, 475 S.E.2d 918 (1996).

Testimony sought fell within attorney-client privilege. — Testimony that defendant sought from a codefendant's lawyer relating to an alleged deal to provide substantial assistance to the prosecution fell within the attorney-client privilege because there was no evidence of any fraud or crime; although the defendant insisted that the codefendant committed perjury when by testifying that the codefendant's attorney did not discuss "substantial assistance" with the codefendant, these arguments were merely speculative. Pihlman v. State, 292 Ga. App. 612, 664 S.E.2d 904 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 977 (Ga. 2008).

When Privilege Attaches

Prior statements. — Mere fact that at some later time statements are transmitted to an attorney for use in preparing a defense to litigation that may have arisen out of the occurrence to which the statements referred does not render the statements communications to the attorney or bring the statements within the privileged category. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Communication in anticipation of employment. — An attorney is neither compellable nor competent to testify to any matter or thing, knowledge of which the attorney may have acquired by reason of the anticipated employment of the person as attorney by one seeking the attorney's professional aid and advice, whether, as matter of fact, the attorney so consulted is or is not afterwards employed to undertake the service concerning which the confidential communication sought to be introduced in evidence was made. Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Goss, 50 Ga. App. 637, 179 S.E. 420 (1935).

Testimony of an attorney to the effect that on a visit to the mother of defendant, made in anticipation of employment as attorney for defendant, the mother delivered a pistol and watch to the witness, with instructions to deliver them to a named police officer, was not inadmissible in evidence upon the ground that it was confidential communication between attorney and client. Riley v. State, 180 Ga. 869, 181 S.E. 154 (1935).

Communication of criminal plans. — As to violations of law or commissions of fraud, the protection extends only to communications after the act or transaction is finished, and does not cover communications respecting proposed infractions of the law in commission of a crime or perpetration of a fraud. Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Goss, 50 Ga. App. 637, 179 S.E. 420 (1935).

When an attorney speaks with a defendant as a family friend, not as a legal advisor, and tells the defendant that the attorney does not represent the defendant and to contact an attorney if the defendant needs legal advice, no attorney-client relationship exists. Spence v. State, 252 Ga. 338, 313 S.E.2d 475 (1984).

Disclosure, Production, or Delivery

Privilege is absolute, and if a matter is privileged it is not discoverable. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Attorney's involvement in disclosure irrelevant. — Privilege bars communications regardless of whether the communications were voluntarily produced by the attorney to be used against the client, or were surreptitiously or otherwise taken from the possession of the attorney. McKie v. State, 165 Ga. 210, 140 S.E. 625 (1927).

Clerk or amanuensis of attorney cannot testify as to confidential communications in clerk's presence between the attorney and client. Taylor v. Taylor, 179 Ga. 691, 177 S.E. 582 (1934).

Attorney-client relationship extends to the network of employees acting under the direction of the attorney. In re Stoutamire, 201 Bankr. 592 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996).

Abuse of process. — An action was originally commenced against an individual, the sole shareholder of a corporation, instead of the corporation itself, the proper party. In a later action for abuse of process, the trial court properly allowed evidence to show that the defendant (the original plaintiff) was unwilling to allow the defendant's original attorney to divulge the reasons why the present plaintiff had been sued in an individual capacity, and to draw any reasonable inferences from this taking of the attorney-client privilege. Ostroff v. Coyner, 187 Ga. App. 109, 369 S.E.2d 298 (1988).

Revealing location of victim's body. — While the state is likely correct that defendant's attorney had a positive obligation to reveal the location of the victim's body to law enforcement officers, it does not follow of necessity that the state should disclose to the jury that the source of the information that led to the discovery of the body was the attorney. Offering such testimony is a dangerous practice, and one the Supreme Court disapproves. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606 (1989).

Production of medical records. — Medical records in defendant's claim files are subject to neither the work product privilege nor the doctor patient privilege and should be produced for plaintiff's review. Shipes v. BIC Corp., 154 F.R.D. 301 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Certain documents in an insurer's claim file were protected under the attorney-client privilege of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-24 because the documents related to retaining an attorney to defend the insured and were related to the attorney's representation of the insured, along with the attorney's mental impressions that were protected under the work product doctrine. Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 248 F.R.D. 663 (N.D. Ga. 2008).

Disclosure, Production, or Delivery (Cont'd)

Testimony of investigator hired by attorney. — In a proceeding on a motion to quash a subpoena requiring a private investigator to appear before a grand jury and produce evidence acquired by the investigator during employment in defendant's divorce proceeding, there was no violation of defendant's procedural rights because the investigator's in-camera testimony authorized the court to find that the subject communications from defendant were made after the investigator ceased acting as an agent or employee of the attorney, and that they fell within the crime-fraud exception to the attorney-client privilege. In re Fulton County Grand Jury Proceedings, 244 Ga. App. 380, 535 S.E.2d 340 (2000).

Refreshing recollection improperly. — Trial court erred in permitting the state, on cross-examination, to have the defense psychologist refresh the psychologist's recollection, thereby effectively impeaching defendant, by use of a privileged and confidential communication to the defense attorney's investigator; but because the impermissibly refreshed recollection was entirely consistent with, and cumulative of, other competent evidence, the error was harmless. Revera v. State, 223 Ga. App. 450, 477 S.E.2d 849 (1996).

Inadvertent disclosure to defense counsel of a letter from plaintiff to plaintiff's attorneys did not waive the attorney-client privilege. Lazar v. Mauney, 192 F.R.D. 324 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Habeas petitioner who asserts a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel makes a limited waiver of the attorney-client privilege and work product doctrine. Under these circumstances, the state is entitled only to counsel's documents and files relevant to the specific allegations of ineffectiveness. Waldrip v. Head, 272 Ga. 572, 532 S.E.2d 380 (2000).

Facts in Connection with Employment

Mere fact of employment between attorney and client is not protected from disclosure. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

An attorney may testify with respect to essential facts attending execution of contract in preparation and as to attestation of which the attorney rendered professional service. Jones v. Smith, 206 Ga. 162, 56 S.E.2d 462 (1949).

An attorney at law who witnesses a contract as a subscribing witness, and who was employed to prepare the same, is competent, in a trial involving the mental capacity of the maker thereof to execute a valid contract, to testify as a witness concerning the maker's mental condition, and as to facts showing the latter's knowledge or ignorance of the contents of the paper, and as to all other pertinent facts attending signing and attestation of the instrument. Smith v. Smith, 222 Ga. 694, 152 S.E.2d 560 (1966).

Client accusing attorney of failure to inform. — When there was no claim of misconduct or incompetent representation, a habeas corpus petitioner cannot claim that the petitioner was not informed of the sentence consequences of a guilty plea, and then invoke the attorney-client privilege to prevent the attorney from testifying. Bailey v. Baker, 232 Ga. 84, 205 S.E.2d 278 (1974).

Client accusing attorney of previous misconduct. — When accused in statement to jury charged that attorney who represented the accused in previous prosecution for murder entered plea of guilty over the accused's protests of innocence, accused waived the accused's right to have their transactions considered as privileged, and the attorney was competent to give testimony to show that the attorney did not act basely in the transaction, as the attorney's one-time client claimed. Hyde v. State, 70 Ga. App. 823, 29 S.E.2d 820 (1944).

Letters between a private investigator and defendant's attorneys. — With regard to a defendant's conviction for malice murder, the trial court did not err by allowing the introduction of one letter by a private investigator and two letters by the defendant's attorneys in violation of the attorney-client privilege since the three letters did not involve any communications between the defendant and the defendant's attorneys. Rather, they were all communications between the private investigator and the attorneys, and the letters did not contain confidential information and, instead, concerned only the fact of the investigator's employment and the attorneys' claims that the investigator's services in the divorce case between the defendant and an estranged spouse fell under the attorney-client privilege. Davis v. State, 285 Ga. 343, 676 S.E.2d 215 (2009).

Waiver

When no request is made by accused or the accused's counsel to confer privately without the presence of the marshal, the mere existence of such right would not affect the validity of the conviction, since there must be denial of such right by the trial judge before the accused may complain. Fowler v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 84, 31 S.E.2d 174, cert. denied, 323 U.S. 784, 65 S. Ct. 266, 89 L. Ed. 626 (1944).

Presence of third party. — When a client makes to an attorney a communication or statement in the presence of the opposite party as to the transaction in hand, it is not confidential or privileged, and the attorney is a competent witness to testify respecting the statement on the trial of a case arising out of such transaction. Griffin v. Williams, 179 Ga. 175, 175 S.E. 449 (1934).

Defendant's act of delivering to his wife a statement for her to read, rewrite, sign and have notarized prior to his giving it to his attorney was a waiver of the attorney-client privilege as to such document. Osborn v. State, 233 Ga. App. 257, 504 S.E.2d 74 (1998).

Privilege not waived by testifying before grand jury. — Civil plaintiff's counsel did not waive the work product privilege by testifying before a grand jury regarding information allegedly covered by the privilege and therefore did not render oneself a potential witness in the civil trial. Wrisco Indus., Inc. v. Hinely, 733 F. Supp. 106 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

An eavesdropper or a wiretapper is not incompetent to testify to the communications one overhears. Taylor v. Taylor, 179 Ga. 691, 177 S.E. 582 (1934).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Attorneys employed by state agencies. — Although state agencies may employ persons with legal training and experience to serve as administrative legal service officers, those persons may not provide legal advice or representation to the agency, and no attorney-client relationship or privilege arises between the legal services officer and other agency officers or employees, or the agency itself. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-1.

ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE STATE BAR

It is ethically proper for a lawyer to reveal the confidences or secrets of clients in any proceedings in which revelation may be necessary to defend the lawyer against charges of professional misconduct. Adv. Op. No. 80-27 (November 21, 1980).

General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — In instances where duplication could serve no useful purpose, cases decided under the predecessors of Code Sections 24-9-21, 24-9-24, and this Code section have been annotated under either Code Section 24-9-21 or Code Section 24-9-24, but not under this Code section. The user interested in a more general discussion of the attorney-client privilege should also consult those sections.

Statute not restrictive. — It was not the intention of the statute to restrict the admission of evidence, but to enlarge the rule for the admission of evidence. Strickland v. Wynn, 51 Ga. 600 (1874) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-25).

Rule set forth in the statute cannot be invoked by strangers to relationship. O’Brien v. Spalding, 102 Ga. 490, 31 S.E. 100, 66 Am. St. R. 202 (1897); Neal v. Dover, 217 Ga. 545, 123 S.E.2d 760 (1962); Cleary v. Burlington Indus., Inc., 193 Ga. App. 81, 387 S.E.2d 36 (1989).

Communications not intended to be confidential. — Communications made by a client to an attorney for the purpose of being imparted by the attorney to others do not fall within the inhibition of the statute. Fowler v. Sheridan, 157 Ga. 271, 121 S.E. 308 (1924).

Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-25, in general, an attorney may not be compelled to testify against a client to any matter or thing, the knowledge of which the attorney may have acquired by virtue of the individual’s employment as an attorney; this rule, however, does not prohibit an attorney from testifying about matters that occurred in the presence of the opposing party, because such communications were not intended to be confidential. Martinez v. Hous. Auth., 264 Ga. App. 282, 590 S.E.2d 245 (2003).

Presence of opposite party. — When a client makes to an attorney a communication or statement in the presence of the opposite party as to the transaction in hand, it is not confidential or privileged. Stone v. Minter, 111 Ga. 45, 36 S.E. 321, 50 L.R.A. 356 (1900).

Testimony pertaining to attorney fees is not a matter the knowledge of which the lawyer obtains from the client, and it is not necessary that the attorney be listed as a witness in the pre-trial order in order to testify as to such fees. Halpern v. Lacy Inv.

Client's identity not covered by privilege.

— Because a client's identity is not covered by the attorney-client privilege, the trial court correctly declined to permit an attorney to use the privilege to justify refusal to reveal the identity of a client who had requested that the client's identity be kept confidential. Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Louisiana Forum Corp., 273 Ga. 206, 538 S.E.2d 441 (2000).

Attorney may not be called to testify as to client's competency. — It is not legally permissible for the state to call defendant's counsel as a witness for the purpose of extracting facts and counsel's opinion as to the client's competency, which is gained from the attorney's participation in the attorney-client relationship with the defendant. Almond v. State, 180 Ga. App. 475, 349 S.E.2d 482 (1986).

Existence of "open government" does not negate existence of attorney-client privilege as to matters discussed between county officials and county attorney. Dodson v. Floyd, 529 F. Supp. 1056 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Termination of relationship. — Law has no application as to communication made by a former client to the attorney after the relation of attorney and client had ceased to exist. Philman v. Marshall, 103 Ga. 82, 29 S.E. 598 (1897).

Privilege continues after client's death. Smith v. Smith, 222 Ga. 694, 152 S.E.2d 560 (1966).

Statute creates no "privilege as attorney" giving an attorney at law the right to refuse to answer pertinent questions asked for the purpose of proving that the attorney was not employed by a designated person to institute a given proceeding. Alger v. Turner, 105 Ga. 178, 31 S.E. 423 (1898).

An objection should state unqualifiedly that attorney represented party to whom the testimony related. Brannan v. Mobley, 169 Ga. 243, 150 S.E. 76 (1929).

Disqualification without consideration of statute error. — Trial court order disqualifying an attorney from acting as counsel for a party on the ground that the party was a necessary witness at trial was overruled since the trial court did not consider the applicability of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-25 in the context of the evidence adduced at the disqualification hearing. Southern Shipping Co. v. Oceans Int'l Corp., 174 Ga. App. 91, 329 S.E.2d 263 (1985).

Inapplicable to defendant-requested communications. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-25 is not implicated as to testimony relating to information defendant instructs defense counsel to convey to third persons. Shelton v. State, 206 Ga. App. 579, 426 S.E.2d 69 (1992).

Out-of-state order prohibiting unprivileged testimony. — Michigan order, by facially prohibiting former corporate litigation consultant from testifying as to matters outside the scope of any privilege, violated Georgia public policy; therefore, the full faith and credit clause did not require the federal district court in Georgia to give full effect to the Michigan Court order. Williams v. GMC, 147 F.R.D. 270 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Acquisition of Knowledge1. By Virtue of Employment

Acquisition during and by reason of relationship. — To make an attorney incompetent to testify to a fact, knowledge of the fact must have been acquired by the attorney both during the relationship of client and attorney and by reason of that relationship. Parker v. Wellons, 43 Ga. App. 721, 160 S.E. 109 (1931).

Service performed as a favor. — When an attorney who prepared a deed was not employed to do so, but prepared the deed merely as a “friendly act” for the grantor, such attorney is not incompetent to testify as to statements made by the grantor at the time. Lifsey v. Mims, 193 Ga. 780, 20 S.E.2d 32 (1942).

2. By Reason of Anticipated Employment

Rule applies regardless of eventual employment. — Confidential communications, made to an attorney not actually employed at the time, but which were made in anticipation of employing the attorney, come within the rule protecting privileged communications, and this is true whether as a matter of fact the attorney so consulted is or is not afterwards employed to undertake the services concerning which the confidential communications ought to be introduced in evidence were made. Young v. State, 65 Ga. 525 (1880); Peek & Sullivan v. Boone, 90 Ga. 767, 17 S.E. 66 (1893). See also Haywood v. State, 114 Ga. 111, 39 S.E. 948 (1901).

3. By Any Other Manner

In general. — An attorney at law is not incompetent to testify to facts which did not come to the attorney’s knowledge by reason of the relation or contemplated relation of attorney and client between oneself and another. Harkless v. Smith, 115 Ga. 350, 41 S.E. 634 (1902).

An attorney is both competent and compellable to testify, for or against a client, as to any matter or thing, knowledge of which the attorney may have acquired in any other manner than by virtue of the attorney’s relations as attorney, or by reason of the attorney’s anticipated employment as attorney. Bracewell v. State, 21 Ga. App. 133, 94 S.E. 91 (1917).

Attorney-client privilege does not encompass matters of which the attorney has or gains knowledge through some source other than the communications of a client in preparation for litigation. If the attorney has knowledge from another source, testimony concerning that is proper. Buffington v. McClelland, 130 Ga. App. 460, 203 S.E.2d 575 (1973).

Application in Specific Actions

Actions by client against attorney. — Rule as to privilege has no application if the client, in an action against the attorney, charges negligence, malpractice, or fraud, or other professional misconduct. In such cases it would be a manifest injustice to allow the client to take advantage of the rule of privilege to the prejudice of the attorney. Daughtry v. Cobb, 189 Ga. 113, 5 S.E.2d 352 (1939).

No disqualification in adversarial bankruptcy action after former representation in arbitration proceeding. — Bankruptcy court denied a trustee’s motion to disqualify an attorney who represented a church that was sued in an adversary proceeding; although the attorney represented the church during an arbitration proceeding that led to a settlement agreement, and the trustee claimed that the attorney was a potential witness who had information relevant to the claim that the church breached the settlement agreement, the court noted that O.C.G.A. § 24-9-25 protected the attorney from being called to testify about information the attorney obtained while performing legal services for the church, and that evidence regarding nonprivileged matters was attainable from other sources, and the court found that allowing the attorney to represent the church would not be a violation of Ga. St. Bar R. 4-102:3.7. Hays v. Paradise Mission Church, Inc. (In re Harrington, George & Dunn, P.C.), No. 05-91725, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 2160 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. May 29, 2007).

Consider statute in disqualifying attorneys. — When there was no evidence showing the attorneys acquired knowledge regarding surety’s denial of general contractor’s claim in a capacity other than as surety’s attorneys, and when it was unclear from the trial court’s order whether the trial court considered O.C.G.A. § 24-9-25 applicable to the decision to disqualify the attorneys, and the statute being directly relevant to the issue of disqualification, the trial court’s order disqualifying surety’s counsel was reversed and the case remanded for a determination of whether attorneys could even be competent witnesses in the case. Amwest Sur. Ins. Co. v. Interstate Constr. Co., 212 Ga. App. 590, 442 S.E.2d 772 (1994).

Incompetency does not relate solely to admissions made by the client. Freeman v. Brewster, 93 Ga. 648, 21 S.E. 165 (1894).

Testimony of client as to advice given to the client by counsel is incompetent, and on timely motion should be excluded. Braxley v. State, 17 Ga. App. 196, 86 S.E. 425 (1915).

Declaring book to be original. — Allowing of defendant to state, under oath, that the book which defendant proposed to offer in evidence was defendant's original book of entry was not such testimony or evidence in relation to the cause of action in issue or on trial as is contemplated by statute. Strickland v. Wynn, 51 Ga. 600 (1874).

Contracts. — Statute has no application to the competency of an attorney as a witness with respect to essential facts attending the execution of a contract in preparation and as to attestation of which the attorney rendered professional service. In such a matter the attorney is not testifying "for or against his client." Smith v. Smith, 222 Ga. 694, 152 S.E.2d 560 (1966), later appeal, 223 Ga. 560, 156 S.E.2d 901 (1967).

Evidence of employment of attorney. — It is competent to show the fact of an attorney's employment, either by the client or the attorney, and evidence confined to this fact was not objectionable on the ground that it involved confidential relations. Fowler v. Sheridan, 157 Ga. 271, 121 S.E. 308 (1924).

Insurance carried by client. — Rule applies with reference to the attorney's knowledge concerning insurance which the client may have carried. Weatherbee v. Hutcheson, 114 Ga. App. 761, 152 S.E.2d 715 (1966).

Knowledge of contents of insurance policy. — When knowledge of an attorney of the contents of an insurance policy was acquired while acting in the attorney's professional capacity under employment to collect the policy, and by reason of that relationship, the attorney was an incompetent witness to testify to those facts, it was error to admit this evidence. Freeman v. Brewster, 93 Ga. 648, 21 S.E. 165 (1894).

Request to call coconspirator's counsel. — Criminal defendant's request to call defendant's coconspirator's counsel to rebut the coconspirator's testimony that the coconspirator had not been offered any "deal" by the state in exchange for the coconspirator's testimony was properly denied because the testimony defendant sought to elicit came within the attorney-client privilege. Avery v. State, 244 Ga. App. 177, 534 S.E.2d 897 (2000).

No privilege in joint representation. — If two or more persons jointly consult or retain an attorney the communications which either makes to the attorney are not privileged in the event of any subsequent litigation between the parties. In such situations it is considered that the attorney does not have an attorney-client relationship with either of the joint parties. Peterson v. Baumwell, 202 Ga. App. 283, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1991), cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 907, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1992).

If, by consenting to joint representation, the parties waived the attorney-client privilege as to communications affecting the interest of the other, then such communications should be discoverable by each one of the parties against the other. The fact that there is present in this litigation a third party who will gain access to these communications does not change the fact of the initial waiver. Peterson v. Baumwell, 202 Ga. App. 283, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1991), cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 907, 414 S.E.2d 278 (1992).

Offspring acquires no attorney-client privilege resulting from deceased parent's relationship. — Trial court did not err in admitting testimony of attorney who represented the testator as the daughter could not invoke the attorney-client privilege to prevent that testimony since the daughter was a stranger to that attorney-client relationship. White v. Regions Bank, 275 Ga. 38, 561 S.E.2d 806 (2002).

Attorney attacking judgment. — Attorney of record who represented a plaintiff in bringing suit and taking judgment will not be heard to urge, in the attorney's own behalf, the invalidity of the judgment for want of process. Kennedy v. Redwine, 59 Ga. 327 (1877).

Abuse of process. — An action was originally commenced against an individual, the sole shareholder of a corporation, instead of the corporation itself, the proper party. In a later action for abuse of process, the trial court properly allowed evidence to show that the defendant (the original plaintiff) was unwilling to allow the defendant's original attorney to divulge the reasons why the present plaintiff had been sued in an individual capacity, and to draw any reasonable inferences from this taking of the attorney-client privilege. Ostroff v. Coyner, 187 Ga. App. 109, 369 S.E.2d 298 (1988).

Letters. — Letters written between the attorney and the agent of a corporation, which was the attorney's client, containing confidential communications between the two, should not have been forced to be produced for use in evidence against the client. Fire Ass'n v. Fleming, 78 Ga. 733, 3 S.E. 420 (1887).

Letter from the plaintiff in a case to plaintiff's attorney, and from the attorney delivered to defendant's counsel, is not admissible. Southern Ry. v. White, 108 Ga. 201, 33 S.E. 952 (1899).

An attorney is not incompetent to testify as to mental condition of a deceased client, based upon the attorney's observations while representing the client in litigation. Smith v. Smith, 222 Ga. 694, 152 S.E.2d 560 (1966).

Compelling attorney to produce title papers. — Court has no power to compel the counsel of one of the parties to disclose on oath, in spite of one's claim of privilege, that one has in court one of the client's title papers, and to produce the papers to be used in the suit as evidence for the opposite party, especially if notice to produce has not been previously given. Dover v. Harrell, 58 Ga. 572 (1877).

In a dispossessory action brought by a mortgage company against a possessor, the trial court properly granted the mortgage company a writ of possession as the company produced a recorded certified copy of the security deed, which the possessor failed to prove was a fraud since the possessor's signature on the deed matched that as appeared on the answer filed. The trial court properly rejected the possessor's attempt to examine the mortgage company's counsel regarding the authenticity of the deed since counsel represented the mortgage company and was, therefore, not competent to testify. Egana v. HSBC Mortg. Corp., 294 Ga. App. 456, 669 S.E.2d 159 (2008).

Revealing location of victim's body. — While the state is likely correct that defendant's attorney had a positive obligation to reveal the location of the victim's body to law enforcement officers, it does not follow of necessity that the state should disclose to the jury that the source of the information that led to the discovery of the body was the attorney. Offering such testimony is a dangerous practice, and one the Supreme Court disapproves. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606 (1989).

Wills. — Statute has no application to the competency of an attorney as a witness with respect to essential facts attending the execution of a will in preparation and as to attestation of which the attorney rendered professional services. O'Brien v. Spalding, 102 Ga. 490, 31 S.E. 100, 66 Am. St. R. 202 (1897); Waters v. Wells, 155 Ga. 439, 117 S.E. 322 (1923); Manley v. Combs, 197 Ga. 768, 30 S.E.2d 485 (1944).

Under the mandate of statute, the trial court errs in allowing decedent's attorney to testify as to confidential communications arising out of preparation of an unexecuted will for decedent, in an action for specific performance of an alleged oral contract to make a will. DeLoach v. Myers, 215 Ga. 255, 109 S.E.2d 777 (1959).

In an action against the estate of decedent's wife for breach of contract to make a will, the decedent's nephew and decedent's secretary were barred from giving testimony regarding communications by the decedent to the nephew when the nephew was acting in the nephew's capacity as an attorney for the decedent. Spence v. Hamm, 226 Ga. App. 357, 487 S.E.2d 9 (1997).

Inadvertent disclosure to defense counsel of a letter from plaintiff to plaintiff's attorneys did not waive the attorney-client privilege. Lazar v. Mauney, 192 F.R.D. 324 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Knowledge of plea deal. — Testimony that defendant sought from a codefendant's lawyer relating to an alleged deal to provide substantial assistance to the prosecution fell within the attorney-client privilege because there was no evidence of any fraud or crime; although the defendant insisted that the codefendant committed perjury when by testifying that the codefendant's attorney did not discuss "substantial assistance" with the codefendant, these arguments were merely speculative. Pihlman v. State, 292 Ga. App. 612, 664 S.E.2d 904 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 977 (Ga. 2008).

Habeas petitioner who asserts a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel makes a limited waiver of the attorney-client privilege and work product doctrine; thus, the state is entitled only to counsel's documents and files relevant to the specific allegations of ineffectiveness. Waldrip v. Head, 272 Ga. 572, 532 S.E.2d 380 (2000).

Paralegal's testimony in eviction proceeding. — Trial court did not err by admitting the testimony of a paralegal with a tenant's former attorney's office as, assuming the attorney-client privilege applied to paralegals, the paralegal testified about meetings and other communications the paralegal had with the housing authority on the tenant's behalf, not about any private communications the paralegal had with the tenant. Martinez v. Hous. Auth., 264 Ga. App. 282, 590 S.E.2d 245 (2003).

STATE MATTERS

General Consideration

Self-incrimination and forfeiture provisions compared. — Self-incrimination privilege involves important policy and constitutional implications not applicable to the forfeiture privilege. Kushner v. Mascho, 143 Ga. App. 801, 240 S.E.2d 290 (1977).

Witness protected from indirect incrimination. — Protection is not limited to cases if the question or answer has a direct tendency to incriminate the defendant or to expose the defendant to a penalty or forfeiture; the defendant is protected from answering any question which may form a link in the chain by which such cases are to be established. Simpson v. Simpson, 233 Ga. 17, 209 S.E.2d 611 (1974).

Witness must explain silence. — Witness may not stand moot, but must testify that the answer would incriminate or tend to incriminate oneself, work a forfeiture of one's estate, or tend to bring infamy or disgrace or public contempt upon the witness or any member of one's family as the case may be, otherwise one would be in contempt. Wynne v. State, 139 Ga. App. 355, 228 S.E.2d 378 (1976).

Appeal from motion to disclose identity of informant. — State was without authority to appeal from the grant of a motion to disclose the identity of the confidential informant because it was not among the enumerated instances set forth in O.C.G.A. § 5-7-1, nor was the order dispositive of the charges against defendant. Glenn v. State, 271 Ga. 604, 523 S.E.2d 13 (1999).

Public policy in Georgia favored nondisclosure of the identity of a confidential informant (CI); because a CI did not participate in a controlled drug buy, the defendant's request to disclose the CI's identity was properly denied; while the defendant argued that the CI was a witness to whether or not the defendant consented to a search of the defendant's car, whether the defendant consented was immaterial because an officer was authorized to arrest the defendant for drug possession, and based on that arrest, the officer had the authority to search the car. Little v. State, 280 Ga. App. 60, 633 S.E.2d 403 (2006).

Trial court did not err in refusing the defendant's request to disclose the identity of a confidential informant in order to support an entrapment defense as the defendant was unable to present an arguably persuasive case regarding the lack of a predisposition to commit the crime, based specifically on: (1) a discussion with a detective about the impending drug sale; (2) the defendant's act of displaying a weapon considered to be protection against a robbery; and (3) the defendant's act of coordinating the movements of the numerous participants in the large-scale transaction the defendant was a part of. Griffiths v. State, 283 Ga. App. 176, 641 S.E.2d 169 (2006).

Instructions. — It is not reversible error for the court to fail or refuse to instruct a witness of the existence of a law designed for the witness's own protection and not for the protection of another person who is on trial; whatever might be its effect if the witness were personally afterward put on trial, a third person, against whom the witness testified, cannot complain that such witness was not so instructed. Guiffreda v. State, 61 Ga. App. 595, 7 S.E.2d 34 (1940).

When the court instructed the witness as follows: "If at any time there's any question as to whether or not you should answer a question as possibly tending to incriminate you or as holding you up for public contempt, for public ridicule, you may have a right to refuse to answer it," there was no error, since the court gave the witness fair and adequate notice of the witness's privilege against self-incrimination. Wilbanks v. Wilbanks, 220 Ga. 665, 141 S.E.2d 161 (1965).

Privilege against self-incrimination can be waived in praesenti. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Privilege against self-incrimination can be voluntarily waived by property settlement agreement as to future income tax returns and financial information covering future financial events unknown at the time of entering into the contract. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Notice of waiver. — When a person represented by counsel enters into a property settlement agreement which has the necessary effect of waiving a constitutional right, express notice of or reference to such waiver is not required. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Waiver by a witness at a former trial of the same case will not bar the witness's right to exercise the witness's privilege. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Lybrend, 99 Ga. 421, 27 S.E. 794 (1896); Mallin v. Mallin, 227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377 (1971).

Party, though introduced as a witness in party's own behalf, may, upon cross-examination as to matters not voluntarily testified about on direct examination, decline to give testimony which would tend to incriminate the party, or to bring infamy, disgrace, or public contempt upon the witness or the witness's family, notwithstanding the fact that at a previous trial of the case the witness had waived the privilege of remaining silent as to these matters. A waiver of this kind is not binding upon a witness at a trial subsequent to that at which the waiver was made. Bass v. Bass, 222 Ga. 378, 149 S.E.2d 818 (1966).

Burden is upon a corporation seeking to invoke the attorney-client privilege to establish that its counsel's advice was privileged legal advice and thus not subject to discovery. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Ash, 192 Ga. App. 24, 383 S.E.2d 579 (1989).

No distinction between advise on specific cases and day-to-day business. — Attorney-client privilege statutes make no distinction between legal advice given to a corporate client in regard to specific cases pending and legal advice concerning day-to-day business matters. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Ash, 192 Ga. App. 24, 383 S.E.2d 579 (1989).

State*, 284 Ga. 165, 664 S.E.2d 227 (2008).

Self-Incrimination

Interest of the court in considering a refusal on the grounds of incrimination is not that the defendant may be criminally implicated by an answer but that the defendant might conceivably be so implicated. Tennesco, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

Privilege must be honored. — Questioned party's invocation of a constitutional privilege to be free from compulsion to testify against oneself must be honored. Eason v.

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)

Berger & Co., 153 Ga. App. 126, 264 S.E.2d 579 (1980).

Incriminating effect can be under state or federal law. — Witness in a state court can claim the privilege against self-incrimination as to matters which might tend to incriminate the witness under either state or federal law. Mallin v. Mallin, 227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377 (1971).

Privilege is personal to witness. — Privilege against self-incrimination is that of the person under examination as a witness, and is intended for the witness's protection only. Thomas v. State, 245 Ga. 688, 266 S.E.2d 499 (1980), sentence vacated, 449 U.S. 988, 101 S. Ct. 523, 66 L. Ed. 2d 285 (1980) (remanded for consideration in light of Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S. Ct. 1759, 64 L. Ed. 2d 398 (1980)), aff'd, 247 Ga. 233, 275 S.E.2d 318 (1981); Riley v. State, 257 Ga. 91, 355 S.E.2d 66 (1987).

Privilege cannot be asserted in advance of the questions actually propounded in the examination or hearing. Chastain v. State, 113 Ga. App. 601, 149 S.E.2d 195 (1966).

Indiscriminate assertion of privilege prohibited. — What is impermissible is that a defendant in a civil case merely slides out of the defendant's obligations by a brash assertion that any and all questions directed to the defendant would tend to incriminate the defendant, regardless of the likelihood of such result. Tennesco, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

Admissions as to property value were not advice. — Admissions and other evidence in requested documents as to the value of the property in question were not the advice of a professional adviser and could not be considered part of a privileged consultation simply because that evidence was included in a loan application. Clayton County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Lake Spivey Golf Club, Inc., 207 Ga. App. 693, 428 S.E.2d 687 (1993).

Witness required to answer if evidence is material. — Witness is required to answer questions tending to bring infamy, disgrace, or public contempt upon the witness or the witness's family, if the proposed evidence is material to the issues in the case; it is only if the proposed answer has no effect on the case except to impair the witness's credibility that the witness may fall back on the privilege. Brown v. State, 242 Ga. 536, 250 S.E.2d 438 (1978).

Notice to witness of privilege. — It was not error for the trial court to allow state to advise a defense witness before the witness testified regarding Miranda warnings and the witness's fifth amendment rights where, in an earlier statement, the witness detailed how the defendant had forced the witness to have sexual intercourse with the victim on three occasions creating the possibility that the witness could be charged with felony offenses. Allen v. State, 210 Ga. App. 447, 436 S.E.2d 559 (1993).

Determining the possibility of incrimination. — When a question is propounded it belongs to the court to consider and to decide whether any direct answer to it can implicate the witness. If this be decided in the negative, then the witness may answer the question without violating the privilege which is secured to the witness by law. If a direct answer to it may criminate the witness, then the witness must be the sole judge what the witness's answer would be. The court cannot participate with the witness in this judgment. If the question be of such a description that the answer to the question may or may not incriminate the witness, according to the purport of that answer, it must rest with the witness, who alone can tell what it would be, to answer the question or not. If in such a case the witness says, upon the witness's oath, that the witness's answer would criminate the witness, the court can demand no other testimony of the fact. Bass v. Bass, 222 Ga. 378, 149 S.E.2d 818 (1966); Interstate Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Wilmington, 123 Ga. App. 337, 180 S.E.2d 913 (1971); Wynne v. State, 139 Ga. App. 355, 228 S.E.2d 378 (1976); Baker v. State, 162 Ga. App. 606, 292 S.E.2d 451 (1982); Lawrence v. State, 257 Ga. 423, 360 S.E.2d 716 (1987).

When a court cannot say that answers to questions concerning a defendant's financial resources and dealings might not tend to incriminate the defendant in any matter, under either state or federal law, a trial judge does not err in allowing the defendant to determine whether answers to the interrogatories might tend to incriminate the defendant. Mallin v. Mallin, 227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377 (1971).

Mere say-so of the witness does not establish a substantial, real danger of incrimination: defendant must also show defendant has reasonable cause to apprehend danger of incrimination from the answer, and the court must first determine whether there is a proper basis for invoking the privilege. Prince & Paul v. Don Mitchell's WLAQ, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 502, 194 S.E.2d 269 (1972).

In a civil action the burden is on the reneging defendant to consider each question separately and state the defendant's general reason for any refusal to answer, at which point the trial judge may decide either that the question might be incriminating under certain circumstances (whether or not the defendant had in fact committed any crime) or whether or not the line of questions as a whole, and as a matter of law, might so tend; the discretion of neither is absolute. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

Attorney who delivered an anonymous campaign contribution on behalf of a client in violation of O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30(e) was improperly held in contempt for failing to disclose the client's name to the State Ethics Commission; the attorney invoked the self-incrimination privilege and the trial court found the attorney in contempt without first determining whether the commission's proposed questions might have been incriminating. Begner v. State Ethics Comm'n, 250 Ga. App. 327, 552 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

There was no blanket right to refuse to answer questions in civil proceedings based on the self-incrimination privilege, and since there was no transcript of the hearing at which the trial court made the court's finding that the privilege was not implicated, the appellate court presumed that evidence supported the trial court's finding and order compelling discovery; further, the trial court's order compelling an employee and the husband to produce financial documents such as checks, account statements, and tax returns in a civil proceeding did not violate the self-incrimination privilege. Dempsey v. Kaminski Jewelry, Inc., 278 Ga. App. 814, 630 S.E.2d 77 (2006).

Trial court did not engage in the required analysis for a witness asserting a fifth amendment privilege, but merely declared that answering the questions concerning knowledge of the court's order regarding removing a child from a father's home would not incriminate the witness; at a minimum, such knowledge would establish a link in the chain of evidence needed to prove the witness was in contempt of that order and the trial court's finding of contempt based on the witness's refusal to answer the question was improper. In re Tidwell, 279 Ga. App. 734, 632 S.E.2d 690 (2006).

Requiring suspect to verbalize specified words for identification purposes, whether or not the words used are the same as those allegedly used during the commission of the offense, does not violate an accused's privilege against self-incrimination accorded the accused by the United States Constitution and the state's statutes and constitution. Clark v. State, 166 Ga. App. 366, 304 S.E.2d 494 (1983).

Trial court's refusal to allow questions as to sexual relations proper. — Trial court did not err by refusing ex-husband's questions to his former wife seeking to determine whether she engaged in sexual intercourse with her live-in lover on the grounds of self-incrimination in ex-husband's action to modify alimony payments. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 249 Ga. 74, 287 S.E.2d 19 (1982).

Instruction to jury necessary if party refuses to answer questions about sexual relations. — Ex-wife litigant's refusal to incriminate herself by answering questions about her sexual relations with a live-in lover required the trial court to instruct the jury about the adverse inference they might wish to draw from such an answer. The failure to charge the jury left the jury without instructions as to the nature and effect of the legal basis for this adverse inference, and the error was harmful since proof of sexual intercourse between ex-wife and third party was the linch-pin of the former husband's case. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 249 Ga. 74, 287 S.E.2d 19 (1982).

Inference may be drawn when privilege invoked. — Although a person does have a right to invoke the privilege in a civil case in order to protect oneself, when the person does so, an inference against the person's interest may be drawn by the factfinder. Simpson v. Simpson, 233 Ga. 17, 209 S.E.2d 611 (1974); Jefferson Ins. Co. v. Dunn, 224 Ga. App. 732, 482 S.E.2d 383 (1997).

Prior testimony stricken when privilege invoked. — After a female witness was asked if she did not have children and she reluctantly replied in the affirmative and was then asked if she had ever been married, there was no error on the part of the court in instructing the witness that she need not answer the question, nor in ruling out the former answer, on her declining to answer the second question. Gravett v. State, 74 Ga. 191 (1884).

Party as witness. — Party, though introduced as a witness in the party's own behalf, may, upon cross-examination as to matters not voluntarily testified about on direct examination, claim the party's privilege. Bishop v. Bishop, 157 Ga. 408, 121 S.E. 305 (1924).

Form for invoking privilege. — When it is plain from the context of the questioning in general that plaintiff was invoking the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination it is not necessary to invoke the privilege in express terms. Temple v. Temple, 228 Ga. 73, 184 S.E.2d 183 (1971).

Forfeiture of Estate

Determining the possibility of incrimination. — Where a witness testifies under oath that the witness's answer to any question asked of the witness would incriminate the witness and comes within the constitutional immunities guaranteed to the witness, the court can demand no further testimony of the fact. Interstate Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Wilmont, 123 Ga. App. 337, 180 S.E.2d 913 (1971).

Extensive questioning concerning financial affairs might tend to incriminate a person as a matter of law. In the particular situation of financial affairs, only the defendant or witness can weigh the effect. Busby v. Citizens Bank, 131 Ga. App. 738, 206 S.E.2d 640 (1974).

Privilege does not cover a pledge by the defendant not to reveal information. Tennesco, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977).

Privilege inapplicable where earning ability alone is threatened. — Forfeiture of estate objection, if it means merely that answering would interfere with the defendant's mode of earning a living, is not acceptable. Tennesco, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga.

App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586 (1977); In re Manheim, 259 Ga. 791, 387 S.E.2d 330 (1990).

Post-judgment discovery. — Statute does not protect a person from answering financial questions on post-judgment discovery because such answer may tend to work a forfeiture of a person's estate. Any forfeiture would not result from answering the questions or producing documents, but rather as a result of the judgment already entered. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Fisher, 422 F. Supp. 1 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 544 F.2d 902 (5th Cir. 1977); Kushner v. Mascho, 143 Ga. App. 801, 240 S.E.2d 290 (1977).

Form for invoking privilege. — When it is plain from the context of the questioning in general that plaintiff was invoking the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination it is not necessary to invoke the privilege in express terms. Temple v. Temple, 228 Ga. 73, 184 S.E.2d 183 (1971).

State Matters

Identity of informants need not be disclosed. — Ordinarily, one who acts in the capacity of a peace officer or connected therewith will not be required by the courts to disclose the name of their informants concerning a crime for which an accused is being tried. Anderson v. State, 72 Ga. App. 487, 34 S.E.2d 110 (1945); Morgan v. State, 211 Ga. 172, 84 S.E.2d 365 (1954); Thomas v. State, 134 Ga. App. 18, 213 S.E.2d 129 (1975); State v. Keith, 139 Ga. App. 399, 228 S.E.2d 332 (1976), aff'd, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977); State v. Burnett, 249 Ga. App. 334, 548 S.E.2d 443 (2001).

Disclosure of an informer's name is not required under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-27. Childs v. State, 158 Ga. App. 376, 280 S.E.2d 401 (1981).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying disclosure of the identity of a confidential informant who may have seen defendant in the possession of contraband, but who was not present, did not participate in the arrest, and did not take part in the offense. Leonard v. State, 228 Ga. App. 792, 492 S.E.2d 747 (1997).

No protection for testimony of eyewitness. — When defendant was seeking the testimony of an eyewitness to the incident which formed the basis of the crimes charged, the witness was not subject to protection as a confidential informer and defendant did not have the burden of proving the materiality or necessity of the witness's testimony. Swint v. State, 199 Ga. App. 515, 405 S.E.2d 333 (1991).

In a prosecution for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, the trial court did not err in not revealing the identity of a confidential informant since the informant's testimony was not material to the issue of guilt or punishment as the defendant was not charged with selling cocaine to the informant and the informant was not present during the search and arrest and was neither a participant in nor a witness to the specific offense with which the defendant was charged. Turner v. State, 247 Ga. App. 775, 544 S.E.2d 765 (2001).

Nondisclosure grounded in public policy. — Privilege of not disclosing sources of information in criminal cases is grounded in a sound public policy which recognizes the need for informants in the enforcement of the criminal laws and the further consideration that revelation of the identity of an informer destroys the informer's usefulness for any other cases. Stanford v. State, 134 Ga. App. 61, 213 S.E.2d 519 (1975).

When the possible testimony of an informant would be of minimal significance to a defendant and when the information provided is mere evidence tending to establish a public nuisance, the public policy in favor of nondisclosure of the informant's identity must control. Chancey v. Hancock, 233 Ga. 734, 213 S.E.2d 633 (1975).

Public policy underlying this privilege is to protect and encourage the flow of information to law enforcement officials. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, later appeal, 239 Ga. 693, 238 S.E.2d 376 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1073, 98 S. Ct. 1260, 55 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1978).

Absolute privilege against disclosure not permitted. — An absolute privilege against disclosure of the identity of every informer who supplies the information upon which an arrest is based is impermissible when a motion is made to disclose information favorable to the defendant. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, later appeal, 239 Ga. 693, 238 S.E.2d 376 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1073, 98 S. Ct. 1260, 55 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1978).

Disclosure of informant's identity is discretionary with court. — Disclosure of the name, address, etc., of an informant is not required as a matter of law, but rests in the discretion of the trial judge, balancing the rights of the defendant and the rights of the state under all the facts and circumstances. Taylor v. State, 136 Ga. App. 31, 220 S.E.2d 49 (1975); State v. Keith, 139 Ga. App. 399, 228 S.E.2d 332 (1976), aff'd, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977); Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, later appeal, 239 Ga. 693, 238 S.E.2d 376 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1073, 98 S. Ct. 1260, 55 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1978); Hatcher v. State, 154 Ga. App. 770, 270 S.E.2d 16 (1980); Miller v. State, 163 Ga. App. 889, 296 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

Disclosure not warranted if informant is mere tipster. — If the state proves to the court's satisfaction that an informer is a pure tipster, who has neither participated in nor witnessed the offense, any evidence the informer might offer would be hearsay and inadmissible. Thus, the tipster's identity could not be material to the guilt or innocence of the defendant or be relevant and helpful to the defense. The public policy of the state toward nondisclosure would not be overcome and the state may rely on the privilege. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, later appeal, 239 Ga. 693, 238 S.E.2d 376 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1073, 98 S. Ct. 1260, 55 L. Ed. 2d 778 (1978).

When the interviewing officer testified that the tipster had no personal knowledge of the crime and was merely repeating the conversation of an unknown person the tipster had overheard at a party, and where the tipster's information was not supportable by any evidence the police were able to uncover, the state was empowered to refuse to identify the tipster on the ground that the tipster's contribution was not material to the defense on the issue of guilt or punishment. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1979).

Disclosure not warranted if informant's life threatened. — If the district attorney objects to a question asking whether a "responsible citizen" in an affidavit is a particular person, and states that the lives of the informants had been threatened and requests the court not to require the witness to name them, there is no error in a court's refusing to disclose the name of the person who gave the information. Pass v. State, 227 Ga. 730, 182 S.E.2d 779 (1971).

Informant and decoy compared. — When a person merely takes an undercover police officer to a location and identifies, or introduces the officer to the defendant, and the officer arranges for and buys contraband from the defendant, and the person witnesses such sale, or alleged sale, such person is an informant and not a “decoy” and a disclosure of one's name, address, etc., to the defendant is not required as a matter of law but rests in the discretion of the trial judge, balancing the rights of the defendant and the rights of the state under all the facts and circumstances. Bell v. State, 141 Ga. App. 277, 233 S.E.2d 253 (1977); Miller v. State, 141 Ga. App. 382, 233 S.E.2d 460 (1977); Howard v. State, 144 Ga. App. 208, 240 S.E.2d 908 (1977).

Disclosure by unofficial. — Newspaper reporter cannot claim an exemption from answering material questions on the ground that the reporter promised not to divulge the name of the informant. Plunkett v. Hamilton, 136 Ga. 72, 70 S.E. 781, 35 L.R.A.

(n. s.) 583, 1972B Ann. Cas. 1259 (1911).

Court must hear evidence before ordering disclosure. — Mere refusal of the state to disclose the identity of an informer does not authorize a trial judge to exercise the judge's discretion as to whether disclosure should be required when the judge hears no evidence as the judge was required to do under Ga. L. 1966, p. 567, § 13 (now O.C.G.A. § 17-5-30(b)). State v. Keith, 139 Ga. App. 399, 228 S.E.2d 332 (1976), aff'd, 238 Ga. 157, 231 S.E.2d 727 (1977).

Disclosure when informant is a witness or participant in trial. — See Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77 (1982).

Trial court exercised discretion in determining that witness need not disclose identity of informer. — See Carter v. State, 168 Ga. App. 6, 308 S.E.2d 30 (1983).

Failure to compel disclosure of informant not error. — Trial court does not err in failing to compel the state to disclose an informant's identity in camera at a motion to suppress hearing. Miller v. State, 169 Ga. App. 552, 314 S.E.2d 120 (1984).

Open Records Act. — “State matter” privilege did not exempt cost estimates of the DOT from disclosure under the Open Records Act. Hardaway Co. v. Rives, 262 Ga. 631, 422 S.E.2d 854 (1992).

24-9-28. Grant of immunity; refusal to testify treated as contempt.

(a) Whenever in the judgment of the Attorney General or any district attorney the testimony of any person or the production of evidence of any kind by any person in any criminal proceeding before a court or grand jury is necessary to the public interest, the Attorney General or the district attorney may request the superior court in writing to order that person to testify or produce the evidence. Upon order of the court that person shall not be excused on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination from testifying or producing any evidence required; but no testimony or other evidence required under the order or any information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or evidence may be used against the person in any proceedings or prosecution for a crime or offense concerning which he testified or produced evidence under court order. However, he may nevertheless be prosecuted or subjected to penalty or forfeiture for any perjury, false swearing, or contempt committed in testifying or failing to testify, or in producing or failing to produce evidence in accordance with the order but shall not be required to produce evidence that can be used in any other courts, including federal courts. Any order entered under this Code section shall be entered of record in the minutes of the court so as to afford a permanent record thereof; and any testimony given by a person pursuant to such order shall be transcribed and filed for permanent record in the office of the clerk of the court.

(b) If a person refuses to testify after being granted immunity from prosecution and after being ordered to testify as aforesaid, he may be adjudged in contempt and committed to the county jail until such time as he purges himself of contempt by testifying as ordered without regard to the expiration of the grand jury. If the grand jury before which he was ordered to testify has been dissolved, he may purge himself by testifying before the court. (Ga. L. 1975, p. 727, §§ 1, 2.)

ANALYSIS

GRANT OF IMMUNITY

REFUSAL TO TESTIFY

General Consideration

Disclosures used in other county. — County prosecutor’s agreement not to make derivative use of defendant’s disclosures of criminal conduct did not prevent prosecutor in another county from making use of those disclosures. Bryant v. State, 164 Ga. App. 555, 296 S.E.2d 792 (1982).

Discretion of court. — It was within the discretion of the trial court to order that a codefendant testify; however, the court abused the court’s discretion in refusing such order based upon the court’s own determination of the credibility of the witness since that issue is reserved for jury determination. State v. Mosher, 265 Ga. 666, 461 S.E.2d 219 (1995).

Cited in Downs v. State, 145 Ga. App. 588, 244 S.E.2d 113 (1978); Lemley v. State, 245 Ga. 350, 264 S.E.2d 881 (1980); Dampier v. State, 249 Ga. 299, 290 S.E.2d 431 (1982); Baker v. State, 162 Ga. App. 606, 292 S.E.2d 451 (1982); Hawkins v. State, 175 Ga. App. 606, 333 S.E.2d 870 (1985); Brock v. State, 179 Ga. App. 519, 347 S.E.2d 230 (1986); Lee v. King, 263 Ga. 116, 428 S.E.2d 326 (1993); Elliott v. State, 210 Ga. App. 717, 437

S.E.2d 490 (1993); Render v. State, 266 Ga. 490, 467 S.E.2d 528 (1996); In re J.B., 223 Ga. App. 429, 477 S.E.2d 874 (1996); Williams v. State, 234 Ga. App. 191, 506 S.E.2d 237 (1998); King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000); McNeal v. State, 281 Ga. 427, 637 S.E.2d 375 (2006).

Grant of Immunity

Effect. — Trial court’s grant of an order of immunity pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28 removed any right of the witness to invoke the privilege against self-incrimination. Willard v. State, 244 Ga. App. 469, 535 S.E.2d 820 (2000).

State’s interest outweighs defense’s need. — When the state was planning to proceed with the prosecution of defendant if defendant decided not to plead guilty, the state’s interest in denying use immunity to defendant outweighed the codefendant’s need for defendant’s testimony in a separate trial. House v. State, 203 Ga. App. 55, 416 S.E.2d 108, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 416 S.E.2d 108 (1992).

No denial of due process shown. — There was no denial of due process since the record shows defendant exercised the opportunity to cross-examine a witness and expressly waived defendant's right for further cross-examination after use immunity was offered to the witness. Eschena v. State, 203 Ga. App. 621, 417 S.E.2d 214, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 214 (1992).

Statute is limited to proceedings in which the right against self-incrimination can legitimately be raised. Smith v. State, 138 Ga. App. 683, 227 S.E.2d 84, aff'd, 237 Ga. 647, 229 S.E.2d 433 (1976).

Fact defendant had a pending motion for new trial which, if granted by the trial court or required by the appellate court, would have subjected defendant to the self-incrimination choice once again, did not preclude compelled testimony via immunity in a codefendant's trial. Lee v. State, 191 Ga. App. 882, 383 S.E.2d 366 (1989).

Prosecutor has the power to forego prosecution as long as the promise contains a "description of the crimes or transaction's" for which an individual is excused from prosecution and the promise is approved by the court. State v. Dean, 212 Ga. App. 724, 442 S.E.2d 830 (1994).

Statute does not authorize conditional grants of immunity. Corson v. Hames, 239 Ga. 534, 238 S.E.2d 75 (1977).

Statute authorizes only a grant of use and derivative use immunity. Corson v. Hames, 239 Ga. 534, 238 S.E.2d 75 (1977).

"Use and derivative use" immunity. — It was the intention of the General Assembly to grant "use and derivative use" immunity. Brooks v. State, 238 Ga. 435, 233 S.E.2d 208 (1977).

Statute does not authorize a grant of transactional immunity, i.e., immunity from prosecution. Corson v. Hames, 239 Ga. 534, 238 S.E.2d 75 (1977).

State is not required to grant immunity to codefendant in return for testimony. In re J.S.S., 168 Ga. App. 340, 308 S.E.2d 855 (1983).

Statute applies only if witness forfeits a right. — Although the language of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28 is theoretically broad enough to encompass all promises to forgo prosecution in exchange for evidence, there is no indication that the legislature intended the statute to apply except to the extraction of information in a situation in which the witness gives up a valuable right; the statute is intended to extend the requisite constitutional protection in such a case. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

No common-law transactional immunity exists in Georgia in the sense of the protection of a witness who gives up a valuable right. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Transactional immunity flowing from full disclosure of crime is not a matter of right but rests in the discretion of the court, which can determine whether the defendant has lived up to defendant's end of the bargain. Hanson v. State, 161 Ga. App. 536, 287 S.E.2d 764, aff'd, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Irrelevant that no conviction results. — State may contract with a criminal for the criminal's exemption from prosecution whether the party testified against is convicted or not. Hanson v. State, 161 Ga. App. 536, 287 S.E.2d 764, aff'd, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Conditions under which city may order employees to take polygraph test. — City may, without violating the employees' privilege against self-incrimination, order fire fighters or police officers to take a polygraph test and may discipline those who do not pass, as long as the employees are not coerced into taking the test, are not required to waive any constitutional rights, and the results are not to serve as a sole ground for any action against the employees, since the privilege against self-incrimination does not prevent a governmental unit from taking non-criminal disciplinary action against an employee on the basis of compelled testimony. Hester v. City of Milledgeville, 777 F.2d 1492 (11th Cir. 1985).

Rule that indictments returned by grand jury are not amendable by district attorney is not violated by grant of immunity. Kesler v. State, 249 Ga. 462, 291 S.E.2d 497 (1982).

Curative instruction removed prejudice of testimony about immunity. — When defendant testified in the trial of defendant's co-conspirators under a grant of immunity and a witness mentioned that fact in defendant's trial, even if such mention violated O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28, a curative instruction was sufficient to remove any potential prejudice. Robertson v. State, 268 Ga. 772, 493 S.E.2d 697 (1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1140, 118 S. Ct. 1845, 140 L. Ed. 2d 1095 (1998).

Refusal to Testify

No violation of immunity order occurred when, in trial for murder and hindering apprehension of a criminal, officer was asked by prosecutor whether defendant had testified at previous trial of another to everything defendant had told officer, to which the officer stated no, since the prosecutor was attempting to ensure that the testimony from the previous trial not be used in defendant's trial, and to clarify officer's response to earlier inquiry by defense counsel. Highfield v. State, 246 Ga. 478, 272 S.E.2d 62 (1980).

Appearance of immunized witness. — Defendants were not deprived of their right to effective cross-examination on the basis of the state's creation of an "unfavorable inference" through the appearance on the witness stand of a witness who had been granted immunity pursuant to subsection

(a) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28 and who refused to testify. Willard v. State, 244 Ga. App. 469, 535 S.E.2d 820 (2000).

Violation of immunity order found. — Trial court properly found defendant in contempt for refusing to testify against a codefendant after being granted testimonial immunity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28(a); an evidentiary hearing was not required prior to the grant of immunity, and the immunity removed any fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination. In the Interest of S.U., 269 Ga. App. 306, 603 S.E.2d 790 (2004).

Criminal contempt conviction reversed. — Defendant's criminal contempt conviction was reversed as the trial court relied on another court's ex parte immunity grant in ordering defendant to testify and neither court made a finding that defendant's testimony was "necessary to the public interest" as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28; the state had to grant a valid immunity as broad in scope as the privilege it replaced and to show the applicability of that state immunity to the witness. In re Long, 276 Ga. App. 306, 623 S.E.2d 181 (2005).

24-9-29. Veterinarians.

No veterinarian licensed under Chapter 50 of Title 43 shall be required to disclose any information concerning the veterinarian's care of an animal except on written authorization or other waiver by the veterinarian's client or on appropriate court order or subpoena. Any veterinarian releasing information under written authorization or other waiver by the client or under court order or subpoena shall not be liable to the client or any other person. The privilege provided by this Code section shall be waived to the extent that the veterinarian's client or the owner of the animal places the veterinarian's care and treatment of the animal or the nature and extent of injuries to the animal at issue in any civil or criminal proceeding. 24-9-30. Persons, companies, or other entities engaged in gathering or dissemination of news.

Any person, company, or other entity engaged in the gathering and dissemination of news for the public through a newspaper, book, magazine, or radio or television broadcast shall have a qualified privilege against disclosure of any information, document, or item obtained or prepared in the gathering or dissemination of news in any proceeding where the one asserting the privilege is not a party, unless it is shown that this privilege has been waived or that what is sought:

- (1) Is material and relevant;
- (2) Cannot be reasonably obtained by alternative means; and
- (3) Is necessary to the proper preparation or presentation of the case of a party seeking the information, document, or item. (Code 1981, § 24-9-30, enacted by Ga. L. 1990, p. 167, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Availability of information by alternative means. — State sought information state could reasonably have obtained by alternative means when several questions sought the identity of law enforcement officers and jailers who may have had public contact with the reporter or served as a confidential source. In re Paul, 270 Ga. 680, 513 S.E.2d 219 (1999).

Materiality and relevance. — State sought information that was not material or relevant when the state propounded interrogatories which inquired when and how the reporter found out that an attorney represented the defendant, whether the reporter advised the defendant of defendant's rights under Miranda or made promises to the defendant in exchange for the interview, whether the defendant referred to defendant's attorney during the interview, and why the reporter did not call the defendant's attorney to notify the attorney about the interview before the interview occurred and to inform the attorney about the interview after the interview took place. In re Paul, 270 Ga. 680, 513 S.E.2d 219 (1999).

Necessity of information for prosecution. — State failed to show that the reporter's testimony was necessary for the state to prosecute the defendant for murder where, although the state contended that the state needed the reporter's testimony to prove the defendant's mental state at the time the defendant made the incriminating admissions to the reporter, the state had already presented evidence at pre-trial hearings of the defendant's mental capacity and demeanor when the defendant confessed to police; not only did the state have at least two confessions on videotape, where the jury could observe the defendant, but the state also presented expert testimony of a forensic psychiatrist at the Jackson-Denno hearing concerning the defendant's competency to stand trial and whether defendant was suffering from any mental illness or delusion. In re Paul, 270 Ga. 680, 513 S.E.2d 219 (1999).

Courtroom gossip or speculation. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-30 was not meant to be used to uncover the source of mere courtroom gossip or speculation. Nobles v. State, 201 Ga. App. 483, 411 S.E.2d 294, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 411 S.E.2d 294 (1991).

Privilege properly invoked. — Trial court did not err by allowing a reporter who declined to reveal "confidential sources" in the sheriff's department to invoke the privilege created by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-30 since the evidence showed that there were fewer than a dozen former employees of the sheriff's office in the relevant time period, and that the defense team made no effort to contact any of the employees. Stripling v. State, 261 Ga. 1, 401 S.E.2d 500 (1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 985, 112 S. Ct. 593, 116 L. Ed. 2d 617 (1991).

Privilege not waived by partial disclosure. — Reporter did not waive reporter's qualified privilege against disclosure of reporter's confidential sources and unpublished information by writing a news article based on the reporter's interview with the defendant; publication of part of the information gathered does not waive the privilege as to all of the information gathered on the same subject matter because it would chill the free flow of information to the public. In re Paul, 270 Ga. 680, 513 S.E.2d 219 (1999).

Appeal. — Non-parties engaged in news gathering may file a direct appeal of an order denying the parties the statutory reporter's privilege under the collateral order exception to the final judgment rule. In re Paul, 270 Ga. 680, 513 S.E.2d 219 (1999).

24-9-40. When medical information may be released by physician, hospital, health care facility, or pharmacist; immunity from liability; waiver of privilege; psychiatrists and hospitals excepted.

(a) No physician licensed under Chapter 34 of Title 43 and no hospital or health care facility, including those operated by an agency or bureau of the state or other governmental unit, shall be required to release any medical information concerning a patient except to the Department of Community Health, its divisions, agents, or successors when required in the administration of public health programs pursuant to Code Section 31-12-2 and where authorized or required by law, statute, or lawful regulation; or on written authorization or other waiver by the patient, or by his or her parents or duly appointed guardian ad litem in the case of a minor, or on appropriate court order or subpoena; provided, however, that any physician, hospital, or health care facility releasing information under written authorization or other waiver by the patient, or by his or her parents or guardian ad litem in the case of a minor, or pursuant to law, statute, or lawful regulation, or under court order or subpoena shall not be liable to the patient or any other person; provided, further, that the privilege shall be waived to the extent that the patient places his care and treatment or the nature and extent of his injuries at issue in any civil or criminal proceeding. This Code section shall not apply to psychiatrists or to hospitals in which the patient is being or has been treated solely for mental illness.

(b) No pharmacist licensed under Chapter 4 of Title 26 shall be required to release any medical information concerning a patient except on written authorization or other waiver by the patient, or by his or her parents or duly appointed guardian ad litem in the case of a minor, or upon appropriate court order or subpoena; provided, however, that any pharmacist releasing information under written authorization or other waiver by the patient, or by his or her parents or duly appointed guardian ad litem in the case of a minor, or upon appropriate court order or subpoena shall not be liable to the patient or any other person; provided, further, that the privilege shall be waived to the extent that the patient places his or her care and treatment or the nature and extent of his or her injuries at issue in any administrative, civil, or criminal proceeding. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Federal law preempts state law. — Regulations enacted under 42 U.S.C. § 1320d-2(d)(2)(A) of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) preempt O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40(a) with regard to ex parte communications between defense counsel and a plaintiff’s prior treating physicians because HIPAA affords patients more control over their medical records than § 24-9-40(a) when it comes to informal contacts between litigants and physicians. Moreland v. Austin, 284 Ga. 730, 670 S.E.2d 68 (2008).

Fact of employment is not within the physician-patient privilege. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

Employee and company-appointed physician. — No physician-patient relationship existed between an employee and a company-appointed physician retained to give the employee a return to work physical.

Payne v. Sherrer, 217 Ga. App. 761, 458 S.E.2d 916 (1995).

Employment agreement regarding confidential medical issues. — Medical director’s agreement to abide by policies of contract employer in order to obtain patient privileges at its hospital constituted a waiver under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40 of an action for the contract employer’s alleged failure to keep the medical director’s test result records showing the medical director had tested positive for an infectious disease confidential as the agreement permitted authorized hospital representatives and staff to provide and act upon information bearing on the medical director’s professional ability and qualifications, and the medical director agreed to waive all legal claims related to such disclosure. Nelson v. Glynn-Brunswick Hosp. Auth., 257 Ga. App. 571, 571 S.E.2d 557 (2002).

Applicability of physician shield law to physicians generally and to psychiatrists. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40 read with O.C.G.A. § 24-9-21(5) reflects that the physician shield law applies to physicians generally but requires physicians to release information upon proper order, whereas the confidentiality of communications to psychiatrists is protected by public policy and such communications are expressly excepted from the shield statute. Gilmore v. State, 175 Ga. App. 376, 333 S.E.2d 210 (1985).

Transmittal of records to health care professional performing subsequent treatment. — Psychologist who performed the neuropsychological testing and evaluation did not violate the patient's policy rights either by transmitting the records in question to the health care professional who took over the patient's treatment or by discussing the case with that professional. Jarallah v. Schwartz, 202 Ga. App. 32, 413 S.E.2d 210 (1991), cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 906, 413 S.E.2d 210 (1992).

Subpoena of personal medical records. — In the absence of waiver and without notice to the accused or an opportunity to object, it is not "appropriate" under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40 for the state in a criminal case to subpoena a defendant's own personal medical records which are then in the possession of a physician, hospital, or health care facility. King v. State, 272 Ga. 788, 535 S.E.2d 492 (2000).

Unlike the fourth amendment, which requires that the state have probable cause prior to the seizure of an accused or an accused's property, O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40(a) does not contain any express limits on the use of a subpoena to obtain a defendant's medical records for possible introduction as evidence in a criminal proceeding; therefore, defendant was not entitled to notice of a search warrant and an opportunity to object prior to the state's receipt of defendant's private medical records. King v. State, 276 Ga. 126, 577 S.E.2d 764 (2003).

Psychiatrist-patient communications absolutely privileged. — Legislature has clearly expressed legislature's intent that, as a matter of public policy, psychiatrist-patient communications are to be privileged and are to remain privileged even though the patient's "care and treatment or the nature and extent of his injuries [have been put] at issue in any civil or criminal proceeding," such that communications between a deceased patient and the psychiatrist did not lose their privileged character and were not discoverable merely because they were the most objective evidence of the relevant issue of the decedent's mental state. Dynin v. Hall, 207 Ga. App. 337, 428 S.E.2d 89 (1993).

Criminal defense attorney who subpoenaed records from a psychiatric hospital was entitled to rely on the presumption that the records the attorney received from the hospital were either non-privileged or that the hospital first obtained a waiver from the patient. Karpowicz v. Hyles, 247 Ga. App. 292, 543 S.E.2d 51 (2000).

Dentist is not immune from liability under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40; however, if the defendant complies in good faith with a production request, or if the defendant has been compelled to comply by a court, the defendant is shielded from liability for the disclosure under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-44. McFarlin v. Taylor, 187 Ga. App. 54, 369 S.E.2d 330 (1988).

Trial court did not err in admitting testimony of a family practice physician from whom the defendant sought psychiatric referral two days after an alleged rape and who also consulted with the victim and attempted an examination of her pelvic area. Barnes v. State, 171 Ga. App. 478, 320 S.E.2d 597 (1984).

Past recollections within medical record inadmissible. — If the original of the medical record itself is admissible but diagnostic opinions and conclusions therein are inadmissible, past recollection recorded by a doctor of a patient's medical history contained in a medical record, which included a diagnostic opinion of another doctor, would be inadmissible. Stoneridge Properties, Inc. v. Kuper, 178 Ga. App. 409, 343 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

Filing of action as waiver. — Once plaintiff filed action questioning the nature and quality of medical treatment rendered to plaintiff's child, the plaintiff waived the child's qualified right to privacy implicit in the Hippocratic oath, and doctor having source of information pertaining to that action was authorized to release information pertaining thereto and was immune from liability to the patient or any other person for release of that information. Orr v. Sievert, 162 Ga. App. 677, 292 S.E.2d 548 (1982).

Fact that plaintiff was seeking to recover damages for injuries of a mental and emotional nature would not constitute a waiver of the privilege to exclude testimony of a psychiatrist. Wilson v. Bonner, 166 Ga. App. 9, 303 S.E.2d 134 (1983).

Communications to coordinate care. — Trial court properly directed a verdict in favor of the defendant, a psychiatrist, with regard to the plaintiff's invasion of privacy complaint, which asserted that the defendant's letters to the other treating physicians of the plaintiff violated the plaintiff's right to privacy because the evidence established that the information in the three letters disclosed to the plaintiff's other treating physicians was disclosed in an attempt to coordinate care; the sharing of the information did not amount to a public disclosure and there was no evidence that the other treating physicians shared the information with anyone else. Haughton v. Canning, 287 Ga. App. 28, 650 S.E.2d 718 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 157 (Ga. 2008).

Names and addresses of stop-smoking clinic patients not privileged information. — When the trial court ordered the defendant stop smoking clinic to produce the names and addresses of all persons who received the clinic's stop smoking treatment, the trial court was authorized to order disclosure of any relevant, nonprivileged information, and as the information sought by plaintiffs was not privileged there was no reversible error in the trial court's decision. National Stop Smoking Clinic-Atlanta, Inc. v. Dean, 190 Ga. App. 289, 378 S.E.2d 901 (1989).

Whether defendant had AIDS placed "at issue." — Defendant, who was charged with aggravated assault with intent to murder after biting a police officer, placed "at issue" the issue of AIDS by defendant's conduct in committing an act which was inextricably linked to the question of defendant having AIDS. Scroggins v. State, 198 Ga. App. 29, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1991).

24-9-40.1. Confidential nature of AIDS information.

AIDS confidential information as defined in Code Section 31-22-9.1 and disclosed or discovered within the patient-physician relationship shall be confidential and shall not be disclosed except as otherwise provided in Code Section 24-9-47. (Code 1981, § 24-9-40.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1988, p. 1799, § 6.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1988, p. 1799, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: "The General Assembly finds that Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS) and its causative agent, including Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), pose a grave threat to the health, safety, and welfare of the people of this state. In the absence of any effective vaccination or treatment for this disease, it threatens almost certain death to all who contract it. The disease is largely transmitted through sexual contacts and intravenous drug use, not through casual contact, and, while deadly, is therefore preventable. The key component of the fight against AIDS is education. Through public education and counseling our citizens can learn how the disease is transmitted and, thus, how to protect themselves and prevent its spread. The Department of Human Resources is encouraged to continue its efforts to educate all Georgians about the disease, its causative agent, and its means of transmission. In addition, voluntary testing should be encouraged for anyone who feels at risk of infection. While education, counseling, and voluntary testing are vital to the elimination of this epidemic, other measures are needed to protect the health of our citizens, and it is the intention of the General Assembly to enact such measures in the exercise of its police powers in order to deal with AIDS and HIV infection.”

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Use of pseudonyms. — When a patient filed suit solely alleging that the improper disclosure of HIV confidential information and the non-disclosure exception of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-47(y) did not apply, a trial court retained discretion to determine if the patient could prosecute a case under a pseudonym. Doe v. Hall, 260 Ga. App. 421, 579 S.E.2d 838 (2003).

24-9-40.2. Confidentiality of raw research data.

(a) The General Assembly finds and declares that protecting the confidentiality of research data from disclosure in administrative proceedings, civil and criminal judicial proceedings, and quasi-judicial proceedings is essential to safeguarding the integrity of research in this state, guaranteeing the privacy of individuals who participate in research projects, and ensuring the continuation of research in science, medicine, and other fields that benefits the citizens and institutions of Georgia and other states. The protection of such research data has more than local significance, is of equal importance to all citizens of the state, is of state-wide concern, and consequently is properly a matter for regulation under the police power of the state.

(b) As used in this Code section, the term “confidential raw research data” means medical information, interview responses, reports, statements, memoranda, or other data relating to the condition, treatment, or characteristics of any person which is gathered by or provided to a researcher:

- (1) In support of a research study approved by an appropriate research oversight committee of a hospital, health care facility, or educational institution; and
- (2) With the objective to develop, study, or report aggregate or anonymous information not intended to be used in any way in which the identity of an individual is material to the results.

The term does not include published compilations of the raw research data created by the researcher or the researcher’s published summaries, findings, analyses, or conclusions related to the research study.

(c) Confidential raw research data in a researcher’s possession shall not be subject to subpoena, otherwise discoverable, or deemed admissible as evidence in any administrative, civil, criminal, or other judicial proceeding in any court except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this Code section.

(d) Confidential raw research data may be released, disclosed, subject to subpoena, otherwise discoverable, or deemed admissible as evidence in a judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding as follows:

(1) Confidential raw research data related to a person may be disclosed to that person or to another person on such person's behalf where the authority is otherwise specifically provided by law;

(2) Confidential raw research data related to a person may be disclosed to any person or legal entity designated to receive that information when that designation is made in writing by the research participant or where a designation is made in writing by a person authorized by law to act for the participant;

(3) Confidential raw research data related to a person may be disclosed to any agency or department of the federal government, this state, or any political subdivision of this state if those data are required by law or regulation to be reported to that agency or department;

(4) Confidential raw research data may be disclosed in any proceeding in which a party was a participant, researcher, or sponsor in the underlying research study, including but not limited to any judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding in which a research participant places his or her care, treatment, injuries, insurance coverage, or benefit plan coverage at issue; provided, however, that the identity of any research participant other than the party to the judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding shall not be disclosed, unless the researcher or sponsor is a defendant in the case;

(5) Confidential raw research data may be disclosed in any proceeding in which the researcher has either volunteered to testify or has been hired to testify as an expert by one of the parties to the proceeding; and

(6) In a criminal proceeding, the court shall order the production of confidential raw research data if the data are relevant to any issue in the proceeding, impose appropriate safeguards against unauthorized disclosure of the data, and admit confidential raw research data into evidence if the data are material to the defense or prosecution.

(e) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed to permit, require, or prohibit the disclosure of confidential raw research data in any setting other than an administrative, judicial, or quasi-judicial proceeding that is governed by the requirements of this title.

(f) Any disclosure of confidential raw research data authorized or required by this Code section or any other law shall in no way destroy the confidential nature of that data except for the purpose for which the authorized or required disclosure is made. (Code 1981, § 24-9-40.2, enacted by Ga. L. 1999, p. 516, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1372, § 1.)

Cross references. — Use of confidential, classified, or restricted records for research, § 50-18-101.

24-9-41. Disclosure of medical records — Terms defined.

As used in this Code section and Code Sections 24-9-42 through 24-9-45, the term:

(1) “Confidential or privileged” means the protection afforded by law from unauthorized disclosure, whether the protection is afforded by law as developed and applied by the courts, by statute or lawful regulations, or by the requirements of the Constitutions of the State of Georgia or the United States. The term “confidential or privileged” also includes protection afforded by law from compulsory process or testimony.

(2) “Disclosure” means the act of transmitting or communicating medical matter to a person who would not otherwise have access thereto.

(3) “Health care facility” means any institution or place in which health care is rendered to persons, which health care includes but is not limited to medical, psychiatric, acute, intermediate, rehabilitative, and long-term care.

(4) “Laws requiring disclosure” means laws and statutes of the State of Georgia and of the United States and lawful regulations issued by any department or agency of the State of Georgia or of the United States which require the review, analysis, or use of medical matter by persons not originally having authorized access thereto. The term “laws requiring disclosure” also includes any authorized practice of disclosure for purposes of evaluating claims for reimbursement for charges or expenses under any public or private reimbursement or insurance program.

(5) “Limited consent to disclosure” means proper authorization given by or on behalf of a person entitled to protection from disclosure of medical matter and given for a specific purpose related to such person’s health or related to such person’s application for insurance or like benefits.

(6) “Medical matter” means information respecting the medical or psychiatric condition, including without limitation the physical and the mental condition, of a natural person or persons, however recorded, obtained, or communicated.

(6.1) “Nurse” means a person authorized by license issued under Chapter 26 of Title 43 as a registered professional nurse or licensed practical nurse to practice nursing.

(7) “Physician” means any person lawfully licensed in this state to practice medicine and surgery pursuant to Chapter 34 of Title 43. (Ga. L. 1974, p. 595, § 1; Ga. L. 1995, p. 10, § 24; Ga. L. 2004, p. 466, § 5.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

24-9-45. Disclosure of medical records — Use for educational purposes not precluded.

Nothing in Code Sections 24-9-41 through 24-9-44 and this Code section shall be construed to prevent the customary and usual audit, discussion, and presentation of cases in connection with medical and public education. (Ga. L. 1974, p. 595, § 5; Ga. L. 1995, p. 10, § 24.)

24-9-46. Confidential nature of certain library records.

(a) Circulation and similar records of a library which identify the user of library materials shall not be public records but shall be confidential and may not be disclosed except:

- (1) To members of the library staff in the ordinary course of business;
- (2) Upon written consent of the user of the library materials or the user's parents or guardian if the user is a minor or ward; or
- (3) Upon appropriate court order or subpoena.

(b) Any disclosure authorized by subsection (a) of this Code section or any unauthorized disclosure of materials made confidential by that subsection (a) shall not in any way destroy the confidential nature of that material, except for the purpose for which an authorized disclosure is made. A person disclosing material as authorized by subsection (a) of this Code section shall not be liable therefor. (Code 1981, § 24-9-46, enacted by Ga. L. 1987, p. 595, § 1.)

24-9-47. Disclosure of AIDS confidential information.

(a) Any term used in this Code section and defined in Code Section 31-22-9.1 shall have the meaning provided for such term in Code Section 31-22-9.1.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this Code section:

(1) No person or legal entity which receives AIDS confidential information pursuant to this Code section or which is responsible for recording, reporting, or maintaining AIDS confidential information shall:

(A) Intentionally or knowingly disclose that information to another person or legal entity; or

(B) Be compelled by subpoena, court order, or other judicial process to disclose that information to another person or legal entity; and

(2) No person or legal entity which receives AIDS confidential information which that person or legal entity knows was disclosed in violation of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall:

(A) Intentionally or knowingly disclose that information to another person or legal entity; or

(B) Be compelled by subpoena, court order, or other judicial process to disclose that information to another person or legal entity.

(c) AIDS confidential information may be disclosed to the person identified by that information or, if that person is a minor or incompetent person, to that person's parent or legal guardian.

(d) AIDS confidential information may be disclosed to any person or legal entity designated to receive that information when that designation is made in writing by the person identified by that information or, if that person is a minor or incompetent person, by that person's parent or legal guardian.

(e) AIDS confidential information may be disclosed to any agency or department of the federal government, this state, or any political subdivision of this state if that information is authorized or required by law to be reported to that agency or department.

(f) The results of an HIV test may be disclosed to the person, or that person's designated representative, who ordered such tests of the body fluids or tissue of another person.

(g) When the patient of a physician has been determined to be infected with HIV and that patient's physician reasonably believes that the spouse or sexual partner or any child of the patient, spouse, or sexual partner is a person at risk of being infected with HIV by that patient, the physician may disclose to that spouse, sexual partner, or child that the patient has been determined to be infected with HIV, after first attempting to notify the patient that such disclosure is going to be made.

(h)(1) An administrator of an institution licensed as a hospital by the Department of Community Health or a physician having a patient who has been determined to be infected with HIV may disclose to the Department of Community Health:

(A) The name and address of that patient;

(B) That such patient has been determined to be infected with HIV; and

(C) The name and address of any other person whom the disclosing physician or administrator reasonably believes to be a person at risk of being infected with HIV by that patient.

(2) When mandatory and nonanonymous reporting of confirmed positive HIV tests to the Department of Community Health is determined by that department to be reasonably necessary, that department shall establish by regulation a date on and after which such reporting shall be required. On and after the date so established, each health care provider, health care facility, or any other person or legal entity which orders an HIV test for another person shall report to the Department of Community Health the name and address of any person thereby determined to be infected with HIV. No such report shall be made regarding any confirmed positive HIV test provided at any anonymous HIV test site operated by or on behalf of the Department of Community Health.

(3) The Department of Community Health may disclose that a person has been reported, under paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection, to have been determined to be infected with HIV to the board of health of the county in which that person resides or is located if reasonably necessary to protect the health and safety of that person or other persons who may have come in contact with the body fluids of the HIV infected person. The Department of Community Health or county board of health to which information is disclosed pursuant to this paragraph or paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection:

(A) May contact any person named in such disclosure as having been determined to be an HIV infected person for the purpose of counseling that person and requesting therefrom the name of any other person who may be a person at risk of being infected with HIV by that HIV infected person;

(B) May contact any other person reasonably believed to be a person at risk of being infected with HIV by that HIV infected person for the purposes of disclosing that such infected person has been determined to be infected with HIV and counseling such person to submit to an HIV test; and

(C) Shall contact and provide counseling to the spouse of any HIV infected person whose name is thus disclosed if both persons are reasonably likely to have engaged in sexual intercourse or any other act determined by the department likely to have resulted in the transmission of HIV between such persons within the preceding seven years and if that spouse may be located and contacted without undue difficulty.

(i) Any health care provider authorized to order an HIV test may disclose AIDS confidential information regarding a patient thereof if that disclosure is made to a health care provider or health care facility which has provided, is providing, or will provide any health care service to that patient and as a result of such provision of service that health care provider or facility:

(1) Has personnel or patients who may be persons at risk of being infected with HIV by that patient, if that patient is an HIV infected person and such disclosure is reasonably necessary to protect any such personnel or patients from that risk; or

(2) Has a legitimate need for that information in order to provide that health care service to that patient.

(j) A health care provider or any other person or legal entity authorized but not required to disclose AIDS confidential information pursuant to this Code section shall have no duty to make such disclosure and shall not be liable to the patient or any other person or legal entity for failing to make such disclosure. A health care provider or any other person or legal entity which discloses information as authorized or required by this Code section or as authorized or required by law or rules or regulations made pursuant thereto shall have no civil or criminal liability therefor.

(k) When any person or legal entity is authorized or required by this Code section or any other law to disclose AIDS confidential information to a person at risk of being infected with HIV and that person at risk is a minor or incompetent person, such disclosure may be made to any parent or legal guardian of the minor or incompetent person, to the minor or incompetent person, or to both the minor or incompetent person and any parent or legal guardian thereof.

(l) When an institutional care facility is the site at which a person is at risk of being infected with HIV and as a result of that risk a disclosure of AIDS confidential information to any person at risk at that site is authorized or required under this Code section or any other law, such disclosure may be made to the person at risk or to that institutional care facility's chief administrative or executive officer, or such officer's designee, in which case that officer or designee is authorized to make such disclosure to the person at risk.

(m) When a disclosure of AIDS confidential information is authorized or required by this Code section to be made to a physician, health care provider, or legal entity, that disclosure may be made to employees of that physician, health care provider, or legal entity who have been designated thereby to receive such information on behalf thereof. Those designated employees may thereafter disclose to and provide for the disclosure of that information among such other employees of that physician, health care provider, or legal entity, but such disclosures among those employees are only authorized when reasonably necessary in the ordinary course of business to carry out the purposes for which that disclosure is authorized or required to be made to that physician, health care provider, or legal entity.

(n) Any disclosure of AIDS confidential information authorized or required by this Code section or any other law and any unauthorized disclosure of such information shall in no way destroy the confidential nature of that information except for the purpose for which the authorized or required disclosure is made.

(o) Any person or legal entity which violates subsection (b) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(p) Nothing in this Code section or any other law shall be construed to authorize the disclosure of AIDS confidential information if that disclosure is prohibited by federal law, or regulations promulgated thereunder, nor shall anything in this Code section or any other law be construed to prohibit the disclosure of information which would be AIDS confidential information except that such information does not permit the identification of any person.

(q) A public safety agency or district attorney may obtain the results from an HIV test to which the person named in the request has submitted under Code Section 15-11-66.1, 17-10-15, 42-5-52.1, or 42-9-42.1, notwithstanding that the results may be contained in a sealed record.

(r) Any person or legal entity required by an order of a court to disclose AIDS confidential information in the custody or control of such person or legal entity shall disclose that information as required by that order.

(s) AIDS confidential information may be disclosed as medical information pursuant to Code Section 24-9-40, relating to the release of medical information, or pursuant to any other law which authorizes or requires the disclosure of medical information if:

(1) The person identified by that information:

(A) Has consented in writing to that disclosure; or

(B) Has been notified of the request for disclosure of that information at least ten days prior to the time the disclosure is to be made and does not object to such disclosure prior to the time specified for that disclosure in that notice; or

(2) A superior court in an in camera hearing finds by clear and convincing evidence a compelling need for the information which cannot be accommodated by other means. In assessing compelling need, the court shall weigh the public health, safety, or welfare needs or any other public or private need for the disclosure against the privacy interest of the person identified by the information and the public interest which may be disserved by disclosures which may deter voluntary HIV tests. If the court determines that disclosure of that information is authorized under this paragraph, the court shall order that disclosure and impose appropriate safeguards against any unauthorized disclosure. The records of that hearing otherwise shall be under seal.

(t)(1) A superior court of this state may order a person or legal entity to disclose AIDS confidential information in its custody or control to:

(A) A prosecutor in connection with a prosecution for the alleged commission of reckless conduct under subsection (c) of Code Section 16-5-60;

(B) Any party in a civil cause of action; or

(C) A public safety agency or the Department of Community Health if that agency or department has an employee thereof who has, in the course of that employment, come in contact with the body fluids of the person identified by the AIDS confidential information sought in such a manner reasonably likely to cause that employee to become an HIV infected person and provided the disclosure is necessary for the health and safety of that employee, and for purposes of this subsection the term “petitioner for disclosure” means any person or legal entity specified in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of this paragraph.

(2) An order may be issued against a person or legal entity responsible for recording, reporting, or maintaining AIDS confidential information to compel the disclosure of that information if the petitioner for disclosure demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence a compelling need for the information which cannot be accommodated by other means. In assessing compelling need, the court shall weigh the public health, safety, or welfare needs or any other public or private need for the disclosure against the privacy interest of the person identified by the information and the public interest which may be disserved by disclosures which may deter voluntary HIV tests.

(3) A petition seeking disclosure of AIDS confidential information under this subsection shall substitute a pseudonym for the true name of the person concerning whom the information is sought. The disclosure to the parties of that person’s true name shall be communicated confidentially, in documents not filed with the court.

(4) Before granting any order under this subsection, the court shall provide the person concerning whom the information is sought with notice and a reasonable opportunity to participate in the proceedings if that person is not already a party.

(5) Court proceedings as to disclosure of AIDS confidential information under this subsection shall be conducted in camera unless the person concerning whom the information is sought agrees to a hearing in open court.

(6) Upon the issuance of an order that a person or legal entity be required to disclose AIDS confidential information regarding a person named in that order, that person or entity so ordered shall disclose to the ordering court any such information which is in the control or custody of that person or entity and which relates to the person named in the order for the court to make an in camera inspection thereof. If the court determines from that inspection that the person named in the order is an HIV infected person, the court shall disclose to the petitioner for disclosure that determination and shall impose appropriate safeguards against unauthorized disclosure which shall specify the persons who may have access to the information, the purposes for which the information shall be used, and appropriate prohibitions on future disclosure.

(7) The record of the proceedings under this subsection shall be sealed by the court.

(8) An order may not be issued under this subsection against the Department of Community Health, any county board of health, or any anonymous HIV test site operated by or on behalf of that department.

(u) A health care provider, health care facility, or other person or legal entity who, in violation of this Code section, unintentionally discloses AIDS confidential information, notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures thereby which are reasonably adopted to avoid risk of such disclosure, shall not be civilly or criminally liable, unless such disclosure was due to gross negligence or wanton and willful misconduct.

(v) AIDS confidential information may be disclosed when that disclosure is otherwise authorized or required by Code Section 42-1-6, if AIDS or HIV infection is the communicable disease at issue, or when that disclosure is otherwise authorized or required by any law which specifically refers to "AIDS confidential information," "HIV test results," or any similar language indicating a legislative intent to disclose information specifically relating to AIDS or HIV.

(w) A health care provider who has received AIDS confidential information regarding a patient from the patient's health care provider directly or indirectly under the provisions of subsection (i) of this Code section may disclose that information to a health care provider which has provided, is providing, or will provide any health care service to that patient and as a result of that provision of service that health care provider:

(1) Has personnel or patients who may be persons at risk of being infected with HIV by that patient, if that patient is an HIV infected person and such disclosure is reasonably necessary to protect any such personnel or patients from that risk; or

(2) Has a legitimate need for that information in order to provide that health care service to that patient.

(x) Neither the Department of Community Health nor any county board of health shall disclose AIDS confidential information contained in its records unless such disclosure is authorized or required by this Code section or any other law, except that such information in those records shall not be a public record and shall not be subject to disclosure through subpoena, court order, or other judicial process.

(y) The protection against disclosure provided by Code Section 24-9-40.1 shall be waived and AIDS confidential information may be disclosed to the extent that the person identified by such information, his heirs, successors, assigns, or a beneficiary of such person, including but not limited to an executor, administrator, or personal representative of such person's estate:

(1) Files a claim or claims other entitlements under any insurance policy or benefit plan or is involved in any civil proceeding regarding such claim;

(2) Places such person's care and treatment, the nature and extent of his injuries, the extent of his damages, his medical condition, or the reasons for his death at issue in any civil or criminal proceeding; or

(3) Is involved in a dispute regarding coverage under any insurance policy or benefit plan.

(z) AIDS confidential information may be collected, used, and disclosed by an insurer in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 39 of Title 33, relating to the collection, use, and disclosure of information gathered by insurance institutions.

(aa) In connection with any civil or criminal action in which AIDS confidential information is disclosed as authorized or required by this Code section, the party to whom that information is thereby disclosed may subpoena any person to authenticate such AIDS confidential information, establish a chain of custody relating thereto, or otherwise testify regarding that information, including but not limited to testifying regarding any notifications to the patient regarding results of an HIV test. The provisions of this subsection shall apply as to records, personnel, or both of the Department of Community Health or a county board of health notwithstanding Code Section 50-18-72, but only as to test results obtained by a prosecutor under subsection (q) of this Code section and to be used thereby in a prosecution for reckless conduct under subsection (c) of Code Section 16-5-60.

(bb) AIDS confidential information may be disclosed as a part of any proceeding or procedure authorized or required pursuant to Chapter 3, 4, or 7 of Title 37, regarding a person who is alleged to be or who is mentally ill, mentally retarded, or alcoholic or drug dependent, or as a part of any proceeding or procedure authorized or required pursuant to Title 29, regarding the guardianship of a person or that person's estate, as follows:

(1) Any person who files or transmits a petition or other document which discloses AIDS confidential information in connection with any such proceeding or procedure shall provide a cover page which contains only the type of proceeding or procedure, the court in which the proceeding or procedure is or will be pending, and the words "CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION" without in any way otherwise disclosing thereon the name of any individual or that such petition or other document specifically contains AIDS confidential information;

(2) AIDS confidential information shall only be disclosed pursuant to this subsection after disclosure to and with the written consent of the person identified by that information, or that person's parent or guardian if that person is a minor or has previously been adjudicated as being incompetent, or by order of court obtained in accordance with subparagraph (C) of paragraph (3) of this subsection;

(3) If any person files or transmits a petition or other document in connection with any such proceeding or procedure which discloses AIDS confidential information without obtaining consent as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the court receiving such information shall either obtain written consent as set forth in that paragraph (2) for any further use or disclosure of such information or:

(A) Return such petition or other document to the person who filed or transmitted same, with directions against further filing or transmittal of such information in connection with such proceeding or procedure except in compliance with this subsection;

(B) Delete or expunge all references to such AIDS confidential information from the particular petition or other document; or

(C)(i) If the court determines there is a compelling need for such information in connection with the particular proceeding or procedure, petition a superior court of competent jurisdiction for permission to obtain or disclose that information. If the person identified by the information is not yet represented by an attorney in the proceeding or procedure in connection with which the information is sought, the petitioning court shall appoint an attorney for such person. The petitioning court shall have both that person and that person's attorney personally served with notice of the petition and time and place of the superior court hearing thereon. Such hearing shall not be held sooner than 72 hours after service, unless the information is to be used in connection with an emergency guardianship proceeding under Code Section 29-4-14, in which event the hearing shall not be held sooner than 48 hours after service.

(ii) The superior court in which a petition is filed pursuant to division (i) of this subparagraph shall hold an in camera hearing on such petition. The purpose of the hearing shall be to determine whether there is clear and convincing evidence of a compelling need for the AIDS confidential information sought in connection with the particular proceeding or procedure which cannot be accommodated by other means. In assessing compelling need, the superior court shall weigh the public health, safety, or welfare needs or any other public or private need for the disclosure against the privacy interest of the person identified by the information and the public interest which may be disserved by disclosures which may deter voluntary HIV tests. If the court determines that disclosure of that information is authorized under this subparagraph, the court shall order that disclosure and impose appropriate safeguards against any unauthorized disclosure. The records of that hearing otherwise shall be under seal; and

(4) The court having jurisdiction over such proceeding or procedure, when it becomes apparent that AIDS confidential information will likely be or has been disclosed in connection with such proceeding or procedure, shall take such measures as the court determines appropriate to preserve the confidentiality of the disclosed information to the maximum extent possible. Such measures shall include, without being limited to, closing the proceeding or procedure to the public and sealing all or any part of the records of the proceeding or procedure containing AIDS confidential information. The records of any appeals taken from any such proceeding or procedure shall also be sealed. Furthermore, the court may consult with and obtain the advice of medical experts or other counsel or advisers as to the relevance and materiality of such information in such proceedings or procedures, so long as the identity of the person identified by such information is not thereby revealed. (Code 1981, § 24-9-47, enacted by Ga. L. 1988, p. 1799, § 6; Ga. L. 1989, p. 14, § 24; Ga. L. 1990, p. 705, § 1; Ga. L. 2000, p. 20, § 19; Ga. L. 2004, p. 161, § 5; Ga. The 2008 amendment, effective July 1, 2009, substituted “Department of Community Health” for “Department of Human Resources” in the introductory language of paragraph (h)(1).

The 2009 amendment, effective July 1, 2009, substituted “Department of Community Health” for “Department of Human Resources” throughout this Code section.

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 1988, p. 1799, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides: “The General Assembly finds that Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS) and its causative agent, including Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), pose a grave threat to the health, safety, and welfare of the people of this state. In the absence of any effective vaccination or treatment for this disease, it threatens almost certain death to all who contract it. The disease is largely transmitted through sexual contacts and intravenous drug use, not through casual contact, and, while deadly, is therefore preventable. The key component of the fight against AIDS is education. Through public education and counseling our citizens can learn how the disease is transmitted and, thus, how to protect themselves and prevent its spread. The Department of Human Resources is encouraged to continue its efforts to educate all Georgians about the disease, its causative agent, and its means of transmission. In addition, voluntary testing should be encouraged for anyone who feels at risk of infection. While education, counseling, and voluntary testing are vital to the elimination of this epidemic, other measures are needed to protect the health of our citizens, and it is the intention of the General Assembly to enact such measures in the exercise of its police powers in order to deal with AIDS and HIV infection.”

Ga. L. 2004, p. 161, § 16, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: “This Act shall become effective on July 1, 2005, and all appointments of guardians of the person or property made pursuant to former Title 29 shall continue in effect and shall thereafter be governed by the provisions of this Act.”

Mandatory nonanonymous HIV reporting was required by the Department of Human Resources pursuant to paragraph (2) of subsection (h), effective December 31, 2003.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Statute not intended as shield in prosecution for criminal conduct. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-47 was never intended to be a shield in a prosecution for criminal conduct involving the AIDS disease. Scroggins v. State, 198 Ga. App. 29, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1991).

Subparagraph (t)(1)(A) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-47 proves an overriding policy to facilitate prosecution of HIV-infected persons for criminal conduct with potential for endangering any member of society. The legislature’s failure in this directive to include prosecutions for a crime of wilful conduct by a person with the AIDS disease or HIV virus was an oversight. Scroggins v. State, 198 Ga. App. 29, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1991).

Defendant, who was charged with aggravated assault with intent to murder after biting a police officer, placed “at issue” the issue of AIDS by defendant’s conduct in committing an act which was inextricably linked to the question of defendant having AIDS. Scroggins v. State, 198 Ga. App. 29, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 401 S.E.2d 13 (1991).

Right of patient to keep HIV-infected status confidential. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to doctor who disclosed to HIV-infected dental hygienist’s employer, a dentist who occasionally provided the dental hygienist with free dental care, that the dental hygienist had tested positive for HIV as not only did the dental hygienist sign a consent form allowing disclosure, but the right of the dental hygienist to keep that status confidential was outweighed by the right of the doctor to disclose that status pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-47 to specified people in that statute so that those people could take appropriate precautions. Waddell v. Bhat, 257 Ga. App. 580, 571 S.E.2d 565 (2002).

Use of pseudonym in trial court’s discretion. — When a patient filed suit solely alleging that the improper disclosure of HIV confidential information under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-40.1 and the non-disclosure exception of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-47(y) did not apply, a trial court retained discretion to determine if the patient could prosecute a case under a pseudonym. Doe v. Hall, 260 Ga. App. 421, 579 S.E.2d 838 (2003).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discretion of court. — Examination of witnesses is a matter largely within the discretion of the court. National Land & Coal Co. v. Zugar, 171 Ga. 228, 155 S.E. 7 (1930).

Examination by more than one counsel. — Although a defendant has both a state and federal right to self-representation, when the defendant has counsel to represent the defendant, the trial court can require the examination and cross-examination of witnesses to be conducted by one counsel only. Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. 126, 269 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

Examination by judge. — Trial judge has the right to propound a question or series of questions to any witness for the purpose of developing fully the truth of the case; and the extent to which the examination conducted by the court shall go is a matter within the judge's discretion. Daniels v. State, 154 Ga. App. 323, 268 S.E.2d 376 (1980).

Lengthy examination of a witness by the court will not be cause for a new trial unless the court during the examination of the witness expresses an opinion on the facts of the case or the examination becomes argumentative. Daniels v. State, 154 Ga. App. 323, 268 S.E.2d 376 (1980).

Recall of witnesses. — Trial judge's discretion extends to allowing the state to reopen the case and recall a witness for the purpose of amplifying testimony previously given, and to allowing a witness to be recalled after the close of evidence to correct the witness's former testimony, which the witness contends was mistaken. Flynt v. State, 153 Ga. App. 232, 264 S.E.2d 669, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 888, 101 S. Ct. 245, 66 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1980).

It is within the discretionary power of the court to allow a witness to be sworn after the evidence on both sides has been announced closed and the argument has been commenced; and a liberal practice in this respect is most favorable to the ends of justice. Robinson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 591, 269 S.E.2d 86 (1980).

24-9-60. Oath or affirmation required.

The sanction of an oath or affirmation equivalent thereto shall be necessary to the reception of any oral evidence. The court may frame such affirmation according to the religious faith of the witness. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3786; Code 1868, § 3806; Code 1873, § 3862; Code 1882, § 3862; Civil Code 1895, § 5279; Civil Code 1910, § 5868; Code 1933, § 38-1701.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general. — In this state, an oath or affirmation is required of all witnesses, and unsworn statements are not treated as amounting to evidence, except in specified cases from necessity. Huiet v. Schwob Mfg. Co., 196 Ga. 855, 27 S.E.2d 743 (1943).

Children. — Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-5(b), which provides that in certain limited categories of cases a child is deemed legally competent to testify, the prerequisite administration of the oath otherwise called for by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-60 has been obviated when the child does not comprehend its nature. The child simply becomes an unsworn witness, made so because incapable of taking an oath. Bright v. State, 197 Ga. App. 784, 400 S.E.2d 18 (1990).

Testimony of competent child, not formerly sworn, admitted. — Testimony of a child witness who, in response to questioning by the state, demonstrated that the child was aware that the child was under an obligation to tell the truth and could have been punished for not doing so, and who was shown to be competent, was properly admitted although the child was not sworn where, after the preliminary questioning by the state, the defendant failed to request that the child be formally sworn and did not object to the child testifying. Hilson v. State, 204 Ga. App. 200, 418 S.E.2d 784 (1992).

Framing oath according to religious faith.

— It was not error to accept testimony of a witness who declined to take an oath, saying: “Well, I’m not going to swear but I promise to tell you the truth.” Chapman v. State, 257 Ga. 19, 354 S.E.2d 149 (1987).

Objection to lack of oath or affirmation.

— When a party, without objection, allows a witness to go on the stand and testify against the party without being first sworn, such party cannot, after verdict against the party, urge in this court the failure of the witness to take the oath as a ground for rejecting the brief of the evidence, which has the approval of the trial judge, since such objection was not raised in the court below. Neidlinger v. Mobley, 76 Ga. App. 599, 46 S.E.2d 747 (1948).

When a party, without objection, allows a witness to testify against the party without first being sworn, that party, through the party’s failure to object, has waived the requirements of an oath. Belcher v. State, 173 Ga. App. 509, 326 S.E.2d 857 (1985).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Affirmations. — Statute although dealing with oaths as given in the trial of cases, nevertheless substantiates the belief that the word “swear” could be stricken and the word “affirm” used in loyalty oaths. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 565.

24-9-61. Right to have witnesses sequestered; effect of irregularity.

Except as otherwise provided in Code Section 24-9-61.1, in all cases either party shall have the right to have the witnesses of the other party examined out of the hearing of each other. The court shall take proper care to effect this object as far as practicable and convenient, but no mere irregularity shall exclude a witness. (Orig. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

RIGHT OF SEQUESTRATION
EXCEPTIONS TO SEQUESTRATION RULE
TESTIMONY OF WITNESSES NOT SEQUESTERED

General Consideration

Purpose. — Purpose of the rule of sequestration is to prevent a witness who has not testified, or who has not completed his or her testimony, from overhearing and having his or her testimony affected by the testimony of another witness. Poultryland, Inc. v. Anderson, 200 Ga. 549, 37 S.E.2d 785 (1946); Hall v. Hall, 220 Ga. 677, 141 S.E.2d 400 (1965); General Oglethorpe Hotel Co. v. Lanier, 99 Ga. App. 401, 109 S.E.2d 769 (1959); Jarrell v. State, 234 Ga. 410, 216 S.E.2d 258 (1975); Byrd v. Brand, 140 Ga. App. 135, 230 S.E.2d 113 (1976); Ruffin v. State, 243 Ga. 95, 252 S.E.2d 472 (1979); Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

Import of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 is to preserve the integrity of testimony, with the ultimate goal of arriving at the truth; thus, the rule extends to communications, direct and indirect, between witnesses outside the courtroom. O’Kelley v. State, 175 Ga. App. 503, 333 S.E.2d 838 (1985).
Purpose of the rule of sequestration is to prevent a witness who has testified from influencing the witness who has not. Whether the witness has been excused after testifying is of no relevance to the witness’s duty to refrain from discussing the witness’s testimony with another witness. Rogers v. State, 257 Ga. 590, 361 S.E.2d 814 (1987).
Sequestration rule literally prohibits only witnesses from being examined in the hearing of each other. Johnson v. State, 258 Ga. 856, 376 S.E.2d 356 (1989).

Right to testimony of witnesses unaffected. — Party's right to have the testimony of any witness, when material to the assertion of the party's rights, is unaffected by this statute which relates to the sequestration of witnesses. Higdon v. State, 46 Ga. App. 346, 167 S.E. 782 (1933); McCartney v. McCartney, 217 Ga. 200, 121 S.E.2d 785 (1961); Baker v. State, 131 Ga. App. 48, 205 S.E.2d 79 (1974).

Contact between attorney and witness. — This rule of sequestration does not prohibit discussions between an attorney for a party in the case and a prospective witness, at least so long as the attorney talks to the witness separately from the other witnesses and does not inform the witness of previous testimony. Norman v. State, 212 Ga. App. 105, 441 S.E.2d 94 (1994).

Spectators not excluded. — Rule of sequestration is not applicable to spectators and it is not designed to exclude nonwitnesses from the courtroom. Lackey v. State, 246 Ga. 331, 271 S.E.2d 478 (1980).

Trial court did not commit prejudicial error in allowing witnesses testifying on behalf of a child molestation victim to remain in the courtroom during the victim's testimony since the witnesses' testimony did not bolster the victim's testimony. Mullis v. State, 184 Ga. App. 525, 362 S.E.2d 90 (1987).

Victim/witness conversing with spectator. — Rule of sequestration was not violated after victim/witness conversed with spectator during recess. Kirkland v. State, 173 Ga. App. 687, 327 S.E.2d 808 (1985).

Violation of rule of sequestration. — In a juvenile court deprivation proceeding, evidence that father discussed his testimony with his mother before her testimony in violation of the rule of sequestration justified finding of contempt. In re A.L.L., 211 Ga. App. 767, 440 S.E.2d 517 (1994).

Rule of sequestration was not violated by allowing a witness to testify who was in the courtroom at the time defendant attempted to plead guilty. Cook v. State, 221 Ga. App. 831, 472 S.E.2d 686 (1996).

Sequestration of the victim's spouse was not required since, although the spouse's name appeared on the state's witness list originally, the spouse was removed from the list and did not testify. Edwards v. State, 224 Ga. App. 14, 479 S.E.2d 754 (1996).

Even though a police officer, who was a witness for the state, spoke to defense witnesses during the trial, there was no violation of this rule, since there was no allegation that the officer spoke with the witnesses about their testimony or that any witness heard the officer's testimony. Bayer v. State, 230 Ga. App. 708, 497 S.E.2d 266 (1998).

Procedure of the trial judge in allowing the victim to remain in the courtroom while a detective and polygraph examiner testified, and then letting the victim give the victim's own testimony was fully within the court's discretion and did not constitute reversible error. Shepherd v. State, 245 Ga. App. 386, 537 S.E.2d 777 (2000).

Trial court did not violate O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 by permitting three prior difficult witnesses to remain in the courtroom together while the court instructed each of them on the limitation to be placed on their testimony since each was then examined out of the hearing of each other. Williams v. State, 277 Ga. 853, 596 S.E.2d 597 (2004).

Curing violation of rule of sequestration. — In a medical malpractice action, violation of an order on sequestration, indicated by defendant's expert when the expert revealed that defendant's attorney had discussed with the expert testimony of one of plaintiff's attorneys, did not warrant a new trial since the court gave curative instructions to the jury, admonishing defendant's attorney and advising that the violation could be considered in assessing the witness's credibility. Bean v. Landers, 215 Ga. App. 366, 450 S.E.2d 699 (1994).

Appropriate remedy in a case where a witness violated the rule of sequestration when the witness spoke to another witness outside the courtroom was to admit testimony regarding the violation and failure to do so was reversible error. Childress v. State, 266 Ga. 425, 467 S.E.2d 865 (1996).

Witness who has finished testifying. — Once a witness who has been sequestered has testified and is excused and neither side intends to recall the witness, the witness can do as the witness pleases and leave or remain in the courtroom. Bigby v. State, 184 Ga. App. 94, 360 S.E.2d 751 (1987).

Mutual observations of witnesses outside courtroom following testimony not prejudicial. — Mutual observation of two witnesses outside the courtroom that they could not identify a suspicious party by one's shoes constituted only innocuous remarks which could not have been prejudicial even to appellant's codefendant, about whom the observation ostensibly related, especially given the fact that the two witnesses had already testified when their conversation took place. Almond v. State, 173 Ga. App. 423, 326 S.E.2d 798 (1985).

Rule of sequestration is not violated when witnesses discuss their testimony outside of courtroom, as the rule only prevents a potential witness from being present in the courtroom while any other witness is testifying. Boyd v. State, 168 Ga. App. 246, 308 S.E.2d 626 (1983).

Out-of-court violation. — Witness's violation of the rule of sequestration when the witness spoke to another witness outside the courtroom was relevant to the issue of the witness's credibility and could be considered by the jury in assessing the credit to be given the testimony of the violator, irrespective of the violating witness's success in affecting the testimony of the other witness. Childress v. State, 266 Ga. 425, 467 S.E.2d 865 (1996).

Sequestration of defendant's wife. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in sequestering defendant's wife when it appeared she would be called as a witness. Norman v. State, 255 Ga. 313, 338 S.E.2d 249 (1986).

Sequestration of juvenile's parent. — Parent is not a party to criminal proceedings in which a juvenile is being tried as an adult and the court has discretion to grant a motion to sequester a parent who is a witness. Appling v. State, 221 Ga. App. 162, 470 S.E.2d 761 (1996).

Sequestering of defendant's experts. — In a prosecution for driving under the influence, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by sequestering defendant's expert on field sobriety evaluations during the presentation of the state's case. McNeil v. State, 229 Ga. App. 149, 493 S.E.2d 570 (1997).

Sequestration of plaintiff. — In a negligence suit wherein a train patron was attacked and raped while exiting a train station, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by not forcing the plaintiff to either testify first or to leave the courtroom until the plaintiff testified after the rule of sequestration had been invoked as it was within the trial court's broad discretion to allow the plaintiff to remain in the courtroom during the presentation of the case and to testify at a later point in that presentation. MARTA v. Doe, 292 Ga. App. 532, 664 S.E.2d 893 (2008).

Appellate review. — In the absence of an offer of proof as to expert's testimony, the appellate court could not review the defendant's claim of error based on the trial court's actions in invoking the sequestration rule and threatening the defendant's attorney and expert with contempt, whereupon the defendant's counsel withdrew the expert from the witness list so that the expert could remain in the courtroom and assist counsel during the state's case. Pittman v. State, 274 Ga. 260, 553 S.E.2d 616 (2001).

Ineffective assistance of counsel not established by failure to object to lack of sequestering admonition. — Defendant's counsel did not provide ineffective assistance because counsel did not object to the trial court's failure to admonish sequestered witnesses not to talk to each other as O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 did not prohibit the witnesses from having any contact, but merely prohibited them from discussing their testimony and/or the charges. Ogle v. State, 256 Ga. App. 26, 567 S.E.2d 700 (2002).

State, 124 Ga. App. 481, 184 S.E.2d 203 (1971); Bush v. State, 129 Ga. App. 160, 199 S.E.2d 121 (1973); Childers v. State, 130 Ga. App. 555, 203 S.E.2d 874 (1974); Parham v. State, 135 Ga. App. 315, 217 S.E.2d 493 (1975); Pearley v. State, 235 Ga. 276, 219 S.E.2d 404 (1975); James v. State, 143 Ga. App. 696, 240 S.E.2d 149 (1977); Whitfield v. State, 143 Ga. App. 779, 240 S.E.2d 189 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 gives either party the right to have witnesses sequestered, but it is subject to the discretion of the trial judge, who may make exceptions. Welch v. State, 251 Ga. 197, 304 S.E.2d 391 (1983).

Trial court is vested with broad discretion in enforcement of the sequestration rule. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982); Stephen W. Brown Radiology Assocs. v. Gowers, 157 Ga. App. 770, 278 S.E.2d 653 (1981).

Application of the rule of sequestration is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Wilson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 174, 279 S.E.2d 345 (1981).

Enforcement of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 long has been vested in the discretion of the trial court. Croom v. State, 165 Ga. App. 676, 302 S.E.2d 598 (1983).

Both parties have the right of sequestration of witnesses, but the enforcement of the rule is vested in the discretion of the trial court; the orderly presentation of evidence being a proper reason for an exception to the rule. Kelly v. State, 182 Ga. App. 7, 354 S.E.2d 647 (1987).

State's explanation of the state's need for the deputy sheriff's assistance during trial can provide an acceptable reason for the trial court's exercise of the court's discretion in permitting the state's witness to remain in the courtroom and testify after another state witness has testified. Kelly v. State, 182 Ga. App. 7, 354 S.E.2d 647 (1987).

Rule not enforced until presentation of evidence has begun. — Trial court is not required to enforce the rule of sequestration until the presentation of evidence has begun. Blankenship v. State, 258 Ga. 43, 365 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 871, 109 S. Ct. 183, 102 L. Ed. 2d 152 (1988); Chastain v. State, 244 Ga. App. 84, 535 S.E.2d 25 (2000).

Rule of sequestration does not prohibit persons from remaining in courtroom during proceedings, but merely gives a right to either party to have the witnesses for the other party examined out of the hearing of each other. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982).

Witnesses may not be told what prior witnesses have said. O'Kelley v. State, 175 Ga. App. 503, 333 S.E.2d 838 (1985).

Request denied when no previous notice that witness considered hostile or adverse. — In a garnishment proceeding, court did not err in denying plaintiff's request to sequester a witness (president of the judgment debtor) since the witness had been subpoenaed by plaintiff and when plaintiff did not announce or request that the witness be considered a hostile or an adverse witness. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Trans State, Inc., 172 Ga. App. 763, 324 S.E.2d 585 (1984).

Failure of the district attorney to invoke sequestration of witnesses at the outset of the presentation of evidence constitutes a ground for new trial. Parham v. State, 135 Ga. App. 315, 217 S.E.2d 493 (1975).

When the rule of sequestration was never invoked by either the state or defendant, the trial court did not err by permitting a witness to testify as a rebuttal witness for the state after the witness had sat through the trial and heard the testimony of the state's previous witnesses. Watson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 158, 473 S.E.2d 262 (1996).

Time of request. — Since statute devolves upon each party who wishes to obtain the benefit of the rule to invoke the statute with respect to the separation of the witnesses of the party's adversary, the fact that the demand of the plaintiff was not entered until after one's own witnesses had testified would not militate against one's "right to have the witnesses of the other party examined out of the hearing of each other." Blicht-Everett Co. v. Jackson, 29 Ga. App. 440, 116 S.E. 47 (1923).

When at the close of evidence for propounders of a will, the propounders moved that witnesses for the caveator be sequestered and this was opposed by the caveator, on the ground that the motion came too late, the court was correct in ordering that the witnesses be sequestered. Chedel v. Mooney, 158 Ga. 297, 123 S.E. 300 (1924).

Judge may sequester witnesses on own motion. Meeks v. State, 51 Ga. 429 (1874).

Waiver of right. — When a defendant could not have known whether the district attorney was going to call the FBI agent even though the defendant was listed on the indictment it cannot be held as a matter of law that the defendant waived defendant's objection to the witness being in the courtroom by not objecting until the witness was called. Parham v. State, 135 Ga. App. 315, 217 S.E.2d 493 (1975).

Application of the rule to a particular witness is within the sound discretion of the trial court and since the defendant did not object to allowing the victim's father to remain in the courtroom, the defendant thereby waived the issue on appeal; without a showing of manifest abuse of discretion, the trial judge's decision will not be disturbed. Earnest v. State, 262 Ga. 494, 422 S.E.2d 188 (1992).

Sequestration at interlocutory hearing for injunction. — Since in all cases, either party shall have the right to have the witnesses of the other party examined out of the hearing of each other, the rule is applicable and mandatory in an interlocutory hearing for injunction. Poultryland, Inc. v. Anderson, 200 Ga. 549, 37 S.E.2d 785 (1946); Hall v. Hobbs, 107 Ga. App. 46, 129 S.E.2d 209 (1962).

Sequestration during videotaped testimony of expert witness. — Requiring sequestration of plaintiff's expert witness during the videotaped testimony of defendant's expert witness was not error since plaintiff's expert had already been allowed to review a transcript of the testimony. Simonds v. Conair Corp., 185 Ga. App. 664, 365 S.E.2d 507 (1988).

Enforcement of rule by court. — When the rule of sequestration of witnesses is invoked by a defendant, it is the duty of the court to enforce the rule. Norman v. State, 121 Ga. App. 753, 175 S.E.2d 119 (1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 956, 91 S. Ct. 981, 28 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1971); Stuart v. State, 123 Ga. App. 311, 180 S.E.2d 581 (1971); Nance v. State, 123 Ga. App. 410, 181 S.E.2d 295 (1971); Jarrell v. State, 234 Ga. 410, 216 S.E.2d 258 (1975); Pearley v. State, 235 Ga. 276, 219 S.E.2d 404 (1975); Ruffin v. State, 243 Ga. 95, 252 S.E.2d 472 (1979); Simonton v. State, 151 Ga. App. 431, 260 S.E.2d 487 (1979); Mize v. State, 152 Ga. App. 190, 262 S.E.2d 492 (1979); Dampier v. State, 245 Ga.

Effect of denial of sequestration. — Refusal of the trial judge to grant sequestration when requested deprives the party of substantial and positive rights and is an absolute ground for new trial. Poultryland, Inc. v. Anderson, 200 Ga. 549, 37 S.E.2d 785 (1946); Smith v. State, 215 Ga. 51, 108 S.E.2d 688 (1959); Hall v. Hall, 220 Ga. 677, 141 S.E.2d 400 (1965); Stuart v. State, 123 Ga. App. 311, 180 S.E.2d 581 (1971); Rozier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 481, 184 S.E.2d 203 (1971); Childers v. State, 130 Ga. App. 555, 203 S.E.2d 874 (1974); James v. State, 143 Ga. App. 696, 240 S.E.2d 149 (1977); Whitfield v. State, 143 Ga. App. 779, 240 S.E.2d 189 (1977).

Sequestration at later stage of trial. — Fact that the witnesses were sequestered at a later stage of the trial did not cure the error of the court in refusing to invoke the rule of sequestration upon timely request prior to allowing the defendant's witnesses to testify. Hall v. Hobbs, 107 Ga. App. 46, 129 S.E.2d 209 (1962).

Solitary defense expert witness. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 authorizes sequestration of a solitary defense expert witness to prevent the expert's hearing the testimony of the other witnesses. Accordingly, the trial court did not err in presenting defense counsel with a choice of whether to use the defense expert to assist in cross-examination or as a witness, but forbidding his use for both. Greenway v. State, 207 Ga. App. 511, 428 S.E.2d 415 (1993).

Exceptions to Sequestration Rule

In general. — Whether such witnesses should be instructed not to converse with other persons or with each other, and whether the witnesses who have been examined should be allowed to return to the room in which the others are waiting, are questions within the sound discretion of the trial judge, to be determined in the light of one's knowledge of the witnesses and of the case. Kelly v. State, 118 Ga. 329, 45 S.E. 413

(1903); Turbaville v. State, 58 Ga. 545 (1877); Carson v. State, 80 Ga. 170, 5 S.E. 295 (1887); Talley v. State, 2 Ga. App. 395, 58 S.E. 667 (1907); Hudgins v. State, 13 Ga. App. 489, 79 S.E. 367 (1913).

Nothing prohibits anything other than the examination of witnesses out of the hearing of each other; statute says nothing about other types of contact. Byrd v. Brand, 140 Ga. App. 135, 230 S.E.2d 113 (1976).

In the absence of some allegation of impropriety as the result of granting an exception to the sequestration order the court will not find prejudicial harm. Kendrick v. State, 123 Ga. App. 785, 182 S.E.2d 525 (1971); Smith v. State, 244 Ga. 814, 262 S.E.2d 116 (1979).

No harmful error is shown in a case where, after the witnesses have been sequestered, the solicitor general (now district attorney) interviews a witness before placing the witness on the stand in the absence of an allegation that such witness was informed of what other witnesses had testified or what the witness was expected to testify. Smith v. State, 244 Ga. 814, 262 S.E.2d 116 (1979).

Trial court has discretion in permitting, upon request, counsel for one of the parties an opportunity to converse with a witness in the case for limited purposes, and that discretion will not be controlled unless abused. Smith v. State, 244 Ga. 814, 262 S.E.2d 116 (1979).

Orderly presentation of evidence is a proper reason for an exception to the rule of sequestration. Hardy v. State, 245 Ga. 673, 266 S.E.2d 489 (1980).

When the prosecutor stated that the prosecutor needed a witness for presentation of a case and that to require the witness to testify first would interfere with the orderly presentation of a case, the trial judge had discretion to except such witness from the rule of sequestration. Blalock v. State, 250 Ga. 441, 298 S.E.2d 477 (1983); Fowler v. State, 179 Ga. App. 492, 347 S.E.2d 322 (1986); Denny v. State, 210 Ga. App. 406, 436 S.E.2d 526 (1993).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 does not prohibit the state from stating the case and allegations in front of the witnesses prior to sequestration. Brewer v. State, 162 Ga. App. 228, 291 S.E.2d 87 (1982).

Orderly presentation of evidence is a proper reason for permitting an unsequestered witness, who is assisting the prosecutor, to testify after other witnesses. Croom v. State, 165 Ga. App. 676, 302 S.E.2d 598 (1983).

Based upon a showing by the state of some need not to call the unsequestered witness first, the trial court is authorized, in the court's discretion, to allow the unsequestered witness to be called to the stand after other witnesses have testified. Law v. State, 165 Ga. App. 687, 302 S.E.2d 570, aff'd, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983).

It is within the discretion of the trial court to make exceptions in regard to the sequestration of nonparty witnesses, and unless that discretion is abused it will not be reversed. Batten v. Batten, 182 Ga. App. 442, 356 S.E.2d 228 (1987).

Request for exception. — Proper procedure in situations where this statute has been invoked and a party needs the assistance of a witness during the prosecution of a case is to specifically request that the trial judge make an exception to the rule at the commencement of the evidence. Brown v. State, 150 Ga. App. 116, 257 S.E.2d 25 (1979); McCranie v. State, 151 Ga. App. 871, 261 S.E.2d 779 (1979).

Exceptions are granted at court's discretion. — It is within the trial court's discretion to make exceptions to the sequestration rule, and unless that discretion has been abused the court's decision will not be reversed on appeal. Jones v. State, 75 Ga. App. 610, 44 S.E.2d 174 (1947); Dye v. State, 220 Ga. 113, 137 S.E.2d 465 (1964); Cooper v. Butler, 223 Ga. 797, 158 S.E.2d 244 (1967); Jarrell v. State, 234 Ga. 410, 216 S.E.2d 258 (1975); Parham v. State, 135 Ga. App. 315, 217 S.E.2d 493 (1975); Disby v. State, 238 Ga. 178, 231 S.E.2d 763 (1977); Lloyd v. State, 146 Ga. App. 584, 246 S.E.2d 697 (1978); Davis v. State, 242 Ga. 901, 252 S.E.2d 443 (1979); Horton v. Wayne County, 243 Ga. 789, 256 S.E.2d 775 (1979); Ratliff v. State, 150 Ga. App. 695, 258 S.E.2d 324 (1979); McCranie v. State, 151 Ga. App. 871, 261 S.E.2d 779 (1979).

Excepted witnesses testify first. — When a witness has been excepted from the sequestration rule, that witness should be presented first or explanation made to the trial court why the witness cannot be called first. Jones v. State, 75 Ga. App. 610, 44 S.E.2d 174

(1947); McCranie v. State, 151 Ga. App. 871, 261 S.E.2d 779 (1970); Walker v. State, 132 Ga. App. 274, 208 S.E.2d 5 (1974); Jarrell v. State, 234 Ga. 410, 216 S.E.2d 258 (1975); Parham v. State, 135 Ga. App. 315, 217 S.E.2d 493 (1975); Pless v. State, 142 Ga. App. 594, 236 S.E.2d 842 (1977); James v. State, 143 Ga. App. 696, 240 S.E.2d 149 (1977); Whitfield v. State, 143 Ga. App. 779, 240 S.E.2d 189 (1977); Lloyd v. State, 146 Ga. App. 584, 246 S.E.2d 697 (1978); Davis v. State, 242 Ga. 901, 252 S.E.2d 443 (1979); Brown v. State, 150 Ga. App. 116, 257 S.E.2d 25 (1979); Ratliff v. State, 150 Ga. App. 695, 258 S.E.2d 324 (1979); Simonton v. State, 151 Ga. App. 431, 260 S.E.2d 487 (1979).

Court may allow witness for prosecution to remain in courtroom in violation of the sequestration rule, if the prosecuting attorney states that the witness is needed to aid in the presentation of the case and that in the orderly presentation of the case cannot testify first. Sweat v. State, 203 Ga. App. 290, 416 S.E.2d 845 (1992).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in defendant's criminal trial when the court denied defendant's sequestration request regarding one of the police officers involved in the arrest as the state's request that the officer stay in the court to assist was deemed reasonable given that defendant's trial counsel had the assistance of two other attorneys as well as a recent law graduate. Warren v. State, 281 Ga. App. 490, 636 S.E.2d 671 (2006).

State's lead detective was properly excepted from the rule of sequestration as the state adequately demonstrated that the state needed the presence of the primary investigator in the courtroom for an orderly presentation of the case. Morgan v. State, 287 Ga. App. 569, 651 S.E.2d 833 (2007).

Prosecutor requested that the chief investigating detective be excepted from the rule of sequestration to permit the detective to assist the prosecutor in presenting the case because of the detective's familiarity with the facts and the crime scene. In light of the prosecutor's request, allowing the detective to remain in the courtroom during the presentation of the state's case was not an abuse of discretion. Hollis v. State, 295 Ga. App. 529, 672 S.E.2d 487 (2009).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the lead investigative officer to stay in the courtroom throughout a defendant's marijuana possession trial, although the defendant invoked sequestration, because the prosecutor designated the officer as the state's prosecuting witness. Moreover, defense counsel made no objection at the time of the designation. Sirmans v. State, 301 Ga. App. 756, 688 S.E.2d 669 (2009).

Witness allowed to remain in courtroom.

— When lead investigator testified first and was then permitted to remain in the courtroom during the remainder of the trial, and was twice recalled to the stand after having heard the testimony of the other witnesses, it was not an abuse of the trial court's discretion to permit the detective's testimony. Dunbar v. State, 209 Ga. App. 97, 432 S.E.2d 829 (1993); Mitchell v. State, 222 Ga. App. 878, 476 S.E.2d 604 (1996).

In a prosecution for child molestation, it was not an abuse of discretion to allow the mother of the victim to remain in the courtroom after the victim became upset while testifying. Peters v. State, 224 Ga. App. 837, 481 S.E.2d 898 (1997).

Parties as witnesses. — When a party to an action intends to be a witness personally and the court directs that the party's witnesses be separately examined under this statute, it is the proper rule, unless there be special reasons to the contrary, that such party should first be examined in the absence of the party's other witnesses, in order that the party may thereby be present, as is the party's right, during the whole trial of the party's case. Tift v. Jones, 52 Ga. 538 (1874); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Tice, 124 Ga. 459, 52 S.E. 916, 4 Ann. Cas. 200 (1905); Massey v. State, 220 Ga. 883, 142 S.E.2d 832 (1965); Cochran v. State, 151 Ga. App. 436, 260 S.E.2d 391 (1979).

In juvenile court trials the parents are parties and therefore not subject to sequestration. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975).

When the plaintiff elects to call the plaintiff's own witnesses before testifying personally, the trial court has broad discretion to require either that the plaintiff testify prior to presenting the testimony of plaintiff's witnesses, or that the plaintiff be excluded from the courtroom prior to the time plaintiff chooses to testify. Barber v. Barber, 257

Ga. 488, 360 S.E.2d 574 (1987).

Assistance to either party. — It is within the discretion of the trial judge to permit a witness to remain in the courtroom to assist either party and the action of the court in this respect will not be reviewed. Jones v. State, 75 Ga. App. 610, 44 S.E.2d 174 (1947); Justice v. State, 213 Ga. 166, 97 S.E.2d 569 (1957); Dye v. State, 220 Ga. 113, 137 S.E.2d 465 (1964); Radliff v. State, 150 Ga. App. 695, 258 S.E.2d 324 (1970); Stuart v. State, 123 Ga. App. 311, 180 S.E.2d 581 (1971); Walker v. State, 132 Ga. App. 274, 208 S.E.2d 5 (1974); Parham v. State, 135 Ga. App. 315, 217 S.E.2d 493 (1975); James v. State, 143 Ga. App. 696, 240 S.E.2d 149 (1977).

Assistance to opposite party. — Court may permit witnesses to remain in the courtroom to advise the opposite party, but the record must show that such was done for that purpose. Poultryland, Inc. v. Anderson, 200 Ga. 549, 37 S.E.2d 785 (1946); Montos v. State, 212 Ga. 764, 95 S.E.2d 792 (1956), overruled on other grounds, White v. State, 273 Ga. 787, 546 S.E.2d 514 (2001); Smith v. State, 215 Ga. 51, 108 S.E.2d 688 (1959); Spurlin v. State, 222 Ga. 179, 149 S.E.2d 315 (1966); Kendrick v. State, 123 Ga. App. 785, 182 S.E.2d 525 (1971); Childers v. State, 130 Ga. App. 555, 203 S.E.2d 874 (1974).

Officer of the court. — When the rule requiring sequestration is invoked and one of the witnesses is an officer of the court the judge may allow that witness to remain in the courtroom so as not to impair the efficiency of the court. Hoxie v. State, 114 Ga. 19, 39 S.E. 944 (1901); Askew v. State, 3 Ga. App. 79, 59 S.E. 311 (1907); Poultryland, Inc. v. Anderson, 200 Ga. 549, 37 S.E.2d 785 (1946); Montos v. State, 212 Ga. 764, 95 S.E.2d 792 (1956), overruled on other grounds, White v. State, 273 Ga. 787, 546 S.E.2d 514 (2001); Cornett v. State, 218 Ga. 405, 128 S.E.2d 317 (1962); Head v. State, 111 Ga. App. 14, 140 S.E.2d 291 (1965); Stuart v. State, 123 Ga. App. 311, 180 S.E.2d 581 (1971); Kendrick v. State, 123 Ga. App. 785, 182 S.E.2d 525 (1971); Bush v. State, 129 Ga. App. 160, 199 S.E.2d 121 (1973); Childers v. State, 130 Ga. App. 555, 203 S.E.2d 874 (1974); James v. State, 143 Ga. App. 696, 240 S.E.2d 149 (1977).

Prosecutor. — Court may permit the prosecutor in the indictment to remain at the state's counsel table to assist in the trial of the case, even though the prosecutor may be used as a witness. Norman v. State, 121 Ga. App. 753, 175 S.E.2d 119 (1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 959, 91 S. Ct. 981, 28 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1971); Howard v. State, 144 Ga. App. 31, 240 S.E.2d 589 (1977); McCranie v. State, 151 Ga. App. 871, 261 S.E.2d 779 (1979).

One long-standing exception to the sequestration rule exists in criminal cases for the prosecutor, that is, the one who signs the indictment bringing the charges. The prosecutor may testify as a witness after other witnesses for the state have testified. Chastain v. State, 255 Ga. 723, 342 S.E.2d 678 (1986); Anderson v. State, 200 Ga. App. 29, 406 S.E.2d 791 (1991); Jackson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 843, 476 S.E.2d 615 (1996).

Prosecuting witness. — It is within the trial court's discretion to allow the prosecuting witness to remain in the courtroom as an exception to the sequestration rule. Jefferson v. State, 159 Ga. App. 740, 285 S.E.2d 213 (1981).

It is within the trial court's discretion to allow a prosecuting witness to remain in the courtroom as an exception to the sequestration rule. Law v. State, 165 Ga. App. 687, 302 S.E.2d 570, aff'd, 251 Ga. 525, 307 S.E.2d 904 (1983).

Trial court may, in the court's discretion permit the prosecutor in the indictment to remain in the courtroom to assist in the trial of the case, even though the prosecutor may be used as a witness. Edwards v. State, 171 Ga. App. 264, 319 S.E.2d 101 (1984).

It was within the trial court's discretion to allow a police officer who was the nominal prosecutor to remain in the courtroom based on the district attorney's statement that the officer's presence was necessary for the orderly administration of the state's case. Davis v. State, 239 Ga. App. 318, 521 S.E.2d 368 (1999), rev'd on other grounds, 273 Ga. 14, 537 S.E.2d 663 (2000).

Victim's assistance coordinator. — Because the state's victim assistance coordinator was not a witness subject to sequestration, the trial court did not err in allowing the coordinator to remain in the courtroom during the trial. Clements v. State, 279 Ga. App. 773, 632 S.E.2d 702 (2006).

Reopening state's case so victim could make in-court identification. — Allowing the state to reopen the state's case so a robbery victim could make an in-court identification based on the sound of defendant's voice did not violate the rule of sequestration since the victim was not recalled in order to further or alter the substance of defendant's own recounting of the incident in light of the substance of defendant's testimony but was recalled merely to testify about the similarity of the sound of defendant's voice to the sound of the gunman's voice during commission of the crime. Stith v. State, 201 Ga. App. 621, 411 S.E.2d 532 (1991).

Excepting witness testifying as to post-arrest event not error. — Trial court's excepting a state's witness from the rule of sequestration and, having done so, not requiring the witness to testify first was not an abuse of discretion, since the witness testified only about post-arrest events and not about the crime itself. Mathews v. State, 183 Ga. App. 224, 358 S.E.2d 639 (1987).

Investigating officer. — Appellate courts have found no abuse of discretion when the trial court permits the investigating officer to remain in the courtroom to assist in the trial of the case and testify after other state witnesses have testified. Pless v. State, 142 Ga. App. 594, 236 S.E.2d 842 (1977); Lloyd v. State, 146 Ga. App. 584, 246 S.E.2d 697 (1978); Davis v. State, 242 Ga. 901, 252 S.E.2d 443 (1979); Brown v. State, 150 Ga. App. 116, 257 S.E.2d 25 (1979); Simonton v. State, 151 Ga. App. 431, 260 S.E.2d 487 (1979).

Where witness police detective was permitted to remain in the courtroom to assist the prosecutor in spite of sequestration order, and where during course of trial the prosecutor sent the detective to telephone another police officer witness whose presence was needed, rule of sequestration was not violated. McGarl v. State, 165 Ga. App. 323, 301 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

When defendants contended that it was improper to exempt from the sequestration order two prospective prosecution witnesses, the county sheriff and the police officer who investigated the case, it was held that these exceptions were not an abuse of the court's discretion as the sheriff never testified and the investigator was shown to be needed to assist the district attorney in the trial of the case, an approved exception. Welch v. State, 251 Ga. 197, 304 S.E.2d 391 (1983).

Trial court may permit the investigating officer to remain at the counsel table and to testify at trial. Edwards v. State, 171 Ga. App. 264, 319 S.E.2d 101 (1984).

Trial court is vested with the discretion to make an exception to the sequestration rule for the chief investigating officer and the discretion will not be reversed on appeal unless abused. Norman v. State, 255 Ga. 313, 338 S.E.2d 249 (1986); Watson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 814, 476 S.E.2d 96 (1996).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing an investigator to sit at counsel table with the prosecutor after the rule of sequestration had been invoked, even though the investigator was the last witness to testify for the state, since the prosecutor stated the prosecutor needed the investigator's assistance during the trial and that to compel the investigator to testify first would require the state to present the state's case out of sequence. Mullen v. State, 197 Ga. App. 26, 397 S.E.2d 487 (1990).

Trial court did not err in allowing an investigating officer to sit with the state's attorney during a trial as an exception to the rule of sequestration or in failing to require the officer to testify first as the trial court expressly recognized that the court was vested with discretion to do so; moreover, the investigating officer's testimony was primarily directed at the playing of the videotape interview with the child victim. Howse v. State, 273 Ga. App. 252, 614 S.E.2d 869 (2005).

Despite the defendant's contrary claims on appeal, the trial court properly allowed the lead investigating officer to remain in the courtroom during the presentation of evidence, based on the prosecutor's statement that the officer was necessary to assist in the orderly presentation of the case. Stafford v. State, 288 Ga. App. 733, 655 S.E.2d 221 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 489 (Ga. 2008).

Sheriff may be excepted on court's motion. — Since the sheriff is an officer of the court and may be excepted from the rule of sequestration on the court's own initiative, it is not necessary to evaluate the state's asserted need for the assistance of the sheriff, as a demonstration of such was unnecessary to the court's exercise of discretion. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, cert.

denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406 (1987).

Expert witnesses. — When it was necessary to offer a considerable body of technical information relating to the alleged eavesdropping device for jury consideration, and the solicitor (now district attorney) stated in the solicitor's place that the solicitor needed to confer with an expert in this field during the trial, it was not an abuse of discretion to allow such witness to remain in the courtroom after a motion for the sequestration of witnesses had in other respects been granted. Kendrick v. State, 123 Ga. App. 785, 182 S.E.2d 525 (1971).

Trial court did not err by refusing to allow defendant's accident reconstruction expert to hear the testimony of other witnesses, since the rule of sequestration was invoked, in view of the court's conclusion that granting the request would give the defense an unfair advantage. Bartell v. State, 181 Ga. App. 148, 351 S.E.2d 495 (1986).

An expert is not automatically excepted from the rule on sequestration because ordinarily it is not necessary for the expert to hear the testimony of other witnesses in order to form an opinion. Bean v. Landers, 215 Ga. App. 366, 450 S.E.2d 699 (1994).

Member of local police. — City or county police officer is not an officer of the court so as to merit an exception to the rule of sequestration as such. Head v. State, 111 Ga. App. 14, 140 S.E.2d 291 (1965); Bush v. State, 129 Ga. App. 160, 199 S.E.2d 121 (1973).

Rape victim. — In the absence of any such showing or statement of the solicitor general (now district attorney) and where the record is silent as to any reason a rape victim should be excepted from the rule of sequestration and allowed to remain in the courtroom, none will be assumed to exist. Massey v. State, 220 Ga. 883, 142 S.E.2d 832 (1965), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 36, 87 S. Ct. 241, 17 L. Ed. 2d 36 (1966).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 does not prohibit discussions between attorney to the case and prospective witness, at least so long as the attorney talks to the witness separately from the other witnesses and does not inform the witness of previous testimony. Ross v. State, 254 Ga. 22, 326 S.E.2d 194, cert. denied, 472

U.S. 1022, 105 S. Ct. 3490, 87 L. Ed. 2d 623 (1985).

Testimony of Witnesses Not Sequestered

Liberal interpretation. — Legislative statement that “no mere irregularity shall exclude the witness” imports that a liberal interpretation should be given when applying this statute. Pless v. State, 142 Ga. App. 594, 236 S.E.2d 842 (1977).

Presumption of injury to party. — When a sequestration order is violated, there is a presumption of injury to the rights of a party unless the contrary plainly appears. Hall v. Hobbs, 107 Ga. App. 46, 129 S.E.2d 209 (1962).

Witness disregarding sequestration order. — When a witness was competent to testify, and the testimony was relevant, material, and necessary to an adequate defense of the charges against the defendant; only the witness’s credibility as a witness, not the witness’s competence, is affected by the witness’s disregard of a sequestration order. Rooks v. State, 65 Ga. 330 (1880); Lassiter v. State, 67 Ga. 739 (1881); Bone v. State, 86 Ga. 108, 12 S.E. 205 (1890); May v. State, 90 Ga. 793, 17 S.E. 108 (1893); Hoxie v. State, 114 Ga. 19, 39 S.E. 944 (1901); McWhorter v. State, 118 Ga. 55, 44 S.E. 873 (1903); Phillips v. State, 121 Ga. 358, 49 S.E. 290 (1904); Davis v. State, 120 Ga. 843, 48 S.E. 305 (1904); Green v. State, 125 Ga. 742, 54 S.E. 724 (1906); Carter v. State, 2 Ga. App. 254, 58 S.E. 532 (1907); Thomas v. State, 7 Ga. App. 46, 129 S.E.2d 209 (1962); Hall v. Hall, 220 Ga. 677, 141 S.E.2d 400 (1965); Shelton v. State, 111 Ga. App. 351, 141 S.E.2d 776, cert. denied, 382 U.S. 917, 86 S. Ct. 291, 15 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1965); Pippins v. State, 224 Ga. 462, 162 S.E.2d 338 (1968); Kendrick v. State, 123 Ga. App. 785, 182 S.E.2d 525 (1971); Rozier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 481, 184 S.E.2d 203 (1971); Baker v. State, 131 Ga. App. 48, 205 S.E.2d 79 (1974); Pearley v. State, 235 Ga. 276, 219 S.E.2d 404 (1975); Still v. State, 142 Ga. App. 312, 235 S.E.2d 737 (1977); Watts v.

State, 239 Ga. 725, 238 S.E.2d 894 (1977); Banks v. State, 144 Ga. App. 471, 241 S.E.2d 587 (1978); Bryan v. State, 148 Ga. App. 428, 251 S.E.2d 338 (1978); Dudley v. State, 148 Ga. App. 560, 251 S.E.2d 815 (1978); International Ass’n of Bridge Ironworkers, Local 387 v. Moore, 149 Ga. App. 431, 254 S.E.2d 438 (1979); Smith v. State, 244 Ga. 814, 262 S.E.2d 116 (1979); Stroming v. State, 152 Ga. App. 129, 262 S.E.2d 193 (1979); Wright v. State, 246 Ga. 53, 268 S.E.2d 645 (1980); Jordan v. State, 247 Ga. 328, 276 S.E.2d 224 (1981); Blanchard v. State, 247 Ga. 415, 276 S.E.2d 593 (1981); Harper v. State, 249 Ga. 519, 292 S.E.2d 389 (1982).

When the rule of sequestration is violated, the violation goes to the credibility rather than the admissibility of the witness’s testimony. Johnson v. State, 258 Ga. 856, 376 S.E.2d 356 (1989); Lee v. State, 214 Ga. App. 164, 447 S.E.2d 323 (1994).

In criminal cases, the violation of the rule of sequestration of any witness either for the defense or for the prosecution goes to the credibility rather than to the admissibility of the witness’s testimony. O’Kelley v. State, 175 Ga. App. 503, 333 S.E.2d 838 (1985); State v. Marshall, 195 Ga. App. 535, 394 S.E.2d 379 (1990), overruled on other grounds, Armstrong v. State, 209 Ga. App. 796, 434 S.E.2d 560 (1993); Weathers v. State, 202 Ga. App. 849, 415 S.E.2d 690, cert. denied, 202 Ga. App. 907, 415 S.E.2d 690 (1992).

Violation of sequestration does not render the offending witness incompetent to testify; defendant’s recourse is to seek instructions from the court informing the jury that the violation of the rule should be considered in determining the weight and credit to be given to the testimony of the witness. Bradford v. State, 182 Ga. App. 337, 355 S.E.2d 735 (1987).

Trial court did not err by refusing to exclude the testimony of a state’s witness for the witness’s alleged violation of the rule of sequestration, as exclusion of testimony simply is not an appropriate remedy for a violation of the rule. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 872, 108 S. Ct. 203, 98 L. Ed. 2d 154 (1987).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant’s motion for mistrial after the court learned that witnesses in the witness room had been discussing testimony with each other in violation of the rule of sequestration, since the only witness in the room who had not yet testified when these conversations allegedly occurred was a deputy who did not personally observe the crime but merely took the defendant into custody. Hicks v. State, 256 Ga. 715, 352 S.E.2d 762, cert. denied, 482 U.S. 931, 107 S. Ct. 3220, 96 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1987).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the state to present a witness in violation of the sequestration rule as defense counsel's cross-examination cast doubt upon the witness's testimony and the jury knew that the witness was present during previous testimony. Rakestraw v. State, 278 Ga. 872, 608 S.E.2d 216 (2005).

Party's remedy for a violation of the sequestration rule is to request the trial court to charge the jury that the violation should be considered in determining the weight and credit to be given the testimony of the witness. Johnson v. State, 258 Ga. 856, 376 S.E.2d 356 (1989).

Witness not automatically disqualified if rule violated. — Generally, the testimony of a witness who has violated the rule of sequestration is admissible although the witness may be guilty of contempt. Stephen W. Brown Radiology Assocs. v. Gowers, 157 Ga. App. 770, 278 S.E.2d 653 (1981).

Even if the rule of sequestration has been violated, this does not automatically disqualify the witness or render the witness incompetent; the trial court is vested with broad discretion in this regard. Stancil v. State, 158 Ga. App. 147, 279 S.E.2d 457 (1981); Hayes v. State, 175 Ga. App. 135, 332 S.E.2d 917 (1985).

Admitting testimony of witnesses not placed under rule when invoked. — Witnesses who have not been called and put under the rule may testify in rebuttal of a prisoner's statement if the court is satisfied that the ends of justice require such testimony. Metropolitan St. R.R. v. Johnson, 90 Ga. 500, 16 S.E. 49 (1892); Keiley v. Bristol, 30 Ga. App. 725, 119 S.E. 334, cert. denied, 30 Ga. App. 801 (1923); Edwards v. State, 55 Ga. App. 187, 189 S.E. 678 (1937); Ricks v. State, 209 Ga. 2, 70 S.E.2d 373 (1952); Dye v.

State, 220 Ga. 113, 137 S.E.2d 465 (1964); Shelton v. State, 220 Ga. 610, 140 S.E.2d 839, answer conformed to, 111 Ga. App. 351, 141 S.E.2d 776, cert. denied, 382 U.S. 917, 86 S. Ct. 291, 15 L. Ed. 2d 232 (1965); Pippins v. State, 224 Ga. 462, 162 S.E.2d 338 (1968); Stuart v. State, 123 Ga. App. 311, 180 S.E.2d 581 (1971); Still v. State, 142 Ga. App. 312, 235 S.E.2d 737 (1977); Banks v. State, 144 Ga. App. 471, 241 S.E.2d 587 (1978); Stroming v. State, 152 Ga. App. 129, 262 S.E.2d 193 (1979); Jordan v. State, 247 Ga. 328, 276 S.E.2d 224 (1981); Blanchard v. State, 247 Ga. 415, 276 S.E.2d 593 (1981).

After the trial court conducted an evidentiary hearing out of the presence of the jury before permitting a witness to testify as a rebuttal witness, and although the witness had not been present in the courtroom prior to the time at which the witness was called to testify, the witness admitted to having conversations with fellow officers who had already testified or been present during testimony, there was no abuse of discretion in permitting the witness to testify. Gibby v. State, 166 Ga. App. 413, 304 S.E.2d 518 (1983).

When the assistant district attorney tried a case in another courtroom and was not present when the rule of sequestration was invoked, the fact that the assistant district attorney entered the courtroom and sat at the prosecution table, and was subsequently called to testify did not require the trial court to prohibit the assistant district attorney's testimony. Cheeks v. State, 203 Ga. App. 47, 416 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 336 (1992).

Unsequestered witness may be called after others testify. — Based upon a showing by the state of some need not to call the unsequestered witness first, the trial court is authorized, in the court's discretion, to allow the unsequestered witness to be called to the stand after other witnesses have testified. Jefferson v. State, 159 Ga. App. 740, 285 S.E.2d 213 (1981).

Admitting testimony of witness who complied with sequestration rule after defendant insisted. — Trial court did not err in allowing the owner of a burglarized house to testify without a cautionary instruction to the jury because the owner had violated the rule of sequestration by being present in court when the arresting officer testified; defendant did not show that the defendant insisted upon the rule until after the arresting officer had begun to testify, at which point it appeared the witnesses complied. Johnson v. State, 275 Ga. App. 21, 619 S.E.2d 731 (2005).

Excluding testimony of witnesses not sequestered. — Exclusion of testimony offered by a witness who has remained in the courtroom after grant of a sequestration order is within the discretion of the trial court. May v. State, 90 Ga. 793, 17 S.E. 108 (1893); Groover v. Simmons, 161 Ga. 93, 129 S.E. 778 (1925); Star Jewelers, Inc. v. Durham, 147 Ga. App. 68, 248 S.E.2d 51 (1978); Dowdy v. State, 154 Ga. App. 700, 269 S.E.2d 530 (1980).

Disregard of a sequestration order may subject the offender to punishment for contempt. Hoxie v. State, 114 Ga. 19, 39 S.E. 944 (1901); McWhorter v. State, 118 Ga. 55, 44 S.E. 873 (1903); Phillips v. State, 121 Ga. 358, 49 S.E. 290 (1904). See also Rooks v. State, 65 Ga. 330 (1880); Lassiter v. State, 67 Ga. 739 (1881); Bone v. State, 86 Ga. 108, 12 S.E. 205 (1890); Green v. State, 125 Ga. 742, 54 S.E. 724 (1906); Thomas v. State, 7 Ga. App. 615, 67 S.E. 707 (1919); Higdon v. State, 46 Ga. App. 431, 254 S.E.2d 438 (1979).

Violation of sequestration by interested parties who are not witnesses. — By permitting persons actively interested in the result of the case to intermingle with witnesses who have been ordered to be sequestered there is a probability that their testimony may be influenced and molded to the prejudice of either of the parties in the cause. Hightower v. State, 14 Ga. App. 246, 80 S.E. 684 (1914).

Violation of sequestration after testifying.

— A sequestered witness is not disqualified for reintroduction even though the witness may have heard other witnesses after testifying. Lyman v. State, 69 Ga. 404 (1882); Taylor v. State, 132 Ga. 235, 63 S.E. 1116 (1909).

Since state's witnesses to whom sheriff talked were witnesses who had already testified, and, the sheriff, who was a witness, was allowed to stay in the courtroom by consent, and the witnesses involved for the state were not called to the stand again, there was no violation of the sequestration rule. Talley v. State, 2 Ga. App. 395, 58 S.E. 667 (1907). See also Heywood v. State, 12 Ga. App. 643, 77 S.E. 1130 (1913); Hudgins v. State, 13 Ga. App. 489, 79 S.E. 367 (1913); Finley v. State, 101 Ga. App. 61, 113 S.E.2d 144 (1960).

A sequestered witness is not disqualified for reintroduction even though the witness may have heard other witnesses after testifying. Lyman v. State, 69 Ga. 404 (1882); Taylor v. State, 132 Ga. 235, 63 S.E. 1116 (1909).

Preclusion of testimony of defendant's spouse under sequestration rule proper.

— Application of the O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61 sequestration rule was discretionary, and the trial court did not err by allowing the defendant's wife to sit at the defense table and assist in the defendant's defense of a driving under the influence charge, thereby precluding the wife's testimony under the sequestration rule; moreover, if there was error, the defendant induced the error. The issues were explained to the defendant, the defendant and the wife considered the pros and cons of the wife's role as a witness, and they decided that the wife would not testify. Hernandez v. State, 297 Ga. App. 177, 676 S.E.2d 795 (2009).

Jury instructions. — Violation of the sequestration rule does not affect admissibility of the testimony, but the party's recourse is to seek instructions from the court informing the jury that the presence of the witness in the courtroom in violation of the rule should be considered in determining the weight and credit to be given to the testimony of the witness. Wright v. State, 246 Ga. 53, 268 S.E.2d 645 (1980); Jordan v. State, 247 Ga. 328, 276 S.E.2d 224 (1981).

24-9-61.1. Presence in courtroom of victim of criminal offense.

Subject to the provisions of Code Section 17-17-9, the victim of a criminal offense shall be entitled to be present in any court exercising jurisdiction over such offense. (Code 1981, § 24-9-61.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1985, p. 744, § 2; Ga. L. 2010, p. 214, § 16/HB 567.)

The 2010 amendment, effective July 1, 2010, substituted the present provisions of this Code section for the former provisions, which read: "(a) The victim of a criminal offense may be entitled to be present in any court exercising jurisdiction over such offense. It shall be within the sole discretion of the judge to implement the provisions of this Code section and determine when to allow such victim to be present in such court and, if such victim is permitted to be present, to determine the order in which the testimony of such victim shall be given.

"(b) The failure of a victim to exercise any right granted by this Code section shall not be a cause or ground for an appeal of a conviction by a defendant or for any court to set aside, reverse, or remand a criminal conviction."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discretion of court. — In a prosecution for aggravated assault, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing a victim, who was comatose and in a wheelchair, to remain in the courtroom since the victim's injuries as a result of the shooting were relevant to the accusation. Lewis v. State, 215 Ga. App. 161, 450 S.E.2d 448 (1994).

Trial court properly allowed the victim in defendant's child molestation trial to remain in court after the defense moved for sequestration, because O.C.G.A. § 24-9-61.1 provided that the victim of a criminal offense could be entitled to be present in any court exercising jurisdiction over such offense, and it was within the sole discretion of the trial judge to determine when to allow such victim to be present in such court, and as the prosecutor had requested that the victim remain present to assist in the case, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion. Flowers v. State, 255 Ga. App. 660, 566 S.E.2d 339 (2002).

Rule of sequestration was not violated. — Procedure of the trial judge in allowing the victim to remain in the courtroom while a detective and polygraph examiner testified, and then letting the victim give testimony was fully within the court's discretion and did not constitute reversible error. Shepherd v. State, 245 Ga. App. 386, 537 S.E.2d 777 (2000).

24-9-62. Treatment of witness.

It shall be the right of a witness to be examined only as to relevant matter and to be protected from improper questions and from harsh or insulting demeanor. (Civil Code 1895, § 5281; Civil Code 1910, § 5870; Code 1933, § 38-1704.)

General Consideration

In general. — Right of a witness to be protected from improper questioning must be balanced against the right of parties to a thorough and sifting cross-examination. White v. Knapp, 31 Ga. App. 344, 120 S.E. 796 (1923); Cohen v. Saffer, 43 Ga. App. 746, 160 S.E. 130 (1931); Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948); Thomas v. State, 85 Ga. App. 868, 70 S.E.2d 131 (1952); Cochran v. Neely, 123 Ga. App. 500, 181 S.E.2d 511 (1971); Wanzer v. State, 232 Ga. 523, 207 S.E.2d 466 (1974); Crawford v. State, 144 Ga. App. 622, 241 S.E.2d 492 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Stephens v. State, 245 Ga. 835, 268 S.E.2d 330 (1980).

Witness's rights under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-62 must be balanced with the party's right under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 to a thorough and sifting cross-examination. Carco Supply Co. v. Clem, 194 Ga. App. 566, 391 S.E.2d 134 (1990); Palmer v. Taylor, 215 Ga. App. 546, 451 S.E.2d 486 (1994).

Discretion of judge. — Trial judge had discretion to control the scope and manner of cross-examination and this discretion will not be curtailed absent some clear abuse. Cochran v. Neely, 123 Ga. App. 500, 181 S.E.2d 511 (1971); Whitley v. State, 137 Ga. App. 68, 223 S.E.2d 17 (1975); Redd v. State, 141 Ga. App. 888, 234 S.E.2d 812 (1977).

As a general rule, it is better that cross-examination should be too free than too restricted. Cochran v. Neely, 123 Ga. App. 500, 181 S.E.2d 511 (1971).

Questioning reluctant witnesses. — It is the privilege of counsel and the duty of courts to propound such questions to reluctant witnesses as will strip the witnesses of the subterfuges to which the witnesses resort to evade telling the truth. Kelly v. State, 19 Ga. 425 (1856).

Repeated questions. — Trial court properly prevented a defendant from questioning a witness for the fourth time as to whether the witness would tell a lie after the witness had answered the first three times with some variant of the word "no." Butler v. State, 285 Ga. 518, 678 S.E.2d 92 (2009).

293 S.E.2d 47 (1982); Green v. State, 221 Ga. App. 436, 472 S.E.2d 1 (1996).

Relevant Matter

Discretion of judge. — Relevancy and materiality of a line of question rests, even on cross-examination, largely within the discretion of the trial judge. Lancette v. State, 151 Ga. App. 740, 261 S.E.2d 405 (1979).

Trial court judge did not abuse the judge's discretion by refusing to allow the defendant to cross-examine robbery victims as to their immigration status because such testimony was not relevant to the case and there was no pending immigration proceedings against the victims. Lemons v. State, 270 Ga. App. 743, 608 S.E.2d 15 (2004).

Question for jury. — Evidence of doubtful relevancy or competency should be admitted and the weight left to the jury. Crass v. State, 150 Ga. App. 374, 257 S.E.2d 909 (1979).

Highway land condemnation. — When the question to be determined by the jury in condemnation proceedings was the value of the property at the time of the property's taking for public purposes on the date that the property was taken, which was the date that the property was condemned, the court did not err in restricting counsel in counsel's direct, rebuttal, and cross-examination of the witnesses with reference to knowledge of the condemnees that the highway was to be located at or near their property at the time they purchased the property, and in refusing to allow final argument thereon by counsel. State Hwy. Dep't v. Owens, 120 Ga. App. 647, 171 S.E.2d 770 (1969).

Improper Questions

Protection of witness. — It is the duty of the trial court to protect the witness on cross-examination from being unfairly dealt with. Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948).

Testing intelligence, memory, accuracy, or veracity. — Question propounded by counsel on cross-examination is allowable for the purpose of testing the intelligence of the witness, or memory, accuracy, and veracity, but must not be argumentative. Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948).

Illegal or immoral conduct. — Until a foundation showing the relevancy of a line of questioning is established so as to come within the "other crime" exception, one may not, under the guise of attacking the witness's credibility, ask questions suggesting illegal or immoral conduct in areas other than that before the court. Lancette v. State, 151 Ga. App. 740, 261 S.E.2d 405 (1979).

Accuracy. — When in a suit on an account, in which the defendant denied receiving a certain portion of the goods, defendant's evidence was self-contradictory and in some degree inconsistent with the testimony of other witnesses, the trial judge did not abuse the judge's discretion in permitting counsel for the plaintiff to state to the defendant, by way of cross-examination, "I want to give you one more opportunity to correct your statement that you did not receive these two shipments of merchandise." Cohen v. Saffer, 43 Ga. App. 746, 160 S.E. 130 (1931).

Veracity. — It is not proper that a question to a witness should assume that the witness has made a statement which, the witness says, the witness has not made. Sanderlin v. Sanderlin, 24 Ga. 583 (1858).

When a witness testified that the witness had previously sworn in the case, a question by the counsel asking the witness if the witness had sworn the same then as the witness does now was properly objected to by the court. Andrews v. State, 118 Ga. 1, 43 S.E. 852 (1903).

Chastity. — Witnesses cannot be impeached by showing their lack of chastity since this bears no relevance to the case. Smith v. State, 235 Ga. 327, 219 S.E.2d 440 (1975).

In a prosecution for rape, the trial court properly barred defendant's cross-examination of a police officer about whether the victim's stepfather told the officer that someone had told the stepfather that the victim was pregnant. Lee v. State, 241 Ga. App. 182, 525 S.E.2d 426 (1999).

Harsh or Insulting Demeanor

In general. — Courts will not violate the right of a witness to have excluded an irrelevant document, of an impeaching nature, for which no foundation has been laid for submission of this evidence to the jury. Taylor v. Marsh, 107 Ga. App. 575, 130 S.E.2d 770 (1963).

Speaking too loudly. — Trial court did not err by admonishing defendant's counsel for speaking too loudly when counsel questioned a 12-year old witness since the trial court did limit the type of questions that defendant could ask or in any way comment on the evidence, but rather, the trial court merely exercised the court's broad discretion to protect a witness from harsh or insulting demeanor. Schneider v. State, 267 Ga. App. 508, 603 S.E.2d 663 (2004).

Life style. — It is improper argument to infer that witnesses are not worthy of belief because the witnesses are living in the same apartment while unmarried. Smith v. State, 235 Ga. 327, 219 S.E.2d 440 (1975).

24-9-63. When leading questions allowed generally; discretion of court.

Leading questions are generally allowed only in cross-examination. However, the court may exercise discretion in granting the right to the party calling the witness and in refusing it to the opposite party when, from the conduct of the witness or other reason, justice shall require it. GENERAL CONSIDERATION

LEADING QUESTIONS PERMITTED

LEADING QUESTIONS NOT PERMITTED

General Consideration

In general. — For a question to be objectionable it must be necessarily leading. Allgood v. State, 87 Ga. 668, 13 S.E. 569 (1891).

Question is leading when it is so framed as to suggest to the witness the answer which is desired; on the other hand, a question not suggesting the desired answer is not leading if it inquires only into a single fact. Denson v. Miller, 33 Ga. 275 (1862); James v. State, 215 Ga. 213, 109 S.E.2d 735 (1959); Ealey v. State, 139 Ga. App. 110, 227 S.E.2d 902 (1976).

Judge is given latitude and discretion in permitting leading questions, and unless there has been an abuse thereof resulting in prejudice and injury there is no reversible error. Hill v. State, 41 Ga. 484 (1871); Burrus

& Williams v. Kyle & Co., 56 Ga. 24 (1876); Parker v. Georgia Pac. Ry., 83 Ga. 539, 10 S.E. 233 (1889); Doster v. State, 93 Ga. 43, 18 S.E. 997 (1893); *Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. (1976); Tucker v. Mappin, 149 Ga. App. 847, 256 S.E.2d 135 (1979); Booker v. State, 156 Ga. App. 40, 274 S.E.2d 84 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 247 Ga. 74, 274 S.E.2d 334 (1981); *Hamby v. Court may, in the exercise of the court's discretion, permit a party calling a witness to propound leading questions. Hamby v. State, 158 Ga. App. 265, 279 S.E.2d 715 (1981).

Trial court is permitted to exercise the court's discretion in granting the right to the party calling the witness to ask leading questions, and reversible error occurs only if that discretion has been abused to the extent that the appealing party has been prejudiced and injured. Blue Cross of Georgia/Columbus, Inc. v. Whatley, 180 Ga. App. 93, 348 S.E.2d 459 (1986).

Objection required. — If no objection is made to the asking of leading questions, the allowance of such questions will furnish no ground for a new trial. Cotton States Life Ins. Co. v. Edwards, 74 Ga. 220 (1884).

Defendant must demonstrate specific instances of abuse of discretion on appeal. — When defendant fails to demonstrate that the trial court abused the court's discretion in permitting the state on specific occasions to lead the state's witnesses, this precludes the Court of Appeals from finding error in the trial court's exercise of discretion. Hammond v. State, 157 Ga. App. 647, 278 S.E.2d 188 (1981).

Leading Questions Permitted

Bill for discovery. — Leading questions may be propounded in a bill for discovery. Cade v. Hatcher, 72 Ga. 359 (1884).

Leading questions were permitted on cross-examination, and a trial court did not err in allowing questions to a defendant on cross-examination about whether defendant had heard the testimony of an earlier witness. Brown v. State, 265 Ga. App. 613, 594 S.E.2d 770 (2004).

Judge may personally ask leading questions. Smith v. State, 11 Ga. App. 89, 74 S.E. 711 (1912). See also White v. State, 56 Ga. 358 (1876).

Interest adverse to questioning party. — When the vouchee was subpoenaed by plaintiff and sworn as his witness, his interest was adverse to that of defendant, and his testimony was material and relevant to defendant's defense, there is no abuse of discretion of the trial court in permitting the voucher to cross-examine the vouchee. Clary Appliance & Furn. Ctr., Inc. v. Butler, 139 Ga. App. 233, 228 S.E.2d 211 (1976).

Unfriendly witnesses may be asked leading questions. Moore v. State, 130 Ga. 322, 60 S.E. 544 (1908); Morgan v. State, 17 Ga. App. 124, 86 S.E. 281 (1915). See also Nalley v. State, 11 Ga. App. 15, 74 S.E. 567 (1912).

Unwilling witnesses may be led, as a rule, especially where contumacious or equivocal. Durham v. State, 70 Ga. 264 (1883).

Nervous, ignorant, or hostile witness. — Trial court has the discretion to allow leading questions on direct examination where, for example, the witness is nervous, ignorant, or hostile. Fugate v. State, 263 Ga. 260, 431 S.E.2d 104 (1993); Crowder v. State, 222 Ga. App. 351, 474 S.E.2d 246 (1996); Smith v. State, 243 Ga. App. 331, 533 S.E.2d 431 (2000).

Favorable and willing witnesses. — Trial judge is given great latitude and discretion in permitting counsel to examine and lead a witness in an effort to get to the true facts, even though the witness may be a favorable and willing one; and, therefore, ordinarily, and unless there has been a palpable and illegal abuse of the above discretion resulting in prejudice and injury to the complaining party in a material manner, reversible error will not be predicated by this court upon rulings of the trial court as to allowance of leading questions in examination of a witness. Hawthorne v. Pope, 51 Ga. App. 498, 180 S.E. 920 (1935).

Favorable witness who has repudiated testimony. — When an alleged co-conspirator was sworn and testified as a witness for the state, but on cross-examination repudiated the witness's testimony given on direct examination, and testified that the witness's evidence on direct examination had been given on account of threats and intimidation made by a police officer who had told the witness what to say, it was proper to permit the prosecutor to cross-examine the witness for the purpose of showing entrapment, and in this way to prove that the accomplice witness had made statements after the pendency of the alleged conspiracy, but prior to the date of the witness's alleged intimidation, which corroborated the witness's testimony given on direct examination by the state. Mitchell v. State, 202 Ga. 247, 42 S.E.2d 767 (1947).

Witness sworn but not examined. — Witness who is sworn but not examined by a party may be asked leading questions by the opposing party. Brown v. State, 28 Ga. 199 (1859). See also Lunday v. Thomas, 26 Ga. 537 (1858).

Children and like minded persons. — Judge, when need appears, will ordinarily permit leading questions to children, or to witnesses so ignorant, timid, weakminded, or deficient in the English language that they cannot otherwise be brought to understand what information is sought. McCrary v. State, 137 Ga. 784, 74 S.E. 536 (1912); Hayslip v. State, 154 Ga. App. 835, 270 S.E.2d 61 (1980).

In a defendant's prosecution for aggravated child molestation under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(b), the prosecutor was properly permitted to use leading questions under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-63 during the victim's direct examination as the victim was only 14 at the time of trial, was often non-responsive, spoke very softly, and exhibited signs of timidity and fear. Bell v. State, 294 Ga. App. 779, 670 S.E.2d 476 (2008).

Questioning a young female relating to matters of a sexual character. Keller v. State, 102 Ga. 506, 31 S.E. 92 (1897); Wade v. State, 11 Ga. App. 411, 75 S.E. 494 (1912), later appeal, 13 Ga. App. 142, 78 S.E. 863 (1913); Hanson v. State, 86 Ga. App. 313, 71 S.E.2d 720 (1952).

Parties as witnesses. — Leading questions may be allowed although the witness called may be one of the opposite parties to the case. Cade v. Hatcher, 72 Ga. 359 (1884); Cotton States Life Ins. Co. v. Edwards, 74 Ga. 220 (1884).

Even though a witness is not hostile but is favorable, as if the witness is a party, or is the injured female in a criminal prosecution for seduction, the reviewing court will not control the trial judge's discretion in allowing leading questions, and a new trial will not be granted in such case unless it is plainly apparent that the judge in the exercise of that discretion manifestly abused the discretion, and that thereby the defendant suffered harm. Hanson v. State, 86 Ga. App. 313, 71 S.E.2d 720 (1952).

It was not objectionable as a leading question to ask a witness, "Do you know that boy over there?" pointing at the prisoner. Paschal v. State, 89 Ga. 303, 15 S.E. 322 (1892).

It was held not a leading question to ask a witness whether or not designated language was used in a given occasion. Fountain v. State, 7 Ga. App. 559, 67 S.E. 218 (1910).

Question, "You know anything about making up any money to buy whiskey?" was held not objectionable. Hinsman v. State, 14 Ga. App. 481, 81 S.E. 367 (1914).

When the plaintiff is called as a defense witness upon an objection to the witness being recalled for further cross-examination, this tactic entitles counsel for the plaintiff to cross-examine the witness just like any other defense witness, and while the court can, in the court's discretion, prohibit counsel from posing leading questions, there is no abuse of discretion in allowing the questions. Mercer v. Woodard, 166 Ga. App. 119, 303 S.E.2d 475 (1983).

Witness with speech impediment. — It was not an abuse of the trial court's discretion to permit one instance of leading a witness who testified that the witness suffered from a speech impediment. Parker v. State, 172 Ga. App. 540, 323 S.E.2d 826 (1984).

Language barrier. — When a witness exhibited a language barrier, to the extent that the court reporter had a hard time understanding the witness's answers to be able to adequately transcribe the answers, despite the fact that the witness spoke English, the trial court properly allowed the state to ask the witness leading questions. Dumas v. State, 283 Ga. App. 279, 641 S.E.2d 271 (2007).

Insurer's cross-examination of own witness. — Insurer was entitled to cross-examine insurer's own witness where witness was determined to have played a key part in case by, inter alia, finding items of importance matchable to plaintiff's car. Although witness did not concededly fall within the expressly authorized categories in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81, O.C.G.A. § 24-9-63 permitted such testimony in the interests of justice. Hicks v. Doe, 206 Ga. App. 596, 426 S.E.2d 174 (1992).

Treatment of hostile witness. — When a state's witness was nervous, attempted to evade the prosecutor's questions, and, when asked if the witness would tell the jury what happened at the time of the shooting, the witness said the witness would "rather not," the trial court properly allowed the state to treat the witness as a hostile witness and ask the witness leading questions. Culler v. State, 277 Ga. 717, 594 S.E.2d 631 (2004).

Cross-examination of one's own witness. — Trial court properly allowed a wife to cross-examine two of her own witnesses to show that the husband fraudulently conveyed marital assets to a close friend and to a sister in anticipation of the divorce, as such a determination was within the trial court's discretion pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-63. Lanier v. Lanier, 278 Ga. 881, 608 S.E.2d 213 (2005).

Leading Questions Not Permitted

Party's own witness. — When the question to which an objection was sustained was leading in nature, it was not properly propounded on redirect examination of defendant's own witness. P.D. v. State, 151 Ga. App. 662, 261 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

After unfavorable answer. — Mere fact that an unfavorable answer was given by the witness would not demand that counsel be allowed to ask leading questions of such witness so that a refusal to permit such questions would be an abuse of discretion. Perkins v. Edwards, 228 Ga. 470, 186 S.E.2d 109 (1971); Tucker v. Mappin, 149 Ga. App. 847, 256 S.E.2d 135 (1979).

On trial for assault with intent to rape, a question asked of prosecutor, "Did defendant attempt to strip up your clothes," was held too leading. Wade v. State, 12 Ga. 25 (1852).

ANALYSIS

RIGHT OF CROSS-EXAMINATION

SCOPE OF CROSS-EXAMINATION

1. IN GENERAL
2. DISCRETION OF JUDGE
3. SPECIFIC APPLICATIONS

General Consideration

Purpose of cross-examination is to provide a searching test of the intelligence, memory, accuracy, and veracity of the witness, and it is better for cross-examination to be too free than too restricted. Carroll v. Hill, 80 Ga. App. 576, 56 S.E.2d 821 (1949); Russell v. Bass, 82 Ga. App. 659, 62 S.E.2d 456 (1950); Sammons v. Webb, 86 Ga. App. 382, 71 S.E.2d 832 (1952); Ledford v. State, 89 Ga. App. 683, 80 S.E.2d 828 (1954).

Exposure of blundering witness. — There must be allowed some degree of skill, if not sharpness, in conducting cross-examinations because a witness, however fair and honest and truthful, may not be careful enough; and it is to the interest of justice to expose the blundering of a witness, as well as the witness’s willful departures from veracity. Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948).

Exposure of a witness’s motivation in testifying is a proper and important function of the constitutionally protected right of cross-examination. Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911 (1982).

State’s right to cross-examine. — State, like any other party, has the right to conduct a thorough and sifting cross-examination of a witness. Gentry v. State, 226 Ga. App. 216, 485 S.E.2d 824 (1997).

More than one party examining witness.

— An appellate court will not interfere with the action of the trial judge in allowing “double” or “multiple” cross-examination of witnesses, particularly in a situation involving more than two parties, absent a showing of manifest abuse of discretion. Smith v. Poteet, 127 Ga. App. 735, 195 S.E.2d 213 (1972).

Second sentence, applicable in cases where there is more than one party on one side, requires only that those parties have “distinct interests,” not necessarily opposing interests. Lavender v. Wilkins, 237 Ga. 510, 228 S.E.2d 888 (1976).

Depositions. — When a witness is examined by commission, the party cross-examining may withdraw the party’s cross questions if the party chooses — the other party having the liberty to read them at that party’s option. Williams v. C. & G.H. Kelsey & Halsted, 6 Ga. 365 (1849).

Prior thorough cross-examination of a witness unavailable at a trial. — When the preliminary hearing testimony of an unavailable witness is subject to extensive cross-examination, its admission at trial does not abridge the defendant’s right of cross-examination. Moody v. State, 273 Ga. 24, 537 S.E.2d 666 (2000).

Ex parte affidavits should not be allowed in evidence in any trial since the evidence is finally adjudicated because admission denies the privilege of cross-examination. Camp v. Camp, 213 Ga. 65, 97 S.E.2d 125 (1957); Hunsucker v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 73, 137 S.E.2d 43 (1964); Hartley v. Caldwell, 233 Ga. 333, 155 S.E.2d 389 (1967).

Records in regular course of business. — Trial courts of the state may not consider reports of the welfare departments of the counties in the trial of a case involving the custody of minors, and it is reversible error to consider such matter. Rather, the person or persons who made the investigation should be produced in court and submitted to cross-examination. Camp v. Camp, 213 Ga. 65, 97 S.E.2d 125 (1957).

Ga. L. 1952, p. 177, §§ 1-3 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-14) did not authorize the admission of a written record without cross-examination of the author under former Code 1933, § 38-1705 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64). Knudsen v. Duffee-Freeman, Inc., 95 Ga. App. 872, 99 S.E.2d 370 (1957).

Statute sets forth the right of every party to cross-examination, thorough and sifting, of the witnesses called against that party, and a trial court’s consideration of an ex parte report submitted by a psychiatrist of the psychiatrist’s evaluation of defendant denied the defendant of this right. Rudd v. State, 150 Ga. App. 255, 257 S.E.2d 348 (1979).

Interrogatory procedure wherein a plaintiff propounded interrogatories to be answered by the plaintiff, with both the defendant and defendant’s counsel excluded, thus denying the defendant the right to cross-examination, is wholly void. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 217 Ga. 234, 123 S.E.2d 115 (1961), overruled on other grounds, Scherer v. Scherer, 249 Ga. 635, 292 S.E.2d 662 (1982).

Assignment of error. — Rule that a party who complains of the rejection of oral testimony must show that the court was informed as to what the witness would answer does not apply to cross-examination. Macon Union Coop. Ass’n v. Chance, 31 Ga. App. 636, 122 S.E. 66 (1924); City of La Grange v. Pound, 50 Ga. App. 219, 177 S.E. 762 (1934); McKoy v. Enterkin, 181 Ga. 447, 182 S.E. 518 (1935); Harrison v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 99 Ga. App. 762, 109 S.E.2d 854 (1959); Cambron v. Canal Ins. Co., 246 Ga. 147, 269 S.E.2d 426 (1980).

State’s cross-examination of defendant’s spouse does not put the defendant’s character in evidence. There is no prejudice to the defendant arising from such cross-examination; thus, no rebuke of the district attorney, instruction of the jury, or mistrial is required. Beasley v. State, 168 Ga. App. 255, 308 S.E.2d 560 (1983).

Right of Cross-Examination

In general. — Right of cross-examination is a substantial right, the preservation of which is essential to a proper administration of justice, and extends to all matters within the knowledge of the witness, the disclosure of which is material to the controversy; and being a substantial right, it should never be abridged or denied by the court. Lunday v. Thomas, 26 Ga. 537 (1858); News Publishing Co. v. Butler, 95 Ga. 559, 22 S.E. 282 (1895); Barnwell v. Hannegan, 105 Ga. 396, 31 S.E. 116 (1898); Huff v. State, 106 Ga. 432, 32 S.E. 348 (1899); Atlanta & B. Air-Line Ry. v. McManus, 1 Ga. App. 302, 58 S.E. 258 (1907); Becker v. Donaldson, 133 Ga. 864, 67 S.E. 92 (1910); Brundage v. State, 14 Ga. App. 254, 228 S.E.2d 152 (1976); Fair v. State, 140 Ga. App. 281, 231 S.E.2d 1 (1976); Birge v. State, 143 Ga. App. 632, 239 S.E.2d 395 (1977); Bramblett v. State, 139 Ga. App. 745, 229 S.E.2d 484 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 336, 236 S.E.2d 580 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1013, 98 S. Ct. 728, 54 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1978); Crawford v. State, 144 Ga. App. 622, 241 S.E.2d 492 (1978); Goldgar v. Galbraith, 155 Ga. App. 429, 270 S.E.2d 833 (1980); Miller v. State, 155 Ga. App. 587, 271 S.E.2d 719 (1980).

When a witness is sworn by one party, the other party has the right to cross-examine the witness at large. Lunday v. Thomas, 26 Ga. 537 (1858); Brown v. State, 28 Ga. 199 (1859); McRae v. Boykin, 50 Ga. App. 866, 179 S.E. 535 (1935), rev'd on other grounds, 182 Ga. 252, 185 S.E. 246 (1936).

Although the defendant's plea had been stricken, and although the defendant had no right to introduce any evidence, yet when the plaintiff, in order to make out plaintiff's case and secure a verdict, found it necessary to impanel a jury and to introduce witnesses to testify to facts not appearing on the face of the notes sued upon, the defendant, through defense counsel, had a right to cross-examine the witnesses. Daniel v. Georgia R.R. Bank, 44 Ga. App. 787, 163 S.E. 311 (1932).

Although the scope of the cross-examination is not unlimited, every party has a right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of opposing witnesses, the scope of which examination rests largely within the discretion of the trial judge. Jackson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 604, 278 S.E.2d 5 (1981).

Party has the right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of the witnesses called against the party and, usually, to conduct that examination by use of leading questions. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 418, 314 S.E.2d 210, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 873, 105 S. Ct. 230, 83 L. Ed. 2d 159 (1984).

Witness's rights under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-62 must be balanced with the party's right under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 to a thorough and sifting cross-examination. Carco Supply Co. v. Clem, 194 Ga. App. 566, 391 S.E.2d 134 (1990); Palmer v. Taylor, 215 Ga. App. 546, 451 S.E.2d 486 (1994).

Child witness's unresponsiveness to a number of questions as put by defendant did not constitute a deprivation of defendant's constitutional confrontation right so as to require that the witness's out-of-court statements be stricken since the defendant was not denied the right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of a witness who appeared to answer as well as the witness was capable of answering. Bright v. State, 197 Ga. App. 784, 400 S.E.2d 18 (1990).

Trial court committed plain error by improperly bolstering the victims' credibility when the judge asked a witness specific questions regarding the victims, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57, and the error was compounded when the trial court denied defendant the right to cross-examine the witness, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64, in an attempt to rebut the bolstering of the victims' credibility that was performed by the trial court. Craft v. State, 274 Ga. App. 410, 618 S.E.2d 104 (2005).

Employer entitled to cross-examine in workers' compensation case. — In a worker's compensation case, the administrative law judge erred in preventing the employer from pursuing the employer's right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of the claimant because, as a defense, evidence tending to show a motive for malingering was relevant. David Jordan Logging Co. v. Sales, 203 Ga. App. 410, 416 S.E.2d 803, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 803 (1992).

Right does not apply to irrelevant information. — Judgment in favor of the plaintiffs in a medical malpractice action was affirmed; trial court did not prevent defendants from cross-examining plaintiffs' expert as to plaintiff's expert's mental illnesses in violation of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64, but only from cross-examining the expert as to a prior suit for disability benefits which was irrelevant. Fredericks v. Hall, 275 Ga. App. 412, 620 S.E.2d 638 (2005).

Reliance of expert on report. — By giving a report written by the defendant and sent to plaintiff's counsel for "informational purposes" to plaintiff's expert, the defendant violated the agreement between the parties not to use it in the litigation, and reliance on the report by defendant's expert required allowing the plaintiff to cross-examine that expert using the report. Lewis v. Emory Univ., 235 Ga. App. 811, 509 S.E.2d 635 (1998).

No cross-examination when no direct examination. — Trial court did not err in preventing the defendant from cross-examining the investigating officer, about an incriminating statement made by the defendant, after the state introduced evidence concerning the statement. O.C.G.A. § 24-3-38 ("When an admission is given in evidence by one party, it shall be the right of the other party to have the whole admission and all the conversation connected therewith admitted into evidence") and O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 were inapplicable because there had been no direct examination relating to any part of the statement by the state. Davis v. State, 261 Ga. 382, 405 S.E.2d 648 (1991).

Designation of witness as hostile. — It was not error for trial judge to refuse to permit defendant to have police officer designated a hostile witness so that the officer could be called as a witness for cross-examination, where it was not shown that the witness was hostile; and where it appeared from the record that counsel was allowed to ask leading questions substantially identical to the question counsel complained was not permitted. Williams v. State, 164 Ga. App. 562, 298 S.E.2d 282 (1982).

New trial for denial of right. — Substantial denial of the right of cross-examination is good cause for the grant of a new trial. Hall v. State, 117 Ga. 263, 43 S.E. 718 (1903); Becker v. Donalson, 133 Ga. 864, 67 S.E. 92 (1910); McRae v. Boykin, 50 Ga. App. 866, 179 S.E. 535 (1935), rev'd on other grounds, 182 Ga. 252, 185 S.E. 246 (1936); Thompson v. State, 181 Ga. 620, 183 S.E. 566 (1936); Clifton v. State, 187 Ga. 502, 2 S.E.2d 102 (1939); Corley v. State, 64 Ga. App. 841, 14 S.E.2d 121 (1941); Cameron v. State, 66 Ga. App. 414, 18 S.E.2d 16 (1941); Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139 (1943); Hyde v. State, 70 Ga. App. 823, 29 S.E.2d 820 (1944); Smith v. Davis, 76 Ga. App. 154, 45 S.E.2d 237 (1947); Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948); Western & Atl. R.R. v. Burnett, 79 Ga. App. 530, 54 S.E.2d 357 (1949); Russell v. Bass, 82 Ga. App. 659, 62 S.E.2d 456 (1950); Griffin v. State, 85 Ga. App. 602, 69 S.E.2d 665 (1952); Chambers v. State, 88 Ga. App. 57, 76 S.E.2d 84 (1953); Harrison v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 99 Ga. App. 762, 109 S.E.2d 854 (1959); Sutton v. State Hwy. Dep't, 103 Ga. App. 29, 118 S.E.2d 285 (1961); Morris v. State, 150 Ga. App. 94, 256 S.E.2d 674 (1979).

Motion for new trial was not granted when defendant learned after the trial that witness who testified at trial but was not cross-examined had information of value to defendant's case. Hall v. State, 117 Ga. 263, 43 S.E. 718 (1903).

Curing refusal to allow cross-examination. — Error in refusing to allow defendant to cross-examine a witness is not cured because the witness is subsequently introduced by defendant and examined as to the facts. White v. Dinkins, 19 Ga. 285 (1856).

Personal examination by defendant. — Prisoner's rights are not violated if the prisoner is refused the privilege of personally cross-examining a hostile witness after the prisoner has stood by approvingly while the prisoner's counsel has conducted a thorough cross-examination. Roberts v. State, 14 Ga. 8, 58 Am. Dec. 528 (1853).

Codefendant's cross-examination of witness. — Trial court's sustaining of an objection by defendant's codefendant to the former's cross-examination of a police officer regarding a prior consistent statement made to the officer did not violate defendant's right to cross-examination, since the court indicated that if defendant testified defendant could then cross-examine the officer on the statement. Wilson v. State, 227 Ga. App. 59, 488 S.E.2d 121 (1997).

Right to subpoena crime lab work product. — Broad right of cross-examination afforded by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 allows a defendant the right to subpoena data relied upon by the state crime lab chemist, including graphs generated from gas chromatography. Price v. State, 269 Ga. 222, 498 S.E.2d 262 (1998).

Calling witnesses. — It does not abridge the defendant's right of confrontation and cross-examination for the court to refuse to require the state to summon a witness not relied on by the state to make out its case before the jury as a witness. Bonds v. State, 232 Ga. 694, 208 S.E.2d 561 (1974).

Witness not called to testify. — Trial court did not err in refusing to allow defendant to cross-examine an officer who was present when the defendant made defendant's incriminating statement since this witness was not called to testify and did not present any direct testimony against defendant. Billings v. State, 212 Ga. App. 125, 441 S.E.2d 262 (1994).

Opposite party. — Defendant in a criminal case may be cross-examined with defendant's consent, but if defendant offers oneself for cross-examination there is no obligation upon the prosecution to conduct it. Roberson v. State, 12 Ga. App. 102, 76 S.E. 752 (1912); Jones v. State, 18 Ga. App. 285, 89 S.E. 303 (1916).

When counsel for plaintiff calls defendant as a witness against oneself in order to prove only one point, the law permits the counsel for defendant to cross-examine the client. National Land & Coal Co. v. Zugar, 171 Ga. 228, 155 S.E. 7 (1930).

When a party to a suit calls the opposing party to the stand as a witness, it is within the discretion of the judge to refuse to prohibit the counsel for the opposing party from asking leading questions on cross-examination, and the fact that the court allowed the cross-questions complained of does not show such abuse of discretion as to authorize the grant of a new trial. Akridge v. Atlanta Journal Co., 56 Ga. App. 812, 194 S.E. 590 (1937).

Right of cross-examination of the opposite party does not include the right to require that party's presence in court, and such party may not be compelled to attend court except in the manner as other witnesses are required to attend court by subpoena. Johnston v. Dollar, 89 Ga. App. 876, 81 S.E.2d 502 (1954).

Right to cross examine guardian ad litem. — Trial court erred in depriving one parent and grandparent of the opportunity to question the guardian ad litem regarding the results of an investigation as the burden was theirs to establish that the child would be harmed if returned to the other parent and that it was in the best interest of the child to remain with the grandparent. Thus, the trial court's order deprived them of the opportunity to establish facts in support of their position that the child should remain in the grandparent's custody. Simmons v. Williams, 290 Ga. App. 644, 660 S.E.2d 435 (2008).

Admission of hearsay evidence violates right to cross-examination. — When officer testified that witness told the officer that the defendant had sold the witness drugs, this hearsay evidence was improperly admitted and deprived defendant of the right to cross-examination. Welch v. State, 231 Ga. App. 74, 498 S.E.2d 555 (1998).

Hearsay evidence. — Excluding testimony that was purely hearsay did not deny the right of a thorough and sifting cross-examination. Bell v. State, 71 Ga. App. 430, 31 S.E.2d 109 (1944).

Scope of Cross-Examination1. In General

Thorough and sifting cross-examination. — Right of thorough and sifting cross-examination extends to all matters within the knowledge of the witness, the disclosure of which is material to the controversy. Huff v. State, 106 Ga. 432, 32 S.E. 348 (1899); White v. State, 121 Ga. 191, 48 S.E. 941 (1904); Hagood v. State, 5 Ga. App. 80, 62 S.E. 641 (1908); Hart v. State, 14 Ga. App. 364, 80 S.E. 909 (1913); Richards v. Harpe, 42 Ga. App. 123, 155 S.E. 85 (1930); Faulk v. State, 47 Ga. App. 804, 171 S.E. 570 (1933); Williamson, Inman & Co. v. Thompson, 50 Ga. When one side calls and examines a witness, though only on a single point, the other has the right to cross-examine the witness on every point. Dawson v. Callaway, 18 Ga. 573 (1855); Aiken v. Cato, 23 Ga. 154 (1857); News Publishing Co. v. Butler, 95 Ga. 559, 22 S.E. 282 (1895); National Land & Coal Co. v. Zugar, 171 Ga. 228, 155 S.E. 7 (1930); McRae v. Boykin, 50 Ga. App. 866, 179 S.E. 535 (1935), rev'd on other grounds, 182 Ga. 252, 185 S.E. 246 (1936).

Right of cross examination is a substantial right, the preservation of which is essential to the proper administration of justice and extends to all matters within the knowledge of the witness, the disclosure of which is material to the controversy; this right should not be abridged. James v. State, 260 Ga. App. 536, 580 S.E.2d 334 (2003).

Right not unlimited. — Although it is true that the right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination may not be abridged, that right is not unlimited. Anderson v. State, 165 Ga. App. 885, 303 S.E.2d 57 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 252 Ga. 103, 312 S.E.2d 113 (1984).

Court did not improperly restrict defendant's right of cross-examination of a state's witness since the testimony sought to be elicited would have been cumulative of other testimony. Gaither v. State, 259 Ga. 200, 378 S.E.2d 464 (1989).

Victim's probation status improperly examined. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in limiting the scope of defendant's cross-examination of the alleged crime victim to exclude questioning the victim as to the victim's probation status. Bogan v. State, 206 Ga. App. 696, 426 S.E.2d 392 (1992).

Inquiry into domestic dispute disallowed in kidnapping case. — Trial court properly restricted defendant's cross-examination of wife's alleged affair, as the cause of the couple's separation was not relevant to the issues before the jury. Williams v. State, 207 Ga. App. 371, 427 S.E.2d 846 (1993).

Limiting examination to relevant matters by proper questioning. — Right of cross-examination is not abridged when examination is limited by trial court to relevant matters by proper questioning. Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 333, 280 S.E.2d 379 (1981); Palmer v. State, 186 Ga. App. 892, 369 S.E.2d 38, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 918, 369 S.E.2d 38 (1988); Mitchell v. State, 200 Ga. App. 146, 407 S.E.2d 115 (1991).

Cross-examination covers relevant subjects and not just matters elicited on direct examination. — Right of cross-examination in Georgia includes questioning a witness about subjects relevant to any of the issues in the case, not simply those matters elicited on direct examination. James v. State, 260 Ga. App. 536, 580 S.E.2d 334 (2003).

Privilege. — Right of cross-examination must be tempered and restricted so as not to infringe on privileged areas. Hornsby v. State, 139 Ga. App. 254, 228 S.E.2d 152 (1976).

Redirect examination. — Whether or not new matter is introduced on redirect and even though no reason shown why, through inadvertence or mistake, certain questions have been omitted, it is entirely within the discretion of the trial judge to permit further examination by either side. King v. Thompson, 59 Ga. 380 (1877); Faulk v. State, 47 Ga. App. 804, 171 S.E. 570 (1933).

Redirect examination and recross are, strictly speaking, not for the purpose of introducing new matter, but the judge in the judge's discretion may permit the questioner to inquire about something which the judge should have asked about during an earlier step but which was overlooked. Goodrum v. State, 158 Ga. App. 602, 281 S.E.2d 254 (1981).

Documents. — When the relevancy of documents which may be used as evidence appears, it is error to unduly restrict the cross-examination relating to such documents. Ledford v. State, 89 Ga. App. 683, 80 S.E.2d 828 (1954); Snelling v. State, 215 Ga. App. 263, 450 S.E.2d 299 (1994).

Prior drug sales. — Trial court did not err in permitting cross-examination of defendant regarding prior drug sales held admissible to prove identity. Nuckles v. State, 207 Ga. App. 63, 427 S.E.2d 54 (1993).

Conduct exceeding authorized scope. — Conduct of defense counsel exceeded the authorized scope of cross-examination after counsel injected independent non-testimonial evidence by lifting defendant's shirt to show defendant's body brace. State v. Battaglia, 221 Ga. App. 283, 470 S.E.2d 755 (1996).

2. Discretion of Judge

In general. — Scope of cross-examination rests largely within the discretion of the trial judge to control this right within reasonable bounds, and this discretion will not be reviewed unless it is abused. Woolfolk v. State, 85 Ga. 69, 11 S.E. 814 (1890); News Publishing Co. v. Butler, 95 Ga. 559, 22 S.E. 282 (1895); Fouraker v. State, 4 Ga. App. 692, 62 S.E. 116 (1908); Cohen v. Saffer, 43 Ga. App. 746, 160 S.E. 130 (1931); Fields v. State, 46 Ga. App. 287, 167 S.E. 337 (1932); Clifton v. State, 187 Ga. 502, 2 S.E.2d 102 (1939); Sweat v. State, 63 Ga. App. 299, 11 S.E.2d 40 (1940); Haugabrooks v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 63 Ga. App. 829, 12 S.E.2d 163 (1940); Corley v. State, 64 Ga. App. 841, 14 S.E.2d 121 (1941); Richter v. Atlantic Co., 65 Ga. App. 605, 16 S.E.2d 259 (1941); Cameron v. State, 66 Ga. App. 414, 18 S.E.2d 16 (1941); Pulliam v. State, 196 Ga. 782, 28 S.E.2d 139 (1943); Hyde v. State, 70 Ga. App. 823, 29 S.E.2d 820 (1944); Post v. State, 201 Ga. 81, 39 S.E.2d 1 (1946); White v. State, 74 Ga. App. 634, 40 S.E.2d 782 (1946); Smith v. Davis, 76 Ga. App. 154, 45 S.E.2d 237 (1947); Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948); Western & Atl. R.R. v. Burnett, 79 Ga. App. 530, 54 S.E.2d 357 (1949); Carroll v. Hill, 80 Ga. App. 546, 287 S.E.2d 584 (1981); Gibson v. State, 160 Ga. App. 615, 287 S.E.2d 595 (1981); Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911 (1982); Anderson v. State, 165 Ga. App. 885, 303 S.E.2d 57 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 252 Ga. 103, 312 S.E.2d 113 (1984); Price v. State, 179 Ga. App. 691, 347 S.E.2d 365 (1986).

Extent of cross-examination can be curtailed if the inquiry is not relevant or material, and such restriction lies within the discretion of the trial court which will not be disturbed on appeal unless manifestly abused. Fitzgerald v. State, 166 Ga. App. 307, 304 S.E.2d 114 (1983); Opatut v. Guest Pond Club, Inc., 188 Ga. App. 478, 373 S.E.2d 372 (1988); Stevens v. State, 213 Ga. App. 293, 444 S.E.2d 840 (1994).

Although a defendant is entitled to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of a witness, the scope of such cross-examination is within the sound discretion of the trial court. White v. State, 253 Ga. 106, 317 S.E.2d 196 (1984); Scott v. State, 178 Ga. App. 222, 343 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

Scope of cross-examination is within the sound discretion of the trial judge. This discretion will not be disturbed by an appellate court unless manifestly abused. Thomas v. Clark, 188 Ga. App. 606, 373 S.E.2d 668 (1988).

Although a defendant is entitled to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of the state's witnesses, within carefully protected legal parameters, the scope of cross-examination lies within the sound discretion of the trial court and this discretion will not be disturbed by an appellate court absent manifest abuse. There was no error in a trial court's restrictions of cross examination of the victims of sexual abuse relating to whether defendant had molested other children. Pope v. State, 266 Ga. App. 602, 597 S.E.2d 632 (2004).

Scope of cross-examination is not unlimited. The extent necessarily must rest largely within the discretion of the trial judge in order to keep the questioning within reasonable bounds. The extent of cross examination can be curtailed if the inquiry is not relevant nor material. Harris v. State, 168 Ga. App. 159, 308 S.E.2d 406 (1983); Williamson v. State, 186 Ga. App. 589, 367 S.E.2d 863 (1988).

Trial court can exercise the court's discretion in keeping the defendant's cross-examination of the state's witnesses within reasonable bounds and in curtailing the cross-examination if the inquiry is not relevant or material. Samuels v. State, 174 Ga. App. 684, 331 S.E.2d 62 (1985).

Regulation of scope of cross-examination is within sound discretion of trial court and this discretion will not be controlled unless it is manifestly abused. DOT v. 2.734 Acres of Land, 168 Ga. App. 541, 309 S.E.2d 816 (1983).

rial, and such restriction lies within the discretion of the trial court, which will not be disturbed on appeal unless manifestly abused. Fletcher v. State, 197 Ga. App. 112, 397 S.E.2d 605 (1990); Stevens v. State, 213 Ga. App. 293, 444 S.E.2d 840 (1994).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in refusing to allow the defendant to use a videotape of the defendant's daughter, concerning the defendant's alleged sexual abuse of the defendant's daughter, in the cross-examination of the defendant's daughter; however, the error was harmless because the subject matter was covered later during the trial when the entirety of the videotape was played and because the defendant had the opportunity to verbally cross-examine the daughter during the state's case regarding the daughter's former statements to authorities. Courrier v. State, 270 Ga. App. 622, 607 S.E.2d 221 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 in limiting defendant's ability to cross-examine a police officer as the limits were within the scope of the trial court's discretion and did not violate defendant's confrontation rights; the trial court allowed defendant to cross-examine the officer as to the officer's experience and training, but limited the questioning as to other DUI arrests that the officer had made. Drogan v. State, 272 Ga. App. 645, 613 S.E.2d 195 (2005).

Trial court judge did not abuse the court's discretion in limiting the defendant's cross-examination of a detective who had taken a statement from the defendant shortly after being apprehended because, even assuming the restriction was erroneous during the defendant's trial for involuntary manslaughter and reckless conduct, the overwhelming evidence established the defendant's guilt, including the uncontroverted evidence that the defendant brandished and fired the weapon at the deceased victim, which made the error harmless. Anaya-Plasencia v. State, 283 Ga. App. 728, 642 S.E.2d 401 (2007).

Trial court did not improperly limit the defendant's cross-examination to matters material to the issues as: (1) whether the victim had a boyfriend that a parent disapproved of was irrelevant; (2) there was no indication by the evidence that the victim was trying to explain away evidence of a relationship with one man by attributing that evidence to another; and (3) it was illogical for the victim to have fabricated a claim of child molestation. Gaines v. State, 285 Ga. App. 654, 647 S.E.2d 357 (2007).

There was sufficient evidence to support a defendant's convictions on two counts of armed robbery, and the trial court did not err by failing to grant the defendant's motion for a directed verdict, based on both victims' identification of the defendant; the defendant being found in a nearby location to the truck stop where the attacks occurred walking rapidly away; and the defendant being found with exactly the amount of cash taken from one victim. The trial court properly limited the defendant's cross-examination of the arresting officer to the length of the police report and the lack of details therein, and did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to allow defense counsel to ask the officer about the length of time that suspects may spend in custody pre-trial, as that issue was irrelevant to any issue in the case. Burden v. State, 296 Ga. App. 441, 674 S.E.2d 668 (2009).

Trial court may restrict scope of cross-examination to matters relevant to issues being tried, and results of the exercise of that discretion will not be interfered with unless the discretion was manifestly abused. Ayers v. Carter, 159 Ga. App. 680, 285 S.E.2d 55 (1981); Fowler v. State, 171 Ga. App. 491, 320 S.E.2d 219 (1984); Banks v. State, 178 Ga. App. 54, 341 S.E.2d 859 (1986); Walker v. State, 198 Ga. App. 422, 401 S.E.2d 613 (1991).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by excluding reference to emails, admittedly containing mostly irrelevant material, between the victim and the victim's friend, the witness, but nevertheless allowed defense counsel to explore the subject areas desired, with the witness conceding the points raised. Courrier v. State, 270 Ga. App. 622, 607 S.E.2d 221 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in rejecting the defendant's proposed line of cross-examination questioning as the trial court ruled that testimony involving a totally unrelated arrest was irrelevant to the defendant's case after first giving the defendant the opportunity to establish its relevance. Schlanger v. State, 290 Ga. App. 407, 659 S.E.2d 823 (2008).

3. Specific Applications

Impeachment. — If the purpose in cross-examination is to impeach or discredit a witness, great latitude should be allowed for a thorough and sifting cross-examination. Goodwyn v. Goodwyn, 20 Ga. 600 (1856); Floyd v. Wallace, 31 Ga. 688 (1861); Mitchell v. State, 71 Ga. 128 (1883); Atlanta & B. Air-Line Ry. v. McManus, 1 Ga. App. 302, 58 S.E. 258 (1907); Kimbrough v. State, 9 Ga. App. 301, 70 S.E. 1127 (1911); Smith v. State, 12 Ga. App. 13, 76 S.E. 647 (1912); Glover v. State, 15 Ga. App. 44, 82 S.E. 602 (1914); Boyett v. State, 16 Ga. App. 150, 84 S.E. 613 (1915); Griffin v. State, 18 Ga. App. 462, 89 S.E. 537 (1916); Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948); Western & Atl. R.R. v. Burnett, 79 Ga. App. 530, 54 S.E.2d 357 (1949); Wyatt v. State, 206 Ga. 613, 57 S.E.2d 914 (1950); Salisbury v. State, 222 Ga. 549, 150 S.E.2d 819 (1966); Bramblett v. State, 139 Ga. App. 745, 229 S.E.2d 484 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 336, 236 S.E.2d 580 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1013, 98 S. Ct. 728, 54 L. Ed. 2d 757 (1978); Toney v. Johns, 153 Ga. App. 880, 267 S.E.2d 298 (1980); Horne v. State, 155 Ga. App. 851, 273 S.E.2d 193 (1980).

On cross-examination the opposing party is entitled to a thorough and sifting examination of the witness, and, when the defendant's alibi witnesses were under cross-examination, the trial court correctly refused to grant a mistrial with reference to an effort to impeach those witnesses as to whether or not the testimony was fabricated before trial since the object of all legal investigation is the discovery of truth. Mitchell v. State, 157 Ga. App. 683, 278 S.E.2d 192 (1981).

Prosecutor's cross-examination of witness did not constitute impeachment of the witness by proof of a criminal conviction since the prosecutor was cross-examining the witness concerning the criminal charges surrounding incarceration, in order to reveal possible biases, prejudices, or ulterior motives of the witness as they might relate to the witness's testimony on direct examination. Harrison v. State, 259 Ga. 486, 384 S.E.2d 643 (1989).

Use of cross-examination in a good faith attempt to impeach a defendant, who on direct examination has voluntarily given testimony on direct examination obviously calculated to impress the jury as to certain traits of defendant's character, is not prohibited. Butts v. State, 193 Ga. App. 824, 389 S.E.2d 395 (1989).

When a defendant was charged with aggravated assault, but claimed self defense, the trial court erred in prohibiting the defendant from eliciting from the victim that the victim had pending a civil action against the defendant for the victim's injuries. The defendant wished to cross-examine the victim to establish this fact to prove the victim's interest in the outcome of the criminal trial and so attack the victim's credibility, and was entitled to show the state of the witness's feelings toward the defendant and the witness's relationship to the defendant. Boggs v. State, 195 Ga. App. 605, 394 S.E.2d 401 (1990).

Expert witnesses. — Permitting cross-examination directed specifically to testing the accuracy of an expert's opinion stated on direct examination was not an abuse of discretion as to scope of cross-examination. Lane Drug Stores v. Brooks, 70 Ga. App. 878, 29 S.E.2d 716 (1944); Rozar v. State, 93 Ga. App. 207, 91 S.E.2d 131 (1956); Wooten v. Department of Human Resources, 152 Ga. App. 304, 262 S.E.2d 583 (1979).

In a medical malpractice case, it was error to prevent plaintiffs from cross-examining defense experts about their personal practices, as such evidence, unless excludable on other evidentiary grounds, was admissible as substantive evidence and to impeach the experts' opinion as to the applicable standard of care. Condra v. Atlanta Orthopaedic Group, P.C., 285 Ga. 667, 681 S.E.2d 152 (2009).

Police officer's training in field sobriety testing. — In a case in which defendant was tried for driving under the influence of alcohol to the extent of being a less safe driver, the trial court abridged defendant's substantial right to cross-examination under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 by precluding defendant from cross-examining the arresting officer about the officer's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) training and NHTSA requirements for field sobriety evaluations like the horizontal gaze nystagmus (HGN) test, as the officer gave detailed testimony about defendant's involuntary jerking of defendant's eyes during a prescribed pattern of HGN testing and asserted that this showed that defendant was under the influence of alcohol; the officer's NHTSA training and the NHTSA standards for conducting HGN testing were clearly material to the officer's opinion and to the controversy before the court, and the error was not harmless since the state's case relied entirely on the officer's testimony regarding the field sobriety tests. James v. State, 260 Ga. App. 536, 580 S.E.2d 334 (2003).

Character witnesses. — While the general character of the parties, and especially their conduct in other transactions, are irrelevant matters, it is proper on cross-examination to question a character witness regarding particular matters so as to test the extent and basis for the opinion given. Haire v. State, 209 Ga. 378, 72 S.E.2d 707 (1952); Compher v. Georgia Waste Sys., 155 Ga. App. 819, 273 S.E.2d 200 (1980); Curry v. State, 155 Ga. App. 829, 273 S.E.2d 411 (1980).

Use of videotape. — In a prosecution for criminal attempt to process cocaine, stemming from a reverse sting operation, it would have been proper to allow defense counsel to play a videotape of the attempted purchase during the cross-examination of a police officer. Givens v. State, 264 Ga. 522, 448 S.E.2d 687 (1994).

Repetitious questions. — Exclusion of unnecessarily repetitious questions in the cross-examination which have been previously propounded and answered does not constitute an abuse of discretion. Clifton v. State, 187 Ga. 502, 2 S.E.2d 102 (1939); Griffin v. State, 85 Ga. App. 602, 69 S.E.2d 665 (1952); Hamilton v. State, 91 Ga. App. 295, 85 S.E.2d 496 (1954); Pittman v. West, 95 Ga. App. 149, 97 S.E.2d 387 (1957); Harrison v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 99 Ga. App. 762, 109 S.E.2d 854 (1959); Bass v. Bass, 222 Ga. 378, 149 S.E.2d 818 (1966); Sullivan v. State, 222 Ga. 691, 152 S.E.2d 382 (1966); Goobar v. Nix, 128 Ga. App. 578, 197 S.E.2d 486 (1973); Geiger v. State, 129 Ga. App. 488, 199 S.E.2d 861 (1973); Reid v. State, 129 Ga. App. 660, 200 S.E.2d 456 (1973); Luther

v. DeKalb County, 131 Ga. App. 25, 205 S.E.2d 70 (1974); Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585 (1975); Johnson v. State, 137 Ga. App. 308, 223 S.E.2d 500 (1976); Hudson v. State, 137 Ga. App. 439, 224 S.E.2d 48 (1976).

When a question has been asked of and answered by a witness, the trial court does not unduly limit the right to a thorough cross-examination by disallowing its repetition. Fitzgerald v. State, 166 Ga. App. 307, 304 S.E.2d 114 (1983).

Argumentative questions. — Questions which are argumentative are properly excluded. Haralson v. State, 234 Ga. 406, 216 S.E.2d 304 (1975), overruled on other grounds, White v. State, 273 Ga. 787, 546 S.E.2d 514 (2001).

Hypothetical questions to determine the witnesses' knowledge must embody the facts offered in evidence. Clackum v. State, 55 Ga. App. 44, 189 S.E. 397 (1936); Curry v. State, 155 Ga. App. 829, 273 S.E.2d 411 (1980).

Conclusion of witness. — Right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination is not abridged if the question propounded calls for a conclusion by the witness. Proctor v. State, 235 Ga. 720, 221 S.E.2d 556 (1975).

Insanity. — Great latitude should be allowed by the court when confronting witnesses as to the defendant's present insanity. Polk v. State, 18 Ga. App. 324, 89 S.E. 437 (1916), later appeal, 19 Ga. App. 332, 148 Ga. 34, 91 S.E. 439 (1917); 148 Ga. 34, 95 S.E. 988 (1918).

Victim's state of mind. — In a prosecution for child molestation, the trial court properly limited the cross-examination of witnesses as to the victim's state of mind, use of drugs, and psychiatric treatment because such inquiry had no relevance to the charges against defendant. Davidson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 250, 501 S.E.2d 510 (1998).

Prior sexual activity. — Victim of an alleged rape may not be cross-examined as to specific acts of prior sexual intercourse with men other than the accused. Thomas v. State, 234 Ga. 635, 217 S.E.2d 152 (1975).

Since defendant had known the victim for only one hour before the alleged rape occurred, and since in that time, it was unlikely that the defendant discovered any past sexual activity on the part of his victim that could justify his claim that she consented to intercourse, the trial court's refusal to admit evidence as to the victim's prior sexual experience was not a denial of defendant's right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination. Lamar v. State, 243 Ga. 401, 254 S.E.2d 353 (1979).

In a child molestation case, defendant was properly precluded from inquiring into the victim's family lifestyle and sexual history. Schwindler v. State, 254 Ga. App. 579, 563 S.E.2d 154 (2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 1016, 123 S. Ct. 1935, 155 L. Ed. 2d 854 (2003).

Seduction. — On trial of the defendant under an indictment charging him with seduction of the prosecutor by persuasion and promise of marriage, where such prosecutor was the only witness for the state and her testimony was self-contradictory as to whether or not she knew, at the time of the alleged seduction, that the defendant was a married man, it was error to deny to defendant's counsel the right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination as provided by statute. Chambers v. State, 88 Ga. App. 57, 76 S.E.2d 84 (1953).

Admission of crime. — In a trial for murder, since the state has introduced an admission by the accused of a willful and intentional killing unaccompanied with any justification or mitigation, it is the accused's right, by cross-examination, to elicit a previous conversation with the same witness in which the admission of the homicide was accompanied by a statement giving the reason therefor. West v. State, 200 Ga. 566, 37 S.E.2d 799, later appeal, 74 Ga. App. 423, 40 S.E.2d 98 (1946).

Prior convictions. — After the defendant's sister testified on direct examination that her brothers were often accused of doing things they did not do, such testimony opened the door to cross-examination about convictions of the defendant's brothers. Pye v. State, 269 Ga. 779, 505 S.E.2d 4 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1767, 143 L. Ed. 2d 797 (1999).

Codefendant's plea agreement. — Cross-examination of an accomplice regarding a deal the accomplice made with the prosecution, including the potential sentence the accomplice could receive and the fact that the accomplice would not be eligible for parole, is constitutionally protected because it shows the witness's motive, bias or interest in cooperating with the state and testifying against defendant. The fact that a witness faces a sentence without eligibility for parole, or a mandatory minimum sentence, gives the witness much more incentive to give favorable testimony. Vogleson v. State, 250 Ga. App. 555, 552 S.E.2d 513 (2001).

Defendant has a constitutionally protected right to explore on cross-examination a codefendant's or an accomplice's agreement with the state, including the amount of prison time the codefendant or accomplice would avoid by agreeing to cooperate with the state and testify against the defendant. Perez v. State, 254 Ga. App. 872, 564 S.E.2d 208 (2002).

Fact that counsel abandons line of inquiry presents nothing for review. — Since the trial court did not curtail proper examination but simply exercised the court's discretion to require counsel to obtain the information through proper questions, the fact that counsel abandoned the line of inquiry presents nothing for review. Johnson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 333, 280 S.E.2d 379 (1981).

When the plaintiff is called as a defense witness upon an objection to the witness being recalled for further cross-examination, this tactic entitles counsel for the plaintiff to cross-examine the witness just like any other defense witness, and while the court can, in the court's discretion, prohibit counsel from posing leading questions, there is no abuse of discretion in allowing the questions. Mercer v. Woodard, 166 Ga. App. 119, 303 S.E.2d 475 (1983).

State is not required to reveal the identity of an informant. Montford v. State, 168 Ga. App. 394, 309 S.E.2d 650 (1983).

Defendant's testimony on direct examination that defendant had previously been in "some trouble" did not place defendant's character in issue, but it was not error to allow defendant to be cross-examined as to the specific circumstances surrounding the "trouble" to which defendant testified. Richardson v. State, 173 Ga. App. 695, 327 S.E.2d 813 (1985).

Defendant's intent. — State's objection to defendant's cross-examination under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-64 of the victim was properly sustained as defendant's intent to commit the crime was a jury question; even if there were error, it was harmless, as defendant obtained the requested information through another line of questioning. Burdette v. State, 259 Ga. App. 59, 576 S.E.2d 47 (2002).

Generally, the wealth or worldly circumstances of a party litigant is never admissible, except in those cases where position or wealth is necessarily involved. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Jones, 173 Ga. App. 356, 326 S.E.2d 554 (1985).

Minors as witnesses. — Trial court did not abuse court's discretion in refusing to allow defense counsel, while cross-examining a 16-year-old witness, to repeat questions that had been asked and fully answered or from asking questions in a "rapid-fire" method, especially in light of the witness's youth. Phyfer v. State, 259 Ga. App. 356, 577 S.E.2d 56 (2003).

Specific questions. — In a suit on an account, in which the defendant denied receiving a certain portion of the goods, defendant's evidence was self-contradictory and in some degree inconsistent with the testimony of other witnesses, the trial judge did not abuse the judge's discretion in permitting counsel for the plaintiff to state to the defendant, by way of cross-examination, "I want to give you one more opportunity to correct your statement that you did not receive these two shipments of merchandise." Cohen v. Saffer, 43 Ga. App. 746, 160 S.E. 130 (1931).

If upon cross-examination of a hostile witness it is shown that the witness has testified to a contradictory statement on a former trial of a codefendant, and the attention of the witness is called to the alleged contradictions and the contradictory statements are admitted by the witness, it is within the legitimate scope of the right of cross-examination to ask the witness upon which occasion the witness was testifying to the truth. Loomis v. State, 78 Ga. App. 153, 51 S.E.2d 13 (1948).

Questions involving prior crimes are not admissible when the sole purpose is to show that defendant is guilty of such other crimes; however, questions as to other offenses may be asked in rebuttal to testimony of another witness. Wyatt v. State, 206 Ga. 613, 57 S.E.2d 914 (1950); Casey v. State, 133 Ga. App. 161, 210 S.E.2d 375 (1974).

It was not error for the court, in cross-examination of a police officer, to refuse to require the officer to disclose the name of the person who had given the officer information which led to the arrest of defendant. Morgan v. State, 211 Ga. 172, 84 S.E.2d 365 (1954).

Judgment of the trial court refusing to permit the condemnnee to cross-examine witness as to whether the witness had testified as a witness in all other condemnation cases tried in the same court was error and the judgment overruling the motion for new trial on such ground would be reversed. Sutton v. State Hwy. Dep't, 103 Ga. App. 29, 118 S.E.2d 285 (1961).

It is not error to permit the defendant's trial attorney as witness to answer the question why the attorney did not raise the issue of insanity as a defense. Chaffin v. State, 227 Ga. 327, 180 S.E.2d 741 (1971).

Questions which are a misstatement of the witnesses' testimony or matters not within the witnesses' knowledge are properly excluded. Haralson v. State, 234 Ga. 406, 216 S.E.2d 304 (1975), overruled on other grounds, White v. State, 273 Ga. 787, 546 S.E.2d 514 (2001).

Right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination is not abridged since the question propounded calls for a conclusion by the witness as to matters which can be determined only by the jury, such as whether there was provocation or justification of a homicide. Proctor v. State, 235 Ga. 720, 221 S.E.2d 556 (1975).

It is error to permit cross-examination of a defendant for impeachment purposes regarding defendant's silence, or failure to offer an exculpatory statement, at the time of defendant's arrest, including a defendant who was not apprised of defendant's Miranda rights. Harrison v. State, 154 Ga. App. 343, 268 S.E.2d 396 (1980).

On cross-examination, the state may inquire with particularity to test the witness's basis for the opinion given, and may inquire if the witness has not heard particular persons speak ill of the witness, or if the witness has not been known to be accused of particular crimes. Horne v. State, 155 Ga. App. 851, 273 S.E.2d 193 (1980).

In action for deceit in connection with purchase of used car, where purchase and resale of trade-in vehicle were already in evidence, there was no error in allowing jury to know monetary details of that transaction. Bill Spreen Toyota, Inc. v. Jenquin, 163 Ga. App. 855, 294 S.E.2d 533 (1982).

In prosecution for criminal trespass at welcome center, trial court acted incorrectly when the court curtailed attempts of appellant's counsel to impeach a witness by means of the witness's apparent prior inconsistent statements on issue, on issue of whether the witness had authorized a police officer to act as the witness's representative in giving notice to appellant that appellant was not to return to the center. Joiner v. State, 163 Ga. App. 521, 295 S.E.2d 219 (1982).

As one need not be the owner of premises in order to be deemed in possession of the goods contained therein, the right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination is not abridged by the sustaining of an objection when counsel is trying to elicit from a witness the extent of the witness's knowledge as to the proof of ownership of a home where stolen property was found. Brady v. State, 169 Ga. App. 316, 312 S.E.2d 632 (1983).

In an action seeking damages for injuries sustained when a motorcycle collided with an automobile, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding a merely speculative, suggested line of questioning of the defendant, whose defense was that the plaintiff's own negligence caused the injury, about why defendant had failed or chosen not to instigate legal process against the plaintiff. Corley v. Harris, 171 Ga. App. 688, 320 S.E.2d 833 (1984).

When on cross-examination an agent was asked if the agent occupied the lowest position, as far as salary was concerned, in the GBI, there was no abuse of discretion in sustaining the state's objection on the ground of relevancy. Anderson v. State, 165 Ga. App. 885, 303 S.E.2d 57 (1983), rev'd on other grounds, 252 Ga. 103, 312 S.E.2d 113 (1984).

In view of the evidence connecting a witness with the crime and the witness's prior inconsistent statements, the defendant properly inquired into the witness's veracity and the extent of the witness's actual participation. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 418, 314 S.E.2d 210, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 873, 105 S. Ct. 230, 83 L. Ed. 2d 159 (1984).

When the defendant's attorney "opened the door" regarding the defendant's status as a licensed insurance agent in this state, the state's attorney was entitled to a thorough and sifting cross-examination regarding this issue. The fact that the defendant's insurance license was temporarily revoked by an administrative order issued by the Insurance Commissioner may have incidentally placed the defendant's character in issue; however, since the defendant's attorney "opened the door" to this issue, the testimony was not inadmissible. Mason v. State, 180 Ga. App. 235, 348 S.E.2d 754 (1986).

Trial court's refusal to allow defendant to ask a witness, who had entered a guilty plea and was cooperating with the prosecution prior to defendant's sentencing, if the defendant had been told what period of time Georgia law prescribed as the mandatory minimum sentence for defendant's crime, was not error since the court did allow defendant to establish the basis for possible bias or interest of the witness. Matthews v. State, 194 Ga. App. 386, 390 S.E.2d 873 (1990).

In a prosecution for violating the Georgia Controlled Substances Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-1 et seq., and obstruction of an officer, the court did not abuse the court's discretion by restricting defendant's cross-examination of the state's crime lab witness when the court refused to allow defendant to examine the witness regarding another crime lab scientist who testified at a hearing in another county in an unrelated case that a substance was cocaine when in fact it was soap, since the crime lab witness testified, during proffer, that the witness had "no personal knowledge" of the incident and all the information be possessed about it was "secondary information" which was told to the witness at a crime lab meeting conducted by the witness's supervisor. Stephens v. State, 207 Ga. App. 645, 428 S.E.2d 661 (1993).

When the trial court did not restrict defendant's counsel from questioning police officers regarding any bias the officer had toward black males, but merely restricted defendant's counsel from questioning police officers regarding an alleged prior brutality incident, in which no formal complaint had apparently been filed, there was no abuse of the trial court's decision. Harris v. State, 216 Ga. App. 297, 454 S.E.2d 146 (1995).

Scope of Cross-Examination (Cont'd)
3. Specific Applications (Cont'd)

State was entitled to cross-examine the defendant about why defendant had been in jail prior to defendant's prosecution for burglary and kidnapping, since the defendant introduced the topic of defendant's incarceration by testifying that the defendant had told the gunmen, who allegedly forced the defendant to accompany them to the victims' apartment, that the defendant could not have sold drugs for the victim because the defendant had been in jail. Cosby v. State, 234 Ga. App. 723, 507 S.E.2d 551 (1998).

In a malpractice action, the court properly excluded the following question put to defendants' expert, i.e., "whether hospitals all over the country admit people to find out what is causing abdominal pain" because the expert had earlier answered a similar question that asked "whether people were admitted to a hospital to find out what was causing a problem." Cornelius v. Macon-Bibb County Hosp. Auth., 243 Ga. App. 480, 533 S.E.2d 420 (2000).

When defendant was charged with raping a victim who accepted defendant's offer of a ride as the victim was on her way to return a jacket to a former boyfriend, the rape shield law, O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3(a), did not prohibit defendant from inquiring of the victim about a theory that the victim fabricated the rape charge to explain semen stains on the boyfriend's jacket, resulting from the sexual encounter, because she wanted to reestablish a romantic relationship with the boyfriend, because defendant was not seeking to inquire about the victim's character for sexual behavior. Richardson v. State, 276 Ga. 639, 581 S.E.2d 528 (2003).

Trial court did not abuse court's discretion in limiting defendant's cross-examination of one detective about how another detective, who was unavailable at trial, formed that detective's opinions and impressions regarding how defendant's spouse was killed as such questioning was beyond the detective's personal knowledge. Rowe v. State, 276 Ga. 800, 582 S.E.2d 119 (2003).

In a suit brought for specific performance of a contract provision and damages, the trial court did not err in preventing the defendant from cross-examining the plaintiff regarding the fairness of the provision; the suit involved a single provision in a written contract reflecting an arm's length transaction terminating a business relationship, and it was not incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove the fairness of the provision. Hibbard v. McMillan, 284 Ga. App. 753, 645 S.E.2d 356 (2007).

A trial court did not err in sustaining the state's objection to defense counsel's questioning of a police officer regarding his observation of other men on a defendant's property at the time the police began watching the property, because the officer had not testified that the officer saw other men at the time the officer began the surveillance. Price v. State, No. A10A0448, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 377 (Apr. 7, 2010).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Purpose behind cross-examination is to see whether the same answer is forthcoming each time the question is asked, and thus to test the credibility of the witness; the repetition of questions or subject matter on direct examination is to be prevented, and redirect examination is designed to give a party the right to explain the direct testimony, or to rebut the cross-examination. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-36.

General Consideration

In general. — Class of questions here referred to must be such as lie within the range of common opinion, that is, an opinion which is supposed to be within the common knowledge, experience, and education of men. Cone v. Davis, 66 Ga. App. 229, 17 S.E.2d 849 (1941).

Former Code 1933, § 38-1710 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67) dealt with science, skill, trade, or like questions, in which matters experts may give their opinion based on facts as proved by other witnesses, but former Code 1933, § 38-1703 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-65) dealt with opinions of lay witnesses. Mills v. State, 71 Ga. App. 353, 30 S.E.2d 824 (1944).

Statute plainly refers to two separate and distinct situations, and declares different rules in reference thereto: (1) where the question under examination and to be decided by the jury shall be one of opinion; and (2) where the issue shall be as to the existence of a fact. Barron v. Chamblee, 199 Ga. 591, 34 S.E.2d 828 (1945).

Whether a question calls for a legal conclusion or principally a fact which incidentally involves a legal word or phrase is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Gage v. Tiffin Motor Homes, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 704, 266 S.E.2d 345 (1980).

History. — Statute is but a compendium of the common law. Central R.R. & Banking Co. v. Kelly, 58 Ga. 107 (1877) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-65).

Duty of trial court. — Determination as to whether a witness has established sufficient opportunity for forming a correct opinion or has stated a proper basis for expressing an opinion is for the trial court. DOT v. McLaughlin, 163 Ga. App. 1, 292 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 250 Ga. 10, 297 S.E.2d 217 (1982), overruled on other grounds, 264 Ga. 393, 444 S.E.2d 734 (1994).

Witness's opinion must be witness's own and the witness cannot act as a mere conduit for the opinions of others. Stephen W. Brown Radiology Assocs. v. Gowers, 157 Ga. App. 770, 278 S.E.2d 653 (1981).

Qualifying words. — An answer of a witness is not to be struck out because the witness qualified the witness's statement of fact by such statements as "I would judge," and "I think," nor because the witness used the word "opinion," since, from the context, the witness was merely qualifying the witness's statement of fact. Faucette v. State, 71 Ga. App. 331, 30 S.E.2d 808 (1944).

Plaintiff may not establish variance from standard of care in medical or legal malpractice cases without expert opinion testimony from which the jury could determine malpractice. This latter requirement is properly a prerequisite for the submission of a case to the jury. Savannah Valley Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Cheek, 248 Ga. 745, 285 S.E.2d 689 (1982).

Status of witness as lay or expert goes not to admissibility, but credibility. McLelland v. State, 203 Ga. App. 93, 416 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 416 S.E.2d 340 (1992).

Weight of opinion evidence is matter for jury. — Probative value and weight to be given the evidence and the credibility of the witness are matters to be determined by the jury. Blackman v. State, 80 Ga. 785, 7 S.E. 626 (1888); Caswell v. State, 5 Ga. App. 583, 63 S.E. 566 (1909); Glover v. State, 15 Ga. App. 44, 82 S.E. 602 (1914); Hayes v. State, 16 Ga. App. 20, 84 S.E. 497 (1915); Bugg v. State, 17 Ga. App. 211, 86 S.E. 405 (1915); Hansberger Motor Transp. Co. v. Pate, 51 Ga. App. 877, 181 S.E. 796 (1935); Simmons v. Simmons, 194 Ga. 649, 22 S.E.2d 399 (1942); Mills v. State, 71 Ga. App. 353, 30 S.E.2d 824 (1944); Barron v. Chamblee, 199 Ga. 591, 34 S.E.2d 828 (1945); Barnes v. Thomas, 72 Ga. App. 827, 35 S.E.2d 364 (1945); Ford Motor Co. v. Hanley, 128 Ga. App. 311, 196 S.E.2d 454 (1973); Galloway v. Banks County, 139 Ga. App. 649, 229 S.E.2d 127 (1976); Tam v. Newsome, 141 Ga. App. 76, 232 S.E.2d 613 (1977).

Jury instructions. — In the absence of a timely written request, the mere fact that opinion evidence was introduced does not require an instruction as to the weight of such evidence. Fountain v. Smith, 103 Ga. App. 192, 118 S.E.2d 852 (1961); Vandable v. State, 127 Ga. App. 306, 193 S.E.2d 197 (1972).

Harmless error. — Expression of the opinion of a witness amounting to conclusion is harmless since there is ample evidence to support the inference. Jones v. State, 75 Ga. App. 610, 44 S.E.2d 174 (1947).

Statement not an opinion. — Building contractor was not asked to give contractor's opinion but was asked for the contractor's impression, i.e., the contractor's understanding, of what a bid was to be based upon. This evidence was properly admitted to explain the contractor's future conduct and show contractor's understanding of the parties' oral agreement. Carco Supply Co. v. Clem, 194 Ga. App. 566, 391 S.E.2d 134 (1990).

Question not eliciting opinion. — State's question to victim's mother as to whether she believed victim's earlier allegation that she was molested by her natural father did not elicit inadmissible opinion evidence, and did not constitute impermissible bolstering of victim's credibility. Yebra v. State, 206 Ga. App. 12, 424 S.E.2d 318 (1992).

Opinion Testimony Admissible1. In General

Admissibility generally. — Opinion testimony is admissible when the question under examination is one of opinion. Alexander v. State, 118 Ga. 26, 44 S.E. 851 (1903); Klein v. State, 104 Ga. App. 126, 121 S.E.2d 253 (1961); Security Life Ins. Co. v. Blitch, 155 Ga. App. 167, 270 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Opinions, even expert opinions, are allowed by way of exception to the general rule that a witness is to give facts observed, but not the expert's conclusions from those facts, and opinions are to be allowed only when there is real helpfulness or necessity to resort to the opinions. Barnes v. Thomas, 72 Ga. App. 827, 35 S.E.2d 364 (1945).

Testimony which in the main is a mere statement of fact may be admitted, even though it rests to a certain extent on the application of legal principles. Gage v. Tiffin Motor Homes, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 704, 266 S.E.2d 345 (1980).

Defendant failed to show that defense counsel rendered ineffective assistance, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6, on the basis that counsel did not object when one of the victims testified that defendant stabbed the victim on purpose and not by accident, as there was no support for the proposition that such a statement was inadmissible opinion testimony under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-65; even if it were deemed inadmissible, no prejudice was shown to defendant. Brown v. State, 275 Ga. App. 99, 619 S.E.2d 789 (2005).

State of mind or mental condition generally. — Person's state of mind or mental condition is properly the subject of opinion testimony, and after narrating the facts and circumstances upon which the person's conclusion is based, a nonexpert witness may express the witness's opinion as to the state of mind or mental condition of another. O'Kelley v. State, 175 Ga. App. 503, 333 S.E.2d 838 (1985).

Evidence not challenged. — An opinionative statement of a witness, even though it is a conclusion unsupported by such facts as are necessary to show its correctness, where no objection is urged thereto upon the trial, cannot be challenged for the first time upon review as incompetent and insufficient. Bailey v. Newberry, 52 Ga. App. 693, 184 S.E. 357 (1935); Johnson v. Woodward Lumber Co., 76 Ga. App. 152, 45 S.E.2d 294 (1947); Gazaway v. Secured Ins. Co., 109 Ga. App. 428, 136 S.E.2d 531 (1964).

After providing supporting facts. — Witness may give witness's belief or opinion when it is in connection with, and a mental deduction from, the facts which come within the witness's knowledge and to which the witness has testified. McGinnis v. State, 31 Ga. 236 (1860); Executors of Riggins v.

Brown, 12 Ga. 271 (1862); Macon & W.R.R. v. Johnson, 38 Ga. 409 (1868); Ryder v. State, 100 Ga. 528, 28 S.E. 246, 62 Am. St. R. 334, 38 L.R.A. 721 (1897); Yates v. State, 127 Ga. 813, 56 S.E. 1017 (1907); Cranshaw v. Schweizer Mfg. Co., 1 Ga. App. 363, 58 S.E. 222 (1907); Glover v. State, 129 Ga. 717, 59 S.E. 816 (1907); Ray v. State, 142 Ga. 655, 83 S.E. 518 (1914); Bennett v. American Bank & Trust Co., 162 Ga. 718, 134 S.E. 781 (1926); Hill v. State, 50 Ga. App. 191, 177 S.E. 270 (1934); Roberts v. Hardin, 180 Ga. 757, 180 S.E. 634 (1935); Musselwhite v. Ricks, 55 Ga. App. 58, 189 S.E. 597 (1936); Pollard v. Page, 56 Ga. App. 503, 193 S.E. 117 (1937); *Morgan v. Opinion Testimony Admissible (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Witness may give an opinion on facts stated hypothetically in a question even though those facts have been offered in evidence by other witnesses. Taylor v. Warren, 175 Ga. 800, 166 S.E. 225 (1932).

When facts cannot be demonstrated. — Opinion of a nonexpert witness may be received in evidence if the witness observed the matter in issue and cannot adequately state or recite the data so fully and accurately as to put the jury completely in the witness's place and enable them to equally well draw the inference. Pride v. State, 133 Ga. 438, 66 S.E. 259 (1909); Taylor v. State, 135 Ga. 622, 70 S.E. 237 (1911); Jackson v. State, 148 Ga. 519, 97 S.E. 525 (1918); Jefferson v. State, 56 Ga. Opinions from lay witnesses. — Lay witnesses may relate their opinions as to the existence of a fact so long as the opinions are based upon the witnesses' own observations, provided that the witnesses cannot adequately relate those observations without also relating a personal opinion formed through such observations. Johnson v. Knebel, 267 Ga. 853, 485 S.E.2d 451 (1997).

2. Specific Examples

Appearance and conduct. — See Perdue v. State, 135 Ga. 277, 69 S.E. 184 (1910); Leonard v. State, 157 Ga. App. 37, 276 S.E.2d 94 (1981); Roberts v. State, 232 Ga. App. 745, 503 S.E.2d 614 (1998); Thompson v. State, 240 Ga. App. 26, 521 S.E.2d 876 (1999).

Trial court properly admitted a witness's testimony about the witness's observations of defendant's appearance and behavior and the assumptions that the witness made based upon such observations; the witness was not asked to, nor did the witness, express an opinion about whether defendant shot either or both of the victims or whether defendant possessed a firearm during the commission of any felony. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. 304, 612 S.E.2d 789 (2005).

Cause of collision. — See Avant Trucking Co. v. Stallion, 159 Ga. App. 198, 283 S.E.2d 7 (1981).

Cause of death. — See Everett v. State, 62 Ga. 65 (1878); McLain v. State, 71 Ga. 279 (1883); Lanier v. State, 141 Ga. 17, 80 S.E. 5 (1913); Bullard v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 31 Ga. App. 641, 122 S.E. 75 (1924).

Correctional officer's testimony. — With regard to a defendant's habeas corpus challenge to a finding that the defendant was not mentally retarded, a trial court did not err in the admission of the testimony of a correctional officer, who was called by the state to testify regarding the defendant's behavior while incarcerated with regard to testimony that the defendant was not housed in the area of the institution with those inmates the officer had been told were mentally retarded, as the officer's testimony was relevant to the issue of the defendant's adaptive skills and was not unduly prejudicial because the officer clarified that the officer was not diagnosing anyone. The testimony also did not constitute an impermissible lay opinion because the officer was never asked for, nor did the officer ever give, an opinion as to the ultimate issue, namely whether the defendant was or was not mentally retarded. Rogers v. State, 282 Ga. 659, 653 S.E.2d 31 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1311, 128 S. Ct. 1882, 170 L. Ed. 2d 747; reh'g denied, U.S. , 128 S. Ct. 2988, 171 L. Ed. 2d 907 (2008).

Damages. — See Atlanta S.R.R. v. Walker, 93 Ga. 462, 21 S.E. 48 (1893); City Elec. Ry. v. Smith, 121 Ga. 663, 49 S.E. 724 (1905).

Owners failed to present competent evidence of damages under O.C.G.A. § 11-2-714(2) because an owner's affidavit lacked a proper foundation as the owner failed to testify that any of the owner's past purchases included the purchase of a vehicle with the defects at issue, the owner did not have any specialized knowledge, and the owner's testimony was not supported by objective information on vehicles found in published valuation guides, such as the "Blue Book"; the value of the defective vehicle could not be established by the repair invoices as few, if any, of the repairs reflected costs incurred by the owners. Hill v. Mercedes-Benz USA, LLC, 274 Ga. App. 826, 619 S.E.2d 353 (2005).

Trial court erred in entering summary judgment for a manufacturer on the owners' claim for damages due to the diminished value of a vehicle since the owner's opinion as to the diminished value of the vehicle was supported by: (1) experience in purchasing three other cars; (2) familiarity with information relating to the value of the vehicle; (3) research into the manufacturer's cars; (4) discussions as to price and features with several dealerships; (5) knowledge and familiarity with the vehicle and the vehicle's defects acquired over a three-year time period; and (6) use of the car, the car's mileage, and purchase price. Hill v. Mercedes Benz USA, LLC, 274 Ga. App. 826, 619 S.E.2d 353 (2005).

Dangerousness. — Testimony of a golf course architect as to the dangerousness of a golf cart path was the architect's opinion and was admissible as such. American Golf Corp. v. Manley, 222 Ga. App. 7, 473 S.E.2d 161 (1996).

Defendant's actions not accidental. — Any error in allowing a police officer to testify to the officer's opinion that defendant did not accidentally accelerate and hit another officer's car was harmless as the officer could properly testify that defendant could have escaped without driving straight at the other officer and the officer's car, and there was ample evidence to support the officer's opinion as two officers testified that defendant accelerated straight toward the officer and the officer's car, even though there was room for defendant to drive away without hitting the officer's car, a videotape was played for the jury, and there was testimony that the videotape showed that when defendant accelerated, defendant aimed defendant's car straight toward the officer and the officer's car. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 178, 598 S.E.2d 898 (2004).

Driving too fast for conditions testimony from expert. — In a personal injury case brought against a driver, a police officer, testifying as an expert on automobile collisions, stated in response to a hypothetical question that the driver was driving too fast for conditions if the driver was driving 55 miles per hour. As the officer did not offer an ultimate opinion as to whether the driver was at fault in the accident or was negligent, the officer's testimony was admissible. Kennebeck v. Glover, 294 Ga. App. 822, 670 S.E.2d 459 (2008).

State*, 247 Ga. 612, 277 S.E.2d 678 (1981).

Expert on similarly situated driver. — In a spouse's wrongful death suit against the Georgia Department of Transportation, the trial court did not err by allowing the spouse's expert to testify as to whether a driver in the victim's position could discern that the victim was approaching a more major road and would therefore be required to yield. In light of the witness's familiarity with the intersection gained during a site visit, as well as the photographs presented, it could not be said that the trial court abused the court's discretion in allowing the witness to testify as to a similarly-situated driver's opportunity to discern the nature of the upcoming intersection. DOT v. Baldwin, 292 Ga. App. 816, 665 S.E.2d 898 (2008).

Identity. — Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-65, a lay witness who had been a friend of the defendant's for 22 years could give an opinion as to whether the defendant was the person pictured in a videotape. The quality of the videotape and still photos taken from the videotape was such that it was not within the ability of average jurors to decide the issue for themselves; the witness testified that the defendant's appearance had changed in the four years between the recording and the trial; and the witness's testimony was based on the witness's personal observations of the defendant over the years. Dawson v. State, 283 Ga. 315, 658 S.E.2d 755 (2008), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 169, 172 L.Ed.2d 122 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting a deputy's lay opinion testimony identifying the defendant on a surveillance videotape because the deputy's testimony was sufficient to identify the defendant as the perpetrator of the crime pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-4-8, and the testimony was probative of a fact in issue and based on the deputy's observations of the defendant at the time the surveillance photograph was taken; because the deputy testified to having previously worked at the police department and had met the defendant on several occasions, the deputy was in a unique position to recognize the defendant, given the deputy's familiarity with the defendant's personal appearance before and at the time of the offense. *Strickland v. Trial court did not err in admitting the testimony of the retired police officer as to the police officer's opinion about the most reliable means of suspect identification as that testimony, which was lay opinion testimony, was based on the police officer's own experience and observations, and referred to a matter within the scope of the average juror's knowledge. *Dillingham v. Trial court did not err in allowing the witnesses in defendant's trial for possession of illegal gambling machines to testify that the machines were "gambling devices," as the jury had to determine whether defendant sold a machine that detectives testified was set up for gambling to a witness, who then sold it to the detectives, and whether that machine was illegal under O.C.G.A. § 16-12-20(2); describing the machines the detectives seized as "gambling machines" did not answer those questions. *Jones v. Opinion Testimony Not Admissible

1. In General

Intent or purpose contrary to statute. — Witness may not state a purpose or an intended result of a levy, seizure, and notice which purpose or intended result is contrary to the provisions of a plain statute, or constructions thereof which have been made by the courts. Summer v. Allison, 127 Ga. App. 217, 193 S.E.2d 177 (1972).

Existence of a fact. — When the issue shall be to the existence of a fact, opinions generally are inadmissible. Jones v. State, 101 Ga. App. 851, 115 S.E.2d 576 (1960).

Conclusion cannot be based on hearsay statements. — Police officer who investigates an accident cannot base the officer's opin-

Witness cannot state witness's mere conclusion that others than the witness know a fact. Summer v. Allison, 127 Ga. App. 217, 193 S.E.2d 177 (1972).

Witness cannot state a mere conclusion that others than the witness knew a particular fact since it is not established that the witness was qualified to testify as to the knowledge of others. Marshall v. State, 154 Ga. App. 327, 268 S.E.2d 383 (1980).

Witness invading province of jury. — Witness cannot state an opinion or conclusion where the data or facts are such that a jury can make the jury's own calculation or conclusions. Blackman v. State, 80 Ga. 785, 7 S.E. 626 (1888); Robinson v. State, 128 Ga. 254, 57 S.E. 315 (1907); Caswell v. State, 5 Ga. App. 483, 63 S.E. 566 (1909); Glover v. State, 15 Ga. App. 428, 136 S.E.2d 531 (1964); Ford Motor Co. v. Hanley, 128 Ga. App. 311, 196 S.E.2d 454 (1973); Galloway v. Banks County, 139 Ga. App. 649, 229 S.E.2d 127 (1976); Tam v. Newsome, 141 Ga. App. 76, 232 S.E.2d 613 (1977).

2. Specific Examples

Accident victims. — In an action against the Georgia Department of Transportation alleging negligent placement of safety devices at an intersection, the trial court properly excluded the testimony of a judge who was injured in an accident at an intersection located in the same road construction project where the plaintiffs' family members died, because the judge's accident occurred at a different intersection and the judge was not familiar with the intersection where the plaintiffs' family members died. McCorkle v. DOT, 257 Ga. App. 397, 571 S.E.2d 160 (2002).

Conclusion of law. — See Morgan v. Bell, 189 Ga. 432, 5 S.E.2d 897 (1939); Wells v. State, 151 Ga. App. 416, 260 S.E.2d 374 (1979); Gage v. Tiffin Motor Homes, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 704, 266 S.E.2d 345 (1980).

While a sheriff deputy's opinion that the defendant's string of harassing phone messages amounted to aggravated stalking in violation of a protective order was inadmissible testimony on an ultimate issue, the error was harmless given the defendant's own testimony establishing the elements of the offense without dispute. Shafer v. State, 285 Ga. App. 748, 647 S.E.2d 274 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 642 (Ga. 2007).

Conspiracy. — See Mercer v. Woodard, 166 Ga. App. 119, 303 S.E.2d 475 (1983).

Contents of bottles. — See Gales v. State, 14 Ga. App. 450, 81 S.E. 364 (1914).

Damages. — See Central R.R. & Banking Co. v. Kelly, 58 Ga. 107 (1877); Carter v. Carter Elec. Co., 156 Ga. 297, 119 S.E. 737 (1923).

Experts. — Opinion of an expert accident reconstructionist was not admissible as lay testimony since the expert testified that it was based upon the expert's study of photographs of damaged cars; since the same photographs were before the jury, it was not necessary for the witness to relate the witness's personal opinion in order to adequately relate that information. Johnson v. Knebel, 267 Ga. 853, 485 S.E.2d 451 (1997).

Expert opinion inadmissible as supporting facts not yet in record. — Trial court correctly ruled that a psychologist could not testify that at the time the defendant committed several crimes the defendant did not know right from wrong because the defendant was under the influence of the drug GHB because at the time the defendant sought to present that testimony, there was no evidence that the defendant had actually ingested the drug or was under the drug's influence. Kirkland v. State, 292 Ga. App. 73, 663 S.E.2d 408 (2008).

Hair analysis results cannot be used to make positive identification of an individual. Hudson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 660, 305 S.E.2d 409 (1983).

In rape prosecution, defendant cannot ask victim's mother whether she believed daughter's statements about the offense or could tell her daughter was lying from her body language. Nichols v. State, 221 Ga. App. 600, 473 S.E.2d 491 (1996).

Inference from facts in testimony of others. — See Hook v. Stovall, Dunn & Co., 30 Ga. 418 (1860); Southern Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hudson, 113 Ga. 434, 38 S.E. 964 (1901); Taylor v. Warren, 175 Ga. 800, 166 S.E. 225 (1932); Murray v. State, 201 Ga. 201, 39 S.E.2d 842 (1946); Jones v. State, 75 Ga. App. 610, 44 S.E.2d 174 (1947).

Inference requiring mixture of law and fact. Gage v. Tiffin Motor Homes, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 704, 266 S.E.2d 345 (1980); Security Life Ins. Co. v. Blitch, 155 Ga. App. 167, 270 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Intent of deceased. — See Hudgins v. State, 2 Ga. 173 (1847); Hawkins v. State, 25 Ga. 207, 71 Am. Dec. 166 (1858).

Intent or purpose of another. — See Summer v. Allison, 127 Ga. App. 217, 193 S.E.2d 177 (1972).

Lay opinions. — Trial court did not err when the court did not permit a defense witness to give opinion testimony regarding an experiment the witness conducted at the scene of the crime because the issue of the visibility of the bulge produced by an object placed under carpeting since the defendant allegedly hid a murder weapon at the scene of the crime was not one of opinion. Jones v. State, 277 Ga. 36, 586 S.E.2d 224 (2003).

Because the personal opinions of three potential witnesses were based on the defendant's work, and the limited interactions attendant thereto, and the witnesses could not offer any opinion and had no personal knowledge of the defendant's general reputation in the community, the failure to call the witnesses at trial for that purpose did not prejudice defendant's case. Thomas v. State, 282 Ga. 894, 655 S.E.2d 599 (2008).

Measurement of missing article. — See Williams v. State, 145 Ga. 177, 88 S.E. 958 (1916).

Mental condition. — See Morgan v. Bell, 189 Ga. 432, 5 S.E.2d 897 (1939); Livingston v. Barnett, 193 Ga. 640, 19 S.E.2d 385 (1942); McGahee v. Phillips, 211 Ga. 118, 84 S.E.2d 19 (1954).

Paranoia. — Since paranoia is a medical term relating to a mental disorder, only a qualified expert such as a psychiatrist, psychologist, or medical doctor would be competent to diagnose and define such a mental disorder. Ellis v. State, 168 Ga. App. 757, 309 S.E.2d 924 (1983).

Proving opinions of others. — See Wynes v. State, 182 Ga. 434, 185 S.E. 711 (1936).

Self-defense. — On a trial for murder, as to the defendant's theory of self-defense, apprehensions or opinions of third parties, that the accused is in imminent danger, are not relevant. But facts from which apprehension might reasonably be inferred, as distinct from opinions, are relevant when stated or shown by third parties. Lancaster v. State, 250 Ga. 871, 301 S.E.2d 882 (1983).

Suicide. — See Trammell v. State, 18 Ga. App. 487, 89 S.E. 606 (1916).

"Understanding" of ownership. — See Brooks v. State, 19 Ga. App. 3, 90 S.E. 989 (1916).

Ultimate issue. — See Morgan v. Bell, 189 Ga. 432, 5 S.E.2d 897 (1939); Security Life Ins. Co. v. Blitch, 155 Ga. App. 167, 270 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Opinion Testimony NotAdmissible (Cont'd)*2. Specific Examples (Cont'd)

Witness's medical condition. — Any statement of "opinion" made by or attributed to a nonexpert workers' compensation claimant which was to the effect that the claimant's CT scan of October 1983 (which was not in evidence) may have showed a second herniated disc at L4 was nonprobative hearsay as to that purported fact. Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-65, lay opinions must be based upon facts, not hearsay. Fidelity & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Cigna/Pacific Employers Ins. Co., 180 Ga. App. 159, 348 S.E.2d 702 (1986).

24-9-66. Market value as opinion evidence; who may testify as to value.

Direct testimony as to market value is in the nature of opinion evidence. One need not be an expert or dealer in the article in question but may testify as to its value if he has had an opportunity for forming a correct opinion. (Civil Code 1895, § 5286; Civil Code 1910, § 5875; Code 1933, § 38-1709.)

DETERMINATION OF MARKET VALUE

APPLICATION IN SPECIFIC CASES

General Consideration

"Market value" defined. — What is meant by market value of property is what it will bring when sold for cash by a person ready and willing to sell, but under no obligation to sell, and when bought by a person ready and willing to buy, but under no obligation to buy. Housing Auth. v. Spink, 91 Ga. App. 72, 85 S.E.2d 80 (1954).

Duty of trial court. — Determination as to whether a witness has established sufficient opportunity for forming a correct opinion or has stated a proper basis for expressing an opinion is for the trial court. DOT v.

McLaughlin, 163 Ga. App. 1, 292 S.E.2d 435, cert. denied, 250 Ga. 10, 297 S.E.2d 217 (1982), overruled on other grounds, 264 Ga. 393, 444 S.E.2d 734 (1994).

Determination of Market Value

In general. — Opinion evidence is admissible when it is necessary for the jury to determine the reasonable value of services or property. Allison v. Wall, 121 Ga. 822, 49 S.E. 831 (1905).

Market value may be established by either direct or circumstantial evidence. Grant v. Dannals, 87 Ga. App. 389, 74 S.E.2d 119 (1953); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Williams, 147 Ga. App. 205, 249 S.E.2d 289 (1978).

Question of value is a matter of opinion under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-66, and as to questions of opinion, the witness may swear to the witness's opinion or belief, giving the witness's reasons therefor. Maddox v. State, 157 Ga. App. 696, 278 S.E.2d 480 (1981).

Hearsay evidence. — See Garner v. Gwinnett County, 105 Ga. App. 714, 125 S.E.2d 563 (1962); Hiatt v. State, 133 Ga. App. 111, 210 S.E.2d 22 (1974); Gibbs v. Clay, 137 Ga. App. 381, 224 S.E.2d 46 (1976); Dickens v. Adams, 137 Ga. App. 564, 224 S.E.2d 468 (1976); Burch v. Lawrence, 150 Ga. App. 351, 258 S.E.2d 35 (1979); Toney v. Johns, 153 Ga. App. 880, 267 S.E.2d 298 (1980); Apostle v. Prince, 158 Ga. App. 56, 279 S.E.2d 304 (1981).

Market value may rest wholly or in part upon hearsay, provided the witness has had an opportunity of forming a correct opinion. B & L Serv. Co. v. Gerson, 167 Ga. App. 679, 307 S.E.2d 262 (1983).

It is peculiarly within the province of the jury to determine market value. National Ben Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Purvis, 61 Ga. App. 674, 7 S.E.2d 296 (1940); Simmons v. Simmons, 194 Ga. 649, 22 S.E.2d 399 (1942); Grant v. Dannals, 87 Ga. App. 389, 74 S.E.2d 119 (1953); Hayes v. O'Shield Buick Co., 94 Ga. App. 177, 94 S.E.2d 44 (1956); Youngblood v. Ruis, 96 Ga. App. 290, 99 S.E.2d 714 (1957); Dalon Contracting Co. v. Artman, 101 Ga. App. 828, 115 S.E.2d 377 (1960); Smith v. Fidelity Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 149 Ga. App. 730, 256 S.E.2d 43 (1979); Varnedoe v. Singleton, 154 Ga. App. 332, 268 S.E.2d 387 (1980); Murdock v. Godwin, 154 Ga. App. 824, 269 S.E.2d 905 (1980); DOT v. Brown, 155 Ga. App. 622, 271 S.E.2d 876 (1980).

Jury question as to weight of value evidence. — When defendants contended that plaintiff's testimony as to the value of plaintiff's motor vehicle was without the proper foundation and had no probative value, but plaintiff had related plaintiff's knowledge and familiarity with classic type vehicles, described the condition of the vehicle, and introduced photographs of the damage to the vehicle, it was held that after the plaintiff gave the basis for plaintiff's opinion, the weight and credibility of the testimony was for the jury, and since the witness had an opportunity for forming a correct opinion, the evidence was sufficient for the jury's consideration. Long v. Marion, 182 Ga. App. 361, 355 S.E.2d 711, aff'd, 257 Ga. 431, 360 S.E.2d 255 (1987).

Qualification of witnesses. — Competency of a witness to testify an opinion of market value is a matter for the discretion of the trial court. Central Ga. Power Co. v. Cornwell, 139 Ga. 1, 76 S.E. 387, 1914A Ann. Cas. 880 (1912); Haas & Howell v. Godby, 33 Ga. App. 218, 125 S.E. 897 (1924), cert. denied, 33 Ga. App. 829 (1925); McDuffie County v. Gunn, 50 Ga. App. 198, 177 S.E. 363 (1934); United States ex rel. TVA v. Phillips, 50 F. Supp. 454 (N.D. Ga. 1943); Dickens v. Adams, 137 Ga. App. 564, 224 S.E.2d 468 (1976); DOT v. Great S. Enters., Inc., 137 Ga. App. 710, 225 S.E.2d 80 (1976).

It is not a ground for objection to testimony that a witness, after testifying to a fact, testifies on cross-examination to facts that tend to show that the witness knows little or nothing about the facts as to which the witness previously testified on direct examination. Toney v. Johns, 153 Ga. App. 880, 267 S.E.2d 298 (1980).

Some evidence of market value mandatory. — There must be in evidence sufficient facts on which the jury may exercise the jury's own knowledge and ideas and draw a legitimate conclusion of market value. Grant v. Dannals, 87 Ga. App. 389, 74 S.E.2d 119 (1953); Mills v. Mangum, 111 Ga. App. 396, 141 S.E.2d 773 (1965); Nail v. Hiers, 116 Ga. App. 522, 157 S.E.2d 771 (1967); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Williams, 147 Ga. App. 205, 249 S.E.2d 289 (1978).

As to items of a common nature, such as automobiles, a plaintiff need not offer any opinion evidence as to value, and so long as the evidence contains facts upon which the jury may legitimately exercise their own knowledge and ideas, the question of value is properly left to the jury. White v. Miller, 194 Ga. App. 816, 392 S.E.2d 30 (1990).

Jurors are not absolutely bound by opinion testimony as to market value, even though it is not contradicted, as jurors may exercise their own judgment based on their own experience and knowledge and the evidence as a whole. Widincamp v. McCall, 25 Ga. App. 733, 104 S.E. 642 (1920); Black v. Automatic Sprinkler Co., 35 Ga. App. 8, 131 S.E. 543 (1926); Bitting v. State, 165 Ga. 55, 139 S.E. 877 (1927); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Cowart & Son, 38 Ga. App. 426, 144 S.E. 213 (1928); Watson v. Tompkins Chevrolet Co., 83 Ga. App. 440, 63 S.E.2d 681 (1951); Grant v. Dannals, 87 Ga. App. 389, 74 S.E.2d 119 (1953); Hayes v. Carter, 91 Ga. App. 540, 86 S.E.2d 532 (1955); Hayes v. O'Shield Buick Co., 94 Ga. App. 177, 94 S.E.2d 44 (1956); Youngblood v. Ruis, 96 Ga. App. 290, 99 S.E.2d 714 (1957); Dalon Contracting Co. v. Artman, 101 Ga. App. 828, 115 S.E.2d 377 (1960); J.A. Jones Constr. Co. v. Greenbriar Shopping Ctr., 332 F. Supp. 1336 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 461 F.2d 1269 (5th Cir. 1972); DOT v. Driggers, 150 Ga. App. 270, 257 S.E.2d 294 (1979); Smith v. Fidelity Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 149 Ga. App. 730, 256 S.E.2d 43 (1979); Murdock v. Godwin, 154 Ga. App. 824, 269 S.E.2d 905 (1980).

Credibility of a witness is a matter to be weighed by the jury. Central Ga. Power Co. v. Cornwell, 139 Ga. 1, 76 S.E. 387, 1914A Ann. Cas. 880 (1912); Haas & Howell v. Godby, 33 Ga. App. 218, 125 S.E. 897 (1924), cert. denied, 33 Ga. App. 829 (1925); McDuffie County v. Gunn, 50 Ga. App. 198, 177 S.E. 363 (1934); Dickens v. Adams, 137 Ga. App. 564, 224 S.E.2d 468 (1976).

Weight to be given opinion evidence of market value is a matter for the jury. Central Ga. Power Co. v. Cornwell, 139 Ga. 1, 76 S.E. 387, 1914A Ann. Cas. 880 (1912); Anderson v. Anderson, 27 Ga. App. 513, 108 S.E. 907, cert. denied, 27 Ga. App. 835 (1921); Bitting v. State, 165 Ga. 55, 139 S.E. 877 (1927); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Cowart & Son, 38 Ga. App. 426, 144 S.E. 213 (1928); Sutton v. State Hwy. Dep't, 103 Ga. App. 29, 118 S.E.2d 285 (1961); Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Toole, 128 Ga. App. 24, 195 S.E.2d 282 (1973); Hiatt v. State, 133 Ga. App. 111, 210 S.E.2d 22 (1974); Clark v. Peck, 134 Ga. App. 868, 216 S.E.2d 687 (1975); Gibbs v. Clay, 137 Ga. App. 381, 224 S.E.2d 46 (1976); Williams v. State, 246 Ga. App. 347, 540 S.E.2d 305 (2000).

Expert witnesses. — Witness must be an expert, or must state a sufficient basis for testifying as to market value. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Overby, 136 Ga. 69, 70 S.E. 664 (1911); Crump v. Knox, 18 Ga. App. 437, 89 S.E. 586 (1916); Fowler v. National City Bank, 49 Ga. App. 435, 176 S.E. 113 (1934).

Expert's opinion as to what expert would pay for condemned land was probative of the land's fair market value and improperly excluded by the trial court. Jotin Realty Co. v. Department of Transp., 174 Ga. App. 809, 331 S.E.2d 605 (1985).

Nonexpert witnesses. — There was no requirement that officer be an expert in order to express the officer's opinion as to amount of damages inflicted to the officer's vehicle by defendant, provided the officer had had an opportunity for forming a correct opinion. Mallory v. State, 164 Ga. App. 569, 298 S.E.2d 290 (1982).

To give an opinion on value, the nonexpert witness must supply reasons by showing knowledge, experience, or familiarity as to value. City of Alma v. Morris, 180 Ga. App. 420, 349 S.E.2d 277 (1986).

Because an opinion rendered by a debtor's guarantor lacked probative value as to the valuation of the debtor-dry cleaner's equipment, as the guarantor was not in the business of owning and operating a dry cleaning business, such opinion was inadmissible as it amounted to nothing more than an unsupported conclusion or guess; thus, the debtor and its guarantors failed to rebut the bank's prima facie showing that the sale was commercially reasonable, and the trial court properly granted summary judgment on this ground. AKA Mgmt. v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 275 Ga. App. 615, 621 S.E.2d 576 (2005).

Given that both parties to a property dispute involving a house testified as to the home's value, including the appraisals, probative and non-hearsay evidence as to the value existed to support the jury's damages award such that the trial court erred in concluding otherwise and awarding a new trial on this basis. Perry v. Perry, 285 Ga. App. 892, 648 S.E.2d 193 (2007).

Owner of property is considered to be qualified to state owner's opinion as to value. Maddox v. State, 157 Ga. App. 696, 278 S.E.2d 480 (1981); Dixon v. Williams, 177 Ga. App. 702, 340 S.E.2d 286 (1986).

Property owner need not be an expert to state an opinion as to the value of the owner's property, provided the owner can establish that the owner has had an opportunity for forming a correct opinion. Iffland v. Lancaster, 176 Ga. App. 449, 336 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

There was no error by the trial court in admitting property owner's opinion testimony as to the fair market value of the damaged property before the fire where the owner had adequate opportunity to form a correct opinion as to the value of the items lost and the values to which the owner testified were those prior to the fire. Georgia Power Co. v. Hinson, 179 Ga. App. 263, 346 S.E.2d 73 (1986).

Trial court did not err in allowing the sellers to testify as to the fair market value of their property in a promissory estoppel action because the owner was competent to form a correct opinion of the property's fair market value based on the financial records put into evidence. Rental Equip. Group, LLC v. Maci, LLC, 263 Ga. App. 155, 587 S.E.2d 364 (2003).

Foundation for opinion evidence required. — Opinion evidence as to market value must be based upon a foundation that the witness has some experience or familiarity with, or knowledge other than mere general knowledge of, the value of the property or similar property, must have had an opportunity to form a correct opinion, and must give reasons for the value assessed. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Overby, 136 Ga. 69, 70 S.E. 664 (1911); Central Ga. Power Co. v. Cornwell, 139 Ga. 1, 76 S.E. 387, 1914A Ann. Cas. 880 (1912); Crump v. Knox, 18 Ga. App. 437, 89 S.E. 586 (1916); Anderson v. Anderson, 27 Ga. App. 513, 108 S.E. 907, cert. denied, 27 Ga. App. 835 (1921); Bitting v. State, 165 Ga. 55, 139 S.E. 877 (1927); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Cowart & Son, 38 Ga. App. 426, 144 S.E. 213 (1928); Speir v. Westmoreland, 40 Ga. App. 302, 149 S.E. 422 (1929); Georgia Power Co. v. Carson, 96 Ga. App. 612, 167 S.E. 902 (1933); Herrmann & Henican v. De La Perrier, 47 Ga. App. 541, 171 S.E. 232 (1933), later appeal, 56 Ga. App. 749, 194 S.E. 42 (1937); Fowler v. National City Bank, 49 Ga. App. 435, 176 S.E. 113 (1934); Southern Ry. v. Thacker, 50 Ga. App. 706, 179 S.E. 225 (1935); Ferguson v. Bank of Dawson, 50 Ga. App. 604, 179 S.E. 236 (1935); United States ex rel. TVA v. Phillips, 50 F. Supp. 454 (N.D.

Ga. 1943); Grant v. Dannels, 87 Ga. App. 389, 74 S.E.2d 119 (1953); Housing Auth. v. Spink, 91 Ga. App. 72, 85 S.E.2d 80 (1954); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Flynt, 93 Ga. Trial court did not err in refusing to allow the plaintiff to testify as to plaintiff's opinion of the value of an automobile destroyed in a collision since the plaintiff did not demonstrate any foundation of knowledge, experience, or familiarity on which an opinion of value could properly be based. White v. Miller, 194 Ga. App. 816, 392 S.E.2d 30 (1990); GMAC v. Newton, 207 Ga. App. 700, 429 S.E.2d 120 (1993).

Testimony that the witness is familiar with the value of the item in question is sufficient foundation. — It is no ground for objection if thereafter on cross-examination the witness testifies as to facts which tend to show a lack of knowledge about the facts to which the witness previously testified on direct. City of Alma v. Morris, 180 Ga. App. 420, 349 S.E.2d 277 (1986).

In an action by homeowners for negligent construction of their house, since the homeowners demonstrated no basis for the homeowners opinion as to value except that the homeowners doubted the house could be sold and to them they had not received what they bargained for and thus the house had no value to them, and later homeowners admitted they were not familiar with building costs or procedures, there was no rational basis for their value opinions, and the opinions could furnish no basis for the jury's consideration of value. Hutto v. Shedd, 181 Ga. App. 654, 353 S.E.2d 596 (1987).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-66, direct testimony as to market value is in the nature of opinion evidence, and one need not be an expert or dealer but may testify as to the value of property if one has had an opportunity for forming a correct opinion; a creditor's testimony at a confirmation proceeding about the creditor's experience with the property at issue in a foreclosure sale, how much the creditor had invested in the property, how much the creditor borrowed against the property, the property's condition at the time of the foreclosure sale, and the creditor's opinion that the creditor bid the fair market value for the property, along with the testimony of one of the buyers and the tax appraisal, was sufficient to show the fair market value of the property at the time of the sale. McCain v. Galloway, 267 Ga. App. 505, 600 S.E.2d 449 (2004).

Testimony of shareholder. — Trial court did not err in refusing to allow a witness to testify as to the value of a riverboat after counsel argued that the witness was a shareholder in the company selling the vessel but no foundation was laid by counsel to elicit the witness's knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the value of the riverboat. North Ala. Enters., Inc. v. Cap'n Sam's Cruises, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 718, 353 S.E.2d 578 (1987).

Prior jury verdict not admissible. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in ruling that the prior jury verdict is admissible evidence since to give an opinion on value the witness must supply reasons by showing knowledge, experience, or familiarity as to value and there was no procedure by which the parties could question the jury in the prior case about the reasons for its opinion of the property's earlier value and the prior jury could not relate its opinion to the later value of the property. Clayton County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Lake Spivey Golf Club, Inc., 207 Ga. App. 693, 428 S.E.2d 687 (1993).

Application in Specific Cases

Automobile franchise. — Although franchisee was not an expert or dealer, as a person experienced in this field with the opportunity to form a correct opinion, the franchisee was authorized to state the franchisee's opinion of the value of the various equipment and inventory as well as the profit or loss incurred on the sales of certain automobiles. Moore v. American Suzuki Motor Corp., 203 Ga. App. 189, 416 S.E.2d 807 (1992).

Confiscated drugs. — When a crime laboratory chemist testified as to the basis for the chemist's estimate involving confiscated drugs, it was not necessary that the chemist be qualified as an expert. Robinson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 759, 417 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 404 (1992).

Assessment of property. — See Hirsch v. Joint City County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 218 Ga. App. 881, 463 S.E.2d 703 (1995); Hall County v. Merritt, 233 Ga. App. 526, 504 S.E.2d 754 (1998).

In rendering expert opinions as to the market value of property subject to a condemnation proceeding, experts could properly consider hearsay statements made by a prior planning director for the local government to the effect that the government would work with the property's owner regarding rezoning the property. Unified Gov't v. Watson, 255 Ga. App. 1, 564 S.E.2d 453 (2002), aff'd, 276 Ga. 276, 577 S.E.2d 769 (2003).

Defendant was properly sentenced for felony theft of aluminum tire rims based on lay testimony of the victim regarding their value because the victim had experience in buying and selling such rims, which gave the victim an opportunity to form a correct opinion as to the fair cash market value at the time and place of the theft. Perdue v. State, 300 Ga. App. 588, 685 S.E.2d 489 (2009).

Mobile homes. — See First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Jones, 173 Ga. App. 356, 326 S.E.2d 554 (1985).

Motor vehicles. — See Grant v. Dannals, 87 Ga. App. 389, 74 S.E.2d 119 (1953); Nail v. Hiers, 116 Ga. App. 522, 157 S.E.2d 771 (1967); Ricker v. Hopkins Chevrolet, Inc., 147 Ga. App. 358, 248 S.E.2d 720 (1978); Burch v. Lawrence, 150 Ga. App. 351, 258 S.E.2d 35 (1979); Wheels & Brakes, Inc. v. Capital Ford Truck Sales, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 532, 307 S.E.2d 13 (1983).

While the purchase price of a motor vehicle is relevant and admissible to establish the vehicle's value at the time of purchase, it is obviously not, standing alone, sufficient to establish the value of the vehicle at some later point in time. Similarly, the value of a motor vehicle cannot be established merely by adding to the vehicle's purchase price the cost of maintaining and repairing the vehicle. Builders Transp., Inc. v. Hall, 183 Ga. App. 812, 360 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905, 360 S.E.2d 60 (1987).

When an affidavit as to the value of a truck contained no information regarding the affiant's knowledge, experience, or familiarity with the value of the vehicle, the affidavit lacked probative value as a nonexpert opinion. Dowdell v. Volvo Commer. Fin., LLC, 286 Ga. App. 659, 649 S.E.2d 750 (2007).

App. 622, 271 S.E.2d 876 (1980).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the victim's testimony was sufficient to allow a felony theft charge to go to the jury because the victim testified as to the market value for each of the items stolen from him, and the total value exceeded $500; the victim established that the victim had an opportunity to form a correct opinion because the victim based the opinion as to the market value of the stolen tools on the age of the tools and his experience using and purchasing them. Sheppard v. State, 300 Ga. App. 631, 686 S.E.2d 295 (2009).

Testimony from child of property owner. — Property owner's son's testimony in a condemnation proceeding as to the value of residential property was admissible, when the son testified to the son's comparable sales analysis and to the son's familiarity with the neighborhood. Appraiser could testify as to the possible rezoned value of the property, because the rezoning was sufficiently likely as to have an appreciable influence on the property's present market value, approximately $600. DOT v. Jordan, 300 Ga. App. 104, 684 S.E.2d 141 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0207, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 311 (Ga. 2010).

Purchaser may testify as to termite damage. — In a suit arising out of hidden termite damage, the court erred by refusing to allow the plaintiff-purchaser to provide evidence of damage by giving plaintiff's own non-expert opinion testimony as to the diminished value of the property, based on plaintiff's familiarity with similar property in the area and plaintiff's close personal inspection of the damage in question. Vitello v. Stott, 222 Ga. App. 134, 473 S.E.2d 504 (1996).

24-9-67. Opinions of experts admissible in criminal cases.

In criminal cases, the opinions of experts on any question of science, skill, trade, or like questions shall always be admissible; and such opinions may be given on the facts as proved by other witnesses. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds that there presently exists a crisis affecting the provision and quality of health care services in this state. Hospitals and other health care providers in this state are having increasing difficulty in locating liability insurance and, when such hospitals and providers are able to locate such insurance, the insurance is extremely costly. The result of this crisis is the potential for a diminution of the availability of access to health care services and a resulting adverse impact on the health and well-being of the citizens of this state. The General Assembly further finds that certain civil justice and health care regulatory reforms as provided in this Act will promote predictability and improvement in the provision of quality health care services and the resolution of health care liability claims and will thereby assist in promoting the provision of health care liability insurance by insurance providers. The General Assembly further finds that certain needed reforms affect not only health care liability claims but also other civil actions and accordingly provides such general reforms in this Act."

General Consideration

Status of witness as lay or expert goes not to admissibility, but credibility. McLelland v. State, 203 Ga. App. 93, 416 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 416 S.E.2d 340 (1992).

Expert witness defined. — An expert witness is one who through education, training, or experience has peculiar knowledge concerning some matter of science or skill to which the expert's testimony relates. Tifton Brick & Block Co. v. Meadow, 92 Ga. App. 328, 88 S.E.2d 569 (1955).

Construction with § 24-9-67.1. — As the undisputed evidence showed that the mitochondrial DNA (mtDNA) analysis was based on sound scientific theory and produced reliable results when proper procedures were followed, and the "direct sequencing" method employed in the prosecution of the defendant for murder was the only technique accepted and used by those who conducted forensic mtDNA testing, as the technique produced reliable results upon which any practitioner could draw conclusions, the trial court did not err in allowing that evidence. Further, O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67, and neither Daubert nor O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 controlled the admission of evidence in criminal proceedings. Vaughn v. State, 282 Ga. 99, 646 S.E.2d 212 (2007).

Qualifications of expert witness are addressed to sound discretion of court. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Sweat, 183 F.2d 27 (5th Cir. 1950).

Expert opinion must be helpful or necessary. — Expert opinion, like lay opinion, is received only in instances when the opinion is helpful or necessary. Jones v. State, 232 Ga. 762, 208 S.E.2d 850 (1974).

Expert opinion is admissible on any matter of scientific or technical knowledge. Southern Ry. v. Wessinger, 32 Ga. App. 551, 124 S.E. 100, cert. denied, 32 Ga. App. 807 (1924).

When based on facts supported by other witnesses and weight thereof is jury question. — Expert witnesses' opinions, on questions of science, skill, trade, or like questions, shall always be admissible provided the opinions are based on facts supported by other witnesses and the weight thereof is a question for the jury, to deal with as the jury sees fit, giving credence to the opinion or not. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Sweat, 183 F.2d 27 (5th Cir. 1950).

When an expert testified that the expert's opinion was based upon the plaintiff's deposition testimony, the investigating officer's report, diagrams of the accident scene drafted by the plaintiff, photographs of the plaintiff's vehicle, and information regarding the speed of the plaintiff's truck from its governor, it was a jury question as to the weight which should be assigned the opinion, and not a question of admissibility. J.B. Hunt Transp., Inc. v. Brown, 236 Ga. App. 634, 512 S.E.2d 34 (1999).

Expert's credibility is a jury question. — Defendant's argument that the evidence was insufficient to support the defendant's conviction for possession by ingestion of methamphetamine because the testimony of the defendant's expert witness, a forensic toxicologist with a private clinical reference laboratory, called into question the validity of the state crime lab report, was rejected because the determination of the credibility of defendant's expert and the effect of the expert's testimony on the validity of the state crime lab report were for the jury. Poston v. State, 274 Ga. App. 117, 617 S.E.2d 150 (2005).

Opinion proper when on matter within scope of expertise. — Expert can express an opinion on a matter when the matter inquired about lies within the domain of the profession or calling which the expert pursues. Southern Ry. v. Cabe, 109 Ga. App. 432, 136 S.E.2d 438 (1964).

Opinions on matters outside scope of expertise. — Opinion of any witness, not on any question of science, skill, trade, or like questions is inadmissible when all the facts are capable of being clearly detailed so that the jury may form correct conclusions therefrom. Whatley v. Henry, 65 Ga. App. 668, 16 S.E.2d 214 (1941).

While expert witnesses may give their opinions as to facts, principles, and rules involved in the science in which the witnesses are learned, the witnesses are not, as to questions lying out of the domain of the science, art, or trade in which the witnesses are experts, exempt from the restriction of the statute, which requires witnesses to state facts and not opinions. Southern Ry. v. Cabe, 109 Ga. App. 432, 136 S.E.2d 438 (1964).

Establishing variance from standard of care in legal malpractice cases. — Plaintiff may not establish variance from standard of care in medical or legal malpractice cases without expert opinion testimony from which the jury could determine malpractice. This latter requirement is properly a prerequisite for the submission of a case to the jury. Savannah Valley Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Cheek, 248 Ga. 745, 285 S.E.2d 689 (1982).

Matter within scope of lay knowledge or experience. — Expert testimony is usually excluded when the question is whether the subject matter is within the scope of the ordinary layman's knowledge and experience. Jones v. State, 232 Ga. 762, 208 S.E.2d 850 (1974).

Expert opinion testimony on issues to be decided by the jury, even the ultimate issue, is admissible when the conclusion of the expert is one which jurors would not ordinarily be able to draw for themselves; that is, the conclusion is beyond the ken of the average layman. Smith v. State, 247 Ga. 612, 277 S.E.2d 678 (1981).

Expert may not testify as to the expert's opinion as to the existence vel non of a fact (in this case, whether a child had been abused sexually) unless the inference to be drawn from facts in evidence is beyond the ken of the jurors—that is, unless the jurors, for want of specialized knowledge, skill, or experience, are incapable of drawing—from facts in evidence—such an inference for themselves. Allison v. State, 256 Ga. 851, 353 S.E.2d 805 (1987).

Advocate for the victims of sexual assault at a rape crisis center did not testify as to a rape trauma syndrome; rather, the advocate properly testified that there was no typical or common behavior among rape victims and that alleged victims of sexual assault might delay reporting such crimes. Stevenson v. State, 272 Ga. App. 335, 612 S.E.2d 521 (2005).

Whether a seat belt engaged properly or an air bag deployed are not matters of science and issues requiring the expert testimony of an engineer or a metallurgist, but are matters of skill and experience. Owens v. GMC, 272 Ga. App. 842, 613 S.E.2d 651 (2005).

Whether someone suffers greater injuries in a car wreck when a seat belt does not work to restrain the person and the air bag does not inflate between the person and the steering wheel, windshield, and mirror are not matters of science and issues requiring the expert testimony of trauma physician or engineer, but are matters of skill and experience. Owens v. GMC, 272 Ga. App. 842, 613 S.E.2d 651 (2005).

Mixture of law and fact. — It is only when the drawing of the inference requires a mixture of law and fact that the question is not a proper one for opinion evidence. Gage v. Tiffin Motor Homes, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 704, 266 S.E.2d 345 (1980); Security Life Ins. Co. v. Blitch, 155 Ga. App. 167, 270 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

Opinion of ultimate fact. — Expert opinions are advisory and are not binding upon a fact-finding tribunal when such opinions are as broad in scope as the question of fact at issue, such as the cause of death or disability. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. King, 88 Ga. App. 176, 76 S.E.2d 81 (1953).

As a general rule, an expert witness is not allowed to express on the stand an opinion of ultimate fact or the very fact to be decided by the jury because to do so would invade the province of the jury. Jones v. State, 232 Ga. 762, 208 S.E.2d 850 (1974); Mitchell v. State, 154 Ga. App. 399, 268 S.E.2d 360 (1980).

An expert witness may testify as to the witness's opinion on the ultimate issue in the case without invading the province of the jury so long as the subject is an appropriate one for opinion evidence. King v. Browning, 246 Ga. 46, 268 S.E.2d 653 (1980); Security Life Ins. Co. v. Blitch, 155 Ga. App. 167, 270 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

If witness is asked witness's opinion as to a fact and not as to a mixed question of law and fact, the witness should be allowed to testify even though the witness's opinion is as to the ultimate issue for the jury. Security Life Ins. Co. v. Blitch, 155 Ga. App. 167, 270 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

If the cause and manner of an injury is the ultimate issue of fact to be determined by the jury, an expert may nevertheless give the expert's factual opinion but not the expert's legal conclusion on this issue for the benefit of the jury in their fact finding. Security Life Ins. Co. v. Blitch, 155 Ga. App. 167, 270 S.E.2d 349 (1980).

An expert may state the expert's opinion upon an ultimate fact, provided that all other requirements for admission of expert opinion are met. Baker v. State, 161 Ga. App. 670, 288 S.E.2d 280 (1982).

Legal conclusions. — Expert cannot act as a member of the jury; nor, while on the stand, can the expert transcend the functions of a witness and, under the guise of giving testimony, state a legal conclusion. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Thornton, 119 Ga. 455, 46 S.E. 678 (1904); Herndon v. State, 178 Ga. 832, 174 S.E. 597 (1934), appeal dismissed, 295 U.S. 441, 55 S. Ct. 794, 79 L. Ed. 1530 (1935); Gage v. Tiffin Motor Homes, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 704, 266 S.E.2d 345 (1980); Mitchell v. State, 154 Ga. App. 399, 268 S.E.2d 360, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1011, 101 S. Ct. 567, 66 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1980).

Whether a question calls for a legal conclusion or principally a fact which incidentally involves a legal word or phrase is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Gage v. Tiffin Motor Homes, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 704, 266 S.E.2d 345 (1980).

Although it is permissible for the expert to give the expert's opinion to facts in issue or even the ultimate issue where such question is a proper one for opinion evidence, the expert is not permitted to state a legal conclusion as to the ultimate matter in issue. Nichols v. State, 177 Ga. App. 689, 340 S.E.2d 654 (1986).

Testimony on calculation of damages. — When plaintiffs presented expert testimony on the calculation of damages, even though the trier of fact found that the defendant was not responsible for all the damages, the plaintiff showed with reasonable certainty the total amount of damages and the degree to which those damages were attributable to defendant, and the award was affirmed. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority v. Green Int'l, Inc., 235 Ga. App. 419, 509 S.E.2d 674 (1998).

Opinions of an expert alone are insufficient grounds on which to grant summary judgment. Lake v. Hamilton Bank, 137 Ga. App. 600, 224 S.E.2d 522 (1976).

Experiments. — Expert testimony can be based on experiments if the expert gives details of the experiment. Frank v. State, 141 Ga. 243, 80 S.E. 1016 (1914).

Construction with § 24-9-65. — Former Code 1933, § 38-1710 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67) dealt with expert testimony concerning science, skill, trade, or like questions, in which matters experts may give their opinion based on facts as proved by other witnesses, but former Code 1933, § 38-1708 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-65) dealt with opinions of lay witnesses. Mills v. State, 71 Ga. App. 353, 30 S.E.2d 824 (1944).

Appellate standard for admission. — When testimony of an expert accident reconstructionist was admitted by the trial court as expert opinion, the Court of Appeals erred by judging its admissibility pursuant to the standard appropriate for lay witnesses. Johnson v. Knebel, 267 Ga. 853, 485 S.E.2d 451 (1997).

Appellate court is not bound by Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, 509 U.S. 579, 113 S. Ct. 2786, 125 LE2d 469 (1993) and has consistently refused to apply the Daubert standard; further, as Daubert involves the application of Fed. R. Evid. 702, which has not been adopted in Georgia, Daubert has not been adopted in Georgia either. Dailey v. State, 271 Ga. App. 492, 610 S.E.2d 126 (2005).

Past use of expert by other party. — Plaintiff's questions regarding the prior employment of plaintiff's expert by defense counsel, asked in an attempt to rehabilitate or bolster the expert's credibility, were not admissible. Vaughn v. Protective Ins. Co., 243 Ga. App. 79, 532 S.E.2d 159 (2000).

Exclusion of expert witness testimony on cross-racial eyewitness identification not reversible error. — Trial court did not abuse court's discretion or violate the defendant's 14th and 6th amendment rights by excluding expert testimony about cross-racial eyewitness identification; based on eyewitness testimony and the defendant's confession, the jury could have resolved the issue of whether the victims recognized the defendant without the assistance of an expert witness. Crawford v. State, 283 Ga. App. 645, 642 S.E.2d 335 (2007).

Procedural Considerations

Giving testimony based on lab report not yet admitted into evidence. — Expert medical witness could not give an opinion on the cause of death based on lab report which had not yet been admitted into evidence, but error in allowing such opinion was cured when the lab report was later introduced into evidence. Vaughn v. State, 249 Ga. 803, 294 S.E.2d 504 (1982).

Trial court did not err in refusing to permit the testimony of two of the manufacturer's expert witnesses in an asbestos exposure case as to the asbestos fiber counts on its packing material that had been determined by an outside laboratory, even though such opinions may be given on the facts as proved by other witnesses, because the experts were not entitled to give an opinion based upon the outside laboratory's report which was prepared by other people and which was not in evidence. John Crane, Inc. v. Jones, 262 Ga. App. 531, 586 S.E.2d 26 (2003).

Introduction of fingerprint magnifications not necessary when expert testified as to expert's comparisons. — Expert in field of fingerprint identification was qualified to state opinion based on expert's analysis and comparison that fingerprints found at scene of the crime were those of appellant; and in presenting this expert testimony, it was not necessary for state to introduce magnification of prints to demonstrate at trial the points of similarity. W.B.S. v. State, 163 Ga. App. 471, 294 S.E.2d 705 (1982).

When witness is tendered as an expert. — Witness who was not tendered as an expert until near the end of the witness's testimony and after cross-examination qualified as an expert at the inception of the witness's testimony and could properly render an expert opinion. In re C.W.D., 232 Ga. App. 200, 501 S.E.2d 232 (1998).

Qualification as Expert

Court determines expert's qualifications. — Qualification of a witness as an expert is addressed to the sound discretion of the court. Clary v. State, 8 Ga. App. 92, 68 S.E. 615 (1910); Hines v. Hendricks, 25 Ga. App. 682, 104 S.E. 520 (1920); Western & Atl. R.R. v. Fowler, 77 Ga. App. 206, 47 S.E.2d 874 (1948); McDowell v. State, 78 Ga. App. 116, 50 S.E.2d 633 (1948); Carroll v. Hayes, 98 Ga. App. 450, 105 S.E.2d 755 (1958); *Pinkerton & Laws Co. v. App. 69, 276 S.E.2d 129 (1981); Hicks v. State, 196 Ga. App. 311, 396 S.E.2d 60 (1990).

For definitions of expert, see Macon Ry. & Light Co. v. Mason, 123 Ga. 773, 51 S.E. 569 (1905). See also Doster v. Brown, 25 Ga. 24, 71 Am. Dec. 153 (1858); White v. Clements, 39 Ga. 232 (1869); Hines v. Hendricks, 25 Ga. App. 682, 104 S.E. 520 (1920).

An expert is one who practices a business or profession requiring the person to have technical knowledge in that field. Smith v. State, 127 Ga. 56, 56 S.E. 116 (1906); Glover v. State, 129 Ga. 717, 59 S.E. 816 (1907).

Expert testimony must relate to scientific or technical knowledge. McLain v. State, 71 Ga. 279 (1883); McClendon v. State, 7 Ga. App. 784, 68 S.E. 331 (1910); Spence v. State, 20 Ga. App. 61, 92 S.E. 555, cert. denied, 20 Ga. App. 832 (1917).

Basic requirements for expert. — Generally, nothing more is required to qualify an expert than that one has been educated in a particular trade or profession. Southern Ry. v. Cabe, 109 Ga. App. 432, 136 S.E.2d 438 (1964); Bowden v. State, 239 Ga. 821, 238 S.E.2d 905 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 937, 98 S. Ct. 1513, 55 L. Ed. 2d 533 (1978); Brown v. State, 245 Ga. 588, 266 S.E.2d 198 (1980); Dennis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 142, 279 S.E.2d 275 (1981); Morris v. State, 159 Ga. App. 600, 284 S.E.2d 103 (1981); Inta-Roto, Inc. v. Guest, 160 Ga. App. 75, 286 S.E.2d 61 (1981).

An expert witness need only be competent as an expert in the witness's own field, and the witness need not have legal expertise. Watkins v. State, 259 Ga. 648, 386 S.E.2d 132 (1989).

Formal training is not a prerequisite for expert status. Brown v. State, 245 Ga. 588, 266 S.E.2d 198 (1980).

Special knowledge necessary to be an expert may be derived from experience as well as study. Southern Ry. v. Cabe, 109 Ga. App. 432, 136 S.E.2d 438 (1964); Martin v. Newton, 129 Ga. App. 735, 201 S.E.2d 31 (1973); Bowden v. State, 239 Ga. 821, 238 S.E.2d 905 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 937, 98 S. Ct. 1513, 55 L. Ed. 2d 533 (1978); Brown v. State, 245 Ga. 588, 266 S.E.2d 198 (1980); Dennis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 142, 279 S.E.2d 275 (1981); Morris v. State, 159 Ga. App. 600, 284 S.E.2d 103 (1981); Inta-Roto, Inc. v. Guest, 160 Ga. App. 75, 286 S.E.2d 61 (1981).

Failure to object constitutes waiver. — In rate increase request hearings, when the power company failed to object to an expert witness's qualifications either before or during the witness's testimony, any objection it might have had was waived. Georgia Power Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 196 Ga. App. 572, 396 S.E.2d 562 (1990).

Expert can express an opinion on a matter which lies within the domain of the profession or calling which the witness pursues. Martin v. Newton, 129 Ga. App. 735, 201 S.E.2d 31 (1973).

Application of knowledge to specific problem not necessary. — When one has been formally educated in a particular trade or profession, additional experience by application of that knowledge to a specific problem is not necessary in order to sustain one as an expert. Inta-Roto, Inc. v. Guest, 160 Ga. App. 75, 286 S.E.2d 61 (1981).

Qualification as expert satisfied. — Toxicologist and pharmacologist, who was not a medical doctor, was competent to give an opinion in a medical malpractice action that a drug prescribed by defendants caused plaintiff's miscarriage since the testimony was not offered to address the applicable standard of care but to show causation. Sinkfield v. Shi-Han Oh, 229 Ga. App. 883, 495 S.E.2d 94 (1998).

Medical examiner's testimony was not without proper foundation as the examiner was qualified, tendered, and admitted as an expert and, therefore, the examiner was permitted to give opinion testimony based on observations during the autopsy, as well as on facts provided by other witnesses; the examiner testified that the opinion as to the manner of death was based on the appearance of the wound, the path and course of the bullet, the presence of a laceration to the head of the victim, and the absence of a gun at the scene. Smith v. State, 276 Ga. 97, 575 S.E.2d 450 (2003).

Defendant alleged that the witness was not qualified as a handwriting expert because the witness failed the test to become a member of the American Board of Forensic Document Examiners and was only a trainee member of the American Society of Forensic Document Examiners; although this is true, the witness testified to becoming a member of the Southeastern Association of Forensic Document Examiners after completing two years of training, that the witness had been performing handwriting analysis on a daily basis for the Georgia Crime Lab for the last eight years, that the witness had examined thousands of documents, and that the witness had been qualified as an expert witness in criminal cases tried in a Georgia superior court approximately eighteen times; thus, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in qualifying the witness as an expert in forensic document examination. Poole v. State, 270 Ga. App. 432, 606 S.E.2d 878 (2004).

Advocate for the victims of sexual assault at a rape crisis center was properly qualified as an expert as the advocate had been through 50 hours of sexual assault training and had two years of experience, in which the advocate had counseled over 100 purported victims of sexual assault; further, the advocate had published one article that was presented at a seminar. Stevenson v. State, 272 Ga. App. 335, 612 S.E.2d 521 (2005).

Certification of an expert was not an abuse of discretion as the witness had over 20 years of experience in the field of domestic violence and an educational background in psychology. Miller v. State, 273 Ga. App. 761, 615 S.E.2d 843 (2005).

Employee of the Department of Family and Children Services was properly allowed to testify that a victim's condition and behavior was consistent with Shaken Baby Syndrome based on the employee's extensive experience and training with respect to fatal child abuse and Shaken Baby Syndrome; the fact that the employee did not hold a medical degree went only to the weight of the employee's testimony, and the employee's evidence was cumulative of that given by physicians. Waits v. State, 282 Ga. 1, 644 S.E.2d 127 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by qualifying a licensed professional counselor and qualified psychometrist as an expert in the administration of intelligence tests after hearing testimony regarding the counselor's relevant education and experience based on the fact that the counselor did not independently perform the Wechsler Adult Intelligence Scales-Third Edition test (WAIS-III) on the defendant and merely assisted in the test's administration, nor did the trial court err in admitting the sufficiently relevant and reliable evidence regarding the WAIS-III test administered since the counselor's supervisor did not have to be physically present in the room with the defendant during the counselor's testing session in order to supervise the counselor. Further, the defendant failed to show that the tests results were unreliable after the counselor's rebutted testimony regarding the manner in which the testing was conducted. Rogers v. State, 282 Ga. 659, 653 S.E.2d 31 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1311, 128 S. Ct. 1882, 170 L. Ed. 2d 747; reh'g denied, U.S. , 128 S. Ct. 2988, 171 L. Ed. 2d 907 (2008).

An investigator testified that the investigator had been employed in law enforcement since 1988; that the investigator had received 240 hours of narcotics training; that the investigator had attended a regional drug training academy specializing in the recognition of clandestine methamphetamine labs; that the investigator had attended informant management classes, undercover drug classes, and drug identification classes; that the investigator had previously investigated cases involving possession of narcotics with the intent to distribute and manufacturing of the same, including methamphetamine; and, among other things, that the investigator used confidential informants to assess new trends in the world of illegal narcotics. Based on this training and experience, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in qualifying the investigator as an expert in the street level narcotics trade, the characteristics of a methamphetamine lab, and the identification of a substance as possible methamphetamine. Boone v. State, 293 Ga. App. 654, 667 S.E.2d 880 (2008).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence, testimony of the forensic toxicologist who tested the defendant's blood was properly admitted as expert testimony as the witness had a permit from the Georgia Bureau of Investigation to perform chemical analyses of blood specimens received from the police, and the defendant subsequently had the opportunity to cross-examine the witness about the witness's credentials and testimony. Fowler v. State, 294 Ga. App. 864, 670 S.E.2d 448 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0529, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 204 (Ga. 2009).

Appointment of Expert by Court

Appointment discretionary with court. — Granting or denial of a motion for appointment of expert witnesses lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Whitaker v. State, 246 Ga. 163, 269 S.E.2d 436 (1980).

Appointment of expert witnesses lies within the sound discretion of the trial court and, absent a showing of an abuse of that discretion, the Court of Appeals will not interfere. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398 (1982); Dennis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 142, 279 S.E.2d 275 (1981); Morris v. State, 159 Ga. App. 600, 284 S.E.2d 103 (1981).

Trial court's comments on witness's status held prejudicial. — Trial court's comments, adding the influence of the court's personal opinion on the expert status of a witness and identifying the witness in common with the court as a state-paid employee, were prejudicial comments on the evidence during a competency trial. Jones v. State, 189 Ga. App. 232, 375 S.E.2d 648 (1988).

Basis for Opinion

1. In General

Facts that can form basis for opinion. — Expert opinions can be based upon facts which the expert has testified to, or heard others testify to, or which have been hypothetically stated to the expert. Choice v. State, 31 Ga. 424 (1860); Taylor v. State, 83 Ga. 647, 10 S.E. 442 (1889).

An expert witness may give an opinion based upon the witness's own examination of a person, upon the witness's observation of that person, or upon any state of facts, supported by some evidence in the case, which the witness assumes as true. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n v. Hickman, 100 Ga. App. 348, 111 S.E.2d 380 (1959).

Opinion of an expert on any question relating to the expert's profession, trade, or business is always admissible, when given in response to a hypothetical question based upon the testimony of witnesses other than the expert, or if the expert has personally observed the facts, and gives the expert's opinion based upon the expert's own observation. Bullington v. Chandler, 110 Ga. App. 803, 140 S.E.2d 59 (1964).

An expert may give an opinion based on facts which the expert personally observes, and when an expert personally observes data collected by another, the expert's opinion is not objectionable merely because it is based, in part, on the other's findings. Millar Elevator Serv. Co. v. O'Shields, 222 Ga. App. 456, 475 S.E.2d 188 (1996).

Expert witness's opinion predicated on facts raised by others. — An expert witness's opinion may be predicated upon facts placed in evidence by the testimony of other witnesses or by any other legal means. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n v. Hickman, 100 Ga. App. 348, 111 S.E.2d 380 (1959); National Trailer Convoy, Inc. v. Sutton, 136 Ga. App. 760, 222 S.E.2d 98 (1975).

Opinions must be based on established facts. — Expert opinions are admissible if based upon a state of facts which the evidence on behalf of either party tends to establish; but the jury should know upon what facts the opinion is founded, for its pertinence depends upon whether the jury finds the facts on which the opinion rests. Moore v. State, 221 Ga. 636, 146 S.E.2d 895 (1966).

Matter not in evidence. — An expert witness was properly precluded from expressing an opinion based on a letter containing an inadmissible summary of matter not in evidence and not within the expert's own knowledge. Loper v. Drury, 211 Ga. App. 478, 440 S.E.2d 32 (1994).

Witness's opinion must be witness's own; the witness cannot act as a mere conduit for the opinion of others. Thus, the opinion is incompetent if the witness has no general knowledge of the witness's own. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Brower, 106 Ga. App. 340, 127 S.E.2d 33, rev'd on other grounds, 218 Ga. 525, 128 S.E.2d 926 (1962); Stephen W. Brown Radiology Assocs. v. Gowers, 157 Ga. App. 770, 278 S.E.2d 653 (1981).

Personal observation of fact by expert. — Opinion of experts, on matters within their area of expertise, is admissible especially when the expert has personally observed the facts and gives the expert's opinion based upon the expert's own observations. Erwin v. Gold Kist, Inc., 146 Ga. App. 372, 246 S.E.2d 404 (1978).

Expert testimony as to illegal drug distribution trade is admissible. — Trial court did not err by allowing a district attorney's investigator to give the investigator's "guess" that a document found in appellant's possession and introduced in evidence "was 'the way people who are involved in the distribution of drugs keep records of who owes them money,'" because the testimony of the investigator involved a question of "trade," particularly concerning the procedure used in the illegal drug distribution trade in keeping records of accounts due and owing. O'Donnell v. State, 200 Ga. App. 829, 409 S.E.2d 579, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 896, 409 S.E.2d 579 (1991).

Expert testimony by an undercover officer about how street drug dealers operated in three person units consisting of a seller, drug handler, and money handler, and why they did so, was admissible as not "beyond the ken" of the average juror and applicable to the facts of the case. Vaughan v. State, 251 Ga. App. 221, 553 S.E.2d 335 (2001).

With respect to a particular scientific procedure or technique, the trial court makes a determination whether the procedure or technique in question has reached a scientific stage of verifiable certainty, based upon evidence, expert testimony, treatises, or the rationale of cases in other jurisdictions. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. McIntosh, 215 Ga. App. 587, 452 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

Expert need not have gone to scene. — When an expert bases the expert's opinion on facts within the bounds of evidence, the testimony is admissible notwithstanding the fact that the expert never went to the scene at all and based the expert's opinion on an examination of photographs. Jones v. Ray, 159 Ga. App. 734, 285 S.E.2d 42 (1981).

Opinion based on findings of another. — When an expert personally observes data collected by another, the expert's opinion is not objectionable merely because it is based, in part, upon the other's findings. Cochran v. State, 151 Ga. App. 478, 260 S.E.2d 391 (1979).

Condemnor's expert properly testified as to the necessity of a transmission line even though the condemnor's opinion was based, in part, on another's findings; further, the expert conducted the condemnor's own study after the case was initially remanded and testified on remand that the transmission line was needed by 2007 to provide safe and reliable electric service to customers in North Georgia. Mosteller Mill, Ltd. v. Ga. Power Co., 271 Ga. App. 287, 609 S.E.2d 211 (2005).

Expert opinion may not be given on another's opinion. — Expert may give an opinion upon the facts testified to by other witnesses, but not upon their opinions. Walker v. Fields, 28 Ga. 237 (1859); Taylor v. Warren, 175 Ga. 800, 166 S.E. 225 (1932); McCauley v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 149 Ga. App. 706, 256 S.E.2d 19 (1979).

Expert opinion cannot be based on out-of-court representations by another. Flanagan v. State, 106 Ga. 109, 32 S.E. 80, 71 Am. St. R. 242 (1898).

Opinion based on hearsay. — When an expert witness's opinion is based on hearsay it is not error for the court to allow an expert to relate facts of which the expert has no direct personal knowledge, especially if the court gives the proper limiting instruction. White v. Georgia Power Co., 237 Ga. 341, 227 S.E.2d 385 (1976).

It is axiomatic that an expert, in utilizing the expert's expertise, may base the expert's opinion as to value upon hearsay. Hoover & Morris Dev. Co. v. FDIC, 149 Ga. App. 855, 256 S.E.2d 140 (1979).

When an expert's testimony is based on hearsay, the lack of personal knowledge on the part of the expert does not mandate the exclusion of the opinion but, rather, presents a jury question as to the weight which should be assigned the opinion. King v. Browning, 246 Ga. 46, 268 S.E.2d 653 (1980); Cheek v. Wainwright, 246 Ga. 171, 269 S.E.2d 443 (1980); Jones v. Ray, 159 Ga. App. 734, 285 S.E.2d 42 (1981).

An expert's opinion may be based in part upon hearsay, and when it is based thereon it goes to the weight and credibility of the testimony, not its admissibility. Avant Trucking Co. v. Stallion, 159 Ga. App. 198, 283 S.E.2d 7 (1981).

Provided an expert witness is properly qualified in the field in which the expert offers testimony, and the facts relied upon are within the bounds of the evidence, whether there is sufficient knowledge upon which to base an opinion or whether it is based upon hearsay goes to the weight and credibility of the testimony, not its admissibility. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. McIntosh, 215 Ga. App. 587, 452 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

In an action against a utility and power company for damages arising from electromagnetic radiation, the trial court committed reversible error in admitting testimony of experts regarding a perceived consensus of opinion in the scientific community that magnetic fields from power lines are not a cause of cancer. Jordan v. Georgia Power Co., 219 Ga. App. 690, 466 S.E.2d 601 (1995).

Forensic pediatrician who examined a battered infant was properly allowed to testify about seizures noted in the baby's medical records, and about a radiologist's report that confirmed suspicions about the extent of an injury, because the pediatrician's opinion was not based solely on those records, but also on an examination of the baby. Nichols v. State, 278 Ga. App. 46, 628 S.E.2d 131 (2006).

Investigating police officer basing opinion on hearsay statements. — Police officer who investigates an accident cannot base the officer's opinion as to manner in which accident occurred upon hearsay statements which the officer receives during the officer's investigation unless they are a part of the res gestae. Avant Trucking Co. v. Stallion, 159 Ga. App. 198, 283 S.E.2d 7 (1981).

Book learning. — Expert testimony is admissible even though based on book learning rather than knowledge gained from actual experience. Boswell v. State, 114 Ga. 40, 39 S.E. 897 (1901); Miller v. Travelers Ins. Co., 111 Ga. App. 245, 141 S.E.2d 223 (1965).

Opinion based on education and experience was not speculative. — Testimony of a firearms expert, that the expert would not expect to find gunshot residue from the murder weapon, a semiautomatic pistol, was not speculative, was grounded on the expert's education and experience, and was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67. Tavera v. State, 279 Ga. 803, 621 S.E.2d 422 (2005).

Restatement of textbook opinion inadmissible. — While an expert witness may support the expert's opinion by reference to books, statistical sources, and other learned sources, the witness's testimony is inadmissible when it is merely a restatement of a textbook opinion rather than an independent expression of the witness's own expert opinion. DOT v. Brand, 149 Ga. App. 547, 254 S.E.2d 873 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 250 Ga. 538, 299 S.E.2d 876 (1983).

Medical records. — Opinion testimony based merely upon records and case history furnished the witness by other doctors and not a part of the evidence in the case was objectionable, but the error in the admission of the doctor's opinion was harmless, since during the four-day trial of the case, an enormous amount of testimony was adduced concerning the recent medical history of the decedent, the testimony included findings of diagnostic tests made during the decedent's final days, a pathologic opinion as to the cause of death could not have been made without reference to the decedent's records, and other opinion evidence based upon the records was admitted in evidence without objection. Andrews v. Major, 180 Ga. App. 393, 349 S.E.2d 225 (1986).

Specific article in medical journal. — It was not necessary for a doctor to have qualified as authoritative the specific article referred to in a medical journal in defense of a medical malpractice case, since the doctor did not limit the doctor's assessment of the journal's authority to the selective scope of the article. Pound v. Medney, 176 Ga. App. 756, 337 S.E.2d 772 (1985).

Jury instructions. — Charge to the jury, that opinions of experts to be of any value, must be based upon facts believed, or proven to be true, was not an improper charge, nor did it have the effect of expressing an opinion on the evidence or tending to discredit the testimony of the expert witnesses in the case. Allen v. Allen, 71 Ga. App. 272, 30 S.E.2d 665 (1944).

2. Need to State Basis

Expert and nonexpert compared. — An expert may give the expert's opinion without stating the reasons therefor, but one who is not an expert may give an opinion only when accompanied with the reasons. Wallace v. State, 204 Ga. 676, 51 S.E.2d 395 (1949).

Explanation unnecessary. — Opinion testimony by witnesses who qualified as expert real estate appraisers, as to the value of the condemnees' land and as to the damages which the witnesses had suffered on account of the taking, is admissible without the necessity for the witnesses to state the facts upon which the witnesses based their opinions. Housing Auth. v. Millwood, 138 Ga. App. 610, 226 S.E.2d 766 (1976).

An expert may give the expert's opinion without stating the foundation therefor and without a hypothetical question based upon other evidence if the expert's opinion is based upon facts which the expert knows and has observed, or based upon facts in the record at the time the expert states the expert's opinion, or based partly on first-hand knowledge and partly on the facts or record. Thrift-Mart, Inc. v. Commercial Union Assurance Cos., 154 Ga. App. 344, 268 S.E.2d 397 (1980).

Explanation permitted. — While it is not necessary that an expert witness state the facts upon which the expert bases the expert's opinion, it is error to refuse to permit the expert to do so for the purpose of showing the basis of the opinion. It matters not whether the facts are sought from the witness while on direct or on cross-examination. State Hwy. Dep't v. Howard, 119 Ga. App. 298, 167 S.E.2d 177 (1969); Martin v. State, 151 Ga. App. 9, 258 S.E.2d 711 (1979).

Explanation necessary. — When an expert testifies to a conclusion based on information furnished by others, then all the information utilized by that expert in forming an opinion should be presented to the jury to enable the jury to evaluate the expert's testimony. Stewart v. State, 246 Ga. 70, 268 S.E.2d 906 (1980).

Error to refuse to permit witness to state basis. — While it is not necessary that an expert witness state the facts upon which the expert bases the expert's opinion, it is error to refuse to permit the expert to do so for the purpose of showing the basis of the opinion. Jordan v. Department of Transp., 178 Ga. App. 133, 342 S.E.2d 482 (1986).

Basis for opinion outside scope of expertise. — An opinion of a witness is inadmissible when the information upon which the opinion is based is not given. This is true, even though the witness is an expert on some subject, when the opinion testimony related to a subject on which the witness is not qualified as an expert. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Brower, 106 Ga. App. 340, 127 S.E.2d 33, rev'd on other grounds, 218 Ga. 525, 128 S.E.2d 926 (1962).

Explanation enhances weight of opinion. — When the facts upon which an expert bases the expert's opinion are stated the opinion is entitled to greater weight. State Hwy. Dep't v. Howard, 119 Ga. App. 298, 167 S.E.2d 177 (1969).

Hypothetical Questions

Admissibility of opinion. — Opinion of an expert on any question relating to the expert's profession, trade, or business is always admissible, when given in response to a hypothetical question based upon the testimony of witnesses other than the expert, or where the expert has personally observed the facts and given the expert's opinion based on the expert's own opinion. Yates v. State, 127 Ga. 813, 56 S.E. 1017, 9 Ann. Cas. 620 (1907); Cranshaw v. Schweizer Mfg. Co., 1 Ga. App. 363, 58 S.E. 222 (1907); Fincher v. Davis, 27 Ga. App. 494, 108 S.E. 905 (1921); Taylor v. Warren, 175 Ga. 800, 166 S.E. 225 (1932); Wallace v. State, 204 Ga. 676, 51 S.E.2d 395 (1949).

It is not necessary that question be propounded hypothetically when an expert testifies to the expert's opinion based upon facts which the expert has observed. Jones v. Ray, 159 Ga. App. 734, 285 S.E.2d 42 (1981).

When hypothetical question is appropriate. — Proper mode of examining a physician or expert, when the physician or expert is not testifying from one's own knowledge, is to ask the physician or expert hypothetical questions. Kimball v. State, 63 Ga. App. 183, 10 S.E.2d 240 (1940).

When an expert is asked to give an opinion on facts not coming within the expert's own knowledge, the question should be hypothetical. Evans v. DeKalb County Hosp. Auth., 154 Ga. App. 17, 267 S.E.2d 319 (1980).

Factual basis for hypothetical question. — When the testimony is based upon a hypothetical question, the facts assumed to be true should be such as the evidence on behalf of either party tends to establish. Flanagan v. State, 106 Ga. 109, 32 S.E. 80, 71 Am. St. R. 242 (1898); Yarbrough v. Yarbrough, 202 Ga. 391, 43 S.E.2d 329 (1947); Ellis v. Southern Ry., 89 Ga. App. 407, 79 S.E.2d 541 (1953); Garrett v. State, 153 Ga. App. 366, 265 S.E.2d 304 (1980).

Opinion of an expert witness may be given in response to a hypothetical question based upon facts placed in evidence by the testimony of other witnesses or by competent evidence of any nature. Altamaha Convalescent Ctr., Inc. v. Godwin, 137 Ga. App. 394, 224 S.E.2d 76 (1976); DuBois v. Ray, 177 Ga. App. 349, 339 S.E.2d 605 (1985); Horton v. Eaton, 215 Ga. App. 803, 452 S.E.2d 541 (1994), overruled on other grounds, Smith v. Finch, 285 Ga. 709, 681 S.E.2d 147 (2009); Rowe v. State, 266 Ga. 136, 464 S.E.2d 811 (1996).

When reliance is made upon circumstantial evidence alone for proof of one of the essential facts assumed in the framing of a hypothetical question, the trier of fact may consider the answer to the question only if it has first determined that the assumed fact has been satisfactorily established. Bowers v. State, 153 Ga. App. 894, 267 S.E.2d 309 (1980).

Reliance can be made upon circumstantial evidence to establish a basis for framing a hypothetical question; the question of whether the circumstances were sufficiently proven to establish the fact contained in the hypothetical question is an issue for the trier of fact. Stoneridge Properties, Inc. v. Kuper, 178 Ga. App. 409, 343 S.E.2d 424 (1986).

That the testimony was circumstantial would not affect the viability of a hypothetical. Whether there was insufficient knowledge upon which the expert could render the expert's opinion goes not to the admissibility of that opinion, but to the credibility of the witness. Apac-Georgia, Inc. v. Padgett, 193 Ga. App. 706, 388 S.E.2d 900 (1989).

Method of asking question. — Attorney would be limited in framing the hypothetical question to the expert witness by the same parameters which would limit own testimony. Altamaha Convalescent Ctr., Inc. v. Godwin, 137 Ga. App. 394, 224 S.E.2d 76 (1976).

Weight of testimony in response to hypothetical question. — Opinion testimony of an expert can be based upon hypothetical questions and though the jury is allowed to receive the testimony of experts the jury is not bound by such testimony; such testimony is not conclusive or controlling and is submitted for whatever the jury considers it to be worth. Woods v. Andersen, 145 Ga. App. 492, 243 S.E.2d 748 (1978).

Weight of Opinion Evidence

Expert testimony is weighed and judged like any other; its weight and value is determined by the jury considering its nature and the layman's knowledge thereof. Buckhanon v. State, 151 Ga. 827, 108 S.E. 209 (1921). See also Mitchell v. State, 6 Ga. App. 554, 65 S.E. 326 (1909).

Trier of fact not bound by expert testimony. — While competent expert testimony is entitled to great weight, the testimony is not so authoritative that either court, jury, or commission is bound to be governed by that testimony, since the testimony is advisory merely and intended to assist the court, jury, or commission in coming to a correct conclusion. B.F. Goodrich Co. v. Arnold, 88 Ga. App. 64, 76 S.E.2d 20 (1953). See also Thomas v. United States Cas. Co., 218 Ga. 493, 128 S.E.2d 749 (1962); Miller v. Travelers Ins. Co., 111 Ga. App. 245, 141 S.E.2d 223 (1965); Hughes v. Newell, 152 Ga. App. 618, 263 S.E.2d 505 (1979); Moses v. State, 245 Ga. 180, 263 S.E.2d 916 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 849, 101 S. Ct. 138, 66 L. Ed. 2d 60 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Nagel v. State, 262 Ga. 888, 427 S.E.2d 490 (1993).

While direct and positive testimony cannot arbitrarily be rejected by a jury or other trier of facts, this rule does not apply to the opinion evidence of physicians or other experts. Accordingly, it was a question for the board's determination as to whether the board would accept the testimony of one physician, which authorized the award for the claimant, or the testimony of two other doctors, which would have authorized an award denying compensation. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Doyle, 96 Ga. App. 745, 101 S.E.2d 600 (1957).

Expert testimony is not absolutely obligatory on the jury, even if uncontradicted. Smith v. Godfrey, 155 Ga. App. 113, 270 S.E.2d 322 (1980).

Probative value of opinion evidence is for the jury. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Ford, 8 Ga. App. 514, 70 S.E. 65 (1911); McDowell v. State, 78 Ga. App. 116, 50 S.E.2d 633 (1948); Ford Motor Co. v. Hanley, 128 Ga. App. 311, 196 S.E.2d 454 (1973); Arnold v. State, 155 Ga. App. 569, 271 S.E.2d 702 (1980).

Weight given to discredited tests in expert community. — Trial court did not err in admitting the expert testimony of the psychologist who interviewed the children even though defendant presented expert testimony that one of the tests used by the psychologist had been discredited in the psychological community; the conflicting expert opinions on test results went to the weight, rather than the admissibility, of the testimony. Hanson v. State, 263 Ga. App. 45, 587 S.E.2d 200 (2003).

Quality of expert opinion must be considered. — An expert opinion while very valuable in many situations, nevertheless has a limited weight-carrying capacity. The "quality" of such testimony must be considered. Lashley v. Ford Motor Co., 359 F. Supp. 363 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 480 F.2d 158 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1072, 94 S. Ct. 585, 38 L. Ed. 2d 478 (1973).

Jury can consider expert's credentials in assessing weight. — Whether an examining physician is or is not a psychiatrist is a matter which may affect the extent of the physician's expertise in evaluating a mental condition, and therefore may affect the weight of any opinion or evaluation, a matter to be determined by a jury, but it does not affect admissibility, nor is admissibility precluded by the fact that the physician's opinions and evaluations are based on conversations with the patient. Petty v. Folsom, 229 Ga. 477, 192 S.E.2d 246 (1972).

Jury can consider the expert's credentials and then give such weight and credit to the expert's testimony as jury sees fit. McCoy v. State, 237 Ga. 118, 227 S.E.2d 18 (1976).

Positive factual testimony outweighs negative opinion. — Affirmative and positive testimony of witnesses as to the actual facts of a particular occurrence is not overcome by testimony which is negative in its character or consists of mere opinions. West v. State, 84 Ga. 527, 10 S.E. 731 (1890).

An expert's opinion based on insufficient factual foundation or hearsay affects the weight, but not the admissibility, of the expert's testimony. Woods v. Andersen, 145 Ga. App. 492, 243 S.E.2d 748 (1978).

When it is developed by examination that the opinion is based on inadequate knowledge, this goes to the credibility of the witness rather than to the admissibility of the evidence. Jones v. Ray, 159 Ga. App. 734, 285 S.E.2d 42 (1981).

Jury instructions. — Even if the testimony of the civil engineer as to the distance between named points, introduced by the defendant in support of an alibi sought to be established by the defendant, could be considered as expert evidence, the omission to charge the law in regard to expert testimony as set forth in statute, declaring that "the opinions of experts, on any question of science, skill, trade, or like questions, shall always be admissible; and such opinions may be given on the facts as proved by other witnesses," was not, as contended, an expression of opinion as to credibility of the witness and weight of the testimony; nor was it erroneous to omit to charge on that subject without request. Stone v. State, 180 Ga. 223, 178 S.E. 435 (1935).

Charge that opinion evidence could be accepted by the jury and considered along with all the other evidence in the case, but that the jury was not bound by the opinions of experts or nonexperts was not error. Allen v. Allen, 71 Ga. App. 272, 30 S.E.2d 665 (1944).

Jury charge upheld. — There was no reversible error, despite the defendant's argument on appeal that the trial court's charge to the jury on DNA evidence was incomplete and prejudicial as a matter of law because: (1) a review of the record showed that the charge given by the court tracked the language set forth in the pattern charge and was otherwise a correct statement of law with respect to the collection and testing of DNA; and (2) the defendant's proposed jury charge was argumentative and composed primarily of evidentiary matters that were not proper for a jury instruction. Moreover, there was no request for the additional charge the defendant asserted was erroneously omitted present in the record. Stanley v. State, 289 Ga. App. 373, 657 S.E.2d 305 (2008).

Cross-Examination

Matters admissible on cross examination. — Matters the expert may have omitted from consideration in the expert's appraisal of property were appropriate matters for cross-examination and rebuttal, and ultimately for the weight to be given the opinion by the jury. Brookhaven Supply Co. v. DeKalb County, 134 Ga. App. 878, 216 S.E.2d 694 (1975).

Reasoning the expert used in reaching expert's opinion may be explored on cross-examination and need not be presented in toto as a condition precedent to admissibility. Woods v. Andersen, 145 Ga. App. 492, 243 S.E.2d 748 (1978).

Introducing inadmissible evidence by cross-examination. — Party should not be allowed to introduce in evidence an opinion of an expert witness based on hearsay by the method of cross-examining such witness when such evidence would have been entirely inadmissible on direct examination. Moore v. State, 221 Ga. 636, 146 S.E.2d 895 (1966).

Volunteered testimony. — Testimony of an expert witness is not reversible error if the expert volunteered testimony during cross-examination which was substantially the same or similar to that later objected to. DOT v. Coley, 184 Ga. App. 206, 360 S.E.2d 924 (1987).

(1996) (drug investigator on amount and manner of packaging of cocaine).

Battered women's syndrome expert was properly permitted to testify as to why a victim would not have reported instances of abuse and why the victim dismissed a complaint for divorce and reconciled with defendant; further, the expert was properly permitted to testify as to the expert's qualifications in the presence of the jury. Watson v. State, 278 Ga. 763, 604 S.E.2d 804 (2004).

Fingerprint comparison expert. — State's fingerprint expert was properly permitted to testify as fingerprint comparison evidence was not novel and was widely accepted in Georgia courts. Dailey v. State, 271 Ga. App. 492, 610 S.E.2d 126 (2005).

Rheumatologist testifying on the cause of an injured party's scleroderma. — Trial court properly allowed a customer who fell while shopping at a home products store to offer the testimony of experts who opined that scleroderma the customer developed shortly after the customer underwent surgical fusion of two vertebrae was caused by trauma the customer suffered when the customer fell, and the court did not err when the court declined to apply the test established by the Supreme Court of Georgia in its Harper decision when it decided if the customer's experts could testify. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc. v. Tvrdeich, 268 Ga. App. 579, 602 S.E.2d 297 (2004).

Contract terms. — If there was no applicable custom to determine, in a timber lease, the size of trees meant by the phrase "suitable for turpentine purposes," opinion evidence would be admissible. It should be admitted, however, not to explain the meaning of descriptive terms in the contract, but simply for the purpose of determining what class of trees or timber as to size would come within such description. Nor would the quoted phrase be varied in the phrase's legal meaning because of the different methods of proof, for that would be the same whether a custom be shown or not, since any such custom, if existing, would presumably represent the standard of ordinarily prudent men. Dorsey v. Clements, 202 Ga. 820, 44 S.E.2d 783 (1947).

Expert testimony on credibility of witness.

— Generally, expert testimony as to the credibility of a witness is admissible if the subject matter involves organic or mental disorders, such as insanity, hallucinations, nymphomania, retrograde amnesia, and testimony concerning physical maladies which tend to impair mental or physical faculties. Jones v. State, 232 Ga. 762, 208 S.E.2d 850 (1974).

Expert's testimony as to whether victims' videotaped statements were coached. — Expert's testimony as to whether victims' videotaped statements were coached was inadmissible in a prosecution for child molestation since the jury saw the interviews for themselves and heard the victims' direct and cross-examination as witnesses. Wright v. State, 233 Ga. App. 358, 504 S.E.2d 261 (1998).

An expert on insanity may give an opinion based upon the expert's own examination of a person, upon the expert's observation of that person, or upon any state of facts, supported by some evidence in the case, which the expert assumes as true. Moore v. State, 221 Ga. 636, 146 S.E.2d 895 (1966).

Testimony by examining physician. — Physician who has examined an injured party may describe what the physician has seen and give the physician's expert inferences therefrom. McGuire v. Davis, 437 F.2d 570 (5th Cir. 1971).

Opinion on ultimate fact. — Defendant's claim that a doctor improperly gave an opinion as to an ultimate fact was rejected as the doctor did not testify concerning child neglect syndrome when the doctor testified that the doctor's overall impression was a possible child-neglect scenario, the syndrome had been recognized and expert testimony concerning the syndrome was admissible, and a treating physician could testify that the examination of a child raised a strong suspicion of child abuse. Revells v. State, 283 Ga. App. 59, 640 S.E.2d 587 (2006).

Testimony by examining psychologist. — Juvenile court properly allowed expert to testify about mother's mental health status and its effects on the mother's parenting abilities even though the testing occurred two years prior to the hearing. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005).

In a child molestation case, there was no error in allowing certain expert testimony by a psychologist. The psychologist was properly allowed to explain conclusions based on tests developed either in the scientific community or from the psychologist's own clinical experience; the psychologist could testify that the victim's symptoms and accounts were highly consistent with sexual abuse; and because the trial court was authorized to conclude that one's ability to manufacture stories of abuse based upon his or her intelligence quotient (IQ) level fell beyond the ken of the average juror, the psychologist was properly allowed to testify that a person with the victim's IQ of 74 would have difficulty fabricating a detailed fictional account of abuse. Mullis v. State, 292 Ga. App. 218, 664 S.E.2d 271 (2008).

Testimony by examining nurse. — In a prosecution on charges of both child molestation and aggravated child molestation, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing an examining registered nurse to give an opinion that a child sex abuse victim's injuries were consistent with ones caused by penetration by a finger when, prior to testifying, the nurse outlined the nurse's relevant background including completion of a sexual assault nurse examiner's program, advanced pediatric training under the supervision of a doctor involved in child abuse cases, and training and experience in performing numerous pelvic examinations on child abuse victims. Rodriguez v. State, 281 Ga. App. 129, 635 S.E.2d 402 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion in limine to exclude a nurse's testimony, stating that the victim's normal physical examination was consistent with claims of molestation, as the nurse simply testified that the victim's physical examination results were consistent with the allegations, and as such was a permissible expression of the expert's opinion. Noe v. State, 287 Ga. App. 728, 652 S.E.2d 620 (2007).

Experts on toxicology. — As an expert witness was not a mere conduit for a toxicologist's findings, because the expert reviewed the data and testing procedures to determine the accuracy of the toxicologist's report, the expert's testimony was properly admitted. Therefore, defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony. Watkins v. State, 285 Ga. 355, 676 S.E.2d 196 (2009).

Psychologist's hypothetical based on evidence adduced at trial. — When appellant was charged with sexually molesting his daughter, and appellant acknowledged that he had sexually molested his first daughter by a previous marriage over a ten year period, the trial court did not err by admitting a psychologist's testimony about the mathematical probabilities regarding the self-rehabilitation of pedophiles or persons with incestuous behavior, since the likelihood of a person with compulsive behavior rehabilitating himself without treatment is a subject matter not within the scope of the ordinary laymen's knowledge and experience, and thus evidence regarding these matters was properly admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67. Harwood v. State, 195 Ga. App. 465, 394 S.E.2d 109 (1990).

Testimony on psychiatric disorders. — Testimony of experts that plaintiff suffered from recognized psychiatric disorders that caused the plaintiff to have or complain of physical symptoms out of proportion to any injuries the plaintiff may have experienced did not go solely to the credibility of the plaintiff and was admissible. Rose v. Figgie Int'l, Inc., 229 Ga. App. 848, 495 S.E.2d 77 (1998).

Medical social worker. — Witness's testimony that a baby's injuries were inconsistent with the history of events the defendant had described was well within the witness's purview as a medical social worker because the witness's daily duties required consideration of medical evidence along with personal observations to determine whether factors were present which could indicate child abuse. Nichols v. State, 278 Ga. App. 46, 628 S.E.2d 131 (2006).

Testimony of a mechanic was sufficient to prove the value of the damage to the victim's car in a case charging second degree criminal damage to property. Wyche-Hinkle v. State, 268 Ga. App. 898, 602 S.E.2d 902 (2004).

Expert on property value. — In an action to acquire land, a duly qualified expert may state the expert's opinion as to value without the necessity of stating the facts on which the expert's opinion is based. DeKalb County v. Cowan, 151 Ga. App. 753, 261 S.E.2d 478 (1979).

In an action to acquire land, if the expert testifies that the expert's opinion is based in part on a personal inspection of the property, it is no ground for objection that the expert's inspection was made subsequent to the taking. DeKalb County v. Cowan, 151 Ga. App. 753, 261 S.E.2d 478 (1979).

In an action to acquire land, it was not error to allow expert testimony as to the rental value of the property over the county's objection that the figure was based on the rental value of other property which was not shown to be comparable as the comparability of the other property was a matter going to the weight to be given the testimony, not its admissibility, and further, the testimony was relevant on the issue of consequential damages for the temporary loss of use of the property. DeKalb County v. Cowan, 151 Ga. App. 753, 261 S.E.2d 478 (1979).

Expert's reliance on hearsay. — Trial court did not err in overruling a landowner's objection to the admission of evidence of a survey conducted by another surveyor employed by the landowner's neighbors in that the survey was prepared in partial reliance on data outside of the surveyor's personal knowledge; an expert may base the expert's opinion on hearsay and may be allowed to testify as to the basis for the expert's findings, and the lack of the expert's personal knowledge goes to the weight assigned to the opinion. Ellis v. Holder, 267 Ga. App. 503, 600 S.E.2d 425 (2004).

Value of condemned land. — Expert's opinion as to what expert would pay for condemned land was probative of the land's fair market value and improperly excluded by the trial court. Jotin Realty Co. v. Department of Transp., 174 Ga. App. 809, 331 S.E.2d 605 (1985).

Expert on safety and causation. — Propriety of expert opinion as to whether a particular condition is safe or unsafe certainly is within the scope and purview of an expert's opinion; moreover, testimony as to causation is a proper matter for expert testimony. Pembroke Mgt., Inc. v. Cossaboon, 157 Ga. App. 675, 278 S.E.2d 100 (1981).

Testimony of pathologist in murder was not inadmissible because it might possibly give rise to inferences adverse to defendant.

Bethea v. State, 251 Ga. 328, 304 S.E.2d 713 (1983).

Medical expert on murder victim's fatal condition. — It was within the medical examiner's expertise to testify, based upon the examiner's observation of the blood stains at victim's condo and the significance of the blood loss indicated by those stains, that in the absence of immediate medical care victim was probably dead. White v. State, 263 Ga. 94, 428 S.E.2d 789 (1993).

Medical examiner properly allowed to state opinion on cause of death. — County medical examiner was properly permitted to state examiner's opinion, based on the facts contained in a 1979 autopsy report, that the victim died of a gunshot wound to the abdomen, and such opinion was not the restatement of the diagnostic opinion of another expert. Turner v. State, 273 Ga. 340, 541 S.E.2d 641 (2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 838, 122 S. Ct. 93, 151 L. Ed. 2d 54 (2001).

Forensic pathologist on single fatal blow. — Expert's testimony regarding the possibility of death by a single blow, and the possibility of subsequent head movement following death in that manner, was admissible because it was based on facts in evidence and because this testimony pertained to conclusions jurors would not ordinarily be able to draw for themselves. Maxwell v. State, 263 Ga. 57, 428 S.E.2d 76 (1993).

Testimony by pathologist instead of physician on injury was proper. — In a prosecution for kidnapping and aggravated assault, the trial court properly allowed a pathologist instead of a physician to testify as to whether the holes in the victim's shoe and an injury to the victim's toe were caused by a bullet; the pathologist had experience in inspecting gunshot wounds on people and in clothing and footwear. Winfrey v. State, 286 Ga. App. 450, 649 S.E.2d 561 (2007).

Expert trained in behavioral science. — Expert in the areas of homicide investigation and crime scene reconstruction was allowed to testify regarding the reasons why a perpetrator might reposition and cover a victim since the challenged testimony was well within the expert's range of training and experience and the average juror does not possess the experience necessary to discern the most common complex behavioral reasons for a perpetrator's acting in such a manner. Foster v. State, 273 Ga. 34, 537 S.E.2d 659 (2000).

Expert testimony on DNA profile. — Expert's testimony regarding the frequency in the population of the DNA profile obtained from three rape victims was admissible given the expert's credentials and expertise and the expert's testimony as to the computer program which generated the statistical frequencies to which the expert testified. Collins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 784, 600 S.E.2d 802 (2004).

No error resulted by admitting expert testimony on the issue of DNA testing, and because the defendant did not contend that the expert's testimony failed to meet the Harper standard, no basis for reversal on this ground existed. Carruth v. State, 286 Ga. App. 431, 649 S.E.2d 557 (2007).

Pediatrician's opinion that a child had been molested was one of fact and one which the jurors would not ordinarily be able to draw for themselves, and was admissible even though the testimony indirectly involved the child's credibility. State v. Butler, 256 Ga. 448, 349 S.E.2d 684 (1986), aff'd, 181 Ga. App. 589, 353 S.E.2d 855 (1987).

Expert's opinion that child molested. — Expert's testimony that in expert's opinion the child had been molested without comment as to whether the defendant was the molester was not testimony as to the ultimate issue in the case and was not objectionable. Karonen v. State, 205 Ga. App. 852, 424 S.E.2d 47, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 424 S.E.2d 47 (1992).

Child abuse syndrome. — Trial court properly allowed a psychologist, who had examined a child molestation victim, to testify as to the psychologist's conclusion that the victim suffered from child abuse syndrome, since the testimony was not a conclusion that the victim was in fact abused and that issue was left to the jury to determine. Cooper v. State, 200 Ga. App. 560, 408 S.E.2d 797 (1991).

Trial court properly admitted an expert's testimony as to child sexual abuse syndrome as: (1) it was helpful to the jury; and (2) laymen could not understand this syndrome without expert testimony, nor would laymen be likely to believe that a child who denied a sexual assault, or who was reluctant to discuss an assault, in fact had been assaulted; further, the expert offered no opinion as to whether the victims were being truthful, but left that determination for the jury. McCoy v. State, 278 Ga. App. 492, 629 S.E.2d 493 (2006).

Testimony of burglary investigator. — Testimony of a sheriff's department's burglary investigator as to whether, based on his training and experience, items are sometimes sold when items are stolen and whether the crime lab would process fingerprints taken from a burglary crime scene was admissible. Hestley v. State, 216 Ga. App. 573, 455 S.E.2d 333 (1995).

Testimony on blood samples based on electrophoresis procedure. — Expert witness may testify concerning identification of blood samples based on procedure known as electrophoresis, the statistical or mathematical probability of certain enzymes being found in the blood of the general population. Graham v. State, 168 Ga. App. 23, 308 S.E.2d 413 (1983).

Evidence of source of DNA. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to make a meritless objection based on the state's expert's testimony as to the source of the DNA on a sock as the possible mechanisms by which epithelial cells ended up on a sock were beyond the ken of the average layman; since the evidence at issue was admissible, defendant's trial counsel was not required to object. Eley v. State, 266 Ga. App. 45, 596 S.E.2d 660 (2004).

Expert testimony as to the practices of an industry is admissible. Dan Gurney Indus., Inc. v. Southeastern Wheels, Inc., 168 Ga. App. 504, 308 S.E.2d 637 (1983).

Expert could rely on the Safety Code for Elevators and Escalators in forming the expert's opinion. Millar Elevator Serv. Co. v. O'Shields, 222 Ga. App. 456, 475 S.E.2d 188 (1996).

Product liability action. — Trial court did not abuse court's discretion in allowing an expert witness to testify, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67, in a truck owner's products liability action against a truck modifying company regarding an allegedly defective switch that was installed on the floorboard of the truck, as the expert testified that the expert had some knowledge of electrical systems, vehicle wiring, and in investigating electrical fires; accordingly, the expert's opinion that the origin of the fire was electrical and the expert's explanation as to the meaning of a flammability rating and the expert's testimony thereon was properly admitted. Cottrell, Inc. v. Williams, 266 Ga. App. 357, 596 S.E.2d 789 (2004).

In an action for libel, there was no error in the admission of the testimony of a journalism professor who testified as to certain generally recognized minimum standards in journalism and then stated the professor's opinion that the conduct described in a hypothetical question did not meet these standards. News Publishing Co. v. DeBerry, 171 Ga. App. 787, 321 S.E.2d 112 (1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1053, 105 S. Ct. 2112, 85 L. Ed. 2d 477 (1985).

Testimony of police officer on cocaine use admissible. — Knowledge of the amount of crack cocaine one would generally possess for personal use or the amount which might evidence distribution is not necessarily within the scope of the ordinary layman's knowledge and experience. Therefore, the testimony of a veteran police officer on the subject would be properly admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67. Davis v. State, 200 Ga. App. 44, 406 S.E.2d 555 (1991).

Police officer's opinion testimony that the amount of cocaine seized in the execution of a search warrant upon defendant's residence would typically be intended for distribution by the defendant rather than for the defendant's personal use was properly admissible. Wise v. State, 257 Ga. App. 211, 570 S.E.2d 656 (2002).

Unqualified testimony of a police officer offered to show intent to distribute cocaine, based on the amount of cocaine and the officer's knowledge of defendant, was not competent evidence of an intent to distribute. Stephens v. State, 219 Ga. App. 881, 467 S.E.2d 201 (1996).

Crime lab chemist qualified regarding street value of drugs. — It was not error for the trial court to permit the state expert, a crime laboratory chemist, to testify concerning the "street value" of confiscated drugs, where the chemist testified that the chemist had accumulated knowledge of the street value of cocaine as a result of the chemist's experience over years of comparing the prices paid by undercover officers during their undercover purchases with that which was supplied to the chemist for analysis.

Robinson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 759, 417 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 404 (1992).

Although a print card was not admitted as a business record, it was relevant as the basis for an expert's conclusion that defendant's print matched that taken from the victim's vehicle; despite defendant's hearsay objection, the expert's testimony connected defendant to the crime, and the admissibility of the expert's inculpatory testimony did not depend upon the admission of the print. Roebuck v. State, 277 Ga. 200, 586 S.E.2d 651 (2003).

Opinion of police officer on auto accident. — Investigating officer's opinion testimony regarding the sequence of events involved in a vehicle collision is admissible evidence as a police officer with investigative experience on automobile collisions is an expert who may testify as to the cause of an accident the officer investigated. Bennett v. Mullally, 263 Ga. App. 215, 587 S.E.2d 385 (2003).

Officer is an expert on narcotics investigations. — Arresting officer should have been qualified as an expert in "narcotics investigation"; although the trial court allowed the officer's testimony over objection. Davis v. State, 209 Ga. App. 572, 434 S.E.2d 132 (1993).

Officer's testimony on effects of alcohol on body. — At the time of a defendant's driving under the influence (DUI) trial, the arresting officer had over four years of law enforcement experience, had been trained in DUI detection and field sobriety testing, and had been involved in over 100 DUI arrests. Based on the officer's training and experience, the officer was qualified to testify about the effects of alcohol consumption on the body. Lanwehr v. State, 265 Ga. App. 359, 593 S.E.2d 897 (2004).

Dock signals expert. — Trial court did not err in permitting witness to testify as an expert for procedures where hand signals or sight alone is insufficient in a personal injury action brought by longshoreman against state port authority. Georgia Ports Auth. v. Hutchinson, 209 Ga. App. 726, 434 S.E.2d 791 (1993).

Highway signal engineer. — Trial court did not abuse court's discretion in permitting a Department of Transportation engineer, qualified as a signal engineer, to testify whether the state was negligent in designing an intersection and signal timing at the intersection. Fouts v. Builders Transp., Inc., 222 Ga. App. 568, 474 S.E.2d 746 (1996).

Failure to identify expert before hearing not grounds to exclude testimony. — In a child deprivation hearing, a parent's claim that the trial court erred by allowing the state to call an expert witness without identifying the expert or producing the medical records in advance of the hearing was meritless because: (1) the parent's discovery request did not ask the state to identify each person whom the state expected to call as an expert witness at trial; and (2) the parent did not show prejudice from the lack of any additional information other than a broad assertion of insufficient time to prepare for the hearing. In the Interest of A.A., 293 Ga. App. 471, 667 S.E.2d 641 (2008).

Expert testimony not objectionable. — Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to object to an expert's opinion testimony because the record did not support the defendant's argument that the expert's testimony was objectionable; the expert's testimony was limited to describing how the expert and doctors in the medical community generally performed genital examinations of female patients and did not touch on whether either the defendant or the victim was telling the truth on whether the defendant committed aggravated sexual battery, and the expert's testimony regarding the typical medical examination of a preadolescent girl's genitals was relevant to the issues raised by the defendant's defense. Lee v. State, 300 Ga. App. 214, 684 S.E.2d 348 (2009).

2. Opinions Inadmissible

Testimony was inadmissible as expert testimony in the following cases. — See Wylly v. Gazan, 69 Ga. 506 (1882) (meaning of "more or less" in deed); Central R.R. v. DeBray, 71 Ga. 406 (1883) (whether employees were required to get on or off moving train); Carter v. Carter Elec. Co., 156 Ga. 297, 119 S.E. 737 (1923) (damage to business from use of similar name by competitor); Davies v. Blasingame, 177 Ga. 450, 170 S.E. 477 (1933) (soundness of property title); United States v. Roberts, 192 F.2d 893

(5th Cir. 1951) (continuing total disability a matter of law and fact).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of a drug store in a suit brought by the parents of a teenager who died while huffing butane for wrongful death and in a suit brought by the parents of two other teens who were injured when: the teens assumed the risk; the expert's affidavit presented by the parents was not based on personal knowledge from interviewing the teens, and was conclusory and speculative; to the extent that the expert's affidavit fit within O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67, the expert's generalizations about the beliefs of adolescents about death or the propensity of adolescents to exercise poor judgment and behave irresponsibly were not appropriate yardsticks for assessing the minors' knowledge of the risk; the parents' claim that the drug store knew that the teens were going to misuse the butane was based on hearsay; and the parents' public policy claims were rejected as O.C.G.A. § 16-13-90 created a list of dangerous substances not to be sold to minors, butane was not on the list, and any change in the law had to be legislatively enacted. Garner v. Rite Aid of Ga., Inc., 265 Ga. App. 737, 595 S.E.2d 582 (2004).

In a negligence and premises liability action, an administrator's expert affidavit regarding the foreseeability of a shooting of the decedent, a licensee, on the premises was inadmissible as there was no need for expert testimony to determine whether ordinary care was exercised in running the premises' business; moreover, because the evidence showed that there had never been an accidental shooting of one hunter by another on the premises, no basis existed for holding that the owners or operator should have foreseen that a third party would come onto the property and illegally shoot at a target which the third party could not identify. Hadden v. ARE Props., LLC, 280 Ga. App. 314, 633 S.E.2d 667 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to admit the testimony of a defendant's expert because the mistake charged to an arresting officer in administering an alco-sensor test too soon after the officer first stopped the defendant would not have affected the test result to which the arresting officer testified since the defendant admitted that defendant had been drinking, and the trial court admitted only the officer's testimony that the alco-sensor produced a positive result. Oliver v. State, 294 Ga. App. 299, 669 S.E.2d 162 (2008).

Opinion going to matter of ultimate fact.

— Medical expert witness may give the expert's opinion as to the cause of an injury, but if the cause of the injury constitutes the ultimate issue of fact to be determined by the fact finding tribunal, this opinion is not absolutely binding on such tribunal. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. v. Marks, 88 Ga. App. 167, 76 S.E.2d 507 (1953), overruled on other grounds, Fowler v. City of Atlanta, 116 Ga. App. 352, 157 S.E.2d 306 (1967).

Whether or not an attorney at law may qualify and testify as an expert witness as to what the law is and who has title and owns property as found by the attorney from examination of title records was a part of the ultimate fact to be decided by the jury. Bishop v. Lamkin, 221 Ga. 687, 146 S.E.2d 772 (1966).

Expert testimony on credibility of witness.

— If the characteristic of a witness attacked does not involve some organic or mental disorder or some impairment of the mental or physical faculties by injury, disease, or otherwise, or if there has been insufficient observation by the expert, expert testimony is usually excluded. Jones v. State, 232 Ga. 762, 208 S.E.2d 850 (1974).

Trial court erred by allowing a state's expert to testify, over the defendant's objection, that the expert did not believe the victim made up the allegations against the defendant, as such was an ultimate issue of fact, and nothing suggested that the determination of the victim's credibility was beyond the ken of the jurors; thus, to the extent that Smith v. State, 257 Ga. App. 88, 570 S.E.2d 400 (2002), allowed an expert to give an opinion on a witness's credibility or to express an opinion on the ultimate issue of defendant's guilt to rehabilitate the credibility of a witness whose veracity was attacked, it was overruled. Patterson v. State, 278 Ga. App. 168, 628 S.E.2d 618 (2006).

Opinion based on out-of-court evidence.

— Medical expert does not have the right to give in evidence an opinion based on information which the expert has derived from private conversations with third parties. Moore v. State, 221 Ga. 636, 146 S.E.2d 895 (1966).

Trial court erred in admitting a treating physician's opinions which were predicated in part on the opinions of other health care providers which were not admitted into evidence. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Franklin, 196 Ga. App. 474, 396 S.E.2d 514 (1990).

Witness invaded province of jury. — Expert witness's testimony that the childhood maltreatment syndrome or abused child syndrome was the "manner" in which the fatal injuries occurred, and that the fatal injuries occurred "in the process" of the childhood maltreatment syndrome, constituted the expert's opinion that the fatal injuries in fact resulted from child abuse. Accordingly, as the jurors had the ability to reach this conclusion personally, the trial court erred by allowing the expert witness's testimony. McCartney v. State, 262 Ga. 156, 414 S.E.2d 227 (1992).

When testimony is not based on an expert opinion and is mere speculation, it is worthless and the trial court does not err in striking the testimony from the record. Gould v. State, 168 Ga. App. 605, 309 S.E.2d 888 (1983); Welborn v. State, 174 Ga. App. 853, 331 S.E.2d 890 (1985).

When an expert did not present sufficient evidence to show a relevant point, given lack of support for the expert's opinion, the lower court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding the expert's testimony. Cromer v. Mulkey Enters., Inc., 254 Ga. App. 388, 562 S.E.2d 783 (2002).

When differing ultimate conclusions of physicians as to whether a doctor-patient relationship existed evinced no more than a difference of nonmedical opinion between witnesses who happened to be physicians, those conclusions were neither admissible nor probative as expert medical testimony. Clanton v. Von Haam, 177 Ga. App. 694, 340 S.E.2d 627 (1986).

Psychiatrist's reliance on psychologist's test results. — To the extent the state's psychiatric expert relied upon the opinion of another psychologist expert not before the court, the expert's testimony was inadmissible hearsay without probative value even in the absence of an objection. Brown v. State, 206 Ga. App. 800, 427 S.E.2d 9 (1992).

Psychologist's opinion irrelevant. — State's motion in limine seeking to exclude the testimony of a defendant's psychologist was properly granted as the defendant claimed that defendant shot the victim in self-defense; the defendant's psychological state was irrelevant. Lott v. State, 281 Ga. App. 373, 636 S.E.2d 102 (2006).

School counselor's opinion. — Admission of a school counselor's opinion that a child had been molested based on the child's behavior and demeanor during the counselor's interview of the child was reversible error. Hilliard v. State, 226 Ga. App. 478, 487 S.E.2d 81 (1997).

Opinion as to alcohol content drop in dead person. — Question propounded to a forensic chemist concerning whether or not the fact that a person might have died and it had been some days before the person was found would in any way decrease the alcohol content of the victim's body was proper under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67. Cameron v. State, 256 Ga. 225, 345 S.E.2d 575 (1986).

Physician's opinion of "rape." — Allowing any question and answer of a physician who examined the victim of an alleged rape which would involve the physician's opinion stated in the physician's report that "this is rape" constituted reversible error. Nichols v. State, 177 Ga. App. 689, 340 S.E.2d 654 (1986).

Physician's opinion of doctor-patient relationship. — No professional skill or specialized medical knowledge was necessarily required to resolve the issue whether a doctor-patient relationship existed since the initial creation of such a relationship was well within the comprehension of the average layman, and a physician's affidavit on this issue was neither probative nor admissible as expert medical testimony. Minster v. Pohl, 206 Ga. App. 617, 426 S.E.2d 204 (1992).

Ophthalmologist testimony in DUI case inadmissible. — Trial court did not err in not allowing an ophthalmologist to testify as an expert that a DUI defendant had two surgeries in the past, which could have affected the defendant's performance on walk-and-turn and one-leg-stand tests. The witness had no personal knowledge of the surgery in question or of the medical records referring to the surgeries; moreover, the defendant's live-in companion was permitted to testify at length regarding the defendant's medical issues arising from the surgery and its effect on the defendant's ability to walk normally at the time of the arrest. Aal v. State, 290 Ga. App. 252, 659 S.E.2d 609 (2008).

Medical causation not within scope of psychological expertise. — It is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial judge as to whether a witness has such learning and experience in a particular art, science or profession as to entitle the witness to be deemed prima facie an expert; therefore, when a neuropsychologist testified to the specific chemical which caused organic brain damage, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in striking portions of the affidavit of the psychologist, because medical causation is not a subject within the scope of psychological expertise. Chandler Exterminators, Inc. v. Morris, 262 Ga. 257, 416 S.E.2d 277 (1992).

Officer's testimony on marijuana test results. — Officer's testimony regarding officer's training and experience with "ontrack system" urine specimen analysis for the presence of tetrahydrocannabinol was insufficient foundation for the admission of the test results. Hubbard v. State, 207 Ga. App. 703, 429 S.E.2d 123 (1993).

Hair analysis results cannot be used to make positive identification of an individual. Hudson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 660, 305 S.E.2d 409 (1983).

Reconstruction of accident. — Expert accident reconstructionist was not qualified to render an opinion as to which of two impacts caused plaintiff's injury. Johnson v. Knebel, 267 Ga. 853, 485 S.E.2d 451 (1997).

False confession theory. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion or violate the defendant's 14th and 6th amendment rights by excluding expert testimony about false confessions; the Georgia Supreme Court had found that the false confession theory was not reliable and had not yet reached a verifiable stage of scientific certainty. Crawford v. State, 283 Ga. App. 645, 642 S.E.2d 335 (2007).

Trial court did not improperly exclude testimony from the defendant's proffered expert witness on police interrogation tactics resulting in false confessions, as such theory had not reached a verifiable stage of scientific certainty, and because the issue of whether the defendant's inculpatory statements were the results of threats or coercion was a matter the jury could discern for itself. Lyons v. State, 282 Ga. 588, 652 S.E.2d 525 (2007), overruled on other grounds, Garza v. State, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 865 (Ga. 2008).

Airport operations manager failed to demonstrate qualifications as an expert witness to express an opinion regarding the acceptable and safe number of pounds of force of closing pressure for automatic doors on shuttle trains, or to present a factual predicate for a lay opinion. Saltis v. A.B.B. Daimler-Benz Ad Tranz Atlanta, Inc., 243 Ga. App. 603, 533 S.E.2d 772 (2000).

3. Witness Qualified as Expert

Automobile mechanic. — Contention that testimony of witness qualified as an expert was erroneously admitted for the reason that the witness had testified that the witness did not see the car before impact, and therefore could not testify as to the car's value before the car was damaged, was without merit since the witness actually repaired the car, and was not only a mechanic, but had long experience in buying and selling cars of the same type and model. Hill v. Kirk, 78 Ga. App. 310, 50 S.E.2d 785 (1948).

Electrical engineer. — When a witness was an electrical engineer of 31 years experience, and the engineer's opinions were based on proven facts, the opinions were admissible. Little v. Georgia Power Co., 205 Ga. 51, 52 S.E.2d 322 (1949).

Building inspector who held a license in the inspector's individual name at the time of conducting an inspection qualified as an expert; the fact that the inspector was unaware that the inspector was also required to get a license in the name under which the inspector conducted business did not prevent the inspector's qualification as an expert. Williamson v. Harvey Smith, Inc., 246 Ga. App. 745, 542 S.E.2d 151 (2000).

A Ph. D. in entomology was not required to have a pest control operator's license before being qualified to testify in an action arising from termite infestation of property. Dayoub v. Yates-Astro Termite Pest Control Co., 239 Ga. App. 578, 521 S.E.2d 600 (1999).

Specialist in obstetrics and gynecology. —

In a prosecution for rape, a physician may offer the physician's opinion as to what caused the tear in the victim's vagina over an objection that the physician's expertise to offer such an opinion has not been established, where the physician is duly qualified as a specialist in obstetrics and gynecology and testifies that one of the physician's duties at the medical center where the physician worked was to examine rape victims. Holt v. State, 147 Ga. App. 186, 248 S.E.2d 223 (1978).

Qualified medical expert with a first-hand knowledge of the material facts is well within permissible bounds in stating the expert's opinion and inferences concerning the existence and cause of a medical condition. McGuire v. Davis, 437 F.2d 570 (5th Cir. 1971).

Practicing physician is an expert witness on sanity. Petty v. Folsom, 229 Ga. 477, 192 S.E.2d 246 (1972).

Specialists in cardiac physiology. — Two doctors who specialized in cardiac physiology were qualified to testify about the effects on a patient of a heart medication a doctor gave to a patient, and the appellate court reversed the trial court's ruling that the doctors could not testify and the court's judgment dismissing the spouse's claims against a pharmaceutical manufacturer that produced the medication, alleging strict products liability and negligent failure to warn. Bryant v. Hoffmann-La Roche, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 401, 585 S.E.2d 723 (2003).

Investigator testifying as an expert. — In an aggravated assault case, it was permissible for an investigator, testifying as an expert, to state that based on the investigator's experience, persons who suffered from cuts or stab wounds often did not remember being stabbed. This was a conclusion that was beyond the ken of the average layperson; even if the investigator's testimony was somewhat based upon hearsay, the opinion was mainly derived from the investigator's many years of professional experience. Jackson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 287, 661 S.E.2d 665 (2008).

Forensic interviewer was implicitly accepted as an expert. — A forensic interviewer testified as to credentials and was questioned as an expert by the State in a defendant's child molestation trial, and thus was either tacitly or impliedly accepted as an expert by the trial court. Because under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67, all that was required of the expert was that the expert be competent as an expert in one's own field, the trial court did not err in giving the jury the expert witness charge. Purvis v. State, 301 Ga. App. 648, 689 S.E.2d 53 (2009).

Officer properly qualified as expert witness in drug possession and distribution. — In a prosecution for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute (O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(b)), as the arresting officer testified to making 35 to 40 drug-related arrests, about half of which were for possession with intent to distribute, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in qualifying the officer as an expert witness in drug possession and distribution. Hight v. State, 293 Ga. App. 254, 666 S.E.2d 678 (2008).

Any error waived by failure to object. — Pro se defendant's claim that the trial court improperly admitted lay testimony on blood splatters was rejected as defendant failed to object to the admission of the lay opinions at trial; further, in light of the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt, any error was harmless. Swain v. State, 268 Ga. App. 135, 601 S.E.2d 491 (2004).

Admissibility of expert or opinion evidence — Supreme court cases, 177 ALR Fed. 77.

24-9-67.1. Expert opinion testimony in civil actions; medical experts; pretrial hearings; precedential value of federal law.

(a) The provisions of this Code section shall apply in all civil actions. The opinion of a witness qualified as an expert under this Code section may be given on the facts as proved by other witnesses. The facts or data in the particular case upon which an expert bases an opinion or inference may be those perceived by or made known to the expert at or before the hearing or trial. If of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subject, the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence in order for the opinion or inference to be admitted. Facts or data that are otherwise inadmissible shall not be disclosed to the jury by the proponent of the opinion or inference unless the court determines that their probative value in assisting the jury to evaluate the expert's opinion substantially outweighs their prejudicial effect.

(b) If scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact in any cause of action to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education may testify thereto in the form of an opinion or otherwise, if:

(1) The testimony is based upon sufficient facts or data which are or will be admitted into evidence at the hearing or trial;

(2) The testimony is the product of reliable principles and methods; and

(3) The witness has applied the principles and methods reliably to the facts of the case.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (b) of this Code section and any other provision of law which might be construed to the contrary, in professional malpractice actions, the opinions of an expert, who is otherwise qualified as to the acceptable standard of conduct of the professional whose conduct is at issue, shall be admissible only if, at the time the act or omission is alleged to have occurred, such expert:

(1) Was licensed by an appropriate regulatory agency to practice his or her profession in the state in which such expert was practicing or teaching in the profession at such time; and

(2) In the case of a medical malpractice action, had actual professional knowledge and experience in the area of practice or specialty in which the opinion is to be given as the result of having been regularly engaged in:

(A) The active practice of such area of specialty of his or her profession for at least three of the last five years, with sufficient frequency to establish an appropriate level of knowledge, as determined by the judge, in performing the procedure, diagnosing the condition, or rendering the treatment which is alleged to have been performed or rendered negligently by the defendant whose conduct is at issue; or

(B) The teaching of his or her profession for at least three of the last five years as an employed member of the faculty of an educational institution accredited in the teaching of such profession, with sufficient frequency to establish an appropriate level of knowledge, as determined by the judge, in teaching others how to perform the procedure, diagnose the condition, or render the treatment which is alleged to have been performed or rendered negligently by the defendant whose conduct is at issue; and

(C) Except as provided in subparagraph (D) of this paragraph:

(i) Is a member of the same profession;

(ii) Is a medical doctor testifying as to the standard of care of a defendant who is a doctor of osteopathy; or

(iii) Is a doctor of osteopathy testifying as to the standard of care of a defendant who is a medical doctor; and

(D) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Code section, an expert who is a physician and, as a result of having, during at least three of the last five years immediately preceding the time the act or omission is alleged to have occurred, supervised, taught, or instructed nurses, nurse practitioners, certified registered nurse anesthetists, nurse midwives, physician assistants, physical therapists, occupational therapists, or medical support staff, has knowledge of the standard of care of that health care provider under the circumstances at issue shall be competent to testify as to the standard of that health care provider. However, a nurse, nurse practitioner, certified registered nurse anesthetist, nurse midwife, physician assistant, physical therapist, occupational therapist, or medical support staff shall not be competent to testify as to the standard of care of a physician.

(d) Upon motion of a party, the court may hold a pretrial hearing to determine whether the witness qualifies as an expert and whether the expert's testimony satisfies the requirements of subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section. Such hearing and ruling shall be completed no later than the final pretrial conference contemplated under Code Section 9-11-16.

(e) An affiant must meet the requirements of this Code section in order to be deemed qualified to testify as an expert by means of the affidavit required under Code Section 9-11-9.1.

(f) It is the intent of the legislature that, in all civil cases, the courts of the State of Georgia not be viewed as open to expert evidence that would not be admissible in other states. Therefore, in interpreting and applying this Code section, the courts of this state may draw from the opinions of the United States Supreme Court in Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993); General Electric Co. v. Joiner, 522 U.S. 136 (1997); Kumho Tire Co. Ltd. v. Carmichael, 526 U.S. 137 (1999); and other cases in federal courts applying the standards announced by the United States Supreme Court in these cases. (Code 1981, § 24-9-67.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 7/SB 3; Ga. L. 2009, p. 859, § 3/HB 509.)

The 2009 amendment, effective July 1, 2009, substituted "physician" for "physician's" twice in subparagraph (c)(2)(D).

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2005, a period was added following the Code section number.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 1, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds that there presently exists a crisis affecting the provision and quality of health care services in this state. Hospitals and other health care providers in this state are having increasing difficulty in locating liability insurance and, when such hospitals and providers are able to locate such insurance, the insurance is extremely costly. The result of this crisis is the potential for a diminution of the availability of access to health care services and a resulting adverse impact on the health and well-being of the citizens of this state. The General Assembly further finds that certain civil justice and health care regulatory reforms as provided in this Act will promote predictability and improvement in the provision of quality health care services and the resolution of health care liability claims and will thereby assist in promoting the provision of health care liability insurance by insurance providers. The General Assembly further finds that certain needed reforms affect not only health care liability claims but also other civil actions and accordingly provides such general reforms in this Act."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Statement of intent in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(f) is not a delegation of legislative power; and, the application of the evidentiary rules established by the Tort Reform Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, do not violate the constitutional prohibition against retroactive laws. Mason v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 283 Ga. 271, 658 S.E.2d 603 (2008).

Trial court erred in declaring O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(f) unconstitutional on the ground that the statute violated the principle of separation of powers as the suggestion in the statute that Georgia "may" consider the decisions of other courts on a subject did not invade the province of the judiciary because it was not couched in mandatory terms and merely stated a principle of law regularly employed by Georgia courts. Further, the permissive suggestion in § 24-9-67.1(f), that the courts could consider federal interpretations of the cases on which federal rules and § 24-9-67.1(f) were based contained no words of command and did not seek to enforce a particular construction of the statute on the courts. Mason v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 283 Ga. 271, 658 S.E.2d 603 (2008).

Trial court properly found that O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(a) and (b)(1) were contradictory in that paragraph (b)(1) limits experts to relying on potentially admissible facts and data, whereas subsection (a) states that facts and data relied upon need not be admissible. Since the two provisions could not be harmonized and, read together, they rendered the statute unconstitutionally vague; however, the trial court was not required to strike the statute in its entirety. Mason v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 283 Ga. 271, 658 S.E.2d 603 (2008).

In a personal injury suit wherein the trial court excluded the testimony of plaintiffs' two expert witnesses upon application of

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, the trial court did not err in rejecting plaintiffs' equal protection challenge since plaintiffs could not establish the necessary element of an equal protection claim that plaintiffs were situated similarly to those being treated differently. For purposes of evidentiary standards, only those accused of the same offense are similarly situated in the criminal law arena, only those asserting or defending against the same cause of action are similarly situated in the civil law arena, and the parties to civil cases are not similarly situated to those engaged in criminal prosecutions. Mason v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 283 Ga. 271, 658 S.E.2d 603 (2008).

Use of word "or" or "and" in statute. — Legislature's use of the word "or" between O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c)(2)(A) and (c)(2)(B), followed by legislature's use of the word "and" between § 24-9-67.1(c)(2)(B) and (c)(2)(C), indicates that a medical expert must show either active practice or teaching for at least three of the last five years, but that whichever of these may be the case, the expert must also be a member of the same profession as the person whose performance the expert is evaluating. For the purposes of § 24-9-67.1, a pharmacist is not a member of the same profession as a medical doctor. Smith v. Harris, 294 Ga. App. 333, 670 S.E.2d 136 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0428, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 328 (Ga. 2009).

No error in excluding expert testimony. — Trial court did not err in excluding expert testimony of the value of a vehicle in the vehicle's defective condition on the date of sale because there was no evidence that the expert witness's method was relied upon more widely in the automotive field, nor of the method's known rate of error, nor whether it had been reviewed by qualified experts other than its creators. Moran v. Kia Motors Am., Inc., 276 Ga. App. 96, 622 S.E.2d 439 (2005).

In an action filed pursuant to the Federal Employer's Liability Act, 45 U.S.C. § 51 et seq., the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding the testimony of an employee's treating physician as the doctor's conclusions were based on an incomplete medical history of the employee, without considering earlier lung-related illnesses, and while unaware of the employee's prior chemical exposure and treatment by other physicians. Shiver v. Ga. & Fla. Railnet, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 828, 652 S.E.2d 819 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 330 (Ga. 2008).

In a patient's medical malpractice action, the testimony of an expert witness was properly excluded as the opinion was based on facts stated in a hypothetical question which were not proven by other witnesses or other competent evidence. Moreover, a motion in limine entered against the patient as to another expert witness's testimony was not addressed on appeal as the patient never called the expert to testify, and thus, the issue was abandoned. Hawkins v. OB-GYN Assocs., P.A., 290 Ga. App. 892, 660 S.E.2d 835 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 713 (Ga. 2008).

In a wrongful interference with business relations and slander suit, a trial court properly excluded testimony of plaintiff's expert economist, which the plaintiff claimed would show plaintiff's financial injury as to plaintiff's tortious interference claim as the expert's reliance on the partial sales history of a single agent, along with a letter referencing annualized premiums from the sale of only certain life insurance policies and unsupported representations by another agent, did not provide an adequate basis for the expert's opinion. Am. Southern Ins. Group, Inc. v. Goldstein, 291 Ga. App. 1, 660 S.E.2d 810 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 680 (Ga. 2008).

In a will contest, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in limiting testimony from the caveatrix's expert toxicologist as to whether a person's functioning level could be determined by that person's responses to general questions as the trial court found that the expert's opinion was based on generalized statistics which would have been of dubious help to the jury. Caswell v. Caswell, 285 Ga. 277, 675 S.E.2d 19 (2009).

In a customer's personal injury action against a stylist and a hair salon alleging chemical burns, a motion in limine was properly granted under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 to exclude the customer's expert in chemistry because the expert's testing of hair products and the product's reaction to heat did not exactly replicate the conditions under which the incident occurred; the expert used a peroxide product that was not applied to the customer's hair and used a different type of heat source. Giannotti v. Beleza Hair Salon, Inc., 296 Ga. App. 636, 675 S.E.2d 544 (2009).

In a customer's slip and fall case against a dry cleaner establishment, the trial court did not err by denying the customer's motion for a new trial and by excluding the testimony of one of the customer's expert witnesses. The expert was not qualified since the expert was retired and not a licensed physician and the testimony of that expert was cumulative of other expert testimony admitted at trial, therefore, any alleged error was harmless. Muskett v. Sketchley Cleaners, Inc., 297 Ga. App. 561, 677 S.E.2d 731 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1422, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 412 (Ga. 2009).

Expert must be member of same profession. — Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c), the trial court erred in allowing a pharmacist to testify about a physician's negligence. A medical expert had to show either active practice or teaching for three of the last five years, and also had to be a member of the same profession as the person whose performance the expert was evaluating. Smith v. Harris, 294 Ga. App. 333, 670 S.E.2d 136 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0428, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 328 (Ga. 2009).

Nurse's affidavit insufficient in case alleging physical therapist's negligence. — A trial court erred in ruling that a registered nurse could provide an expert affidavit regarding a physical therapist's care, given that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(g) categorized nurses and physical therapists as practicing separate professions, and because an expert was required to meet the conditions of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 in order to provide a § 9-11-9.1 affidavit. Ball v. Jones, 301 Ga. App. 340, 687 S.E.2d 625 (2009).

Evidence of expert's personal practices admitted. — In a medical malpractice case, evidence of an expert's personal practices, unless excludable on other grounds, is admissible both as substantive evidence and to impeach the expert's opinion as to the applicable standard of care. To the extent Johnson v. Riverdale Anesthesia Assocs., 563 S.E.2d 431 (Ga. 2002), held otherwise, it is overruled. Condra v. Atlanta Orthopaedic Group, P.C., 285 Ga. 667, 681 S.E.2d 152 (2009).

Opinion of a witness qualified as expert may be given on facts proved by other witnesses. DOT v. Baldwin, 292 Ga. App. 816, 665 S.E.2d 898 (2008).

No error in excluding experts' affidavits. — Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's request to admit testimony regarding the contents of affidavits used, in part, by the defendant's expert witnesses as the basis for the experts' opinions regarding the defendant's mental status as, in applying O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, the trial court first found that the facts contained in the disputed affidavits were otherwise inadmissible hearsay, as the affidavits rested on the veracity and competency of persons not in court and did not come within any statutorily-recognized hearsay exception. The trial court then balanced the probative value of the affidavits against the prejudicial effect, noting that the affidavits were originally submitted in the defendant's habeas proceeding, contained identical language thereby casting suspicion on the affidavits' trustworthiness, contained conclusory statements and irrelevant and prejudicial information related to the defendant's alleged alcohol and drug use and the crime of murder for which the defendant was convicted; and, therefore, the affidavits had little probative information and were cumulative of other evidence. Rogers v. State, 282 Ga. 659, 653 S.E.2d 31 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1311, 128 S. Ct. 1882, 170 L. Ed. 2d 747; reh'g denied, U.S. , 128 S. Ct. 2988, 171 L. Ed. 2d 907 (2008).

Striking surveyor's affidavits held proper. — In a suit between two landowners to enforce the terms of an easement, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding two affidavits from a surveyor in determining land elevation as no testimony was offered regarding any knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education the witness possessed in that capacity, and no evidence was presented as to the principles and methods the witness employed including whether the methods were reliable. McGuire Holdings, LLLP v. TSQ Partners, LLC, 290 Ga. App. 595, 660 S.E.2d 397 (2008).

Applicability. — Because O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(a), which governed expert witness testimony in civil actions, did not apply to probation revocation hearings, the trial court's ruling to permit the expert's testimony regarding the presence of marijuana in a joint seized from the probationer was not erroneous as the state was not required to comply with Daubert to prove the expert's qualifications. Carlson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 595, 634 S.E.2d 410 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 215 (Ga. 2007).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c) is a procedural, not substantive statute because the statute does not change the standard of care to be applied in a medical malpractice action or the measure of a plaintiff's recovery; thus, the requirements of the statute were properly applied retroactively in a medical malpractice action in which a patient suffered injuries prior to the effective date of the statute but filed suit after § 24-9-67.1(c) became effective. Nathans v. Diamond, 282 Ga. 804, 654 S.E.2d 121 (2007).

Construction with other law. — Upon a proper appeal from a final order, while neither O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 nor O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 required that a complaint be dismissed or stricken for failing to comply with the terms of those statutes, unlike the Anti-SLAPP statute, codified at O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, because the trial court did not enter a final judgment within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b)(1), attorney fees were properly denied; moreover, as to the claim that dismissing and refiling in another court constitutes "improper judge shopping," obtaining a different judge was simply the result of the action, not necessarily the reason for doing so. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 286 Ga. App. 110, 648 S.E.2d 457 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 656 (Ga. 2007).

In a medical malpractice action, when a doctor was the only expert witness submitted by the suing couple, and the couple did not challenge the trial court's exclusion of another doctor's testimony, their argument that said doctor's testimony should have been admitted as a rebuttal witness was unpersuasive. Thomas v. Peachtree

Orthopaedic Clinic, P.C., 290 Ga. App. 869, 660 S.E.2d 758 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 915 (Ga. 2008).

Timeliness of motion in limine — In a customer's personal injury action against a stylist and a hair salon alleging chemical burns, while a motion in limine to exclude the customer's expert in chemistry was not timely under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(d), the trial court properly considered the motion and granted the motion as the customer did not make the expert available for deposition until just one week prior to trial. Giannotti v. Beleza Hair Salon, Inc., 296 Ga. App. 636, 675 S.E.2d 544 (2009).

Subject matter improper for expert testimony. — As the undisputed evidence showed that the mitochondrial DNA (mtDNA) analysis was based on sound scientific theory and produced reliable results when proper procedures were followed, and the "direct sequencing" method employed in the prosecution of the defendant for murder was the only technique accepted and used by those who conducted forensic mtDNA testing, as the technique produced reliable results upon which any practitioner could draw conclusions, the trial court did not err in allowing that evidence. Vaughn v. State, 282 Ga. 99, 646 S.E.2d 212 (2007).

In a negligence action, the trial court erred by allowing the investigating police officer to give expert testimony about the color of the traffic light as the color of the light was a question that average jurors could have answered for themselves, and because the color of the traffic light was the determining factor for assessing negligence, the officer's expert opinion on this issue likely influenced the jury's verdict; thus, based on such error, a new trial was ordered. Purcell v. Kelley, 286 Ga. App. 117, 648 S.E.2d 454 (2007).

Healthcare expert not qualified. — In a medical malpractice and negligence action by an arrestee against a county, jail medical personnel, a medical lab, and lab personnel, these defendants successfully moved to exclude the testimony of an expert in correctional health on the basis of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 because the expert was not qualified to testify as to any matter outside correctional health care—specifically, the standard of care in the fields of internal medicine, infectious disease, or laboratory procedures with regard to the arrestee's state law claims; furthermore, the expert's testimony was neither relevant nor reliable under the Daubert analysis, and therefore, it was excluded pursuant to Fed. R. Evid. 702. Dukes v. State, 428 F. Supp. 2d 1298 (N.D. Ga. 2006).

An expert retained by the plaintiffs in a medical malpractice action, which was based on the failure to adequately inform a patient of the potential risks and complications connected with a sleep apnea procedure, was not qualified to testify under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 because the expert had not performed the procedure in question on other patients nor did the expert aver that the expert had obtained informed consents for similar procedures. Nathans v. Diamond, 282 Ga. 804, 654 S.E.2d 121 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by dismissing the parents' medical malpractice action because the court correctly found that the purported expert offered by the parents failed to make even one diagnosis of a vascular ring within five years of the date at issue, and had not taught others for at least three of the last five years to diagnose a vascular ring. Spacht v. Troyer, 288 Ga. App. 898, 655 S.E.2d 656 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 726, 172 L.Ed.2d 726 (2008).

Trial court properly refused to admit the testimony of a patient's expert in a case involving a claim of an unnecessary surgical procedure because the expert, who described the physician's medical practice as a "family practice", had no surgical training or expertise. Long v. Natarajan, 291 Ga. App. 814, 662 S.E.2d 876 (2008).

In a malpractice and wrongful death case filed against a surgeon and an anesthesiologist, as the expert retained by the decedent's spouse did not teach or practice in the area of post-surgical airway management with sufficient frequency to establish the appropriate level of knowledge to meet the criteria of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c)(2), and lacked training in anesthesiology, the expert's opinion was properly excluded. Dawson v. Leder, 294 Ga. App. 717, 669 S.E.2d 720 (2008).

Trial court did not err in determining that an anesthesiologist did not meet the expert-witness qualification requirements set forth in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 because the anesthesiologist did not meet the licensing requirement for expert witnesses, § 24-9-67.1(c)(1). Although the anesthesiologist's amended affidavit in support of a medical malpractice complaint indicated that the anesthesiologist held a medical license from Pennsylvania on the date of the alleged negligent act, there was no evidence that the anesthesiologist was practicing in that state, and instead, the anesthesiologist's testimony indicated that the anesthesiologist was practicing medicine in Australia; in order to comply with the licensing requirement of § 24-7-67.1(c)(1), an expert in a professional malpractice action must be licensed and practicing (or teaching) in one of the states of the United States at the time the alleged negligent act occurred. Craig v. Azizi, 301 Ga. App. 181, 687 S.E.2d 198 (2009).

Active practice. — Trial court abused the court's discretion to the extent it determined that an anesthesiologist did not meet the "active practice" requirements of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c)(2)(A) because once the anesthesiologist received a medical degree and embarked upon a residency in anesthesiology, the anesthesiologist was engaged in the "active practice of such area of specialty" within the meaning of § 24-9-67.1(c)(2)(A); years spent as a resident physician can count as years of "active practice" for purposes of § 24-9-67.1(c)(2)(A). Craig v. Azizi, 301 Ga. App. 181, 687 S.E.2d 198 (2009).

Physician's affidavit. — Fact that a medical expert was not licensed as a medical doctor when the expert executed an expert affidavit to accompany a medical malpractice complaint, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, did not affect the validity of the affidavit or require dismissal of the complaint as licensure was not a required element of such an affidavit under that statutory section or under case law; further, O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, assuming it was applicable to the circumstances, only required that the expert was licensed at the time of the medical negligence, which was the case for the instant expert. Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Gilbert, 277 Ga. App. 895, 627 S.E.2d 821 (2006).

In a professional malpractice case brought by a married couple, an expert's original affidavit was insufficient under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-9.1 and 24-9-67.1, which applied retroactively. Although the expert avowed therein that the expert had been licensed to practice medicine since 1974, the affidavit contained nothing concerning the expert's recent or continuing experience as an orthopedist. Cogland v. Hosp. Auth., 290 Ga. App. 73, 658 S.E.2d 769 (2008).

Doctor's affidavit complied with O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c) because the plain language of the statute did not require a license during three of the last five years of practice, but experience in the area of the alleged malpractice and a license at the time of the alleged malpractice. Emory Adventist, Inc. v. Hunter, 301 Ga. App. 215, 687 S.E.2d 267 (2009).

Dismissal of medical malpractice suit based on affidavit. — A trial court erred in granting a hospital's motion to dismiss a survivor's wrongful death action based on O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(e) because a nurse's affidavit that allegedly failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c)(2) and (e), because the trial court did not consider the survivor's other affidavit submitted: an unchallenged affidavit from a medical doctor. Piscitelli v. Hosp. Auth. of Valdosta & Lowndes County, 302 Ga. App. 746, 691 S.E.2d 615 (2010).

Treating physician's testimony sufficient. — In a Federal Employers' Liability Act action, testimony of an employee's treating physician was not insufficient under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 because after diagnosing the employee with hepatitis related to chemical exposure, the physician reviewed reports of, inter alia, a toxicologist that the chemical in a leaking train car was hydrogen sulfide and opined as to causation; the physician's opinion was not merely based on the temporal proximity of the chemical exposure to the onset of the employee's symptoms. CSX Transp., Inc. v. McDowell, 294 Ga. App. 871, 670 S.E.2d 543 (2008).

Qualification of nurses as expert witnesses. — Registered nurses and licensed practical nurses who cared for a decedent after the decedent's diagnosis with Alzheimer's disease did not lack qualifications to testify as experts about the decedent's capacity to execute a deed because the law did not require that only physicians be allowed to give testimony regarding a medical issue, but permitted others with certain training and experience to testify on issues within the scope of their expertise, and a licensed practical nurse or registered nurse was qualified to testify as an expert witness within the areas of the nurse's expertise; as to any failure to qualify the witnesses as experts, the question of whether a person possessed the qualifications of an expert witness rested entirely in the sound discretion of the trial court. Smith v. Smith, 281 Ga. 380, 637 S.E.2d 662 (2006).

In a medical malpractice action, given the relevant past experience of the patient's expert as a nurse, and the expert's familiarity with the degree and skills required of nurses and other medical staff in giving intermuscular injections, the expert was sufficiently qualified to render an expert opinion in the case. Allen v. Family Med. Ctr., P.C., 287 Ga. App. 522, 652 S.E.2d 173 (2007).

Complaint alleged that a nurse committed malpractice by not accurately triaging a patient. As the patient's expert nurse had ongoing practical experience in patient triage, and years of practical and teaching experience in supervising patient care, the expert's affidavit filed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was legally sufficient even though the expert had not performed emergency room triage. Houston v. Phoebe Putney Mem. Hosp., Inc., 295 Ga. App. 674, 673 S.E.2d 54 (2009).

In a medical malpractice action brought by a patient against a hospital and an employee of the hospital, the patient's expert nurse was held to be indisputably qualified under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 based on the nurse actively and regularly practicing as a licensed nurse on a full-time basis in supervising and directly performing nursing services and being a faculty member at two educational institutions accredited in the teaching of the nursing profession. Lee v. Phoebe Putney Mem. Hosp., Inc., 297 Ga. App. 692, 678 S.E.2d 340 (2009).

Medical malpractice expert testimony sufficient to avoid directed verdict. — Patient who was allergic to latex alleged a hospital's negligent use of a latex catheter caused her to develop interstitial cystitis (IC). Though the patient's medical expert admitted that the causes of IC were unknown, and that no research linked IC to latex allergies, the expert's testimony that allergic reactions could trigger IC, and did so in the patient's case, was sufficient evidence of medical causation to justify denying the hospital's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. EHCA Dunwoody, LLC v. Daniel, 277 Ga. App. 783, 627 S.E.2d 830 (2006).

In a medical malpractice action, the trial court properly denied a neurosurgeon's motion to dismiss the action, on grounds that the affidavit required under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 was from an orthopedist and not a fellow neurosurgeon, as the statutory area of practice in which the opinion was to be given was dictated not by the apparent expertise of the treating physician, but rather by the allegations of the complaint concerning the plaintiff's injury. Abramson v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 617, 636 S.E.2d 765 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 91 (2007).

In a medical malpractice action involving alleged nerve damage to a child during delivery, a trial court properly directed a verdict in favor of the doctor upon determining that the suing parent failed to provide causation evidence as the parent's expert failed to rule in a certain possibility as to the cause of the injury at issue and, instead, assumed a cause of injury, which was unsupported by the evidence. Hawkins v. OB-GYN Assocs., P.A., 290 Ga. App. 892, 660 S.E.2d 835 (2008).

Police officer as expert. — In a negligence case, assuming that admission of a police officer's affidavit opining as to the cause of an accident was error under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, the error was harmless in light of other evidence showing that the proximate cause of the accident was the driver's own negligence, including the driver's statements to treating physicians that the driver was reaching for the driver's cell phone when the driver ran off the road and a statement to the insurance adjustor that the driver was distracted. Keckes v. City of Mt. Zion, 300 Ga. App. 348, 685 S.E.2d 329 (2009).

Expert's conclusion could not serve as basis for summary judgment. — Expert's testimony as to the cause of an auto accident was speculative and could not support summary judgment as the credibility of the expert and the weight to be given to the opinion were matters to be addressed by the jury; moreover, if the expert's opinion was based upon inadequate knowledge, this fact did not mandate the exclusion of the opinion but, rather, presented a jury question as to the weight which should be assigned to the opinion. Layfield v. DOT, 280 Ga. 848, 632 S.E.2d 135 (2006).

Opinion testimony properly admitted. — In a premises liability case involving an elevator that stopped above landing level, the trial court properly allowed the plaintiffs' expert to give opinion testimony that the elevator maintenance provider did not follow industry standards in maintaining the elevator; the expert based the opinion on the expert's personal knowledge of the elevator industry, the expert's review of the elevator maintenance records, and the deposition testimony of the provider's mechanics, Brady v. Elevator Specialists, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 304, 653 S.E.2d 59 (2007).

In a patient's suit against a doctor, the doctor was qualified to testify as to the doctor's opinion on the standard of care and causation in the case; although the doctor was not board certified in any field of medicine and had not instructed in the area of emergency medicine, the doctor met the competency standard set forth in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c)(2)(A) because the doctor was licensed to practice medicine for 26 years, the doctor practiced as an emergency room physician for 19 years, and the doctor was regularly engaged in the practice of emergency medicine during five of the five years preceding the doctor's treatment of the patient. Cruikshank v. Elbert County, No. 3:06-CV-101(CDL), 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 40221 (M.D. Ga. May 19, 2008).

Objections to expert opinions not timely filed. — In a tenant's action against the leasing agent of the tenant's apartment complex alleging that the tenant was injured by soot emitted from the apartment's heating system, the trial court properly refused to exclude expert opinions on behalf of the tenant on the ground that the opinions were inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1; although the agent had notice that the tenant intended to rely on the experts' opinions, it did not assert its claim until the last business day before the trial and therefore failed to seek a timely ruling no later than the final pretrial conference contemplated under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 and as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(d). Ambling Mgmt. Co. v. Purdy, 283 Ga. App. 21, 640 S.E.2d 620 (2006).

Expert testimony was properly allowed in a medical negligence action because the suing patient failed to timely challenge the expert evidence via O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(d), by way of a pretrial hearing; moreover, even assuming that the untimeliness of the patient's request for a hearing did not waive the particular grounds asserted in a motion to strike brought at the close of evidence, the patient nevertheless waived all remaining objections to the expert testimony by failing to object contemporaneously. Airasian v. Shaak, 289 Ga. App. 540, 657 S.E.2d 600 (2008).

In a negligence suit involving the death of an individual in an automobile collision, a trial court erred by declaring that application of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, with regard to a hitch manufacturer seeking to exclude plaintiff's expert witness, would have been unconstitutional as the motion to exclude the expert was filed several months after the final pretrial conference had already taken place and, thus, the time period within which the trial court was required to hold a hearing and rule on the motion had already passed. However, application of the statute would not have changed the trial court's ultimate, and correct, conclusion that the hitch manufacturer's motion to exclude the expert was without merit based on the time period for ruling on the motion having already passed. Ford Motor Co. v. Gibson, 283 Ga. 398, 659 S.E.2d 346 (2008).

Speculative opinion testimony by expert improperly admitted. — In a premises liability case involving an elevator that stopped above landing level, the trial court should have excluded the opinion of an expert that if the elevator maintenance provider had followed a more aggressive maintenance schedule for the elevator, the condition in the elevator that led to its mis-leveling would almost certainly have been discovered or prevented before a passenger was injured; the expert had showed no basis for the opinion. Brady v. Elevator Specialists, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 304, 653 S.E.2d 59 (2007).

Capacity to execute a deed. — Even if registered nurses and licensed practical nurses who cared for a decedent after the decedent's diagnosis with Alzheimer's disease lacked qualifications to testify as experts about the decedent's capacity to execute a deed, a trial court did not err in permitting the nurses to testify because even a lay witness could give evidence on the question of capacity as long as the witness gave sufficient facts to form the basis of the witness's opinion; the witnesses offered detailed testimony about the decedent's inability to recognize the decedent's sibling or sign the decedent's own name, the decedent's chronic disorientation, the decedent's need for constant redirection and reorientation, and other factual observations the nurses made about the decedent's mental state and the decedent's apparent lack of capacity. Smith v. Smith, 281 Ga. 380, 637 S.E.2d 662 (2006).

Striking valuation testimony proper. — Trial court did not manifestly abuse the court's discretion by striking certain testimony of the condemnee's expert witness regarding valuation on the ground that the testimony was without sufficient foundation since the testimony was based on an assumption of the value as if the subject property had already been subdivided, which it had not; in making its ruling, the trial court properly discerned that, even though a different use of the property was shown to have been reasonably probable, a jury cannot evaluate the property as though the new use were an accomplished fact. Woodland Partners Ltd. P'ship v. DOT, 286 Ga. App. 546, 650 S.E.2d 277 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 698 (Ga. 2007).

Probative value. — To the extent that an affidavit as to the value of a truck was offered as an expert opinion, the affidavit lacked probative value as there was no evidence that the valuation method the affiant used was reliable. Dowdell v. Volvo Commer. Fin., LLC, 286 Ga. App. 659, 649 S.E.2d 750 (2007).

Limited qualification as expert. — In a suit against a permittee by the Environmental Protection Division of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources (EPD), the permittee objected to testimony of an EPD employee on the ground that the employee was not qualified as an engineer under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1. The trial court, however, qualified the witness and permitted the employee to testify as an expert in biologic and anaerobic processes, and did not abuse the court's discretion in doing so. Agri-Cycle LLC v. Couch, 284 Ga. 90, 663 S.E.2d 175 (2008).

Expert found not qualified to render opinion. — In a personal injury case when a driver alleged that a loose tie rod caused the driver to lose control of the steering, neither of the driver's experts was qualified to render an opinion as to the cause of the accident; the first expert did not have adequate knowledge or experience with the mechanical aspects of a vehicle to determine if mechanical failure caused the vehicle to lose control and also had no experience in evaluating design defects, and the second expert, an experienced mechanic and a police officer, had no experience in the area of accident reconstruction or in evaluating the circumstances surrounding catastrophic mechanical failure. Smith v. Liberty Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge, Inc., 285 Ga. App. 606, 647 S.E.2d 315 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 861 (Ga. 2007); U.S. , 128 S. Ct. 1883, 170 L. Ed. 2d 757 (2008).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in applying O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, and excluding the testimony of two experts in plaintiffs' personal injury suit because neither witness's testimony was shown to be the product of reliable principles and methods. One expert's testimony on the issue of causation lacked scientific support, and the other expert's testimony on the issue of labeling used standards having no specific relevance to consumer use of products, and the opinion was based solely on data obtained from the Internet and from plaintiffs' attorneys. Mason v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 283 Ga. 271, 658 S.E.2d 603 (2008).

When a couple who filed a medical malpractice case did not show that their experts had actual professional knowledge and experience through active practice or by teaching during at least three of the last five years, the trial court properly held under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-9.1 and 24-9-67.1 that the experts were not qualified to give an opinion and dismissed the case. Akers v. Elsey, 294 Ga. App. 359, 670 S.E.2d 142 (2008).

Expert allowed to testify. — In a personal injury and loss of consortium action, the trial court did not err by allowing a business to call a witness who had not been identified as an expert as: (1) the proper remedy for the erroneous admission of evidence was to request a continuance or a mistrial, neither of which the injured invitee did; (2) the invitee did not dispute that the invitee received, before trial, the substance of the witness's expected testimony, along with a curriculum vitae, but only argued that the business failed to amend the interrogatory answers; and (3) the invitee failed to object either when the business called the witness to testify, or when the business tendered the witness as an expert. Magill v. Edd Kirby Chevrolet, Inc., 277 Ga. App. 619, 627 S.E.2d 207 (2006).

A lender's appraiser's opinion as to foreclosed property's true market value at the time of foreclosure was properly admitted under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(b). The lender's expert's appraisal was based upon extensive facts and careful analysis taking into account the potential for future recovery of a down real estate market by the discounted flow method, which the borrower conceded was reliable. Blue Marlin Dev., LLC v. Branch Banking & Trust Co., 302 Ga. App. 120, 690 S.E.2d 252 (2010).

Surgeon allowed to testify. — Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1, a vascular surgeon was qualified to give an opinion in a medical malpractice case against an orthopedic surgeon because the vascular surgeon did not allege that the doctor was negligent in the performance of a patient's knee replacement surgery, only in the failure to assess the vascular issues involved, particularly in light of the patient's medical history. Cotten v. Phillips, 280 Ga. App. 280, 633 S.E.2d 655 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 112 (Ga. 2007).

Caseworker allowed to testify. — In a termination of parental rights proceeding, pretermittting whether a case worker was qualified to give an expert opinion about the adverse effects of long-term foster care on the mother's twin children, because the mother failed to show prejudice in light of the other evidence supporting the termination of parental rights, the juvenile court did not err in allowing the case worker's testimony. In the Interest of T.J., 281 Ga. App. 673, 637 S.E.2d 75 (2006).

In a medical malpractice case, because the trial court was authorized to conclude that the patient's expert witnesses applied reliable principles and methods to the facts of the case, and that they were offering opinions in the area of practice or specialty of pediatric medicine, it did not abuse the court's discretion in qualifying those experts under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1. Canas v. Al-Jabi, 282 Ga. App. 764, 639 S.E.2d 494 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 197 (Ga. 2007); reversed on other grounds, Kaminer v. Canas, 282 Ga. 830, 653 S.E.2d 691 (2007).

Trial court properly denied a doctor's motion to exclude testimony from the patient's expert witness, despite the fact that the expert had a different specialty than the doctor, as such was allowed under the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c), and the expert's testimony addressed the doctor's alleged misdiagnosis of the patient's condition, which was the ultimate issue in the case. Mays v. Ellis, 283 Ga. App. 195, 641 S.E.2d 201 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a hospital board's motion to exclude the testimony of the plaintiff's medical expert in a medical malpractice suit because under the plaintiff's complaint the ultimate issues to be decided were whether the hospital staff and the board's urologists committed malpractice by failing to timely evaluate the plaintiff's injury, not whether the board's urologists negligently performed the exploratory surgery or that the urologists negligently removed the plaintiff's testicle contrary to urological standards of care; the area of practice or specialty in which the opinion was to have been given in the case was an area of practice in which the plaintiff's medical expert possessed the requisite knowledge and experience under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c)(2). MCG Health, Inc. v. Barton, 285 Ga. App. 577, 647 S.E.2d 81 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 821 (Ga. 2007).

Expert on DNA testing. — No error resulted by admitting expert testimony on the issue of DNA testing and because the defendant did not contend that the expert's testimony failed to meet the Harper standard, no basis for reversal on this ground existed. Carruth v. State, 286 Ga. App. 431, 649 S.E.2d 557 (2007).

Elevator inspector as expert. — In a premises liability case involving an elevator that stopped above landing level, a person who had worked for 31 years for an elevator company, with responsibilities including maintenance, repair, and upgrading of existing elevators for customers, and who was certified as a qualified elevator inspector, was properly accepted as an expert. Brady v. Elevator Specialists, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 304, 653 S.E.2d 59 (2007).

During a malpractice case alleging that a patient's doctor failed to timely examine and treat the patient after the patient broke a hip at a long-term care facility, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that the patient's expert witness (who, like the doctor, was board certified in internal medicine) was qualified under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(c)(2). The witness saw about six patients per week, including patients who resided in long-term-care facilities; the fact that the witness had not ordered an x-ray or CT-scan or admitted anyone to the hospital in the past five years did not disqualify the witness as an expert. Carter v. Smith, 294 Ga. App. 590, 669 S.E.2d 425 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0463, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 194 (Ga. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion in limine filed by a doctor and the board of regents of a medical college to exclude expert testimony because the trial court correctly determined that the expert's opinion was based on sufficient facts and data in order to be admissible at trial; the expert deposed that the expert's opinion of the cause of the patient's epidural hematoma was derived from applying the expert's medical knowledge and the expert's experience with previous cases to the patient's medical records and deposition testimony regarding the incident given by the doctor and the patient. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. v. Casey, 300 Ga. App. 850, 686 S.E.2d 807 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion in limine filed by a doctor and the board of regents of a medical college to exclude expert testimony because the expert reviewed the medical records of the patient's case as well as the deposition testimony of the doctor and the patient before using a differential diagnosis to explain the expert's theory of the cause of the patient's epidural hematoma; the trial court denied the motion in limine based on the expert's use of differential diagnosis because, the expert explained, based on prior experiences and medical knowledge as applied to the medical records, time-line, and testimony given in the case, why the expert believed that the patient's interaction with the doctor caused the epidural hematoma either to form or to worsen to the point that it caused the damage suffered by the patient. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. v. Casey, 300 Ga. App. 850, 686 S.E.2d 807 (2009).

Given an expert witness's qualifications, including his advanced degrees in civil engineering and public administration, professional engineer's license, certification as a professional traffic operations engineer, fifteen years experience working at the DOT, and eight years experience at the local government level, and the expert's testimony based on personal knowledge of the DOT's manuals and inspection policies, a trial court did not err in allowing the witness to give an opinion of whether the DOT had complied with its storm inspection policy. Ga. DOT v. Miller, 300 Ga. App. 857, 686 S.E.2d 455 (2009).

In a property owner's action for trespass and nuisance, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by allowing the owner's expert witness to testify because the expert (1) relied on sufficient facts and data; (2) was a civil engineer with a doctorate in engineering science and mechanics; and (3) had consulted and testified as an expert in numerous water intrusion/infiltration and related cases; although the expert deposed that the expert's opinion was a theory that was impossible to prove since the expert could not repeat the owner's initial water leak, the expert had factual information showing that the owner had not had an excessive rainwater problem before a sprinkler vault leak and that chlorinated water flowed to the owner's property in large volumes and could have done so for months, and the expert had factual information that the owner experienced excessive flooding during rains thereafter. Bailey v. Annistown Rd. Baptist Church, Inc., 301 Ga. App. 677, 689 S.E.2d 62 (2009).

Expert's opinions were improperly found not to be reliable under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1(b)(2) and (b)(3) in a negligence action on the basis that the opinions were products of the engineer's exercise of engineering judgment and thus inadmissible because the expert was not required to point to a specific provision in the Manual of Uniform Traffic Control Devices that required the exact safety measures the expert proposed, the expert could rely on the expert's 48 years as a licensed professional engineer, and the expert was also not required to validate the expert's opinion by showing a series of similar accidents that could constitute test results. Hamilton-King v. HNTB Ga., Inc., 296 Ga. App. 864, 676 S.E.2d 287 (2009).

Jury instructions. — In a medical malpractice case when evidence of an expert's personal practices is admitted, the trial court must give jury instructions that clearly define the legal meaning of standard of care; enunciate the principle that a mere difference in views between physicians does not by itself prove malpractice; and clarify concepts such as burden of proof and credibility of witnesses. In addition, the party whose expert has been cross-examined has the ability to elicit explanations for why the expert's practices differ from what that expert attested to as the standard of care. Condra v. Atlanta Orthopaedic Group, P.C., 285 Ga. 667, 681 S.E.2d 152 (2009).

ANALYSIS

FEELINGS

RELATIONSHIPS

General Consideration

In general. — Public trial tends to ensure the truth by forcing those who testify to relate their memories without embellishment for fear that there may be those in attendance who could call the testimony into question if not truthful. Montgomery v. State, 156 Ga. App. 448, 275 S.E.2d 72 (1980).

As one party to the trial, the state is entitled to require common witnesses, both those charged and observers of the charged acts, to present their version of the occurrences in the presence of each other, thereby minimizing witness bias or the possibility of each defendant singly shifting blame to other absent defendants without opportunity of searching inquiry into the truth. Montgomery v. State, 156 Ga. App. 448, 275 S.E.2d 72 (1980).

History. — Statute is simply declaratory of a general common law principle. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Lybrend, 99 Ga. 421, 27 S.E. 794 (1896).

Credibility. — As a general rule, a party may show any fact or circumstance that may affect the credibility of an opposing witness. Fowler v. Waldrip, 10 Ga. 350 (1851); Simpson v. State, 78 Ga. 91 (1886); Daniel v. State, 103 Ga. 202, 29 S.E. 767 (1897); Neill v. Hill, 32 Ga. App. 381, 123 S.E. 30 (1924); Lloyd v. State, 40 Ga. App. 230, 149 S.E. 174 (1929); Walker v. State, 74 Ga. App. 48, 39 S.E.2d 75 (1946); Quinn v. State, 132 Ga. App. 395, 208 S.E.2d 263 (1974); Southeast Transp. Corp. v. Hogan Livestock Co., 133 Ga. App. 825, 212 S.E.2d 638 (1975).

Relevancy. — In a criminal prosecution, it was error for the trial court to permit the state, in argument and in testimony, to identify a fingerprint expert who testified for the state as having originally been hired by the defendant; the fact of the expert's original employment by defendant was irrelevant and could be prejudicial. Blige v. State, 264 Ga. 166, 441 S.E.2d 752 (1994).

O.C.G.A. § 24-2-1 and 24-9-68 should be considered in pari materia; thus, even if testimony sought to be admitted relates to the feelings a witness has toward a party, if that particular feeling would have no relevance to the questions being tried by the jury, then such evidence may be excluded in the sound discretion of the trial court. Lockett v. State, 217 Ga. App. 328, 457 S.E.2d 579 (1995).

In a personal injury suit filed by a car driver against a truck driver because the trial court erred by admitting evidence of the car driver's prior DUI charges and testimony by the investigating officer about charges filed against the car driver in traffic court, and by excluding an admission by the car driver's treating emergency room physician, a new trial was ordered. Laukaitis v. Basadre, 287 Ga. App. 144, 650 S.E.2d 724 (2007).

Criminal record. — It was not error to refuse to admit evidence pertaining to a witness's criminal record since there was nothing to show that the witness's past record would motivate the witness to be untruthful or "shade" the witness's testimony to please the state, there were no outstanding criminal charges against the witness, and the state did not open the door to admission of such evidence. Jenkins v. State, 215 Ga. App. 540, 451 S.E.2d 457 (1994).

While it was error under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-68 not to allow the defendant to cross-examine a witness about pending felony charges against the witness, it was highly probable that the error did not contribute to the verdict, and was therefore harmless error, because the witness was not present at the crime scene and the witness's testimony that the defendant bragged about committing an assault was put in doubt by another witness. Fields v. State, 285 Ga. App. 345, 646 S.E.2d 326 (2007).

Jury charge not appropriate. — In the absence of any evidence regarding the feelings or bias of witnesses toward defendant, or why the witnesses were familiar with defendant's appearance, defendant's requested charge on the language of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-68 was not authorized. Scruggs v. State, 227 Ga. App. 35, 488 S.E.2d 110 (1997).

Jury charge appropriate. — Trial court did not err in refusing to charge the jury regarding O.C.G.A. § 24-9-68, as it was sufficient that the jury was charged that, in passing upon credibility of witnesses, it could consider their interest or lack of interest in the occurrences about which the witnesses testified. Stinson v. State, 256 Ga. App. 902, 569 S.E.2d 858 (2002).

Feelings

In general. — State of the witness's feelings to the parties may always be proved for the consideration of the jury. Bishop v. State, 9 Ga. 121 (1850); Whitlow v. State, 74 Ga. 819 (1855); Durham v. State, 45 Ga. 516 (1872) (role of accused unpopular with witness); Skipper v. State, 59 Ga. 63 (1877); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Lybrend, 99 Ga. 421, 27 S.E. 794 (1896) (personal conduct); Patman v. State, 61 Ga. 379 (1878); Shaw v. State, 102 Ga. 660, 29 S.E. 477 (1897) (witness subject to similar acts of injury as done by accused); Daniel v. State, 103 Ga. 202, 29 S.E. 767 (1897); Purdee v. State, 118 Ga. 798, 45 S.E. 606 (1903); McDuffie v. State, 121 Ga. 580, 49 S.E. 708 (1905); Sasser v. State, 129 Ga. 541, 59 S.E. 255 (1907); Parker v. State, 11 Ga. App. 251, 75 S.E. 437 (1912), later appeal, 17 Ga. App. 252, 87 S.E. 705 (1915) (subordination of another witness); Smith v. State, 12 Ga. App. 13, 76 S.E. 647 (1912); Sisk v. Landers, 67 Ga. App. 538, 21 S.E.2d 449 (1942); Walker v. State, 74 Ga. App. 48, 39 S.E.2d 75 (1946); Miller v. Smith, 302 F. Supp. 385 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723 (1976).

Statute relates to the state of the witness's feelings to the parties, and not the state of the feelings of a party toward the witness. Jones v. State, 75 Ga. App. 610, 44 S.E.2d 174 (1947).

Trial court did not err in refusing to permit the condemnee to show, by a witness for the condemnee, the bias and prejudice of a witness for the condemnor against the condemnee, where the questions asked the witness related to the feelings of the condemnor's witness at a time before the trial and did not attempt to show the feelings of the condemnor's witness at the time of the trial. Sutton v. State Hwy. Dep't, 103 Ga. App. 29, 118 S.E.2d 285 (1961).

Interest. — Cross-examination of an adverse witness as to interest, attitude, and feelings is admissible. Jeter & Forbes v. Haviland, Keese & Co., 24 Ga. 252 (1858); Carmichael v. Silvers, 90 Ga. App. 804, 84 S.E.2d 688 (1954); Miller v. Smith, 302 F. Supp. 385 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Quinn v. State, 132 Ga. App. 395, 208 S.E.2d 263 (1974); Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723 (1976).

Jury may not arbitrarily disregard the testimony of a witness by reason of interest in the result. Carmichael v. Silvers, 90 Ga. App. 804, 84 S.E.2d 668 (1954).

After a defendant was charged with aggravated assault, but claimed self defense, the trial court erred in prohibiting the defendant from eliciting from the victim that the victim had pending a civil action against the defendant for the victim's injuries; the defendant was entitled to prove the victim's interest in the outcome of the criminal trial and so attack the victim's credibility, and to show the state of the witness's feelings toward the defendant and the witness's relationship to the defendant. Boggs v. State, 195 Ga. App. 605, 394 S.E.2d 401 (1990).

Bias and prejudice. — Jury is authorized to consider the bias or prejudices of the witnesses in a criminal case, if any exist. Wall v. State, 153 Ga. 309, 112 S.E. 142 (1922); Couch v. State, 73 Ga. App. 153, 35 S.E.2d 708 (1945); Dennis v. State, 216 Ga. 206, 115 S.E.2d 527 (1960).

Fact that, in the investigating officer's previous experience, most of the sexual abuse victims' mothers had sided with their defendant-husbands was not relevant to explain either the conduct or the testimony of the victim's mother in the instant case, insofar as the testimony did not relate to the state of specifically her feelings towards the parties and specifically her relationship to the parties. Lott v. State, 206 Ga. App. 886, 426 S.E.2d 667 (1992).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, when defendant was allowed to testify that the victim was a drug dealer who had furnished drugs to defendant's nephew, which had prompted the confrontation between them, the exclusion of additional evidence of the victim's drug dealing was not a curtailment of defendant's right to show the bias of the victim. Hayes v. State, 211 Ga. App. 801, 440 S.E.2d 539 (1994).

In a criminal prosecution, when the state's eyewitness was never asked what the witness's personal feelings were toward defendant, further inquiry into the basis for any bias or prejudice that the witness might have against African-Americans would not have been relevant. Farley v. State, 225 Ga. App. 687, 484 S.E.2d 711 (1997).

Racial bias of officer. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in restricting the defendant's examination of an officer regarding the officer's alleged racial bias because the defendant had an opportunity to develop testimony regarding the officer's alleged racial bias but failed to do so, and, to the extent that the defendant's enumeration was premised upon evidence reflected in the officer's personnel file, the defendant failed to perfect the record with a sufficient proffer of the excluded evidence; although the officer's personnel file was presented to the trial court for consideration, such evidence was not introduced and included in the record for appellate review, and in the absence of the evidence, the court of appeals could not reach the merits of the claim. Williams v. State, No. A09A1854, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 321 (Mar. 29, 2010).

Motive. — Intent or motive of a witness is a legitimate subject of inquiry, and the fact that a witness is influenced by financial considerations may affect a witness's credit and diminish the weight of a witness's testimony. Lloyd v. State, 40 Ga. App. 230, 149 S.E. 174 (1929).

If an attempt be made to discredit a witness on the ground that the witness's testimony is given under the influence of some motive prompting the witness to make a false or colored statement, the witness may be allowed to show in reply that the witness made similar declarations at a time when the motive imputed to the witness did not exist. Fuller v. State, 197 Ga. 714, 30 S.E.2d 608 (1944); Quinn v. State, 132 Ga. App. 395, 208 S.E.2d 263 (1974).

Relationships

In general. — Relationship of a witness to a party is a relevant consideration for the jury. Fowler v. Waldrip, 10 Ga. 350 (1851); Simpson v. State, 78 Ga. 91 (1886); Futch v. State, 90 Ga. 472, 16 S.E. 102 (1892); Myers v. State, 97 Ga. 76, 25 S.E. 252 (1895); Shaw v. State, 102 Ga. 660, 29 S.E. 477 (1897); Daniel v. State, 103 Ga. 202, 29 S.E. 767 (1897); Brown v. State, 119 Ga. 572, 46 S.E. 833 (1904); Perdue v. State, 126 Ga. 112, 54 S.E. 820 (1906); Bates v. State, 4 Ga. App. 486, 61 S.E. 888 (1908) (bailor and bailee); Clark v. State, 5 Ga. App. 605, 63 S.E. 606 (1909); Union v. State, 7 Ga. App. 27, 66 S.E. 24 (1909); Billings v. State, 8 Ga. App. 672, 70 S.E. 36 (1911); Watts v. State, 9 Ga. App. 500, 71 S.E. 766 (1911); Smith v. State, 15 Ga. App. 713, 84 S.E. 159 (1915) (police work); Berry v. City of Jackson, 16 Ga. App. 479, 85 S.E. 683 (1915); Lundy v. State, 144 Ga. 833, 88 S.E. 209 (1916); Neill v. Hill, 32 Ga. App. 381, 123 S.E. 30 (1924); Lloyd v. State, 40 Ga. App. 230, 149 S.E. 174 (1929); Georgia Hwy. Express, Inc. v. Sturkie, 62 Ga. App. 741, 9 S.E.2d 683 (1940); Walker v. State, 74 Ga. App. 48, 39 S.E.2d 75 (1946); Carmichael v. Silvers, 90 Ga. App. 804, 84 S.E.2d 668 (1954); Dennis v. State, 216 Ga. 206, 115 S.E.2d 527 (1960) (lover); Quinn v. State, 132 Ga. App. 395, 208 S.E.2d 263 (1974) (prosecutor); Southeast Transp. Corp. v. Hogan Livestock Co., 133 Ga. App. 825, 212 S.E.2d 638 (1975) (employer and employee); Fletcher v. Fletcher, 242 Ga. 158, 249 S.E.2d 530 (1978) (marital status).

Expert's relationship to party and to attorney. — In a personal injury action, it was not error to allow evidence showing the close relationship between the medical witness and the plaintiff, a long-time patient, and between the witness and plaintiff's counsel. Canada v. Shropshire, 232 Ga. App. 341, 501 S.E.2d 860 (1998).

In defendant's trial on charges of malice murder and aggravated assault, the trial court did not err by allowing the state to ask an expert witness who opined that defendant was insane at the time defendant stabbed two people if the witness had been hired by defendant's counsel to testify in other cases and how much the witness was being paid to testify in defendant's case. Whitner v. State, 276 Ga. 742, 584 S.E.2d 247 (2003).

Expert testimony limited. — In a medical malpractice action, the trial court did not err in limiting a patient's cross-examination of the doctor's expert witness, and hence, the patient's ability to show bias on the expert's part as: (1) the rules of evidence specifically prohibited a party from eliciting evidence that the expert had testified in a previous lawsuit, as such would have shown that the doctor had been sued before and suggested a proclivity for negligent conduct; and (2) the mere fact that a juror with an interest in the doctor's liability insurer would have been stricken for cause did not grant the patient an allowance to cross-examine a witness about that witness's interest in the insurer. Carlisle v. Abend, 288 Ga. App. 150, 653 S.E.2d 388 (2007).

Sexual. — Trial court did not err in allowing the state to ask a defense witness whether the witness had a sexual relationship with defendant, not to impeach the witness by reason of the immorality, but to show the witness's intimate relations with the accused and the witness's probable bias as a witness. Watkins v. State, 206 Ga. App. 701, 426 S.E.2d 238 (1992).

Even though the evidence already shows close friendship and cohabitation, a lesbian relationship between a party and a witness on the party's behalf may be proved to show their intimate relations and the witness's potential bias. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. McIntosh, 215 Ga. App. 587, 452 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

Alibi witness. — In a criminal prosecution, proof that the alibi witness had accused the defendant, her boyfriend, of kidnapping and rape but then declined to prosecute her paramour was relevant and admissible to show bias on her part as an alibi witness. Hood v. State, 245 Ga. App. 391, 537 S.E.2d 788 (2000).

Employer and employee. — Jury could consider whether a witness had an interest in providing testimony favorable to the employer that insulated the employer from liability and whether the witness/employee received a promotion and pay increase as a reward for such testimony. McNeely v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 246 Ga. App. 852, 542 S.E.2d 575 (2000).

Evidence of defendant's gang affiliation shared with an alibi witnesses and a police officer's testimony that the name of the gang meant "I will die for you, you will die for me" was relevant to show the state of the witnesses' feelings toward defendant and the witnesses' relationship to the defendant. Hayes v. State, 265 Ga. 1, 453 S.E.2d 11 (1995). But see Clark v. State, 271 Ga. 6, 515 S.E.2d 155 (1999).

A witness may refresh and assist his memory by the use of any written instrument or memorandum, provided he shall finally speak from his recollection thus refreshed or shall be willing to swear positively from the paper. General Consideration

History. — Apparently this section is not based on any statute, but is a codification of the general law existing before the statute's adoption. Lenney v. Finley, 118 Ga. 427, 45 S.E. 317 (1903) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69).

Obvious purpose of the statute is to allow proper and legitimate aid to a witness which will enable the witness to testify fully as to the witness's knowledge. Whitaker v. State, 199 Ga. 344, 34 S.E.2d 499 (1945) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69).

Rule stated in Weldon v. State, 21 Ga. App.

330, 94 S.E. 326 (1917).

Illegal evidence must not be allowed to reach the jury on the pretense that the evidence is offered in compliance with this statute. Whitaker v. State, 199 Ga. 344, 34 S.E.2d 499 (1945); Hull v. State, 265 Ga. 757, 462 S.E.2d 596 (1995) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69).

Past and present recollections distinguished. — For discussion of the distinction between cases where the witness finally testifies to a “past” recollection, and where the witness finally testifies to a “present” recollection, see Stansall v. Columbian Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 32 Ga. App. 87, 122 S.E. 733, cert. denied, 32 Ga. App. 807 (1924).

Testimony must be based on memory and not on memorandum. — Witness may, for the purpose of refreshing the witness's recollection, use any memoranda useful for that purpose; and the witness's testimony will not be objectionable if it is not dependent upon the memoranda, but is based upon the memory of the witness, even though the memoranda may be necessary in order to refresh the witness's recollection. Southern Ry. v. Cowan, 52 Ga. App. 360, 183 S.E. 331 (1936).

Independent memory of contents not required. — Witness may testify from the witness's memory refreshed by a writing that the witness made, though the witness has no independent memory of the writing's contents. Bridges v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n, 49 Ga. App. 552, 176 S.E. 543 (1934); Steinmetz v. Chambley, 90 Ga. App. 519, 83 S.E.2d 318 (1954); Woodward v. City Council, 117 Ga. App. 857, 162 S.E.2d 304 (1968); State Hwy. Dep't v. Godfrey, 118 Ga. App. 560, 164 S.E.2d 340 (1968); Marby v. Henley, 123 Ga. App. 561, 181 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

Does not affect probative value. — Rule relates as to the admissibility of testimony, and not a rule for the determination of the testimony's probative value. Scott v. Gidelight Mfg. Co., 37 Ga. App. 240, 139 S.E. 686 (1927); Kines v. State, 67 Ga. App. 314, 20 S.E.2d 89 (1942).

Reading record in hearing of jury. — Witness may not only read the witness's own deposition but it may be read to the witness in the presence and hearing of the jury to refresh the witness's memory. Burney v. Ball, 24 Ga. 505 (1858).

Waiver. — When only part of the memorandum was admitted in evidence at the instance of the party who offered the witness, over objection urged by the opposite party that it was inadmissible, the putting in evidence later by the opposite party of the remainder of the memorandum amounted to a waiver of the party's objection. Scott v. Gidelight Mfg. Co., 37 Ga. App. 240, 139 S.E. 686 (1927).

Error in allowing counsel to view witness's notes harmless. — Though the trial court erred in permitting the plaintiff's counsel to examine the notes used by defendant's witness to refresh the witness's memory, defendant failed to show how this error prejudiced the defense, therefore, the error was harmless. Seaboard Coastline R.R. v. Delahunt, 179 Ga. App. 647, 347 S.E.2d 627 (1986), overruled on other grounds, CSX Transp. v. Williams, 230 Ga. App. 573, 497 S.E.2d 66 (1998).

Preserving error. — While it was true that under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69, a witness whose memory was refreshed with a document had to continue their testimony on the basis of recollection alone, when such was not the basis of the defendant's objection at trial, the claim was not preserved for review. Hunter v. State, 282 Ga. App. 355, 638 S.E.2d 804 (2006).

Written Instrument or Memorandum

Either personal preparation or knowledge that facts true. — In order to testify positively from paper itself, the witness must either have made the paper personally, or, at some time when facts were fresh in the witness's memory, the witness must have known the facts stated in the paper to be correct. Bradshaw v. State, 162 Ga. App. 750, 293 S.E.2d 360 (1982).

After a defendant was charged with DUI, the trial court did not err in allowing one of the police witnesses to refresh the witness's recollection from a written document without any showing that the witness had prepared the document personally; so long as a witness is testifying from personal recollection, the witness is entitled to have the witness's memory refreshed by a document which the witness personally did not prepare. Ussery v. State, 195 Ga. App. 394, 393 S.E.2d 522 (1990).

Paper itself as evidence. — When a witness testifies from the witness's recollection refreshed as provided by statute, the paper itself, where not otherwise binding upon the party against whom the witness testifies, is without probative value and is not admissible as documentary evidence for any purpose. Stansall v. Columbian Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 32 Ga. App. 87, 122 S.E. 733, cert. denied, 32 Ga. App. 807 (1924).

Excluding such memoranda as are admissible as business records or as part of the res gestae, it is generally held that the memorandum has no present evidentiary value, since it is not the memorandum that is the evidence, but the recollection of the witness. An exception is when the opposite side wished to introduce the memorandum in order to weaken the effect of the testimony. Woodward v. City Council, 117 Ga. App. 857, 162 S.E.2d 304 (1968); State Hwy. Dep't v. Godfrey, 118 Ga. App. 560, 164 S.E.2d 340 (1968); Mason v. State, 147 Ga. App. 179, 248 S.E.2d 302 (1978).

Memorandum prepared by another. — If the writing, instrument, document, or other thing from which the witness refreshes the witness's recollection was made in the witness's presence or at the witness's direction and if the witness knows that it contains true and correct information and is willing to swear positively to that effect, it is immaterial that the witness did not personally make the thing from which the witness testified. Smith v. Morning News, Inc., 99 Ga. App. 547, 109 S.E.2d 639 (1959), for comment, see 22 Ga. B.J. 380 (1960).

Although a witness may refresh the witness's memory from a writing prepared by another, the witness must nevertheless testify from the witness's memory thus refreshed. When the document is prepared by a third person not in the presence of a witness, the memory is not refreshed by such memorandum and such testimony is inadmissible. Zilinmon v. State, 234 Ga. 535, 216 S.E.2d 830 (1975), overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006).

In view of a prosecution witness's aver-

ment that the witness was testifying from the witness's refreshed memory, the trial court did not err in permitting the witness to testify to the tag number on defendant's truck, even though the witness refreshed the witness's memory by viewing a computer printout bearing the tag number; since the witness was entitled to have the witness's memory refreshed by a document which the witness personally did not prepare. Byrd v. State, 182 Ga. App. 284, 355 S.E.2d 666 (1987).

Trial court correctly allowed a testifying police officer to refresh the officer's memory of the incident using a report written by someone else; O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69, permitted a witness to refresh and assist the witness's memory by the use of any written instrument or memorandum. Penland v. State, 258 Ga. App. 659, 574 S.E.2d 880 (2002).

Witness at some time must have had personal knowledge of the memorandum's correctness. Davis v. State, 91 Ga. 167, 17 S.E. 292 (1893); Hematite Mining Co. v. East Tenn., Va. & Ga. Ry., 92 Ga. 268, 18 S.E. 24 (1893); Jones v. State, 99 Ga. 46, 25 S.E. 617 (1896); Lenney v. Finley, 118 Ga. 427, 45 S.E. 317 (1903); Shrouder v. State, 121 Ga. 615, 49 S.E. 702 (1905); Smith v. City of Atlanta, 22 Ga. App. 511, 96 S.E. 334 (1918); Stansall v. Columbian Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 32 Ga. App. 87, 122 S.E. 733, cert. denied, 32 Ga. App. 807 (1924); Herring v. State, 122 Ga. App. 730, 178 S.E.2d 551 (1970); Morris v. State, 228 Ga. 39, 184 S.E.2d 82 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1050, 92 S. Ct. 1511, 31 L. Ed. 2d 786 (1972); Moore v. State, 240 Ga. 807, 243 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 903, 99 S. Ct. 268, 58 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1978).

Investigation reports prepared by witness. — In a proceeding to terminate the parental rights of a parent who had been convicted of molesting the parent's children, the trial court did not err in allowing a probation official to use a confidential presentence investigation report to refresh the official's recollection about interviews the official had with the parent. In re S.M.L., 228 Ga. App. 81, 491 S.E.2d 186 (1997).

It was not improper for an officer to use a police report to refresh the officer's recollection about a prior driving under the influence incident involving the defendant. Becker v. State, 280 Ga. App. 97, 633 S.E.2d 436 (2006).

Investigation reports prepared by another witness. — An investigating officer's report can be used to refresh another witness's recollection. Brown v. State, 247 Ga. App. 741, 545 S.E.2d 114 (2001).

Statement as past recollection recorded. — Although it is preferable to ask a witness specifically at trial whether the witness had told the truth as the witness then perceived it when the witness gave the witness's oral statement and whether a transcript thereof constituted an accurate recording in toto of what the witness had personally stated, since an adequate foundation was established, the transcribed statement may qualify as past recollection recorded under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69. Platt v. National Gen. Ins. Co., 205 Ga. App. 705, 423 S.E.2d 387, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 283 (1992).

Statement was inadmissible as a past recollection recorded or under the medical diagnosis exception to the hearsay rule because after reviewing the typed statement, the social worker testified that the worker's memory was not refreshed and the worker was unwilling to swear that the statement accurately reflected the interview as required under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69. Sandlin v. State, 273 Ga. 440, 542 S.E.2d 496 (2001).

Transcript allowed to go out with jury. — Transcript of statement by witness which was admissible as past recollection recorded should not have been allowed to go out with the jury during deliberation. Platt v. National Gen. Ins. Co., 205 Ga. App. 705, 423 S.E.2d 387, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 283 (1992).

Cross-examination concerning contents. — Cross-examiner should and does possess the right to quiz the witness concerning the contents of the written instrument without introduction of the document. In doing so the witness is entitled to shed light on the relevant issues whether this be favorable or unfavorable to the client's cause. Lester v. S.J. Alexander, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 470, 193 S.E.2d 860 (1972).

Examination of memorandum by opposing counsel. — Trial court does not err in refusing to allow defense counsel to examine all a police officer's notes in the officer's file, although defense counsel is allowed to cross-examine the officer with reference to the notes used to refresh the officer's recollection. Sprague v. State, 147 Ga. App. 347, 248 S.E.2d 711 (1978). See also Ellison v. Robinson, 96 Ga. App. 882, 101 S.E.2d 902 (1958).

Testimony is not subject to "best evidence" objections if the witness merely used records made, kept, and maintained in the regular course of business under the witness's supervision, direction, and control to refresh the witness's memory and the records were admitted into evidence. Robinson v. Reward Ceramic Color Mfg., Inc., 120 Ga. App. 380, 170 S.E.2d 724 (1969).

Use of codefendant's testimony prohibited. — Witness may not refresh witness's memory from testimony given at the trial of another defendant under the same indictment. Brown v. State, 28 Ga. 199 (1859).

Illustrations

Recollection refreshed. — Testimony was admissible in the following cases, where witness's recollection was refreshed by a memorandum: Veal v. Wood, 29 Ga. App. 94, 113 S.E. 818 (1922); Lazar v. Black & White Cab Co., 50 Ga. App. 567, 179 S.E. 250 (1935).

Since the doctor was present when the plaintiff was brought into the hospital immediately after plaintiff's injury, was present when X-ray pictures were taken and developed, examined the x-rays immediately thereafter and ascertained therefrom that the nature of the plaintiff's injury was such that it was necessary to refer the plaintiff to an orthopedic surgeon, the refusal of the court to allow the witness to refresh the witness's memory under the circumstances shown was probably harmful error and required a reversal of the case. Smith v. Morning News, Inc., 99 Ga. App. 547, 109 S.E.2d 639 (1959), for comment, see 22 Ga. B. J. 380 (1960).

Trial court did not improperly allow a prosecutor to refresh a victim's recollection with a letter the victim wrote to the district attorney's office expressing fear of the defendant as: (1) the defense counsel asked to see the letter before the prosecutor handed the letter to the victim; (2) the prosecutor granted that request; (3) after previewing the letter, the defense counsel did not object to the victim using the letter to refresh the victim's memory; and (4) the letter was neither admitted into evidence nor read to the jury. Haggins v. State, 277 Ga. App. 742, 627 S.E.2d 448 (2006).

Detective's use of a photograph to refresh that detective's recollection as to which of the codefendants was the defendant on trial went to the weight of the detective's testimony, but did not require that the identification of the defendant on trial be excluded due to a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Ford v. State, 285 Ga. App. 106, 645 S.E.2d 590 (2007).

Trial court did not err in allowing an attorney to read a letter memorializing a conversation between the attorney and a decedent because a proper foundation was laid for the attorney to read the letter to the jury as a past recollection recorded when the attorney testified that the attorney personally prepared the letter and that the conversation concerning the scope of a receipt that was recounted in the letter occurred no more than three days before the letter was prepared; although the attorney could not presently recall being told by the decedent that the release from indebtedness contained in the receipt was intended to be limited in scope, the attorney testified that based on the wording of the letter the attorney believed that such a conversation with the decedent and the executor's two siblings had taken place, and that testimony established that the attorney memorialized the conversation in the letter when it was fresh in the attorney's mind and that the attorney believed that the letter was true and accurate when written. Jerkins v. Jerkins, 300 Ga. App. 703, 686 S.E.2d 324 (2009).

Swearing positively from paper. — Testimony was admissible in the following cases when witness swore positively from the paper that the facts contained therein were correct: Williams v. C. & G.H. Kelsey & Halsted, 6 Ga. 365 (1849); Black v. Thornton, 30 Ga. 361 (1860); Schmidt v. Wambacker & Weil, 62 Ga. 321 (1879); Scott v. Gidelight Mfg. Co., 37 Ga. App. 240, 139 S.E. 686 (1927); Clackum v. State, 55 Ga. App. 44, 189 S.E. 397 (1936); Elliott v. Georgia Power Co., 58 Ga. App. 151, 197 S.E. 914 (1938); Brown-Rogers-Dixon Co. v. Southern Ry., 79 Ga. App. 449, 53 S.E.2d 702 (1949); Haskins v. Carson, 115 Ga. App. 336, 154 S.E.2d 626 (1967).

Before a witness may swear positively from a paper it is not necessary that the witness show a present recollection of the contents of the document. Mincey v. State, 257 Ga. 500, 360 S.E.2d 578 (1987).

Reading from paper for rebuttal purposes. — Trial court properly permitted an arresting officer to read that portion of the form containing the Miranda warnings which the witness had administered to the defendant for the sole purpose of rebutting the defendant's contention that the defendant had not been advised of the defendant's Miranda rights. Adams v. State, 260 Ga. 298, 392 S.E.2d 866 (1990).

Inadequate basis for use of memorandum. — Witness could not, over objection, testify to the contents of a typewritten signed memorandum which purported to be a statement of the witness's account with the plaintiff when on cross-examination the witness admitted that the witness did not prepare the memorandum, that the witness did not know who did, that the witness received the memorandum through the mail, but the witness did not recall even the return address on the envelope, that the memorandum was not signed, and that the witness had no independent knowledge of the memorandum's contents or that the items had in fact been charged back to the witness's account. Stalvey v. Varn Motors & Fin. Co., 56 Ga. App. 696, 193 S.E. 627 (1937).

No refreshment absent personal knowledge. — Trial court did not err by refusing to allow one of the prosecution witnesses (a police officer) to refresh the officer's recollection from a police report prepared by another officer since the officer testified that the officer had no such personal knowledge. Sweat v. State, 203 Ga. App. 290, 416 S.E.2d 845 (1992).

Refusal to refresh recollection appropriate. — Refusal to allow defendant to use an officer's report to refresh a witness's recollection was harmless error since defendant's goal was to use the witness's refreshed recollection to impeach the witness in an impermissible manner — with a document created by one other than the witness and which the witness had not signed. Woods v. State, 269 Ga. 60, 495 S.E.2d 282 (1998).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69, a witness is allowed to refresh and assist the witness's memory by the use of any written instrument or memorandum; trial counsel's failure to object to the refreshing of a witness's recollection was not ineffective assistance of counsel. Usher v. State, 258 Ga. App. 459, 574 S.E.2d 580 (2002).

Failure to object to reading of transcript from preliminary hearing did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. — As counsel allowed a detective to read from a transcript of the defendant's preliminary hearing so that counsel could cross-examine the detective about a "blank" in the transcript and thus imply that it did not reflect the defendant's entire statement, counsel's strategic decision not to object to the reading of the transcript under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-69 did not constitute ineffective assistance. Nesbitt v. State, 296 Ga. App. 139, 673 S.E.2d 652 (2009).

24-9-70. Objection not waived by cross-examination or introduction of evidence.

If on direct examination of a witness objection is made to the admissibility of evidence, neither cross-examination of the witness on the same subject matter nor the introduction of evidence on the same subject matter shall constitute a waiver of the objection made on direct examination. (Code 1933, § 38-1713, enacted by Ga. L. 1971, p. 460, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Inapplicable if complainant was first to raise matter. — Statute is not applicable if the complaining party first introduced evidence in regard to the matter to which the party subsequently interposed an objection. Halm v. State, 125 Ga. App. 618, 188 S.E.2d 434 (1972).

Harmless error. — While an objection may not be waived as to the introduction of evidence on the same subject matter through cross-examination or otherwise; nevertheless, a new trial will not be granted for harmless error in the admission of evidence. Eiberger v. Martel Elec. Sales, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 253, 187 S.E.2d 327 (1972).

Statute deals with the waiver of an objection to evidence, and not to harmless error which results from legally admissible evidence rendering harmless the admission of incompetent or inadmissible evidence of the same fact. Robinson v. State, 229 Ga. 14, 189 S.E.2d 53 (1972); Thomas v. State, 128 Ga. App. 32, 195 S.E.2d 681 (1973); Prater v. State, 135 Ga. App. 341, 217 S.E.2d 644 (1975); Stamper v. State, 235 Ga. 165, 219 S.E.2d 140 (1975).

When the objection is to documentary rather than oral evidence, the principle regarding waiver should be the same. Shue v. State, 129 Ga. App. 757, 201 S.E.2d 174 (1973).

Provisional admission of evidence. —

When evidence is provisionally admitted to the condition that it should be connected up, it is incumbent on the objecting party to renew the objection after the opposing party has closed. Hawthorne Indus. v. Attaway Assocs., 153 Ga. App. 155, 264 S.E.2d 663 (1980).

Instructions. — Refusal to instruct the jury to disregard testimony to which objection was sustained is not harmful error. Thomas v. State, 128 Ga. App. 32, 195 S.E.2d 681 (1973).

Statute was applied in Carlton Co. v. Poss, 124 Ga. App. 154, 183 S.E.2d 231, aff'd, 228 Ga. 402, 185 S.E.2d 803 (1971), for comment, see 23 Mercer L. Rev. 691 (1972).

ANALYSIS

IMPEACHMENT GENERALLY

IMPEACHMENT BY CONVICTION OF CRIME

Impeachment Generally

At any stage of any trial when one party has the right to present oral testimony, the other party has a right to offer evidence tending to impeach the credibility of such witness by any method sanctioned under the law. Krasner v. Lester, 130 Ga. App. 234, 202 S.E.2d 693 (1973).

Other reasons for impeachment. — While the law prescribes but three methods of impeachment, it clearly does not mean that for no other reason can a witness be discredited. Lewis v. American Rd. Ins. Co., 119 Ga. App. 507, 167 S.E.2d 729 (1969).

Subject must be material. — Witness may not be impeached upon a subject immaterial to the issues involved in the trial of the case. J.F. McKinney & Co. v. Darby, 56 Ga. App. 621, 193 S.E. 594 (1937).

Instruction required. — When inadmissible evidence as to a confession is offered and admitted, the evidence's admission constitutes that the evidence is admitted for the purpose of impeachment only, whether or not a request to so charge be made, and whether or not any exceptions are made to the charge as given. Askea v. State, 153 Ga. App. 849, 267 S.E.2d 279 (1980).

Instruction not required. — When there was no effort to formally impeach any witness by any of the means provided by statute and there was no substantial conflict in the evidence, defendant's statement not being such proof of contradictory facts as would authorize a charge on this subject in the absence of a timely written request, there was error in failing to charge the law on impeachment of witnesses. Peterson v. State, 97 Ga. App. 898, 104 S.E.2d 629 (1958).

Good character will not rehabilitate. — In Georgia, it has never been considered as law that a witness impeached by disproving the truth of the witness's evidence, but not otherwise, could be sustained by evidence of the witness's good character. Hall v. Burpee, 176 Ga. 270, 168 S.E. 39 (1933).

Interrogatories. — Great latitude should be allowed by the court if the purpose of the interrogatories is to impeach or discredit the witness by showing the witness's bias or prejudice in the case. McRae v. Boykin, 50 Ga. App. 866, 179 S.E. 535 (1935), rev'd on other grounds, 182 Ga. 252, 185 S.E. 246 (1936).

Impeachment by Conviction of Crime

There are other legal ways of discrediting a witness than those prescribed by the Code, e.g., a witness may be impeached by proof of conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude. Sheffield v. Hammond, 41 Ga. App. 76, 151 S.E. 663 (1930); Johnson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 406, 240 S.E.2d 919 (1977).

Legal method of impeachment. — While there are other legal ways of impeaching a witness, such as proof by competent evidence of a crime involving moral turpitude, yet even competent proof of an offense not involving moral turpitude, or incompetent proof of an offense involving moral turpitude, such as a mere indictment, a charge, an arrest, or a trial and acquittal, are not legal methods of impeachment. Whitley v. State, 188 Ga. 177, 3 S.E.2d 588 (1939); Smallwood v. State, 95 Ga. App. 766, 98 S.E.2d 602 (1957). But see, Taylor v. State, 136 Ga. App. 31, 330 S.E.2d 49 (1975) (overruled in concurring opinion by only two judges).

Moral turpitude required. — Witness cannot be impeached by introducing a record of the witness's conviction for a misdemeanor, it not appearing that the offense for which the witness was found guilty was one involving moral turpitude. Andrews v. State, 118 Ga. 1, 43 S.E. 852 (1903); Howard v. State, 144 Ga. 169, 86 S.E. 540 (1915); Williams v. State, 42 Ga. App. 225, 155 S.E. 511 (1930); Groves v. State, 175 Ga. 37, 164 S.E. 822 (1932).

Crimes involving moral turpitude are restricted to the gravest offenses, consisting of felonies, infamous crimes, and those that are malum in se and disclose a depraved mind. Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. West, 155 Ga. App. 391, 271 S.E.2d 36 (1980).

Proof of conviction of crime. — Fact of conviction of a crime of moral turpitude must be shown by record evidence and not by testimony. Johnson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 406, 240 S.E.2d 919 (1977); Allen v. State, 152 Ga. App. 481, 263 S.E.2d 259 (1979).

Insufficient evidence generally. — While a witness may be discredited by proof of general bad character or conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude, it is not competent to discredit the witness by showing that the witness has committed, been arrested for, confined for, or even indicted for such an offense. McCarty v. State, 139 Ga. App. 101, 227 S.E.2d 898 (1976).

Witness's own testimony insufficient. — Witness cannot be discredited even by the witness's own testimony that the witness had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude; it is necessary to introduce an authenticated copy of the record of the court in which the witness was convicted. Howard v. State, 144 Ga. 169, 86 S.E. 540

(1915); McCarty v. State, 139 Ga. App. 101, 227 S.E.2d 898 (1976); Drake v. State, 245 Ga. 798, 267 S.E.2d 237 (1980); Dabney v. State, 154 Ga. App. 355, 268 S.E.2d 408 (1980).

Parol evidence of commission of crime is inadmissible to impeach a witness. Green v. State, 125 Ga. 742, 54 S.E. 724 (1906); Wheeler v. State, 4 Ga. App. 325, 61 S.E. 409 (1908); Hunter v. State, 133 Ga. 78, 65 S.E. 154 (1909).

Proof of indictment insufficient. — Witness's character may be impeached only by introduction of witness's criminal convictions involving moral turpitude, not by showing the witness was indicted. Hall v. State, 241 Ga. 252, 244 S.E.2d 833 (1978).

Proof of confinement insufficient. — It is improper to attempt to discredit a witness by showing that the witness is confined in jail, as one may be in jail accused of a crime and may be in fact not guilty. The law is that conviction impeaches; accusation does not. Johnson v. State, 144 Ga. App. 406, 240 S.E.2d 919 (1977).

Proof of warrant and bond insufficient. — When an accusation and a warrant had been issued against a witness and the witness had been given a bond, this did not afford grounds for the witness's impeachment. Williams v. State, 42 Ga. App. 225, 155 S.E. 511 (1930).

Documents showing guilty plea and sentencing of defendant in federal district court for making false and fictitious statements to F.B.I. agent, an offense involving moral turpitude, were relevant and competent for the purpose of impeaching defendant. Mercer v. Foster, 210 Ga. 546, 81 S.E.2d 458 (1954).

No moral turpitude was involved in the convictions in the following cases: Andrews v. State, 118 Ga. 1, 43 S.E. 852 (1903) (fighting); Wheeler v. State, 4 Ga. App. 325, 61 S.E. 409 (1908) (selling liquor); Edenfield v. State, 14 Ga. App. 401, 81 S.E. 253 (1914) (selling liquor); Curry v. State, 17 Ga. App. 312, 86 S.E. 742 (1915) (fighting); Bivins v. State, 147 Ga. 229, 93 S.E. 213 (1917) (carrying a concealed weapon); Williams v. State, 42 Ga. App. 225, 155 S.E. 511 (1930) (selling liquor).

Conviction of larceny. — Record of conviction of a witness of larceny is admissible in evidence to impeach the witness. McGruder v. State, 71 Ga. 864 (1883); Coleman v. State,

Impeachment by Conviction of Crime (Cont'd)

94 Ga. 85, 21 S.E. 124 (1894).

Evidence not considered. — Evidence that workers' compensation claimant had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude did not have the effect of impeaching the claimant as a witness in view of the finding by the board that this evidence was not considered by it. Whitener v. Baly Tire Co., 98 Ga. App. 257, 105 S.E.2d 775 (1958).

General Consideration

Weight of evidence and credibility of witnesses are matters for jury. — See Sindy v. State, 120 Ga. 202, 47 S.E. 554 (1904); Trammell v. State, 183 Ga. 711, 189 S.E. 529 (1937); A.A.A. Hwy. Express, Inc. v. Hagler, 72 Ga. App. 519, 34 S.E.2d 462 (1945); Davis v. State, 424 Ga. 901, 252 S.E.2d 443 (1979); Johnson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 405, 258 S.E.2d 22 (1979); Parks v. State, 150 Ga. App. 446, 258 S.E.2d 66 (1979); A & N Inv., Inc. v. Cronin, 151 Ga. App. 738, 261 S.E.2d 469 (1979); Armour v. State, 154 Ga. App. 740, 270 S.E.2d 22 (1980); Harris v. State, 155 Ga. App. 530, 271 S.E.2d 668 (1980); Price v. State, 159 Ga. App. 662, 284 S.E.2d 676

Determination of a witness's credibility is within the discretion of the trier of fact. Burnette v. State, 165 Ga. App. 768, 302 S.E.2d 621 (1983).

Any question as to credibility of a witness is for the jury to resolve. Murff v. State, 165 Ga. App. 808, 302 S.E.2d 697, rev'd on other grounds, 251 Ga. 478, 306 S.E.2d 267 (1983).

In jury trial, jurors are sole judges of credibility of witnesses. Godfrey v. State, 187 Ga. App. 319, 370 S.E.2d 183 (1988); Ward v.

State, 205 Ga. App. 584, 423 S.E.2d 288 (1992).

Testimony that victim was "genuine". — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant defendant's motion for a mistrial after a witness improperly testified that a victim was "genuine" as defendant failed to renew the motion for a mistrial following a curative instruction; further, the curative instruction was the proper corrective measure as the credibility of the witness was a matter for the jury. Cook v. State, 276 Ga. App. 803, 625 S.E.2d 83 (2005).

Resolution of conflicting theories drawn from evidence is for jury and it is not the court's province to reweigh the evidence and the jury's inferences drawn from the evidence. Robinson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 759, 417 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 417 S.E.2d 404 (1992).

Defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal in trial for theft by taking a motor vehicle was properly denied since the jury properly assessed the evidence, although conflicting, and found each fact necessary to make out the state's case. Sherls v. State, 272 Ga. App. 152, 611 S.E.2d 780 (2005).

Trial without jury. — When the judge tried the accused without intervention of a jury, the credibility of the witnesses was for the judge's determination. Boynton v. State, 11 Ga. App. 268, 75 S.E. 9 (1912).

Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80, in a trial, the credibility of the witnesses is a matter which should be resolved by the jurors who have heard all of the relevant evidence, and not by the text of the pretrial order. Ballard v. Meyers, 275 Ga. 819, 572 S.E.2d 572 (2002).

Alibi evidence need not be accepted. — When defendant's alibi witnesses were unimpeached, the trial court, sitting as trier of fact, was not bound to accept the evidence introduced of alibi as true, since the trier of fact determines the credibility of the witnesses and weight to be given their testimony. Gatling v. State, 203 Ga. App. 407, 416 S.E.2d 877 (1992).

Value of testimony. — It was for the jury to determine whether the testimony of a witness was so vague, indefinite, and uncertain as to be worthless, or whether the testimony, though contradictory in some respects, possessed some degree of probative value. Sappington v. Bell, 115 Ga. 856, 42 S.E. 233 (1902); O'Brien v. Ellarbee, 14 Ga. App. 333, 80 S.E. 864 (1914); Sherman v. Stephens, 30 Ga. App. 509, 118 S.E. 567 (1923); Reaves v. Columbus Elec. & Power Co., 32 Ga. App. 140, 122 S.E. 824, cert. denied, 32 Ga. App. 807 (1924).

In a negligence action seeking compensatory damages for a disabling injury, because the injured plaintiff's use of morphine at the time of trial raised a credibility issue, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in overruling plaintiff's relevance objection. Imm v. Chaney, 287 Ga. App. 606, 651 S.E.2d 855 (2007).

Only limitation to power of jury to credit witnesses is when the facts testified to are inherently at variance with the common knowledge and experience of mankind. Haywood v. State, 114 Ga. 111, 39 S.E. 948 (1901); Alexander v. State, 1 Ga. App. 289, 57 S.E. 996 (1907); Reed v. State, 130 Ga. 52, 60 S.E. 191 (1908); Watson v. State, 13 Ga. App. 181, 78 S.E. 1014 (1913).

Contradictory statements as affecting credibility. — When witness testified as to defendant's reputation in community, any subsequent contradiction simply went to the witness's credibility with the jury, and it was error for the court to strike such witness's testimony in toto. Hudson v. State, 163 Ga. App. 845, 295 S.E.2d 123 (1982).

Reconciliation of conflicts. — When there are conflicts in the testimony of witnesses, it is the duty of the jury to reconcile these conflicts if possible so as to make every witness speak the truth. However, if this cannot be done, it then becomes the duty of the jury to believe those whom the jury thinks most entitled to credit. Cotton v. State, 81 Ga. App. 753, 59 S.E.2d 741 (1950).

It is the function of the jury to determine the credibility of the witnesses, and the jurors must weigh and resolve any conflicts presented by the evidence; the appellate court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the jury's verdict. King v. State, 157 Ga. App. 733, 278 S.E.2d 491 (1981).

Jury may not arbitrarily disregard testimony. — Rule that the uncontradicted testimony of unimpeached witnesses cannot be arbitrarily disregarded does not mean that the jurors are obliged to believe testimony which the jurors in fact discredit, but means that the jurors are to consider the testimony of every witness who is sworn, and not arbitrarily disregard the testimony of any witness. Fincher v. Harlow, 56 Ga. App. 578, 193 S.E. 452 (1937); Lankford v. Holton, 187 Ga. 94, 200 S.E. 243 (1938), later appeal, 195 Ga. 317, 24 S.E.2d 292 (1943); Stow v. Hargrove, 203 Ga. 735, 48 S.E.2d 454 (1948); Wilson v. Professional Ins. Corp., 151 Ga. App. 712, 261 S.E.2d 450 (1979).

Rejection of part of evidence. — Jury in arriving at a conclusion upon disputed issues of fact may believe part of the testimony of a witness or witnesses, and reject another part. Brown v. O'Neal, 59 Ga. App. 560, 1 S.E.2d 601 (1939); Lawhon v. Henshaw, 63 Ga. App. 683, 11 S.E.2d 846 (1940); Johnson v. State, 69 Ga. App. 663, 26 S.E.2d 482 (1943); Johnson v. Woodward Lumber Co., 76 Ga. App. 152, 45 S.E.2d 294 (1947); Nashville, C. & St. L. Ry. v. Ham, 78 Ga. App. 403, 50 S.E.2d 831 (1948); Davis v. State, 205 Ga. 248, 53 S.E.2d 454 (1949); Frazier v. State, 152 Ga. App. 743, 264 S.E.2d 35 (1979).

Jury may disbelieve witness. — If a witness is impeached or discredited in some legal manner, a jury, or a trial judge in a nonjury case, may disbelieve the witness altogether. Mustang Transp., Inc. v. W.W. Lowe & Sons, 123 Ga. App. 350, 181 S.E.2d 85 (1971).

Sufficient evidence supported the defendant's convictions of false statements under O.C.G.A. § 16-10-20 and conspiracy to commit theft by shoplifting under O.C.G.A. § 16-4-8, as the co-conspirator testified as to the defendant's request for specific items to be stolen, the special agent testified about the defendant's false statements, and the defendant gave a statement admitting to the conduct; the testimony of the co-conspirator and of the special agent established the elements of the offenses, and the jury, under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80, had the right to disbelieve the defendant's testimony to the contrary. Acey v. State, 281 Ga. App. 197, 635 S.E.2d 814 (2006).

Single witness may be believed by jury in preference to any number of witnesses whose testimony may contradict the single witness. Pyles v. State, 3 Ga. App. 29, 59 S.E. 193 (1907); Jolly v. State, 5 Ga. App. 454, 63 S.E. 520 (1909); Gordon v. State, 7 Ga. App. 691, 67 S.E. 893 (1910); Lambert v. State, 11

Ga. App. 764, 76 S.E. 73 (1912); Cook v. State, 13 Ga. App. 308, 79 S.E. 87 (1913).

Rejection of defendant's explanation. — When defendant's statements are not consistent with and do not explain other direct and circumstantial evidence, defendant's explanation may be rejected by the trier of fact. Green v. State, 155 Ga. App. 795, 272 S.E.2d 761 (1980).

Testimony and circumstances. — Jury is to look to the testimony itself, as well as to the circumstances attending the testimony's introduction, in determining the testimony's probative value. Smith v. State, 124 Ga. 213, 52 S.E. 329 (1905).

Demeanor of witness. — Trier of facts in determining the worthiness of belief of a witness may take into consideration the witness's appearance, the witness's demeanor, or the witness's manner upon the stand. Mustang Transp., Inc. v. W.W. Lowe & Sons, 123 Ga. App. 350, 181 S.E.2d 85 (1971).

Interest of witness in the result of the suit may always be considered in passing upon the witness's credibility; and, if there are circumstances inconsistent with the truth of the witness's testimony, the jury is not obliged to believe the witness, even though the witness is not contradicted by any other witness. Fincher v. Harlow, 56 Ga. App. 578, 193 S.E. 452 (1937); Lankford v. Holton, 187 Ga. 94, 200 S.E. 243 (1938), later appeal, 195 Ga. 317, 24 S.E.2d 292 (1943); Smith v. Davis, 203 Ga. 175, 45 S.E.2d 609 (1947); Dunagan v. Elder, 154 Ga. App. 728, 270 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

Implications inconsistent with testimony may arise from proven facts; and in still other ways the question of what is the truth may remain as an issue of fact despite uncontradicted evidence in regard thereto. Short & Paulk Supply Co. v. Dykes, 120 Ga. App. 639, 171 S.E.2d 782 (1969).

Allowance of impeachment of witness by prior inconsistent statement which is indirectly material to the issue in the case is not error. Hudson Properties, Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 168 Ga. App. 331, 308 S.E.2d 708 (1983).

Statement not admissible as prior inconsistent statement. — Doctor's conversation in the hospital with a patient was not admissible as a prior consistent statement to show that the patient had pointed out a lesion to the doctor as the excluded testimony was not as specific to that issue as the patient claimed; the doctor testified that the patient felt that the doctor had delayed the treatment and that the doctor told the patient that they should concentrate on the patient getting well and that the doctor would discuss it with the patient later in the office. Davis v. Reid, 272 Ga. App. 312, 612 S.E.2d 112 (2005).

Excluded testimony of two witnesses that a patient told the witnesses that the patient had pointed out a bump on the patient's breast to a doctor and that the doctor told the patient not to be concerned about it was not admissible as prior consistent statements as the doctor did not place the patient's veracity at issue; the fact that the doctor's testimony was at odds with the patient's testimony did not open the door to the admission of hearsay evidence and, further, the witnesses were allowed to testify that the patient showed the witnesses the lesion and that after the check-up, the patient was relieved Davis v. Reid, 272 Ga. App. 312, 612 S.E.2d 112 (2005).

Interference with verdict by court. — Only in very extreme cases ought the court to interfere with a verdict turning on the credit to be given to the witnesses testifying on the trial. Wright v. State, 34 Ga. 110 (1864); Whitten v. State, 47 Ga. 297 (1872); Crawford v. State, 50 Ga. 249 (1873); May v. State, 94 Ga. 76, 20 S.E. 251 (1894).

Credibility as basis for denial of summary judgment. — When, on motion for summary judgment, the credibility of a witness or witnesses upon whose testimony the grant of the summary judgment depends is at issue in the case, neither the trial court nor the Court of Appeals will resolve the matter or is concerned with the credibility but will leave this matter to the jury, rather than grant summary judgment. Raven v. Dodd's Auto Sales & Serv., Inc., 117 Ga. App. 416, 160 S.E.2d 633 (1968).

Former Civil Code 1910, § 5884 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85) was not an abridgment of the absolute right of the jury to determine the credibility of witnesses. Brown v. State, 10 Ga. App. 50, 72 S.E. 537 (1911).

State's repeated questions to the state's witness specifically pertaining to defendant's credibility were improper under O.C.G.A.

§ 24-9-80. Griffin v. State, 267 Ga. 586, 481 S.E.2d 223 (1997).

Improper bolstering cured by instruction. — Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a mistrial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80 during trial on a charge of child molestation as the trial court took remedial measures to cure testimony which tended to bolster the victim's credibility by giving a general instruction concerning improper bolstering of another witness's credibility. Howell v. State, 278 Ga. App. 634, 629 S.E.2d 398 (2006).

Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to defendant's trial and conviction for child molestation based on trial counsel's failure to object to certain testimony by the investigating officer that commented upon the victim's credibility as, even though trial counsel did not object, the trial court gave a curative instruction that specifically informed the jury to disregard the officer's testimony commenting on the victim's credibility, which was adequate to correct any harm. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. App. 841, 660 S.E.2d 740 (2008).

Improper bolstering was prejudicial error. — It was improper bolstering of an officer's credibility for a special agent to testify that based upon the agent's experience and training, the agent thought that the officer had acted appropriately during a traffic stop of the defendant; special agent had not witnessed the stop, and agent's testimony was not admissible as an expert opinion on an issue beyond the ken of the average layperson, and because credibility of the officer and of defendant was the pivotal issue and there was no other disinterested testimony and no ameliorative instructions, error was not harmless. Bly v. State, 283 Ga. 453, 660 S.E.2d 713 (2008).

Testimony by a defendant's sister, who was also a second victim's aunt, that the sister knew that the second victim was telling the truth when the second victim told the sister that the defendant wanted to have sex with the second victim should have been objected to as the credibility of the second victim was a matter for the jury's determination under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80; because the defendant denied touching the second victim and there was no evidence of the crime other than the second victim's testimony, defense counsel's error was prejudicial, and a conviction for child molestation against the second victim had to be reversed. Walker v. State, 296 Ga. App. 531, 675 S.E.2d 270 (2009).

No improper bolstering of other witness's testimony. — Testimony of the treating psychologist of a child sexual abuse victim that the results of the psychologist's testing were "consistent" with the victim's statements that the victim had been sexually abused was not improper bolstering, and a caseworker who testified was not expressing an opinion about the victim's truthfulness when the caseworker testified that the caseworker's own investigation was closed with a determination of substantiated sexual abuse since the caseworker was testifying as to why the caseworker's investigation was closed and why the caseworker did not continue to follow the family; the caseworker's statement that the victim seemed very truthful and honest violated O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80, but since the trial court immediately gave a curative instruction, and it was highly probable that this testimony did not contribute to the verdict, this did not require a reversal. Williams v. State, 266 Ga. App. 578, 597 S.E.2d 621 (2004).

Defendant's argument that defense counsel was ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to object to the testimony of two of the state's witnesses that bolstered the credibility of the victims in violation of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80, failed; one of the allegedly bolstering statements was stricken and the jury was instructed to disregard that statement, one of the statements did not express an opinion about whether the victims were telling the truth because that statement related to the officer's investigation and the implications of a probable cause finding, and the statement by the expert that the expert's findings were consistent with the sexual abuse allegations was a permissible comment on medical or scientific tests. Zepp v. State, 276 Ga. App. 466, 623 S.E.2d 569 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for terroristic threats, an officer's testimony that indicated the victim's statements were consistent with the officer's observations of the victim's injuries and the disarray in a hotel room where the alleged incident occurred did not constitute improper bolstering or a comment on the victim's veracity. Mullins v. State, 298 Ga. App. 368, 680 S.E.2d 474 (2009).

Failure to charge statute is not error in the absence of a timely written request. Fraser v. State, 52 Ga. App. 92, 182 S.E. 418 (1935); Benton v. State, 185 Ga. 254, 194 S.E. 166 (1937); Brooks v. State, 63 Ga. App. 575, 11 S.E.2d 688 (1940); Georgia Power Co. v. Burger, 63 Ga. App. 784, 11 S.E.2d 834 (1940); Tiller v. State, 196 Ga. 508, 26 S.E.2d 883 (1943); Grier v. State, 196 Ga. 515, 26 S.E.2d 889 (1943); Hodnett v. State, 197 Ga. 730, 30 S.E.2d 606 (1944); Shewmade v. State, 71 Ga. App. 349, 30 S.E.2d 816 (1944); Guy v. State, 72 Ga. App. 395, 33 S.E.2d 853 (1945); Summerour v. State, 85 Ga. App. 94, 68 S.E.2d 158 (1951); Wheeler v. State, 220 Ga. 535, 140 S.E.2d 258 (1965); Tanner v. State, 228 Ga. 829, 188 S.E.2d 512 (1972); Bentley v. State, 131 Ga. App. 425, 205 S.E.2d 904 (1974) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80).

Charge substantially in language of statute, in the absence of any request for a more specific charge on the subject, was sufficient. Central of Ga. Ry. v. McGuire, 10 Ga. App. 483, 73 S.E. 702 (1912); Chandler v. Alabama Power Co., 104 Ga. App. 521, 122 S.E.2d 317 (1961), rev'd on other grounds, 217 Ga. 550, 123 S.E.2d 767 (1962) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80).

Instructions proper in the following cases: Hall v. Burpee, 176 Ga. 270, 168 S.E. 39 (1933); Coates v. State, 192 Ga. 130, 15 S.E.2d 240 (1941); Crosby v. State, 92 Ga. App. 335, 88 S.E.2d 523 (1955); Ward v. State, 239 Ga. 205, 236 S.E.2d 365 (1977).

Trial court's instruction that "you must not base your verdict on inferences or speculation or anything that is not supported by the evidence" was a correct statement of the law and was not plain error on the basis of a claim that such instruction interfered with the jury's function as sole arbiter of the credibility of witnesses. Caldwell v. State, 247 Ga. App. 191, 542 S.E.2d 564 (2000).

Use of jury instruction that the jury could consider the level of certainty shown by a witness about identification of the defendant is error. — Trial court erred in charging the jury that one of the factors to be considered when evaluating the reliability of an eyewitness identification is "the level of certainty shown by the witness about her identification." Brodes v. State, 279 Ga. 435, 614 S.E.2d 766 (2005); Brown v. State, 277 Ga. App. 396, 626 S.E.2d 596 (2006).

Civil Cases

Credibility when issue is attorney's fees.

— When plaintiff, a former client of defendant attorney, appealed the grant of summary judgment to defendant in defendant's suit over unpaid attorney fees, and there was a dispute that defendant and plaintiff had agreed that defendant was to spend as much time as reasonable to produce a second brief, that there was no cap on the fee, and that $5,000 was reasonable, the matter of the parties' credibility was peculiarly for the jury. Brygider v. Atkinson, 192 Ga. App. 424, 385 S.E.2d 95 (1989).

Value of condemned property. — When a lessee of condemned property testified as to the lessee's business' diminished value, based on loss of customers and other factors, as a result of relocating due to the condemnation, whether there was adequate supporting data for one's conclusion was a jury question. Fulton County v. Dangerfield, 195 Ga. App. 208, 393 S.E.2d 285, rev'd on other grounds, 260 Ga. 665, 398 S.E.2d 14 (1990).

Testimony in a lease agreement. — Verdict by jury for past rent owed to a landlord by a tenant who defaulted in the tenant's monthly lease payments, and as to the jury's finding that the tenant had failed to exercise an option to purchase in the lease, was supported by sufficient evidence since there was a showing by the landlord of a lease agreement and supporting testimony by the landlord; an alternate, allegedly forged lease submitted by the tenant, together with the tenant's testimony, were all issues that went to the weight and credibility and were properly resolved by the jury. Burnett v. Reeves, 258 Ga. App. 846, 575 S.E.2d 747 (2002).

Expert witness. — In an action to recover for disability, the jurors were not bound to credit an expert medical opinion since the rule prescribing the arbitrary rejection of testimony applies, by definition, to direct and positive testimony, as distinguished from circumstantial, opinion, or actually negative testimony. Wilson v. Professional Ins. Corp., 151 Ga. App. 712, 261 S.E.2d 450 (1979).

Judge's favorable comments in divorce case about witness required new trial. — Judgment in a divorce case was reversed and a new trial was ordered after the trial court, in comments made to the jury following the testimony of a witness, stated the court's high opinion of the witness and bolstered the witness's credibility, influencing an issue that was solely for the jury to determine. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 277 Ga. 729, 594 S.E.2d 653 (2004).

Criminal CasesCredibility of victim in rape prosecution.

— In a rape trial, the trial court properly sustained an objection to a question asked of the victim's examining physician which called for a comment on the credibility of the victim. Lamb v. State, 196 Ga. App. 665, 396 S.E.2d 497 (1990).

Testimony of rape victim. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, and the defendant's rape conviction was upheld on appeal, given the victim's testimony at trial that the defendant's sexual organ penetrated hers after telling the defendant to stop was sufficient in and of itself, and no evidence was presented that directly contradicted this statement; hence, the jury had the right to accept the victim's testimony depicting non-consensual, forcible intercourse, as satisfying the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1. Scott v. State, 281 Ga. App. 106, 635 S.E.2d 582 (2006).

Witnesses' credibility is for jury. — Evidence of defendant's conduct in confronting victim, that defendant stood over the victim just after the victim had been shot and announcing the victim had been warned about what would happen, and that defendant calmly walked away after that was sufficient to find defendant guilty of murder and aggravated assault even though a codefendant actually shot the victim even though defendant claimed that certain witness's testimony was unreliable since witness's credibility was an issue for the jury's determination. Dillingham v. State, 275 Ga. 665, 571 S.E.2d 777 (2002).

Misdemeanor theft conviction. — Evidence was legally sufficient to support defendant's convictions for misdemeanor theft in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-8-2 and for practicing dentistry without a license in violation of an earlier version of O.C.G.A. § 43-11-50, after defendant held oneself out as a dentist to numerous individuals, obtained loans for business ventures involving a dentistry practice, obtained services for the dentist practice which the dentist did not pay for, and performed services on patients; the jury resolved the credibility and weight of the evidence issues pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80. McMillan v. State, 266 Ga. App. 729, 598 S.E.2d 17 (2004), overruled in part by Gidwell v. State, 279 Ga. App. 114, 630 S.E.2d 621 (2006).

Criminal convictions supported. — On appeal from the defendant's aggravated assault, possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime, and first-degree criminal damage to property convictions, the court held that the testimony provided by two of the victims identifying the defendant as one of the perpetrators was sufficient to uphold the conviction as: (1) the testimony of a single witness was generally sufficient to establish a fact; and (2) under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80, the credibility of a witness was a matter to be determined by the jury under proper instructions from the court. Reid v. State, 281 Ga. App. 640, 637 S.E.2d 62 (2006).

Credibility of witnesses at a probation revocation hearing is for the court. Caldwell v. State, 166 Ga. App. 657, 305 S.E.2d 407 (1983).

When self-defense is claimed. — Consideration of the uncorroborated testimony of the victim, non-recovery of the weapon used in an assault, and the defendant's claim of self-defense go only to the weight and credibility of the witnesses' testimony, not to the sufficiency of the evidence, and are solely within the domain of the jury. Landers v. State, 236 Ga. App. 368, 511 S.E.2d 889 (1999).

Self-defense a jury question. — Witness credibility is to be determined by the jury, as is the question of self-defense when there is conflicting evidence on the issue. Holmes v. State, 273 Ga. 644, 543 S.E.2d 688 (2001).

Instruction in criminal case. — Charge to the jury on the question of credibility of witnesses is a correct abstract principle of law applicable even in a criminal case. Blackston v. State, 209 Ga. 160, 71 S.E.2d 221 (1952).

Jury can disregard confession of another if evidence shows defendant's guilt. — When the evidence was sufficient to find the defendant guilty of armed robbery beyond a reasonable doubt, the confession of the defendant's brother to the commission of the crime was properly disregarded by the jury in the jury's capacity as fact-finder. Burkes v. State, 177 Ga. App. 90, 338 S.E.2d 522 (1985).

Police officers testimony about commission of offense. — Police officer's testimony that the officer observed the defendant run a stop sign that was "clearly visible" to oncoming traffic was sufficient to authorize the trial court's finding that the defendant was guilty, beyond a reasonable doubt, of disregarding a stop sign. Evans v. State, 235 Ga. App. 877, 510 S.E.2d 619 (1999).

Testimony of officer regarding belief of victim. — Permitting the state to introduce a police officer's testimony bolstering a child molestation victim's credibility was reversible error since the truthfulness or credibility of the victim was not beyond the ken of the jurors. Guest v. State, 201 Ga. App. 506, 411 S.E.2d 364 (1991).

Trial court erred in allowing an officer to testify regarding whether the officer believed or disbelieved what the victim said during an interview as the truthfulness of the victim's testimony was a question for the jury; since there was no physical evidence presented, the victim's testimony was the only evidence against defendant, and any bolstering of that testimony was harmful to defendant. Orr v. State, 262 Ga. App. 125, 584 S.E.2d 720 (2003).

Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV due to defense counsel's failure to request a mistrial when a police officer testified that the officer believed that the victim in the child molestation case was telling the truth; while the witness was prohibited under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80 from bolstering the victim's testimony, it was not clear that the trial court would have granted a mistrial if the defendant requested one as the defense counsel objected to the statement and the trial court issued a curative instruction. Goldstein v. State, 283 Ga. App. 1, 640 S.E.2d 599 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 338 (April 24, 2007).

In rape prosecution, defendant cannot ask victim's mother whether she believed daughter's statements about the offense or could tell her daughter was lying from her body language. Nichols v. State, 221 Ga. App. 600, 473 S.E.2d 491 (1996).

In a prosecution for statutory rape, the trial court properly prohibited the defendant from presenting evidence that the victim's family and friends did not believe her statements about the sexual assault by the defendant since credibility of a witness is a matter solely within the province of the jury. Patterson v. State, 233 Ga. App. 776, 505 S.E.2d 518 (1998).

Expert witness. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80 was not violated by the testimony of a pediatrician, who gave an opinion that the results of an examination of a child victim were consistent with the victim's claim of child molestation. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. App. 570, 631 S.E.2d 772 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion in limine to exclude a nurse's testimony, stating that the victim's normal physical examination was consistent with claims of molestation, as the nurse simply testified that the victim's physical examination results were consistent with the allegations, and as such was a permissible expression of the expert's opinion. Noe v. State, 287 Ga. App. 728, 652 S.E.2d 620 (2007).

Value of stolen property for purposes of restitution. — When an owner of stolen property is attempting to establish value for purposes of restitution by the thief, if there is any doubt as to whether the witness has shown a sufficient basis or foundation for the witness's opinion as to value, there are particularly sound reasons of justice why the evidence ought to be admitted, and the evidence's weight and credibility, and indeed the question of whether the witness has given sufficient foundation, should be left to the trier of fact. Maddox v. State, 157 Ga. App. 696, 278 S.E.2d 480 (1981).

Children

Testimony from child molestation victim. — Although defendant testified that he had not molested the victim, the victim, his 15-year-old stepdaughter, testified that defendant had been molesting her since she was three-years-old, and other evidence indicated that the victim told several witnesses it was her half-brother who impregnated her, such conflicts in the evidence only raised issues of credibility, which were for the jury to decide, and the jury's verdict finding defendant guilty of two counts of molestation of the victim was upheld since sufficient evidence supported the convictions. Dowd v. State, 261 Ga. App. 306, 582 S.E.2d 235 (2003).

Credibility of children. — Although after a preliminary examination the court may hold a child competent to testify, the credibility of the witness is for the jury; and in determining whether or not the jury will credit the testimony of such witness, the age of the witness and the witness's understanding or lack of understanding as to the nature of an oath, as developed on the examination before the jury, are matters for the consideration of the jury. Young v. State, 122 Ga. 725, 50 S.E. 996 (1905); Frasier v. State, 143 Ga. 322, 85 S.E. 124 (1915).

In a prosecution for child molestation and aggravated rape, the trial court committed reversible error in allowing the victim's grandmother to testify that she had never had "any problems with the victim's telling stories." Lagana v. State, 219 Ga. App. 220, 464 S.E.2d 625 (1995).

In a prosecution for child molestation, the trial court did not err in refusing defendant's requested instruction as follows: "The fact that one or more of the witnesses in this case is a child should not ... bring any more weight to her or their testimony." Patterson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 166, 473 S.E.2d 255 (1996).

Testimony of an expert regarding the expert's conclusion that child victims' allegations of sexual abuse were the result of projection and payback was properly excluded. Duncan v. State, 232 Ga. App. 157, 500 S.E.2d 603 (1998).

Trial court erred by allowing a state's expert to testify, over the defendant's objection, that the expert did not believe the victim made up the allegations against the defendant, as such was an ultimate issue of fact, and nothing suggested that the determination of the victim's credibility was beyond the ken of the jurors; thus, to the extent that Smith v. State, 257 Ga. App. 88, 570 SE2d 400 (2002), allowed an expert to give an opinion on a witness's credibility or to express an opinion on the ultimate issue of defendant's guilt to rehabilitate the credibility of a witness whose veracity was attacked, it was overruled. Patterson v. State, 278 Ga. App. 168, 628 S.E.2d 618 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in admitting a videotaped forensic interview of a child molestation victim because the victim testified at trial and was subject to cross-examination about the circumstances surrounding the videotaped interview and statements the victim made during the interview; accordingly, it was the jury's responsibility, as the trier of fact, to resolve any inconsistencies in the victim's statements and judge the victim's credibility. Lynn v. State, 300 Ga. App. 170, 684 S.E.2d 325 (2009).

Expert witness on ability of child to distinguish truth. — An expert witness may testify generally about the ability of children of a certain age to distinguish truth from reality. The witness may also express an opinion as to whether medical or other objective evidence in the case is consistent with the victim's story. However, an expert witness may not put the expert's stamp of believability on the victim's story. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256 (1988); Roberson v. State, 214 Ga. App. 288, 447 S.E.2d 640 (1994); Buice v. State, 239 Ga. App. 52, 520 S.E.2d 258 (1999), aff'd, 528 S.E.2d 788 (2000); Alford v. State, 243 Ga. App. 212, 534 S.E.2d 81 (2000).

Credibility of recanting child witness. — Witnesses testified pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 that the defendant's stepchild, then 12, told the witnesses about being repeatedly raped and molested by the defendant. That the stepchild recanted these statements at trial did not render the hearsay inadmissible under § 24-3-16, and as the stepchild's credibility was for the jury to decide, the evidence was sufficient to support the defendant's convictions for rape, incest, and child molestation. Harvey v. State, 295 Ga. App. 458, 671 S.E.2d 924 (2009).

Child's inconsistent testimony. — Fact that a child's testimony may have been inconsistent does not render child incompetent to testify, but goes to the child's credibility as a witness. Hayes v. State, 152 Ga. App. 858, 264 S.E.2d 307 (1980).

There was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's decision to allow a twenty-minute conference between the prosecutor and the defendant's eight-year-old son, especially given the tender age of the victim, the nature of the charges, and the child's admitted fear of the defendant. To the extent that the witness altered the witness's testimony after the recess, the credibility of the witness's testimony was for the jury to determine. Carter v. State, 195 Ga. App. 489, 393 S.E.2d 746 (1990).

Raising issue of victim's veracity. — Because it was necessary for trial counsel, as part of the trial strategy, to raise the issue of the minor sexual abuse victim's veracity, the trial counsel could not subsequently object to the victim's prior consistent statement, which was entered to verify the victim's testimony. Mealor v. State, 266 Ga. App. 274, 596 S.E.2d 632 (2004).

No improper bolstering of other witness's testimony. — In defendant's appeal from a verdict convicting defendant of voluntary manslaughter, the court rejected defendant's claim that a detective's testimony that the detective received no statements inconsistent with the testimony of other trial witnesses did not improperly bolster the opinion of another witness in violation of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-80. Lester v. State, 262 Ga. App. 707, 586 S.E.2d 408 (2003).

Directed verdict of acquittal unwarranted as: (1) the credibility of the child victim and any the conflicts in the trial testimony were matters solely within the province of the jury to decide; (2) physical findings were not required to corroborate the charges of child molestation, aggravated sexual battery, and aggravated child molestation; and (3) the victim's testimony alone was sufficient to authorize the jury to find the defendant guilty of the crimes charged under the standard of Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 307 (1979). Hutchinson v. State, 287 Ga. App. 415, 651 S.E.2d 523 (2007).

Appeals

Test on appeal. — On appeal, the appellate tribunal does not determine the credibility of witnesses or the preponderance of the evidence, but rather utilizes the "any evidence test," which is not available to the trier of facts in deciding disputed factual issues. Crawley v. Marta, 147 Ga. App. 293, 248 S.E.2d 555 (1978).

Acceptance by appellate court. — Unless it appears from the testimony itself that the fact testified to is a physical impossibility, contrary to known physical laws, or is incredible, impossible, or inherently improbable, the appellate court must accept its veracity as the jury has done. Bell v. State, 52 Ga. App. 249, 183 S.E. 93 (1935); Hayslip v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 72 Ga. App. 509, 34 S.E.2d 319 (1945).

EXAMINATION OF OWN WITNESS

General Consideration

Neither the arrest nor the indictment of a witness is impeaching, since, until proof of conviction, the witness is protected by the legal presumption of innocence. Hood v. State, 179 Ga. App. 387, 346 S.E.2d 867 (1986).

Allowing witness not within purview of statute to be called for purposes of cross-examination is harmful error. Mullis v. Chaika, 118 Ga. App. 11, 162 S.E.2d 448 (1968); Jackson v. State, 124 Ga. App. 488, 184 S.E.2d 185 (1971) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81).

Failure to charge statute is not error in absence of a timely written request. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

264 Ga. App. 456, 590 S.E.2d 807 (2003).

Impeachment of Own Witness1. In General

Statute prohibits a party from impeaching the party's own witness. — See Ellenburg v. State, 239 Ga. 309, 236 S.E.2d 650 (1977).

Even if a trial court erred by allowing the state to impeach the state's own witness with a prior statement when the witness could not vouch for the statement's accuracy pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81, no harm resulted due to the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt. Coleman v. State, 278 Ga. 486, 604 S.E.2d 151 (2004).

Broad construction. — Right to impeach one's own witness is broadly construed. Canady v. State, 147 Ga. App. 640, 249 S.E.2d 690 (1978); Robinson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 642, 258 S.E.2d 294 (1979).

Strict construction. — Party may be "misled" but not "entrapped," since this statute, which is in derogation of the common law and must be construed strictly, uses the word "entrapped" and not "misled." Jeens v. Wrightsville & T.R.R., 144 Ga. 48, 85 S.E. 1055 (1915); Jenkins v. State, 73 Ga. App. 515, 37 S.E.2d 230 (1946) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81).

Applicability to state. — Statute applies to the state as well as to the defendant. Dixon v. State, 86 Ga. 754, 13 S.E. 87 (1891) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81).

Treatment as hostile witness. — Trial court did not err in declaring that defendant's cousin, who had earlier pled guilty to the theft for which defendant was on trial, was a hostile witness and in allowing the state to ask the cousin leading questions because the trial court had great latitude to allow the state to treat a person as a hostile witness and propound leading questions, and allowing it in the present case was proper because the state was not aware that the cousin would change the cousin's testimony at trial from earlier statements the cousin had made about the theft. Wilson v. State, 258 Ga. App. 166, 573 S.E.2d 432 (2002).

Effect of exercising constitutional privilege. — After defendant's counsel pleaded entrapment but when called upon to testify, defendant availed himself under oath of the constitutional privilege of refusing to answer on the ground that to answer might tend to incriminate the defendant, and thereafter counsel attempted to cross-examine the witness as to what this witness told counsel about the circumstances surrounding this matter, the court erred in refusing to allow a thorough and sifting cross-examination of the witness as to the entrapment. Interstate Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Wilmont, 123 Ga. App. 337, 180 S.E.2d 913 (1971).

Entrapment refers to the right of a party to impeach the party's own witness after the party testifies to matters which are contradictory to statements previously made, authorizing a thorough and sifting cross-examination of the party's own witness. Interstate Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Wilmont, 123 Ga. App. 337, 180 S.E.2d 913 (1971).

Function of cross-examination. — When the introduction of earlier out-of-court statements might occasion confusion, it is the function of a thorough and sifting cross-examination to explore the circumstances of each of the witness's pronouncements in the ultimate quest for truth. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

Testimony cannot be withdrawn. — Witness who has delivered testimony hurtful to the party introducing the witness cannot be withdrawn; but if the party has been entrapped by the witness, the law permits the witness's impeachment by the party introducing the witness. Zipperer v. Mayor of Savannah, 128 Ga. 135, 57 S.E. 311 (1907).

Showing contradictions of facts. — Although a party may not impeach the party's own witness, unless entrapped by the party, the party may show that the facts are different from the statement of the witness. Cronan v. Roberts & Co., 65 Ga. 678 (1880); Hollingsworth v. State, 79 Ga. 605, 4 S.E. 560 (1887); McElmurray v. Turner, 86 Ga. 215, 12 S.E. 359 (1890); Christian v. Macon Ry. & Light Co., 120 Ga. 314, 47 S.E. 923 (1904); Moultrie Repair Co. v. Hill, 120 Ga. 730, 48 S.E. 143 (1904); Robert R.Sizer & Co. v. G. T. Melton & Sons, 129 Ga. 143, 58 S.E. 1055 (1907); Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 S.E. 110 (1908); Sessions v. State, 6 Ga. App. 336, 64 S.E. 1101 (1909); Carter & Martin v. Carter, 7 Ga. App. 216, 66 S.E. 630 (1909); Southern Ry. v. Wessinger, 32 Ga. App. 551, 124 S.E. 100, cert. denied, 32 Ga. App. 807 (1924); Lewis v. American Rd. Ins. Co., 119

Ga. App. 507, 167 S.E.2d 729 (1969).

Refusal to respond to questions in discovery proceedings is not tantamount to making a statement or giving testimony contradictory to testimony on trial. Lewis v. American Rd. Ins. Co., 119 Ga. App. 507, 167 S.E.2d 729 (1969).

Putting witness up merely for purpose of discrediting the witness, or merely to lay a foundation for the witness to be contradicted on a material point and thereby rendered unworthy of belief, is reversible error. Eberhart v. State, 121 Ga. App. 663, 175 S.E.2d 73 (1970).

Proof of bad character. — One who knows the general bad character of a witness by reason of previous felony convictions should not be allowed first to impliedly accredit the witness by offering the witness before a jury as worthy of belief, and then, when entrapped by the witness's testimony, prove, in addition to the contradictory statements by which the witness was surprised and deceived, the general bad character which neither surprised nor misled the witness. Kitchens v. Hall, 116 Ga. App. 41, 156 S.E.2d 920 (1967).

Trial court did not err by refusing to allow defendant to impeach defendant's own witness, who had not been declared hostile, by proof of convictions of misdemeanors involving moral turpitude. Paradise v. State, 212 Ga. App. 166, 441 S.E.2d 497 (1994).

Either party may waive the statutory requirements and allow a party to impeach the party's own witness without first having shown the court that the witness had entrapped the party. O'Dell v. State, 120 Ga. 152, 47 S.E. 577 (1904).

Directing witness to time and place of previous testimony. — Witness cannot be impeached by proof of contradictory statement until the witness's attention has been directed to the time, as well as the place, at which the alleged previous contradictory statements are alleged to have been made. Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 S.E. 110 (1908).

Admission for impeachment only. — When impeachment is allowed, the prior inconsistent statement is admitted in evidence for impeachment purposes only. Kemp v. State, 214 Ga. 558, 105 S.E.2d 582 (1958); Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

Impeachment of prior testimony. — Trial court did not err in allowing one of the state's witnesses to testify that another state witness told the witness immediately before the shooting that the witness had seen the defendant get a gun from the car in which the defendant was a passenger that night because the statement was offered and admitted to impeach the other witness's prior testimony that the witness had never witnessed the defendant retrieve anything from the car after the concert. Anderson v. State, 286 Ga. 57, 685 S.E.2d 716 (2009).

Improper admission of inconsistent statement harmless error. — In a divorce proceeding, admission of the testimony of a witness called by a spouse that impeached the testimony of the other spouse's lover, also called by the spouse, would have been proper as prior inconsistent statements under O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-81 and 24-9-83, but the timing of the impeaching testimony before the lover's testimony made the admission improper; there was no harm in the error, however, because the spouse's lover was called as a witness and was questioned about the contradictory statements. Moxley v. Moxley, 281 Ga. 326, 638 S.E.2d 284 (2006).

Deposition admitted for impeachment. — When it appears that the witness was questioned about the depositions while the witness was on the stand, and that the witness testified somewhat at variance from the depositions, it was not an abuse of discretion for the court to allow the depositions in evidence for the purpose of impeachment. Parker & Co. v. Glenn, 90 Ga. App. 500, 83 S.E.2d 263 (1954).

Admission of repudiated statement. — It was not erroneous to admit written statement later repudiated by witness, over the objection made to the state's admission, since the repudiation would tend to impeach the witness. Fincher v. State, 211 Ga. 89, 84 S.E.2d 76 (1954).

When, on direct examination, a witness testified that the witness had lied in a statement the witness gave the police, the trial court did not err in allowing the state to impeach the state's own witness by admitting the witness's prior inconsistent statement as substantive evidence. Willis v. State, 214 Ga. App. 659, 448 S.E.2d 755 (1994).

Statute inapplicable to witness who must explain or deny contradictory statement. —

Impeachment of Own Witness (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

First sentence of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 is applicable to impeachment of witnesses by prior contradictory statements, but since a prior contradictory statement of a witness is admissible as substantive evidence, the first sentence is inapplicable to a witness who must be given an opportunity to explain or deny the prior contradictory statement. Riley v. State, 166 Ga. App. 369, 304 S.E.2d 497 (1983).

Inconsistent statement admissible for impeachment purposes only. — When impeachment of one's own witness is allowed, the prior inconsistent statement is admitted in evidence for impeachment purposes only and not to prove the truth of the prior statement. Arnold v. State, 166 Ga. App. 313, 304 S.E.2d 118 (1983).

Use of prior inconsistent statements. — Prior inconsistent statement of a witness who takes the stand and is subject to cross-examination is admissible as substantive evidence and is not limited in value only to impeachment purposes. Ranger v. State, 249 Ga. 315, 290 S.E.2d 63 (1982); Riley v. State, 166 Ga. App. 369, 304 S.E.2d 497 (1983); Jackson v. Ensley, 168 Ga. App. 822, 310 S.E.2d 707 (1983).

In defendant's trial on a charge that the defendant molested his 13-year-old stepdaughter by touching her "private area" and placing his hands under her shirt, the record did not support defendant's claim that the state called the stepdaughter's mother solely for the purpose of impeaching her, and the trial court properly allowed the state to call two investigators to testify that the mother gave them a statement that was not the same as her testimony at trial. Black v. State, 261 Ga. App. 263, 582 S.E.2d 213 (2003).

Witness's testimony that the witness did not recall details included in a prior statement given to police was inconsistent with the prior statement about those details, and thus, the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 were met; a trial court thus properly allowed the state to impeach the state's own witness who, inter alia, denied having previously identified the defendant as the shooter in a murder incident. Cummings v. State, 280 Ga. 831, 632 S.E.2d 152 (2006).

Defendant as witness for state. — Introduction by state in a criminal prosecution of defendant's statement to police did not make defendant a witness for the state. Wiley v. State, 250 Ga. 343, 296 S.E.2d 714 (1982).

When counsel elicits testimony unfavorable to a client, counsel will not be heard to object to the testimony, no matter how prejudicial the testimony may be, if the testimony is a direct and pertinent response to the question propounded. Rutland v. State, 158 Ga. App. 315, 279 S.E.2d 757 (1981).

2. What Must Be Shown

Statement made to party or attorney. — Party may not impeach party's own witness by proof of a previous contradictory statement, even if the party claims to have been surprised and entrapped, unless the statement was made directly to the party or the party's attorney, or was made to some third person with instruction to communicate it or for the purpose of being communicated to the party or the party's counsel. Jeens v. Wrightsville & T.R.R., 144 Ga. 48, 85 S.E. 1055 (1915); Carter v. State, 17 Ga. App. 244, 86 S.E. 413 (1915); Burns v. State, 20 Ga. App. 77, 92 S.E. 548 (1917); Allen v. State, 71 Ga. App. 517, 31 S.E.2d 107 (1944); Sparks v. State, 209 Ga. 250, 71 S.E.2d 608 (1952).

Statements made to others. — Prior inconsistent statements made by a witness called by the state were not limited to those given to police investigators or prosecuting attorneys. Park v. State, 230 Ga. App. 274, 495 S.E.2d 886 (1998).

Showing of entrapment required. — Prosecutor must show to the court that the prosecutor has been entrapped by the witness by a previous contradictory statement. Jenkins v. State, 73 Ga. App. 515, 37 S.E.2d 230 (1946).

One's own witness may be impeached when one can show the court that one has been entrapped by that witness by a previous contradictory statement. James v. State, 157 Ga. App. 763, 278 S.E.2d 696 (1981).

Party may not impeach party's own witness without a showing of entrapment. Hood v. State, 179 Ga. App. 387, 346 S.E.2d 867 (1986).

Impeachment error absent entrapment. — Admittance of a certified copy of a witness's prior felony conviction was harmful error if it was for the purpose of impeachment, no announcement having been made by the state that this witness was being called for the purpose of cross-examination and no entrapment on the part of the witness having been shown. Hicks v. State, 204 Ga. App. 232, 418 S.E.2d 794 (1992).

Surprise and prejudice. — Term “entrapment” requires that one desiring to impeach one’s own witness show both surprise and prejudice by the actual testimony as opposed to the earlier statement. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

While a defendant was entitled to cross-examine a state’s witness about pending criminal charges to show the witness’s bias, that right did not extend to the defendant’s own witness when the defendant failed to show surprise or entrapment by the witness’s previous contradictory statement. Arnold v. State, 284 Ga. App. 598, 645 S.E.2d 68 (2007).

Total surprise unnecessary. — To establish entrapment, it is not required that the witness’s testimony be a total surprise or that it be affirmatively damaging. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975); Ellenburg v. State, 239 Ga. 309, 236 S.E.2d 650 (1977); Johnson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 405, 258 S.E.2d 22 (1979); Wofford v. State, 152 Ga. App. 739, 263 S.E.2d 707 (1979); Bryant v. State, 155 Ga. App. 652, 271 S.E.2d 904 (1980); Andrews v. State, 156 Ga. App. 734, 275 S.E.2d 782 (1980); Young v. State, 156 Ga. App. 865, 275 S.E.2d 804 (1981); Ingram v. State, 161 Ga. App. 5, 288 S.E.2d 842 (1982); Davis v. State, 249 Ga. 309, 290 S.E.2d 273 (1982).

Prior showing of surprise unnecessary. — Since it is not error for the trial judge to allow an attorney to cross-examine and lead the witness without first subjecting the attorney personally to an examination, any rule under which a showing of surprise and prejudice must first be made is wrong. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

What constitutes surprise. — Even though the state in a criminal case knows of a repudiation of an earlier statement by one of the state’s witnesses before one testifies at trial, if it only goes to the details of the defendant’s alleged confession, there is still sufficient “surprise” to admit into evidence the witness’s prior statement for impeachment purposes only. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

Showing of surprise is no longer required before a party is allowed to impeach the party’s own witness. Davis v. State, 249 Ga. 309, 290 S.E.2d 273 (1982); Coleman v. State, 162 Ga. App. 340, 291 S.E.2d 402 (1982).

Showing of surprise is no longer required under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81. Coleman v. State, 162 Ga. App. 340, 291 S.E.2d 402 (1982).

Surprise or prejudice unnecessary. — To meet the requirement of establishing entrapment before one might impeach one’s own witness, a showing of prejudice or surprise is no longer necessary. Peterson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 719, 305 S.E.2d 447 (1983).

Refusing party opportunity to introduce further testimony. — There is no abuse of discretion if the trial court refuses party opportunity to introduce further evidence which would impeach the party’s previous testimony absent surprise or entrapment. Gorrell v. Fowler, 248 Ga. 801, 286 S.E.2d 13, appeal dismissed, 457 U.S. 1113, 102 S. Ct. 2918, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1324 (1982).

Belief of prosecutor. — To establish entrapment, it is sufficient that prosecutor believed witness would testify consistently with the earlier testimony. Johnson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 405, 258 S.E.2d 22 (1979); Bryant v. State, 155 Ga. App. 652, 271 S.E.2d 904 (1980).

Statement by district attorney that the district attorney has been surprised by the testimony is sufficient, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, to show entrapment. Thomas v. State, 239 Ga. 734, 238 S.E.2d 888 (1977); James v. State, 157 Ga. App. 763, 278 S.E.2d 696 (1981); Foskey v. State, 229 Ga. App. 209, 493 S.E.2d 595 (1997).

Testimony failing to bolster case. — Trial court does not err in allowing the district attorney to impeach the state’s own witness by introducing prior inconsistent statements, even though the witness’s testimony did not damage the state’s case save by failing to bolster it as hoped. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

Inconsistent testimony. — Impeachment is allowed when the testimony is merely “inconsistent” with a prior written statement. Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

Although the requirements of surprise and prejudice have been removed from the element of entrapment in the statute, the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 still requires as a threshold matter a showing that the witness made a statement inconsistent with the witness's testimony at trial. Jones v. State, 270 Ga. 25, 505 S.E.2d 749 (1998).

Cross-examination not error. — When the prosecutor stated that the prosecutor had been entrapped by a witness called by the prosecutor and further proved the entrapment by introducing a written statement made by the witness which was contrary to the witness's testimony given upon the trial, it was not error for the trial court to permit the prosecutor to cross-examine the witness. Allen v. State, 71 Ga. App. 517, 31 S.E.2d 107 (1944); Anderson v. State, 103 Ga. App. 83, 118 S.E.2d 381 (1961); Lashley v. State, 132 Ga. App. 427, 208 S.E.2d 200 (1974).

No entrapment shown. — Evidence did not show that the prosecutor was entrapped by a witness. King v. State, 166 Ga. 10, 142 S.E. 160 (1928).

Examination of Opposite Party1. In General

Real purpose of statute is that of allowing a party to call for cross-examination those persons who by reason of a relationship existing at the time of the examination are subject to "all of the pressures and possible prejudices ... which that relationship would tend to engender," and where such relationship is no longer in existence it is not error, in the absence of any basis other than a former relationship, to refuse to allow the party calling the witness to treat such person as an adverse witness. Atlanta Americana Motor Hotel Corp. v. Sika Chem. Corp., 117 Ga. App. 707, 161 S.E.2d 342 (1968).

Use of statute not presumed. — There is no presumption to the effect that when one party puts an opposing party on the stand, or puts an agent or officer of the opposing party on the stand, the witness is put on the stand for the purpose of cross-examination and not as a witness for the party putting such a witness on the stand. Wight Hdwe. Co. v. American Lubricants Co., 91 Ga. App. 339, 85 S.E.2d 507 (1954).

Balancing of rights. — Former Code 1933, § 38-1801 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81), providing for the right of thorough and sifting cross-examination, must be balanced with former Code 1933, § 38-1704 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-62), protecting the right of a witness to be examined only as to relevant matter and to be protected from improper questions and from harsh or insulting demeanor. Crawford v. State, 144 Ga. App. 622, 241 S.E.2d 492 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Stephens v. State, 245 Ga. 825, 268 S.E.2d 330 (1980).

"Present" and "available" are not criteria for determining the qualification of witness for cross-examination. A person not a party may be called for such purpose only if such person is one for whose immediate benefit such suit is prosecuted or defended or is an agent of that party or agent of any person for whose immediate benefit such suit is prosecuted or defended or is an official or agent of a corporation when a corporation is such party, or for whose benefit such suit is prosecuted or defended. Logan v. Turner, 97 Ga. App. 866, 104 S.E.2d 627 (1958); Mullis v. Chaika, 118 Ga. App. 11, 162 S.E.2d 448 (1968).

Calling opposite party for direct examination. — When the witness is called to the stand for cross-examination, it is to be understood that the opposite party is to be examined, but a plaintiff who merely calls a defendant as "a witness against himself" in order to prove a prima facie case is not proceeding under the provisions thereof. Jones v. Chambers, 94 Ga. App. 433, 95 S.E.2d 335 (1956).

Calling opposite party for purposes of impeachment. — When defendant was not permitted to recall the victim as the defendant's own witness for purposes of impeachment, since there was no showing of entrapment, this is not permitted. Mingo v. State, 195 Ga. App. 438, 394 S.E.2d 104 (1990).

Belated announcement of calling adverse party as witness. — If the adverse party or agent as specified in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 is called, and an announcement is made by the calling party that the witness is being called for cross-examination, but that announcement is not timely made, the calling party may cross-examine the adverse witness and the other party may or may not be allowed to cross-examine the witness, in the discretion of the trial court, depending upon when in the course of the witness's testimony the announcement was made, the relationship and attitude of the witness to the parties, and the nature of the testimony given or sought to be elicited. Colwell v. Voyager Cas. Ins. Co., 251 Ga. 744, 309 S.E.2d 617 (1983).

Cross-examination within court's discretion. — When a witness has been called for cross-examination under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81, it is within the discretion of the trial court to allow the witness to be cross-examined by the attorney for the opposite party, as well as to ask leading questions. Thomas v. Baxter, 234 Ga. App. 663, 507 S.E.2d 766 (1998).

Trial court erred in improperly limiting defense counsel's cross-examination of the alleged victim's financial interest in the trial based upon the victim's claim for financial assistance from the Georgia Crime Victims Emergency Fund. Bowen v. State, 252 Ga. App. 382, 556 S.E.2d 252 (2001).

Subsequent examination by own attorney. — When the opposite party has been called as a witness for cross-examination, it is within the discretion of the court as to whether to allow the witness to be questioned by the witness's own attorney at the conclusion of the examination by the opposite party. Scarborough v. Wilson, 36 Ga. App. 428, 136 S.E. 830 (1927); Akridge v. Atlanta Journal Co., 56 Ga. App. 812, 194 S.E. 590 (1937); Davis v. Wright, 194 Ga. 1, 21 S.E.2d 88 (1942); Barton v. Strickland, 208 Ga. 163, 65 S.E.2d 602 (1951); Southeastern Metal Prods., Inc. v. De Vaughn, 99 Ga. App. 569, 109 S.E.2d 305 (1959).

Cross-examination on irrelevant matters. — It is not error to refuse to allow a party to call for cross-examination of a former employee, even though while employed the employee may have been an agent of the opposite party within the sense of the term, although it may be error, as an abuse of discretion, to allow a party to call an employee of the other party for cross-examination on irrelevant matters, irrespective of whether the employee's actions were within or outside the employee's authority as an agent. Atlanta Americana Motor Hotel Corp. v. Sika Chem. Corp., 117 Ga. App. 707, 161 S.E.2d 342 (1968).

There was no prohibition about the prior inconsistent statement being lengthier than the in-court testimony; also, the fact that a witness admitted to making the inconsistent pre-trial statement did not render the statement inadmissible. Warner v. State, 281 Ga. 763, 642 S.E.2d 821 (2007).

2. Who May Be Examined

Agent at time of trial. — Statute was intended to apply only to those situations where the witness sought to be examined was, at the time of trial, an agent of an opposite party; for only at that time would such witness be subject to pressure and possible prejudice in favor of one's present employer. Mullis v. Chaika, 118 Ga. App. 11, 162 S.E.2d 448 (1968).

Definition of agent. — Word "agent" means any agent available to the party (principal) as a witness in a pending case, and does not refer merely to an agent who has some relation or connection with the transaction in litigation. Mullis v. Chaika, 118 Ga. App. 11, 162 S.E.2d 448 (1968).

Agency can be proved by agent's sworn testimony. — See Terminal Transp. Co. v. Decatur Truck & Equip. Co., 90 Ga. App. 859, 84 S.E.2d 494 (1954).

Prosecution witness not agent or party. — Statute does not permit a defendant to call a prosecution witness for cross-examination as an agent of the state or as a party for whom the suit is being prosecuted. Bentley v. State, 131 Ga. App. 425, 205 S.E.2d 904 (1974).

When plaintiff is called as defense witness. — When the plaintiff is called as a defense witness upon an objection to the plaintiff's being recalled for further cross-examination, this tactic entitles counsel for the plaintiff to cross-examine plaintiff just like any other defense witness, and while the court can, in the court's discretion, prohibit counsel from posing leading questions, there is no abuse of discretion in allowing them. Mercer v. Woodard, 166 Ga. App. 119, 303 S.E.2d 475 (1983).

Deponent as opposite party. — Mere fact that, prior to the trial, the plaintiff had taken a deposition of the president of the defendant corporation, who was subpoenaed "to testify and the truth say in behalf of the plaintiff," would not prevent the president being called by the plaintiff at the trial of the case for the purpose of cross-examination since the deposition was not introduced in evidence at the trial. Southeastern Metal Prods., Inc. v. De Vaughn, 99 Ga. App. 569, 109 S.E.2d 305 (1959).

2. Who May Be Examined (Cont'd)

Third-party defendant. — Trial court properly allowed party to call third-party defendant as witness for purposes of cross-examination. Ranger Constr. Co. v. Robertshaw Controls Co., 166 Ga. App. 679, 305 S.E.2d 361 (1983); Wilson v. Childers, 174 Ga. App. 179, 329 S.E.2d 503 (1985).

Agent of opposing party at time of trial. — When a witness called by plaintiff was a former employee of plaintiff and was employed by defendant at the time of trial, under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 plaintiff had a right to cross-examine the witness as an agent of the opposite party, although there was no showing that the witness was a hostile witness. Henderson v. Glen Oak, Inc., 179 Ga. App. 380, 346 S.E.2d 842 (1986), aff'd, 256 Ga. 619, 351 S.E.2d 640 (1987).

Effect of testimony. — When witness sworn by plaintiff testified as the defendant corporation's employee, the legal effect of the employee's testimony conflicting with that of another witness called by plaintiff would be the same as if they had both been sworn as the plaintiff's witnesses generally. Emory Univ. v. Lee, 97 Ga. App. 680, 104 S.E.2d 234 (1958).

Witness previously sworn. — When the firefighter was agent of the opposite party within the meaning of the statute, the fact that this witness was previously sworn in behalf of the plaintiff would not prevent the witness being called by the plaintiff for the purpose of cross-examination. Thompson v. Central of Ga. Ry., 102 Ga. App. 5, 115 S.E.2d 471 (1960) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81).

Witness not agent. — When witness called by plaintiff to testify under cross-examination was not an agent of the defendant individually and since the action was not prosecuted or defended for the witness's immediate benefit and since the witness was not an agent of any person for whose immediate benefit the suit was prosecuted or defended, the witness was not qualified as a witness for cross-examination. Logan v. Turner, 97 Ga. App. 866, 104 S.E.2d 627 (1958).

Employee as agent. — One in the employ of another is subject to all the pressure and possible prejudice in favor of one's employer which such relationship would tend to engender and therefore should be subject to cross-examination by the opposite party. Terminal Transp. Co. v. Decatur Truck & Equip. Co., 90 Ga. App. 859, 84 S.E.2d 494 (1954); Mullis v. Chaika, 118 Ga. App. 11, 162 S.E.2d 448 (1968).

Former employees. — Statute does not allow the cross-examination of ex-employees of a party. Massey Junior College v. Taggart, 140 Ga. App. 591, 231 S.E.2d 540 (1976).

Corporation or individual as principal. — When an employee of the opposite party is called on the theory that such employee is the agent of that party, the procedure is equally proper whether the principal is in fact a corporation or an individual. Wall v. Rhodes, 112 Ga. App. 572, 145 S.E.2d 756 (1965).

Operator of bus being used as a common carrier of passengers is the agent and alter ego of the common carrier bus company, and as such is subject to cross-examination by the opposite party, and to refuse the opposite party such right is error. Huell v. Southeastern Stages, Inc., 78 Ga. App. 311, 50 S.E.2d 745 (1948).

Agents of school board. — Provisions of statute are broad enough to include agents of a school board and the principal of a school which was destroyed by fire. Rodgers v. Styles, 100 Ga. App. 124, 110 S.E.2d 582 (1959).

Legatee. — Statute is applicable on appeal from probate of a will in solemn form; person designated as a legatee in the will, whose interest would be adversely affected if the caveat should be sustained, may be called as a witness by the caveatrix for the purpose of cross-examination and impeachment. Peretzman v. Simon, 185 Ga. 681, 196 S.E. 471 (1938).

Endorser of check. — When one defendant was sued as an endorser and two other defendants as makers, and the case was in default as to the endorser, the court did not err in not permitting the plaintiff (holder of the check) to put endorser on the stand for cross-examination for the purpose of making out a case against the makers. A.J. Cannon & Co. v. Collier, 91 Ga. App. 40, 84 S.E.2d 482 (1954).

Parent in termination proceeding. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 applies to termination proceedings which are civil, not criminal, in nature; therefore, a mother had no right to refuse to be called as a witness for cross-examination by the Department of Family and Children Services. In the Interest of A.R.A.S., 278 Ga. App. 608, 629 S.E.2d 822 (2006).

Testimony of deceased party. — Defendant can introduce former testimony of deceased plaintiff, and then impeach the testimony by defendant's own testimony. McLendon v. Baldwin, 166 Ga. 794, 144 S.E. 271 (1928), later appeal, 170 Ga. 437, 153 S.E. 18 (1930).

Defendant's mother questioned about prior inconsistent statement. — State properly questioned defendant's mother as to whether the mother believed that the crimes defendant was on trial for were gang-related as the question was asked for the purpose of laying a foundation to introduce the mother's prior inconsistent statement after the mother had testified in response to a defense question that the mother did not believe that defendant was involved in gang activity, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-81 and 24-9-83. Garrett v. State, 280 Ga. 30, 622 S.E.2d 323 (2005).

Examination of Own Witness

Insurer's cross-examination of own witness. — Insurer was entitled to cross-examine insurer's own witness after witness was determined to have played a key part in the case by, inter alia, finding items of importance matchable to plaintiff's car. Although witness did not concededly fall within the expressly authorized categories of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81, O.C.G.A. § 24-9-63 permitted such testimony in the interests of justice. Hicks v. Doe, 206 Ga. App. 596, 426 S.E.2d 174 (1992).

Use of inconsistent prior statements. — Because a state witness, who was also one of defendant's cohorts, was evasive concerning the facts stated in the witness's prior interview and also testified to facts that were inconsistent with those previously stated in the interview, the trial court did not err in permitting the state to ask leading questions or in allowing the taped interview to be introduced into evidence. Johnson v. State, 279 Ga. App. 489, 631 S.E.2d 720 (2006).

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION INSTRUCTIONS

General Consideration

In general. — Witness may be impeached by proving that the statements made by the witness in the witness's testimony are not the truth. Middle Ga. & A. Ry. v. Barnett, 104 Ga. 582, 30 S.E. 771 (1898).

Criminal defendant is subject to impeachment, and defendant may be impeached by disproving the facts to which defendant testified. Laney v. State, 159 Ga. App. 609, 284 S.E.2d 114 (1981).

Witness can be impeached as to matters relevant to the witnesses testimony and to the case, and by disproving facts testified to by the witness. Morris v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 203 Ga. App. 839, 418 S.E.2d 119 (1992).

Statute applies whenever there is a conflict in testimony. Southern Ry. v. O'Bryan, 119 Ga. 147, 45 S.E. 1000 (1903); Yaryan Rosin & Turpentine Co. v. Haskins, 29 Ga. App. 753, 116 S.E. 913 (1923); Wilcox v. Wilcox, 31 Ga. App. 486, 119 S.E. 445 (1923); Swift & Co. v. Lawson, 95 Ga. App. 35, 97 S.E.2d 168 (1957).

Impeachment by unconstitutionally obtained evidence. — Even evidence which violates constitutional standards of due process, such as unlawfully obtained confessions, may be admitted for impeachment purposes. Ensley v. Jordan, 244 Ga. 435, 260 S.E.2d 480 (1979).

No foundation is required for impeachment. Deaton v. Swanson, 196 Ga. 833, 28 S.E.2d 126 (1943); Swift & Co. v. Lawson, 95 Ga. App. 35, 97 S.E.2d 168 (1957); Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980).

Challenge of witness on cross-examination is not required before the witness's testimony could be impeached by another witness. Martin v. State, 205 Ga. App. 591, 422 S.E.2d 876, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 422 S.E.2d 876 (1992).

Immaterial matter. — Witness is not to be discredited because of a discrepancy as to a wholly immaterial matter. Daniels v. Luton, 40 Ga. App. 741, 151 S.E. 659 (1930); Gilbert v. State, 159 Ga. App. 326, 283 S.E.2d 361 (1981).

While a witness may be impeached on a collateral issue which is indirectly material to the issue in the case, a witness may not be impeached because of a discrepancy as to a wholly immaterial matter. Strickland v. State, 166 Ga. App. 702, 305 S.E.2d 434 (1983).

Witness may not be impeached because of a discrepancy as to a wholly immaterial matter. Thomas v. State, 168 Ga. App. 587, 309 S.E.2d 881 (1983).

Although a witness may be impeached by disproving the facts testified to by the witness, a witness may not be impeached based upon a discrepancy relating to a wholly immaterial matter. Brown v. State, 260 Ga. 153, 391 S.E.2d 108 (1990).

Testimony that was properly excluded as irrelevant to the issues of the case was not admissible for impeachment purposes. Goss v. Total Chipping, Inc., 220 Ga. App. 643, 469 S.E.2d 855 (1996).

In a prosecution for rape, kidnapping, and sodomy, the defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of trial counsel merely because counsel failed to impeach the victim's credibility with evidence concerning a 1996 drug arrest as: (1) the evidence was irrelevant to the circumstances surrounding the defendant's attack on the victim; and (2) the victim never opened the door to an issue of good character. Pierce v. State, 281 Ga. App. 821, 637 S.E.2d 467 (2006).

Evidence of prior crimes or bad acts can be admitted when such evidence is necessary and relevant to impeach defendant's specific testimony. Lucas v. State, 215 Ga. App. 293, 450 S.E.2d 313 (1994).

Certified record of a prior conviction allegedly of a witness for obstruction and giving false information was properly excluded because: (1) the witness testified that the signature on the certified record was not the witness's signature; (2) the witness opined that the person named in the record of conviction was the witness's cousin, who had the same name, and explained that the defendant and defendant's cousin were only a few months apart and that the cousin also had a criminal record; (3) the witness testified unequivocally that defendant was never indicted, tried, convicted, or sentenced for the offenses charged in the certified record; and (4) defendant offered no further proof that the person named in the exhibit was in fact the witness. Payne v. State, 273 Ga. App. 483, 615 S.E.2d 564 (2005).

It was proper to admit evidence of driving under the influence and suspended license convictions to impeach the defendant, who had denied having a Georgia driver's license or ever having been convicted of driving with a suspended license. Walsh v. State, 283 Ga. App. 817, 642 S.E.2d 879 (2007).

Trial court did not err by allowing the state to place the defendant's character in issue by introducing evidence of defendant's prior arrest for possession of marijuana through the police sergeant because the defendant opened the door to the sergeant's testimony; since the defendant testified that the defendant's prior marijuana charge only involved "a couple of joints behind the seat" of which the defendant was unaware and that the charge had been dismissed because the defendant was not guilty, it was not error to allow the state to attempt to impeach the defendant through the rebuttal testimony of the sergeant. Martinez v. State, No. A09A1687, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 316 (Mar. 26, 2010).

Testimony that facts are true. — State may introduce testimony to the effect that the facts stated by the state's witness, whose character is under attack, are true, even though such corroboration involves information received from the witness. Stevenson v. State, 69 Ga. 68 (1882).

Disproving facts only. — When police officer's purported statement to plaintiff's mother that the officer had found plaintiff not to be at fault would have, if at all, served only to rebut that portion of the officer's own testimony wherein the officer tacitly opined the accident was due to plaintiff's fault; such a purported statement did not rebut a fact to which the officer testified and was inadmissible. Campbell v. Cozad, 207 Ga. App. 175, 427 S.E.2d 515 (1993).

Trial court properly allowed a prosecutor to question defendant about any prior positive drug screens as the purpose was to impeach defendant's unsolicited assertion that the drug screen that was the basis of defendant's prosecution was defendant's only positive drug screen; accordingly, although character and conduct in other transactions is generally irrelevant unless defendant first puts defendant's character in issue, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-2-2 and 24-9-20(b), evidence may be used for impeachment purposes in order to disprove facts testified to by defendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82. Lockaby v. State, 265 Ga. App. 527, 594 S.E.2d 729 (2004).

Trial court did not err by not disclosing a disciplinary report in a police officer's personnel file as: (1) no attempt was made to impeach the officer by disproving the facts testified to by the officer under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82; (2) there was no showing that any of the documents disallowed contained any contradictory statements previously made by the officer as to matters relevant to the officer's testimony and the case under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83; (3) there was no contention that the officer had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude; and (4) the evidence was, at best, related solely to specific bad acts and not to the general bad character of the officer, which was not admissible as impeachment material under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 178, 598 S.E.2d 898 (2004).

In a criminal case, the trial court properly excluded impeachment testimony about the victim's relationship with the victim's employees; the evidence did not disprove facts to which the victim testified, but was evidence of prior specific acts or bad character. Jones v. State, 283 Ga. App. 631, 642 S.E.2d 331 (2007).

Photographs. — In a prosecution for child molestation, photographs showing defendant naked in defendant's home were admissible to impeach the defendant's testimony that the defendant never walked around the house nude. Kelley v. State, 233 Ga. App. 244, 503 S.E.2d 881 (1998).

Alibi witnesses. — State was obligated to respond to defendants' notification of their intention to rely upon alibi as a defense; neither the state's general witness list nor the state's entitlement to rebut or impeach a witness's testimony with conflicting testimony or statements under O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-82 and 24-9-83 was a substitute for compliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b). Hayes v. State, 249 Ga. App. 857, 549 S.E.2d 813 (2001).

Bias of witness. — Proffered testimony of a witness for the propounder of a will, that had feeling existed between the testator and one of the witnesses for the caveators, who testified that when the witness saw the testator on the day the will was executed the testator did not recognize the witness and did not speak to the witness, and who denied that the testator was unfriendly towards the witness because the witness had testified against the testator in a case in which the testator was a party, was admissible to explain why the testator did not speak to the caveators' witness, and to impeach the witness as to the feeling existing between the witness and the testator. Orr v. Blalock, 195 Ga. 863, 25 S.E.2d 668 (1943).

Character evidence. — Witness who is not impeached otherwise than by disproving the truth of the witness's evidence cannot be supported by proof of the witness's general good character. Miller v. Western & Atl. R.R., 93 Ga. 480, 21 S.E. 52 (1893); Bell v. State, 100 Ga. 78, 27 S.E. 669 (1896); Surles v. State, 148 Ga. 537, 97 S.E. 538 (1918).

Effect of proof of own declaration. — Witness impeached by proof of contradictory statements cannot be sustained by proof of witness's own declarations, consistent with witness's evidence at the trial, made at other times and places, whether prior or subsequent to the time of making the contradictory statements imputed to the witness. Fussell v. State, 93 Ga. 450, 21 S.E. 97 (1893).

Person charged with crime remaining silent. — Plaintiff having testified that a third person stated in the hearing of defendant that the defendant committed a crime, to which the defendant made no response, and this third person when examined in behalf of defendant having denied making the statement, it was error not to allow the plaintiff, in reply, to prove by another witness that the defendant was present and heard the defendant's witness make the statement at the time and place mentioned by the plaintiff in plaintiff's testimony. Bray v. Latham, 81 Ga. 640, 8 S.E. 64 (1888).

Mere commission, arrest, or confinement for crime insufficient to impeach. — Witness may be impeached by proof of a crime involving moral turpitude, but not by showing that the witness has committed, been arrested for, confined for, or even indicted for such an offense. Strickland v. State, 166 Ga. App. 702, 305 S.E.2d 434 (1983).

Showing of mere accusation of offense. — Prosecutor's cross-examination of defendant about recently having been charged with pointing a pistol at someone was an improper line of questioning, although defendant had denied using a gun during the previous year; competent evidence disproving that testimony would have been proper impeachment but merely showing an accusation of the misdemeanor offense was insufficient for that purpose. Williams v. State, 181 Ga. App. 693, 353 S.E.2d 563 (1987).

Evidence of prior DUI admissible. — Defendant's testimony that defendant had never taken a breath alcohol test opened the door for the state to impeach defendant with the defendant's previous DUI conviction. Renn v. State, 234 Ga. App. 790, 508 S.E.2d 174 (1998).

Introduction of prior alcohol-related accident. — There is no error in allowing the state to produce evidence of a prior alcohol-related motorcycle accident by the defendant for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of the defendant that the defendant did not ride the defendant's motorcycle when the defendant had been drinking. Hammond v. State, 169 Ga. App.

Alco-sensor results. — Officer's testimony that the numerical value of defendant's alco-sensor test was .089 was properly admitted to impeach and rebut defendant's testimony that the result was .06. Capps v. State, 273 Ga. App. 696, 615 S.E.2d 821 (2005).

Evidence of prior interest in drug trafficking admissible. — When a defendant was charged with marijuana trafficking, testimony that, two years prior to the subject sale of marijuana, the defendant expressed an interest in trafficking in illegal drugs logically tended to disprove defendant's defense, and thus was clearly relevant as rebuttal, even though the testimony did not allege participation in the crime at bar and was inadmissible as impeachment testimony. Kraus v. State, 169 Ga. App. 54, 311 S.E.2d 493 (1983).

Prior drug conviction admissible. — Defendant was properly impeached by defendant's former contradictory statement after defendant's statement on the stand that the defendant did not "mess with dope" was construed as a denial by the defendant that the defendant had ever been involved with drugs. Thrasher v. State, 204 Ga. App. 413, 419 S.E.2d 516 (1992).

Question as to prior arrest. — It is not error to allow a witness to be questioned as to a prior arrest to impeach the witness's testimony that the witness had "never been in a situation dealing with the law." Parker v. State, 169 Ga. App. 557, 313 S.E.2d 751 (1984).

Prior adjudication of delinquency admissible. — Any error in admitting impeaching evidence of defendant's prior adjudication of delinquency was harmless because, at the time it was admitted pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82, the trial court instructed the jury that the evidence was admitted for the limited purpose of refuting defendant's testimony that defendant was not familiar with criminal cases, and that it could not be considered for any other purpose; it was highly probable that admission of the evidence did not contribute to the jury's finding of guilt. Emberson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 773, 611 S.E.2d 83 (2005).

In action for fraud and breach of warranties, oral testimony concerning other lawsuits would be incompetent for impeachment purposes unless it contradicted the witness's testimony at trial; it cannot be used merely to expose the witness's intelligence, memory, accuracy, judgment, and veracity. Haley v. Oaks Apts., Ltd., 173 Ga. App. 44, 325 S.E.2d 602 (1984).

Province of jury. — When a witness is sought to be impeached by disproving the facts testified to by the witness in such way that there results only a conflict between the witness's testimony and the testimony of other witnesses, it is the province of the jury to determine which of the witnesses has spoken the truth even if in order to do so it is necessary to impute perjury to one or the other. Champion v. State, 84 Ga. App. 163, 65 S.E.2d 280 (1951).

Disbelief of impeached witness. — When a witness has been successfully impeached, the witness ought not to be believed, and it is the duty of the trier of fact to disregard the witness's testimony unless the testimony is corroborated, in which case the testimony may be believed. Pike v. Greyhound Bus Lines, 140 Ga. App. 863, 232 S.E.2d 143 (1977).

Impeachment as to certain facts does not necessarily exclude the jury from believing the witness as to other facts testified to. Elliot v. State, 138 Ga. 23, 74 S.E. 691 (1912).

In a condemnation proceeding, after a city's witness not only directly supported the city's main contention that a landowner's property could not be developed or removed from the flood plain, but the city's appraiser based a valuation on the witness's representations to that effect, the witness's testimony was critical, and the landowner had a right to interview the witness, check the facts to which the witness would testify, and, if indicated, arrange to secure rebuttal evidence or to impeach the witnesses. Shepherd Interiors v. City of Atlanta, 263 Ga. App. 869, 589 S.E.2d 640 (2003).

Defendant was not unfairly denied impeachment because defendant was prohibited from asking an ambiguous and prolix question of a witness which, in effect, asked for the witness's opinion concerning the witness's own bad reputation for veracity. Sewell v. State, 244 Ga. App. 449, 536 S.E.2d 173 (2000).

Criminal defendant. — While a criminal defendant is not subject to impeachment by proof of general bad character or prior convictions until the defendant put defendant's general good character in evidence, the defendant is subject to impeachment the same as any other witness. Favors v. State, 145 Ga. App. 864, 244 S.E.2d 902 (1978).

Prosecution for rape. — Former Code 1933, § 38-202.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3) provided the exclusive means for admitting evidence relating to the past sexual behavior of the complaining witness in prosecutions for rape; the res gestae rule, impeachment techniques, and other traditional means for introducing evidence which is otherwise inadmissible are inapplicable. Johnson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 277, 246 S.E.2d 363 (1978).

Trial court did not err in refusing to permit defendant to cross-examine prosecutor. Gresham v. State, 169 Ga. App. 525, 314 S.E.2d 111 (1984).

Disregarding conflicting testimony. — Since there was a material conflict in the testimony of the plaintiff and that of the agent for the insurance company who procured the application, the jury was authorized under former Code 1933, §§ 38-1802 and 38-1806 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-82 and 24-9-85) to disregard the testimony of the agent. Gulf Life Ins. Co. v. Moore, 90 Ga. App. 791, 84 S.E.2d 696 (1954).

Evidence of prior killing. — There is no error in allowing the district attorney to present evidence of a prior killing by defendant for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of the defendant that defendant had never killed anyone in defendant's whole life. Lumpkin v. State, 151 Ga. App. 896, 262 S.E.2d 208 (1979).

Railroad engineer. — If the jury believed that the horse and colt crossed the track in front of the train immediately before the train struck plaintiff's mule, as testified to by two witnesses, the witnesses would be authorized to infer that the engineer was not keeping a proper lookout ahead, although the engineer swore that the engineer was. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Hodges, 90 Ga. App. 870, 84 S.E.2d 711 (1954).

Admissibility of evidence initially excluded. — In a prosecution for driving under the influence of alcohol, results of a breath test which had been excluded because the arresting officer had failed to advise defendant of defendant's right to an additional test were admissible to rebut the testimony of defendant's expert witness. Charlton v. State, 217 Ga. App. 842, 459 S.E.2d 455 (1995).

In an action for physical injuries allegedly received in a rear-end collision, the defendant was allowed to show that plaintiff had settled a lawsuit arising from an earlier accident in order to impeach plaintiff's testimony that the complaint had been dismissed. Bischoff v. Payne, 239 Ga. App. 824, 522 S.E.2d 257 (1999).

Evidence found admissible. — Fact that one brother had considerable assets and another brother had none is admissible to impeach testimony that the two brothers had shared the benefit of real property equally, and it is not error to admit such evidence. Fletcher v. Fletcher, 242 Ga. 158, 249 S.E.2d 530 (1978).

Once defendant testified that the defendant always stopped after one drink if the defendant was going to drive, the state was properly allowed to impeach this testimony by questioning appellant about defendant's prior DUI convictions. Wyatt v. State, 179 Ga. App. 327, 346 S.E.2d 387 (1986).

In an action for battery, a witness should have been allowed to impeach defendant's statement that defendant had never ordered defendant's bodyguard or anyone else to strike another person. Williams v. Knight, 211 Ga. App. 420, 439 S.E.2d 507 (1994).

When defendant implied on direct examination that defendant had only one prior conviction for a weapons offense, defendant's testimony in this regard was subject to rebuttal proof of other weapons offenses defendant had committed. Francis v. State, 266 Ga. 69, 463 S.E.2d 859 (1995).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence, evidence offered by the state concerning defendant's breath test was admissible to rebut defendant's testimony on direct examination that defendant had consumed two and one-half beers on the night of defendant's arrest. Goodwin v. State, 222 Ga. App. 285, 474 S.E.2d 84 (1996).

In a personal injury action, since plaintiff specifically denied any prior back, neck, or leg pain at trial, plaintiff's medical records showing otherwise were admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82. Barone v. Law, 242 Ga. App. 102, 527 S.E.2d 898 (2000).

In a prosecution for rape and kidnapping, the trial court should have permitted defendant to impeach the victim by calling witnesses to show that the victim used crack cocaine on the day of the incident, before encountering defendant, because the victim's consumption of drugs shortly before the incident occurred was not immaterial, inasmuch as it might have affected the victim's recollection of events. Curry v. State, 243 Ga. App. 712, 534 S.E.2d 168 (2000).

State was entitled to question defendant as to whether defendant changed defendant's name because the authorities in North Carolina were looking for defendant because defendant had been accused of rape in that state after defendant introduced this area of inquiry by offering another reason for leaving North Carolina to explain having two sets of identification in defendant's possession when the defendant was arrested. Vehaun v. State, 244 Ga. App. 136, 534 S.E.2d 873 (2000).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a mistrial made as to a testifying officer's rebuttal testimony as that testimony was admissible as impeachment going to defendant's veracity, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82. Cox v. State, 263 Ga. App. 266, 587 S.E.2d 205 (2003).

In a homeowner's suit against a construction company for failing to remedy a defect in the homeowner's house, when the company's representative claimed remorse in the phase of the trial in which the amount of punitive damages was being determined, a letter from the company to the homeowner threatening to sue the homeowner for abusive litigation if the homeowner pursued a claim was properly admitted. Bowen & Bowen Constr. Co. v. Fowler, 265 Ga. App. 274, 593 S.E.2d 668 (2004).

Portion of defendant's pre-trial statement to police in which the defendant admitted to another robbery was properly admitted, even though it reflected negatively on the defendant's character, because it rebutted the defendant's prior testimony. Jones v. State, 270 Ga. App. 233, 606 S.E.2d 288 (2004).

Evidence that defendant knew defendant would be incarcerated for 90 days beginning one week after the offense charged contradicted the testimony that defendant expected to be steadily employed in the weeks following the offense; accordingly, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the evidence to impeach defendant's testimony. Cooper v. State, 272 Ga. App. 209, 612 S.E.2d 42 (2005).

Since, at trial, the defendant's girlfriend testified that the girlfriend was certain that the defendant's mother had never told the girlfriend about her son's statement of regret about the victim's murder, but, the girlfriend had earlier told detectives that the conversation had, in fact, happened, and since the defendant's mother also took the witness stand and testified both specifically that the defendant had never told the mother that the defendant had any regret about the crime and more generally that the mother never discussed the crime with the defendant at all, the statement the defendant's girlfriend made to police directly contradicted the facts as recounted by both the defendant's mother and the girlfriend; as such, the girlfriend's prior statement was admissible to impeach both. Williams v. State, 280 Ga. 539, 630 S.E.2d 410 (2006).

In a personal injury action filed by a couple, including an injured wife, against a tractor-trailer's owner and its driver, the trial court did not err in admitting doctors' reports outlining that the wife "passed out" before the collision: (1) as substantive evidence, given that the wife was present at trial and subject to cross-examination; and (2) as prior inconsistent statements to impeach the wife based upon earlier testimony that the wife never lost consciousness. Collins v. Mitchell, 282 Ga. App. 860, 640 S.E.2d 364 (2006).

It was error under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82 not to allow a defendant to introduce witness testimony and evidence of negative employer drug tests to rebut an officer's testimony that the defendant had admitted using drugs. Doyal v. State, 287 Ga. App. 667, 653 S.E.2d 52 (2007).

In a medical malpractice action, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by permitting the plaintiff to cross-examine the defendant doctor with regard to the status of the doctor's medical license from another state for impeachment purposes; the limited investigation by the plaintiff into whether the out-of-state license was renewed or not was permissible after the doctor testified that the doctor had allowed the license to expire. Barngrover v. Hins, 289 Ga. App. 410, 657 S.E.2d 14 (2008).

Trial court erred in disallowing testimony of a defense witness offered to disprove facts testified to by a prosecution witness. Childress v. State, 266 Ga. 425, 467 S.E.2d 865 (1996).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claims based on impeachment of witnesses. — Defense counsel's failure to object or move for a mistrial based on the state's introduction of evidence relating to a witness's misconduct that fell short of a conviction was not ineffective assistance under circumstances in which counsel's decisions not to object to the state's pursuit of the topic of the witness's misdemeanor driving violations, and to attempt to rehabilitate the witness by showing the minor nature of one of the violations, were objectively reasonable; when the state broached the subject of the witness's incarceration just before the night in question, it might have gone on to uncover proof of that fact, which would have been admissible as contradictory of the witness's testimony that the witness was in the car with the defendant on the night before the defendant's arrest. Defense counsel could not have been faulted for failing to complete the state's work for it, or for declining to highlight any of this testimony. Noellien v. State, 298 Ga. App. 47, 679 S.E.2d 75 (2009).

Evidence found not admissible. — Testimony which showed the defendant had been in possession of a large quantity of marijuana was not admissible as impeachment evidence of the defendant's character in a prosecution for trafficking in cocaine because the fact that defendant at some time in the past possessed a substantial amount of marijuana did not contradict defendant's assertion that the defendant did not deal in cocaine. Seabrooks v. State, 164 Ga. App. 747, 297 S.E.2d 745 (1982), aff'd, 251 Ga. 564, 308 S.E.2d 160 (1983).

When a physician testified on cross-examination that the physician had never written a history and physical examination in a chart for a patient when the physician had not performed the history and physical examination, the physician's testimony was subject to impeachment by calling the widow of a former patient who testified that the physician had not performed the physical examinations and history on the widow's late husband contrary to the physician's written entry on the medical chart. Weaver v. Ross, 192 Ga. App. 568, 386 S.E.2d 43 (1989).

State had no basis for impeaching the testimony of a witness by the witness's driving record after the witness immediately revised the witness's testimony that the witness had been "pulled over" three or four times to state that the witness did not know the exact number of times the witness had been pulled over. Waters v. State, 210 Ga. App. 305, 436 S.E.2d 44 (1993).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, carrying a concealed weapon, and possession of cocaine, when defendant's prior conviction was for misdemeanor obstruction of a law enforcement officer, which offense did not involve the element of violence, neither a conviction thereof nor an indictment charging a greater offense was admissible to impeach a defense witness's testimony as to defendant's nonviolent character. Daniel v. State, 211 Ga. App. 455, 439 S.E.2d 720 (1993).

Erroneous consideration of impeachment evidence harmless error. — Although the defendant's prior burglary conviction, admitted by stipulation of counsel for the purpose of establishing modus operandi, could not be considered by the jury for purposes of impeaching the defendant's testimony, the error did not require reversal due to the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Howard v. State, 202 Ga. App. 574, 415 S.E.2d 45 (1992).

Instructions

Instructions generally. — It is not error for the trial court, in the absence of request, to charge on the subject of impeachment of witnesses. Hand v. State, 90 Ga. App. 452, 83 S.E.2d 276 (1954).

Defendant who wishes to have trial judge give limiting instructions for impeachment evidence used in the mode of disproving facts testified to, which incidentally injects character, must request such instructions; the judge is not required to give instructions on the judge's own motion. Byrd v. State, 255 Ga. 665, 341 S.E.2d 455 (1986).

Conflict in testimony. — When there is a conflict between the testimony of the defendant and a state's witness, a charge on impeachment is not improper. McNeill v. State, 135 Ga. App. 876, 219 S.E.2d 613 (1975).

Failure to charge all methods of impeachment. — When the judge having charged correctly upon one of the modes or methods of impeachment, to wit, impeachment by contradictory statements, the judge's failure to charge also upon the other modes of impeachment of disproving facts testified to by the witness, and also on the method of impeachment when a witness's testimony shall be disregarded entirely, is not reversible error in the absence of a request. Milwaukee Mechanics Ins. Co. v. Davis, 79 Ga. App. 70, 52 S.E.2d 643 (1949).

Charging parts of sections. — Charge of the court was not error when part of the charge contained former Civil Code 1910, § 5880 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82) and a part of former Civil Code 1910, § 5881 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83) and the parts of both of those sections charged which were excepted to were applicable to the case. Hall v. Burpee, 176 Ga. 270, 168 S.E. 39 (1933).

Contradiction of witness. — When no attempt is made during the trial of a case to impeach a witness by disproving the facts testified to by the witness, except insofar as different witnesses testify in a conflicting manner to their impression of a given state of facts, a charge of the court in the language of former Code 1933, § 38-1806 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85) that when a witness shall be successfully contradicted as to a material matter the witness's credit as to other matters was for the jury, included the substance of former Code 1933, § 38-1802 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82). Aiken v. Glass, 95 Ga. App. 849, 99 S.E.2d 426 (1957).

No evidence of bad character. — In charging upon the law of impeachment of witnesses, when the court charges as to impeachment by disproving facts testified to, and by contradictory statements, it is not error to omit to charge the law of impeachment by proof of general bad character, when there is no evidence seeking to impeach any witness upon that ground. Smithwick v. State, 199 Ga. 292, 34 S.E.2d 28 (1945), overruled on other grounds, Milton v. State, 245 Ga. 20, 262 S.E.2d 789 (1980).

No evidence of good character. — When it was sought to impeach the sole witness for the defendant charged with murder, and no evidence of the good character of such witness was offered by the defendant, it was reversible error to state in the charge to the jury that when it is sought to impeach a witness, the witness may be sustained by proof of good character. Jones v. State, 193 Ga. 449, 18 S.E.2d 844 (1942).

Instruction proper. — Charge of court was not subject to exceptions because of verbal inaccuracies. Bart v. Scheider, 39 Ga. App. 467, 147 S.E. 430 (1929).

Improper instruction not reversible error. — Charge on impeachment by proof of conviction was not reversible error even though defendant had not placed defendant's character in issue because of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Peterson v. State, 212 Ga. App. 147, 441 S.E.2d 481 (1994).

In a married couple's personal injury case, the trial court did not err in not giving parts of the pattern charge on impeachment requested by an insurance carrier on the ground that the couple's trial testimony contradicted their previous statements or actions. Because the carrier did not offer evidence that disproved the facts to which the couple testified, the portion of the charge that pertained to impeachment by disproving facts was not applicable, and the trial court was thus authorized to refuse the entire charge; furthermore, the trial court's charge to the jury that the jury could consider the witnesses' manner of testifying and demeanor as well as the probability or improbability of their testimony and their personal credibility adequately covered the necessary principles. Ga. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Turpin, 294 Ga. App. 63, 668 S.E.2d 518 (2008).

24-9-83. How witness impeached — Previous contradictory statements; foundation; proof of good character to sustain witness.

A witness may be impeached by contradictory statements previously made by him as to matters relevant to his testimony and to the case. Before contradictory statements may be proved against him, unless they are written statements made under oath in connection with some judicial proceedings, the time, place, person, and circumstances attending the former statements shall be called to his mind with as much certainty as possible. If the contradictory statements are in writing and in existence, they shall be shown to him or read in his hearing. To lay this foundation, the witness may be recalled at any time. When thus impeached, the witness may be sustained by proof of general good character, the effect of the evidence to be determined by the jury. (Orig. General Consideration

Witness impeached by disproving facts. — Witness can be impeached as to matters relevant to the witness’s testimony and to the case, and by disproving facts testified to by the witness. Morris v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 203 Ga. App. 839, 418 S.E.2d 119 (1992).

Former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5881 and 5882 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-83 and 24-9-84) were not exhaustive as to the manner in which a witness may be impeached. Yaryan Rosin & Turpentine Co. v. Haskins, 29 Ga. App. 753, 116 S.E. 913 (1923); McRae v. Boykin, 50 Ga. App. 866, 179 S.E. 535 (1935), rev’d on other grounds, 182 Ga. 252, 185 S.E. 246 (1936).

Pretrial statement does not prohibit trial testimony inconsistent therewith. Tommie v. State, 158 Ga. App. 216, 279 S.E.2d 510 (1981).

Absence of prior statement at preliminary hearing fails to amount to a contradiction. Thomas v. State, 168 Ga. App. 587, 309 S.E.2d 881 (1983).

Effect of inconsistent statement. — Inconsistency of statement does not render a witness’s testimony inadmissible; it merely lays the witness open to impeachment. Carter v. State, 2 Ga. App. 254, 58 S.E. 532 (1907).

Prior inconsistent statement of witness who takes stand and is subject to cross-examination is admissible as substantive evidence and is not limited to impeachment purposes. Brown v. State, 175 Ga. App. 246, 333 S.E.2d 124 (1985).

With regard to a defendant’s conviction for aggravated assault in a case that the defendant and the complainant reconciled and the complainant had recanted the allegations against the defendant by the time of trial, the defendant failed to prove that defense counsel was ineffective as a result of failing to object to attempted impeachment evidence of the complainant wherein the complainant was asked whether the officers the crime was reported to had lied at trial because the state's question was permissible as part of an attempt to impeach the complainant with the complainant's prior inconsistent statement. Jacobs v. State, 299 Ga. App. 368, 683 S.E.2d 64 (2009).

Previous statements not proof of truth. —

Evidence of previous contradictory statements made by a witness sought to be impeached is not affirmative proof of the truth of such previous statements. Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 S.E. 110 (1908); Early v. Ramey, 119 Ga. App. 621, 168 S.E.2d 629 (1969); Morgan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 139, 217 S.E.2d 175, rev'd on other grounds, 235 Ga. 632, 221 S.E.2d 47, overruled on other grounds, Dent v. State, 136 Ga. App. 366, 221 S.E.2d 228, overruled on other grounds, Davis v. State, 136 Ga. App. 749, 222 S.E.2d 188 (1975).

Knowing and willful swearing. — To constitute impeachment, the witness must have knowingly and willfully sworn differently on the present trial from the witness's testimony on the former trial. Stanford v. State, 153 Ga. 219, 112 S.E. 130 (1922).

Court determines materiality. — Party may be required to announce the statement the party seeks to contradict, that the court may judge of its materiality. Williams v. Chapman, 7 Ga. 467 (1849).

Cross-examination. — When it is sought to impeach a witness by a party in order to disparage the witness's testimony, this is properly done by cross-examination of the witness. McRae v. Boykin, 50 Ga. App. 866, 179 S.E. 535 (1935), rev'd on other grounds, 182 Ga. 252, 185 S.E. 246 (1936).

Statement of a witness which does no more than show that the witness made a prior contradictory statement has its most effective use at trial in cross-examination. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Recalling of witness for further examination at the instance of either party is always within the discretion of the trial judge. Money v. State, 137 Ga. App. 779, 224 S.E.2d 783, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 858, 97 S. Ct. 158, 50 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1976).

Defendant's request to recall state's witnesses for further cross-examination for impeachment purposes is properly denied if the court is not informed of what statements are intended to be contradicted. Wehunt v. State, 168 Ga. App. 353, 309 S.E.2d 143 (1983).

Alibi witnesses. — State was obligated to respond to defendants' notification of their intention to rely upon alibi as a defense; neither the state's general witness list nor the state's entitlement to rebut or impeach a witness's testimony with conflicting testimony or statements under O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-82 and 24-9-83 was a substitute for compliance with O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(b). Hayes v. State, 249 Ga. App. 857, 549 S.E.2d 813 (2001).

Impeaching memory. — It is not competent to impeach, by witnesses, the memory of the witness in order to disparage the witness's testimony. It must be done by cross-examination. Goodwyn v. Goodwyn, 20 Ga. 600 (1856).

Because the defendant could have impeached the witnesses who allegedly contradicted themselves as a result of faded memories without losing any right to open and conclude closing argument before the jury, the defendant could not show that an alleged loss of memory caused by any delay in the proceedings amounted to prejudice. Parker v. State, 283 Ga. App. 714, 642 S.E.2d 111 (2007), cert. denied, U.S. , 128 S. Ct. 496, 169 L.Ed.2d 347 (2007).

Criminal defendant, when a witness, stands before the court as any other witness. Klug v. State, 77 Ga. 734 (1886); Coleman v. State, 141 Ga. 731, 82 S.E. 228 (1914).

Prosecutor, when a witness, stands before the court as any other witness. Womack v. State, 72 Ga. 215 (1883).

When allegations that defendant impeached were not supported by evidence, summary judgment was not precluded. — See Bonney Motor Express, Inc. v. Yates, 171 Ga. App. 754, 320 S.E.2d 844 (1984).

Because admission of booking photograph did not suggest guilt of prior crime or enflame jury, it did not place defendant's character into evidence or deprive defendant of a fair trial. Hunter v. State, 273 Ga. App. 52, 614 S.E.2d 179 (2005).

Inconsistent statements. — While the trial court erred in holding that a witness's prior inconsistent statement had to be admitted into evidence prior to the statement's use for impeachment, considering that the allegedly inconsistent statement concerned only a fine distinction whether, prior to the defendant's wife's arrival, the defendant and the murder victim argued with each other or the defendant alone yelled at the victim, the trial court's error did not contribute to the verdict and was, therefore, harmless. Holley v. State, 281 Ga. 177, 637 S.E.2d 32 (2006).

Trial court did not err in allowing a codefendant to play a 9-1-1 tape to impeach a witness's testimony with a prior inconsistent statement because the witness and the 9-1-1 operator could all be heard on the 9-1-1 tape, they testified at trial, and they were subject to cross-examination; on the 9-1-1 tape, the witness could be heard saying that the defendant told the witness that the defendant shot the victim, but at trial, the witness testified, "I don't believe that I said that she said she shot him," and the codefendant reminded the witness of the statement on the 9-1-1 call, but the witness did not change the witness' testimony. Krause v. State, 286 Ga. 745, 691 S.E.2d 211 (2010).

Evidence sufficient to impeach in the following cases. — See Central of Ga. Ry. v. Pitts, 38 Ga. App. 780, 145 S.E. 518 (1928); Sands v. State, 46 Ga. App. 730, 169 S.E. 58 (1933); Felts v. State, 244 Ga. 503, 260 S.E.2d 887 (1979); Walker v. Bruno's, Inc., 228 Ga. App. 589, 492 S.E.2d 336 (1997).

Use of term "bad guys." — Defendant's motion for a mistrial was properly denied as a witness's use of the term "bad guys" in explaining undercover operations did not improperly inject defendant's character into evidence; even assuming the comment was improper, the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt. Salgado v. State, 268 Ga. App. 18, 601 S.E.2d 417 (2004).

Contradictions were shown in the following cases. — See Cox v. State, 64 Ga. 374, 37 Am. R. 76 (1879) (stenographic notes of testimony at coroner's inquest); Owens v. State, 139 Ga. 92, 76 S.E. 860 (1912) (affidavit made previous to trial); Frank v. State, 141 Ga. 243, 80 S.E. 1016 (1914) (affidavit of witness plus testimony of another witness).

No showing of contradictory statements. — Trial court did not err by not disclosing a disciplinary report in a police officer's personnel file as: (1) no attempt was made to impeach the officer by disproving the facts testified to by the officer under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82; (2) there was no showing that any of the documents disallowed contained any contradictory statements previously made by the officer as to matters relevant to the officer's testimony and the case under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83; (3) there was no contention that the officer had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude; and (4) the evidence was, at best, related solely to specific bad acts and not to the general bad character of the officer, which was not admissible as impeachment material under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 178, 598 S.E.2d 898 (2004).

In a defendant's second trial for driving under the influence, it was not error to prevent the defendant from cross-examining a deputy under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83 about a statement the deputy made at the first trial about the defendant's level of intoxication; at the second trial, the state did not ask the deputy about the defendant's level of intoxication or about field sobriety tests, and thus, there was no contradiction between the deputy's testimony at the second trial and the deputy's testimony at the first trial. Davidson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 333, 643 S.E.2d 848 (2007).

Waiver on appeal. — Although an injured driver contended on appeal that the trial court erred in allowing the opposing party to impeach the driver by use of the driver's chiropractic records, because the driver failed to object on that ground at trial and failed to raise the foundational requirements for impeaching a witness, the error was waived for purposes of appeal. Lindsey v. Turner, 279 Ga. App. 595, 631 S.E.2d 789 (2006).

Because the record showed that the defendant acquiesced in the trial court's decision to give curative instructions regarding testimony given by a state's witness which the defendant claimed reflected prior criminal conduct that improperly placed the defendant's character in issue, and did not again move for a mistrial after the instructions were given, the defendant waived the issue for purposes of appeal. Northern v. State, 285 Ga. App. 303, 645 S.E.2d 701 (2007).

Admissibility of Statement

1. In General

General rule. — Prior inconsistent statements are in general admissible to impeach a witness. Andrews v. State, 118 Ga. 1, 43 S.E. 852 (1903); Bates v. State, 4 Ga. App. 486, 61 S.E. 888 (1908); Tommie v. State, 158 Ga. App. 216, 279 S.E.2d 510 (1981).

Rule that declarations to third persons against the declarant's penal interest to the effect that the declarant and not the accused was the actual perpetrator of the offense, are not admissible in favor of the accused at the trial and does not apply when the declarant is present, testifies, and is subject to cross-examination; accused should have been permitted to produce testimony of declarant's prior inconsistent statements as substantive evidence of the facts contained therein. Guess v. State, 262 Ga. 487, 422 S.E.2d 178 (1992).

Bolstering. — Although the state prematurely bolstered a child victim's testimony, the parties knew that the victim's credibility would be immediately undermined; evidence that defendant told the victim that a relative had been imprisoned for improper "touching" and that defendant masturbated with the victim's underwear were admissible as relevant. Robinson v. State, 275 Ga. App. 537, 621 S.E.2d 770 (2005).

One method of impeaching a witness is by showing that the witness made statements out of court at variance with the witness's testimony on the witness stand. Ricks v. State, 70 Ga. App. 395, 28 S.E.2d 303 (1943).

Evidence of other crime inadmissible because defendant offered no evidence in support of entrapment defense. — Trial court erred in admitting evidence of prior conviction and defendant's involvement in other drug deals because defendant offered no evidence in support of the entrapment defense and the state had no basis on which to admit the character evidence; however, the denial of defendant's motion for mistrial was not an abuse of discretion in light of the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt and a detailed curative instruction advising the jury not to consider the improperly-admitted evidence. Nettles v. State, 276 Ga. App. 259, 623 S.E.2d 140 (2005).

Admissibility of Statement (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)*Prior statement of fact or of opinion. —

Prior inconsistent statement is admissible to impeach a witness whether the statement was one of fact or one of opinion when it is different from the facts testified to or from the conclusion which the testimony tends to establish. Bates v. State, 4 Ga. App. 486, 61 S.E. 888 (1908).

Rape victim's statement to an investigator was not impeaching since it was neither contradictory nor inconsistent with her trial testimony, but merely stated facts that corroborated the trial testimony. Hightower v. State, 227 Ga. App. 74, 487 S.E.2d 646 (1997).

Contradictory statements were immaterial. — In a trial for statutory rape and child molestation, the trial court did not err in not allowing the defendant to use contradictory statements about the victim's age to impeach the victim under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83 as the victim's age was not contested at trial and the defendant's knowledge of the victim's age was irrelevant; thus, the contradictory statements were immaterial. Haywood v. State, 283 Ga. App. 568, 642 S.E.2d 203 (2007).

Relevant matters. — Contradictory statements must relate to matters relevant to the testimony of the witness and to the case. Green v. State, 43 Ga. 368 (1871); Whitaker v. State, 79 Ga. 87, 3 S.E. 403 (1887); Futch v. State, 90 Ga. 472, 16 S.E. 102 (1892); Watts v. State, 120 Ga. 496, 48 S.E. 142 (1904); Mann v. State, 124 Ga. 760, 53 S.E. 324, 4 L.R.A. (n.s.) 934 (1906); Tanner v. State, 163 Ga. 121, 135 S.E. 917 (1926); Cooper v. State, 66 Ga. App. 594, 18 S.E.2d 644 (1942); Green v. State, 138 Ga. App. 48, 225 S.E.2d 495 (1976); Wakily v. State, 225 Ga. App. 56, 483 S.E.2d 313 (1997).

Since the declarant's testimony was relevant to the case and contradictory statements attributed to the declarant were relevant to the declarant's testimony, testimony proffered by the accused should have been admitted under "the prior inconsistent statement exception to the hearsay rule." Guess v. State, 262 Ga. 487, 422 S.E.2d 178 (1992).

"Material matters" are matters competent to prove on one side or other of the issue, and admissible for that purpose. Kennedy v. State, 9 Ga. App. 219, 70 S.E. 986 (1911); Stockton v. State, 20 Ga. App. 186, 92 S.E. 1019 (1917).

Pre-trial statements. — For a party's credibility to be impeached by prior inconsistent statements, such statement must be relevant and material to the issues on trial; a factual stipulation presented by the parties to the trial court did not conflict with the pre-trial statement, and did not cause a prior inconsistent statement for purposes of impeachment. Redfearn v. Huntcliff Homes Assoc., 260 Ga. App. 150, 579 S.E.2d 37 (2003).

Purpose of testimony limited. — Testimony offered avowedly to impeach the credit of a witness by showing contradictory statements cannot, in the argument before the jury, be used for a wholly different purpose. Williams v. Chapman, 7 Ga. 467 (1849).

Witness could not be impeached by a memorandum that was not written by the witness and that did not record any statement made by the witness. Mobley v. State, 265 Ga. 292, 455 S.E.2d 61 (1995).

Witness could not be cross-examined regarding a document the witness did not prepare and did not know about since the purpose of the cross-examination was to impeach the witness, not refresh the witness's recollection. Fleming v. State, 269 Ga. 245, 497 S.E.2d 211 (1998).

Email could not be used for impeachment. — In a child molestation prosecution, an email that the defendant claimed the victim sent, in which the writer apologized for lying about the defendant, was not admissible to impeach the victim, as no testimony elicited from the victim would have been contradicted by the email. Had the victim been asked about telling anyone that the victim had lied about the defendant, and denied doing so, the email might have been admitted for impeachment. Hollie v. State, 298 Ga. App. 1, 679 S.E.2d 47 (2009).

Inadmissible testimony. — When the testimony of the former trial is inadmissible in evidence, that testimony may not be resorted to for purposes of impeachment. Mitchum v. State, 11 Ga. 615 (1852).

Improper admission of inconsistent statement harmless error. — In a divorce proceeding, admission of the testimony of a witness called by a spouse that impeached the testimony of the other spouse's lover, also called by the spouse, would have been proper as prior inconsistent statements under O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-81 and 24-9-83, but the timing of the impeaching testimony before the lover's testimony made the admission improper; there was no harm in the error, however, because the spouse's lover was called as a witness and was questioned about the contradictory statements. Moxley v. Moxley, 281 Ga. 326, 638 S.E.2d 284 (2006).

Proving testimony by notes or memoranda. — For the purpose of impeaching witnesses, their testimony of the committing trial may be proved as well by one who heard it as by the notes or memoranda of the evidence taken by the court. Chambers v. State, 88 Ga. App. 57, 76 S.E.2d 84 (1953).

Document introduced in absence of witness. — If the foundation for impeaching documentary evidence was properly laid, it is immaterial that the witness had concluded the witness's testimony and was absent from the courthouse at the time the document was finally introduced in evidence. Hartley v. Sanders, 45 Ga. App. 273, 164 S.E. 232 (1932).

Admission by witness of previous statement. — Once a witness has unequivocally admitted having previously made inconsistent statements in a written report, the written report becomes inadmissible as proof of the inconsistency is no longer necessary or material. Choate v. Carter, 98 Ga. App. 375, 105 S.E.2d 909 (1958); Pethel v. Waters, 220 Ga. 543, 140 S.E.2d 252 (1965); Dickey v. State, 240 Ga. 634, 242 S.E.2d 55 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982).

When a witness admits making prior inconsistent statements, the witness has impeached oneself and it is not error to exclude the statements themselves from evidence. Daniels v. State, 203 Ga. App. 873, 418 S.E.2d 137 (1992).

Whether the witness admits or denies making the prior inconsistent statement in writing, the written statement may be admissible and considered as substantive evidence. Language in cases that prior inconsistent statements are not admissible solely because the witness admits he or she made the statements is disapproved. Duckworth v. State, 268 Ga. 566, 492 S.E.2d 201 (1997).

Denial of prior statement. — Witness's prior statement which is inconsistent on a material matter with the witness's trial testimony is properly admitted into evidence to impeach the witness's trial testimony in cases where the witness denies having made such a statement. Dickey v. State, 240 Ga. 634, 242 S.E.2d 55 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982).

Inconsistent statement admissible only after witness's denial. — Prior inconsistent statement becomes admissible only if the witness denies having made the statement. Harden v. State, 166 Ga. App. 536, 304 S.E.2d 748 (1983).

Fact that O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83 does not mandate that a prior inconsistent statement be admitted into evidence before it is used for impeachment did not render erroneous a trial court's admission of such a statement after cross-examination. Williams v. State, 236 Ga. App. 351, 511 S.E.2d 910 (1999).

Witness failing to deny former statement. — Trial court erred in refusing to allow appellant to impeach witness's testimony simply because the witness failed to deny making the witness's former statements. Sprouse v. State, 250 Ga. 174, 296 S.E.2d 584 (1982).

Admissible as substantive evidence. — Prior inconsistent statement of a witness who takes the stand and is subject to cross-examination is admissible as substantive evidence, and is not limited in value only to impeachment purposes. Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982); Sprouse v. State, 250 Ga. 174, 296 S.E.2d 584 (1982); Belcher v. State, 188 Ga. App. 244, 372 S.E.2d 650 (1988).

Witness's prior statement which is inconsistent on a material matter with the witness's trial testimony is proper evidence to impeach the witness's trial testimony. Such an inconsistent statement of a witness is not limited in value only to impeachment purposes but is likewise admissible as substantive evidence. Truitt v. State, 168 Ga. App. 616, 309 S.E.2d 895 (1983).

Prior inconsistent statement of a witness who takes the stand and is subject to cross-examination is admissible as substantive evidence. Lumpkin v. State, 255 Ga. 363, 338 S.E.2d 431 (1986), overruled on other grounds, Woodard v. State, 269 Ga. 317, 496 S.E.2d 896, (1998).

It was proper to allow the state to introduce prior inconsistent statements as substantive evidence with regard to three witnesses who claimed to have suffered memory loss, as well as three other witnesses who equivocated regarding their statements. Spann v. State, 248 Ga. App. 419, 546 S.E.2d 368 (2001).

Evidence which is admissible for impeachment purposes only cannot serve as evidence in support of an essential factual contention. Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982).

Prior incriminatory statement is admissible for impeachment purposes even if Miranda warnings have not been given. Graham v. State, 175 Ga. App. 411, 333 S.E.2d 664 (1985).

First offender plea. — Whether or not a first offender plea is admissible to prove conviction of a felony, it is admissible to disprove facts testified to by the witness and as a prior statement contradicting that same testimony. Hightower v. GMC, 255 Ga. 349, 338 S.E.2d 426 (1986).

Valuation made two years prior to condemnation not admissible. — In a condemnation proceeding, statements concerning the value of the subject property on a date approximately two years prior to the taking may be excluded as impeaching evidence since the value of the property two years prior is not shown to be relevant to the issue of the value of the property at the time of the property's subsequent taking. DOT v. Wright, 169 Ga. App. 332, 312 S.E.2d 824 (1983).

Any testimony as to what the witness may have heard on the day of the shooting would not be independently admissible as non-impeachable evidence. Jones v. State, 265 Ga. 138, 454 S.E.2d 482 (1995).

Falsity partially conceded. — Written document previously made and signed by a witness, which is contrary to the witness's testimony, may be introduced in evidence for the purpose of impeachment on the ground of contradictory statements; and this may be done even though witness admits signing the document, and testifies that most of the statements contained therein are false, since the document contains other statements whose falsity is not admitted. Manley v. Combs, 197 Ga. 768, 30 S.E.2d 485

(1944); Hodges v. Haverty, 115 Ga. App. 199, 154 S.E.2d 276 (1967).

Best evidence rule inapplicable. — Since a defendant's admission of a prior inconsistent statement included defendant's admission of being an inmate of a penitentiary, the state's failure to prove the prior conviction by the record thereof did not violate the best evidence rule and was harmless error. Timberlake v. State, 246 Ga. 488, 271 S.E.2d 792 (1980).

Testimony held material in the following cases. — See Evans v. State, 95 Ga. 468, 22 S.E. 298 (1894) (conversation between suborner and perjurer after false swearing); Jordan v. State, 120 Ga. 864, 48 S.E. 352 (1904) (statement in presence of accused of chastity of prosecutor in seduction case); Fountain v. State, 7 Ga. App. 559, 67 S.E. 218 (1910) (statement by prosecutor before commissioner of friendliness for accused in trial of accused for using profane language).

Testimony held immaterial in the following cases. — See Howard v. State, 73 Ga. 83 (1884), overruled on other grounds, Chattanooga, R. & C.R.R. v. Owen, 90 Ga. 265, 15 S.E. 853 (1892) (effort to stop prosecution on payment of money when witness not a party to transaction); Allgood v. State, 87 Ga. 668, 13 S.E. 569 (1891) (difficulty caused by deceased); Kennedy v. State, 9 Ga. App. 219, 70 S.E. 986 (1911) (prosecutor induced by another to bring prosecution); Jones v. State, 137 Ga. 21, 72 S.E. 410 (1911) (circumstances under which child begotten in bastardy proceeding); Haywood v. State, 12 Ga. App. 240, 76 S.E. 1077 (1913) (offer of money for producing convicting evidence).

Statement not admissible as prior inconsistent statement. — See Garrett v. State, 169 Ga. App. 327, 312 S.E.2d 621 (1983).

Refusal to admit prior statement harmless error. — Even if the trial court erred in refusing to permit defendant to read aloud part of defendant's prior statement, since defendant's entire custodial statement was admitted into evidence and the jury was free to determine what meaning, weight, and credibility to accord that statement, any error was harmless. O'Hara v. State, 241 Ga. App. 855, 528 S.E.2d 296 (2000).

2. What Statements Admissible

Writing admissible. — Any writing previously made by a witness, which is in conflict with the witness's testimony, is admissible for the purpose of impeachment. State Hwy. Dep't v. Raines, 129 Ga. App. 123, 199 S.E.2d 96 (1973); Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Depositions. — Words "written statements made under oath in connection with some judicial proceedings" include previously taken depositions of a witness in a case. Williams v. Chapman, 7 Ga. 467 (1849); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Smith, 85 Ga. 530, 11 S.E. 859 (1890); Raleigh & G.R.R. v. Bradshaw, 113 Ga. 862, 39 S.E. 555 (1901); Estill v. Citizens & S. Bank, 153 Ga. 618, 113 S.E. 522 (1922); Phillips v. Howard, 109 Ga. App. 404, 136 S.E.2d 473 (1964).

Deposition concerning same issues. — Witness may be contradicted and thus discredited by the witness's depositions previously taken in the same case or in a different case involving the same issues. Lexington Developers, Inc. v. O'Neal Constr. Co., 145 Ga. App. 309, 243 S.E.2d 577 (1978).

Certified copy of witness's plea. — State's use of a certified copy of witness's plea of guilty to a charge of possession of cocaine was a permissible method of impeachment. Gardner v. State, 263 Ga. 197, 429 S.E.2d 657 (1993).

Testimony concerning lost deposition. — When depositions were never properly transmitted to the court and were lost, the court properly allowed oral testimony as to what the interrogated persons said before the court commissioner, not for the purpose of establishing their previous testimony given in the case, but merely for the purpose of proving alleged previous contradictory statements, and properly permitted counsel for the defendants to refer to what purported to be a carbon copy of the previous questions and answers, in questioning the witnesses in order to lay a foundation for their impeachment and in testifying personally as to what answers were previously given, counsel at last testifying from counsel's own recollection after having counsel's memory thus refreshed. Lazar v. Black & White Cab Co., 50 Ga. App. 567, 179 S.E. 250 (1935).

Testimony at former trial. — When properly authenticated and proper preliminary proof for its introduction has been made, testimony given in a previous trial of the case is admissible for the purpose of impeaching a witness. Butler v. State, 142 Ga. 286, 82 S.E. 654 (1914).

Statement made in different case. — Rule stated is not restricted to contradictory statements made in the same case and is applicable to contradictory statements made in different cases. Jones v. State, 70 Ga. App. 431, 28 S.E.2d 373 (1943).

Prior testimony from committing trial may be used. Brown v. State, 76 Ga. 623 (1886).

Transcript of earlier trial. — It is not error to allow the state to use a transcript of an earlier trial for impeachment purposes, when there is no reference at trial to the fact that a previous jury had found the appellant guilty of the offense for which the appellant had been tried since, even if the use of the transcript indicated to the jurors that there had been a previous trial, it could just as easily lead them to the conclusion that the previous trial had resulted in a mistrial as that it had resulted in a conviction. Carroll v. State, 147 Ga. App. 332, 248 S.E.2d 702 (1978).

Unauthenticated transcript. — Court did not err in refusing to allow criminal defendant's counsel to read to the jury selected portions of a tape-recorded interview counsel had conducted with one of the state's witnesses approximately a year before trial in which the witness had assertedly made statements which were inconsistent with the witness's testimony at trial. The transcript clearly was not self-authenticating and thus was not admissible in the absence of at least some semblance of a showing that it was accurate. Dyous v. State, 195 Ga. App. 99, 392 S.E.2d 730 (1990).

Testimony as to other offenses may be admitted in rebuttal to testimony of a witness put up by the defendant. Casey v. State, 133 Ga. App. 161, 210 S.E.2d 375 (1974).

Testimony from Jackson v. Denno hearing. — Defendant's testimony given during a Jackson v. Denno hearing was admissible at trial for the jury's consideration both as incriminatory testimony and as prior contradictory, inconsistent statements. Brown v. State, 226 Ga. App. 140, 486 S.E.2d 370 (1997).

Prior statements implicating accused. — Trial court did not err in allowing prosecution to cross-examine two state witnesses after their testimony differed from their prior statements implicating the appellant in a murder and after they had repudiated the prior statements as having been made under duress. Burney v. State, 252 Ga. 25, 310 S.E.2d 899 (1984).

Prior inconsistent statement. — Hospital intake record was admissible to impeach a defense witness by proof of a prior inconsistent statement regarding the identity of the driver in a DUI prosecution. Gee v. State, 210 Ga. App. 60, 435 S.E.2d 275 (1993).

In a prosecution for child molestation and related offenses, the prior inconsistent statement of a witness that the witness thought defendant “done it” was admissible to impeach the witness’s direct testimony that the witness didn’t believe the victim when the victim first reported the sexual assaults. Shropshire v. State, 226 Ga. App. 669, 487 S.E.2d 384 (1997).

Trial court erred when the court prohibited defendant from questioning a witness regarding a prior inconsistent statement contained in a document not admitted into evidence. Whitehead v. State, 232 Ga. App. 140, 499 S.E.2d 922 (1998).

Trial court did not err in permitting defendant’s counsel to cross-examine plaintiff using plaintiff’s medical records without first allowing counsel to view the documents. Fulton-Fritchlee v. Douglas, 240 Ga. App. 413, 240 S.E.2d 413 (1999).

State was entitled to impeach the testimony of defendant’s cousin denying that defendant participated in a theft as it was entitled to do so using a contradictory statement previously made by the cousin as to matters relevant to the cousin’s testimony and to the case. Wilson v. State, 258 Ga. App. 166, 573 S.E.2d 432 (2002).

Hearsay testimony of a detective regarding statements made by a co-conspirator after the co-conspirator denied remembering the crime or giving the police any information was admissible as substance evidence under the prior inconsistent statement exception to the hearsay rule. Robinson v. State, 278 Ga. 31, 597 S.E.2d 386 (2004).

In a personal injury action filed by a couple, including an injured wife, against a tractor-trailer’s owner and its driver, the trial court did not err in admitting doctors’ reports outlining that the wife “passed out” before the collision: (1) as substantive evidence, given that the wife was present at trial and subject to cross-examination; and (2) as prior inconsistent statements to impeach the wife based upon earlier testimony that the wife never lost consciousness. Collins v. Mitchell, 282 Ga. App. 860, 640 S.E.2d 364 (2006).

When a witness at the defendant’s trial contradicted statements the witness had made to others about the defendant’s involvement in a murder, the trial court properly admitted testimony about the earlier statements as prior inconsistent statements. Paige v. State, 281 Ga. 504, 639 S.E.2d 478 (2007).

Witness’s testimony that the brother of a juvenile defendant told the witness, “My brother just shot someone,” was not inadmissible hearsay; the brother testified that the brother had not made such a statement, the testimony was admissible as an inconsistent statement, and it was also admissible as an excited utterance, as it was made by the brother after receiving a startling text message. In the Interest of B.S., 284 Ga. App. 680, 644 S.E.2d 527 (2007).

Trial court properly admitted a witness’s pretrial statements to police in which the witness stated that the witness had observed another person have sex with the defendant in exchange for drugs, and that the defendant had been cutting and packaging the drugs into small bags. At trial, the witness denied the facts set forth in these statements and further denied making these statements to the police; thus, the prior inconsistent statements were properly admitted over the defendant’s hearsay objection as impeachment evidence and as substantive evidence of the defendant’s guilt. Gassett v. State, 289 Ga. App. 792, 658 S.E.2d 366 (2008).

Whether or not the trial court erred by refusing to allow the admission of an assault victim’s prior inconsistent statement, any error was harmless as defense counsel thoroughly cross-examined the victim about inconsistencies between the victim’s written statement and trial testimony, and elicited testimony from a responding officer concerning a statement that the victim made to the officer shortly after the incident occurred, which likewise was inconsistent with the victim’s trial testimony. Cash v. State, 293 Ga. App. 702, 667 S.E.2d 691 (2008).

Prior consistent statement. — Victim's statement to a doctor was properly admitted as a prior consistent statement as the victim testified at trial and was cross-examined by the defendant; the defendant asserted in opening statement, that the defendant implied during cross-examination that because the victim's parent would have been upset if the parent believed the victim were having consensual sex with the parent's old significant other, the victim falsely testified that the defendant forced the victim to engage in sex, which testimony was designed to preserve the victim's relationship with the parent, and to continue the victim's receipt of food and shelter from the parent. Smith v. State, 282 Ga. App. 339, 638 S.E.2d 791 (2006).

Failure of other jury to return guilty verdict. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83 does not allow the impeachment of a witness by the mere showing that a jury which has previously heard the same testimony in another context in another trial failed to return a verdict of guilty. An acquittal merely exempts a defendant from punishment and from another prosecution. It does not necessarily show that defendant was innocent and that, therefore, the state's witnesses did not testify truthfully. Jones v. State, 159 Ga. App. 634, 284 S.E.2d 651 (1981).

Testimony of police officers as to prior statements of a witness is admissible as substantive evidence of guilt of the accused in the nature of an admission. Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982).

Testimony of sheriff's department investigator admitted. — Sheriff's department investigator's explanation of the nature of the interview was highly relevant to whether the statement defendant gave was voluntary. Therefore, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in admitting the waiver certificate, even if the admission incidentally placed the defendant's character in issue under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83. Bynum v. State, 300 Ga. App. 163, 684 S.E.2d 330 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0225, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 300 (Ga. 2010).

Confession of codefendant. — In prosecution for assault with intent to rape, when, on cross-examination, it was brought out that codefendant had made a signed confession, and state then placed codefendant on stand and, after codefendant had denied the codefendant's and defendant's guilt, confronted the codefendant with sworn confession for purposes of impeachment, such confession was admissible, in view of conflicting evidence as to whether or not it was voluntarily made and was made without fear of injury or hope of reward. Elliott v. State, 87 Ga. App. 456, 74 S.E.2d 366 (1953).

Confession of coconspirator. — Admission into evidence of the alleged confession of a coconspirator was not error since the coconspirator had been called by the defense and the district attorney stated that the testimony would be for the sole purpose of impeachment. Hodge v. State, 149 Ga. App. 326, 254 S.E.2d 478 (1979).

While dying declaration of the person slain may be subject to impeachment, where under the facts of the case the evidence that deceased "brought" a witness some liquor on the day of the killing was not relevant for that purpose; nor was it admissible to show the violent character of the deceased. Green v. State, 195 Ga. 759, 25 S.E.2d 502 (1943).

Hearsay statements inadmissible. — Statements made by defendant in the course of an earlier recorded meeting with the witness were hearsay and could not be used to impeach the witness. Willett v. State, 223 Ga. App. 866, 479 S.E.2d 132 (1996).

A victim advocate's testimony that a domestic abuse victim had told the advocate that the defendant was drunk when the defendant hit the victim was hearsay and not admissible as a prior inconsistent statement of the victim, because the victim did not testify as to whether or not the defendant was drunk. However, counsel's failure to object was not ineffective assistance because there was no showing of a reasonable probability that the result would have been different if the jury thought defendant was drunk or not at the time of the incident. Miller v. State, 300 Ga. App. 652, 686 S.E.2d 302 (2009).

Hearsay admissible for impeachment. — Testimony which consisted of declarations by one who was not a party to the case is ordinarily classed as hearsay but is admissible for the sole purpose of impeachment. Wiggins v. Lord, 87 Ga. App. 486, 74 S.E.2d 389 (1953); Simmons v. State, 139 Ga. App. 180, 228 S.E.2d 185 (1976).

Letters not inconsistent. — Letters defendant wrote to other inmates were improperly admitted as impeachment evidence because the state claimed that the letters were admissible to impeach defendant's testimony that defendant did not have an extramarital affair and that because the husband had raped defendant, defendant did not enjoy sexual intercourse; the letters did not contain any statements regarding the alleged affair or rape, were not inconsistent with defendant's testimony, and did not address issues in the trial. Sammons v. State, 279 Ga. 386, 612 S.E.2d 785 (2005).

Silence as previous statement. — It is error to permit cross-examination of a defendant for impeachment purposes regarding defendant's silence or failure to offer an exculpatory statement, at the time of defendant's arrest, including a defendant who was not apprised of defendant's Miranda rights. Harrison v. State, 154 Ga. App. 343, 268 S.E.2d 396 (1980).

Evidence of gang membership admissible. — Because evidence of defendant's gang membership was admissible both as part of the res gestae of the crime and to show motive, the trial court properly denied defendant's motions in limine and for a new trial, even though the evidence implicated defendant's character. Garibay v. State, 275 Ga. App. 170, 620 S.E.2d 424 (2005).

Effect of counteraffidavit, see Gardner v. Grannis, 57 Ga. 539 (1876); Brantley v. State, 16 Ga. App. 6, 84 S.E. 131 (1915).

Foundation

Purpose of foundation. — Foundation that statute requires be laid before contradictory statements may be proved to impeach a witness is for the purpose of giving the witness the opportunity to correct and explain the witness's evidence. Estill v. Citizens & S. Bank, 153 Ga. 618, 113 S.E. 552 (1922); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Rogers, 105 Ga. App. 778, 125 S.E.2d 893 (1962).

Laying foundation required. — Witness cannot be impeached by proof of contradictory statements without laying a foundation with the particularity prescribed by statute. Williams v. Turner, 7 Ga. 348 (1849); Floyd v. Wallace, 31 Ga. 688 (1861); Taylor v. State, 110 Ga. 150, 35 S.E. 61 (1900); Raleigh &

G.R.R. v. Bradshaw, 113 Ga. 862, 39 S.E. 555 (1901); Georgia, Fla. & Ala. Ry. v. Sasser, 4 Ga. App. 276, 61 S.E. 505 (1908); Luke v. Cannon, 4 Ga. App. 538, 62 S.E. 110 (1908); Glover v. State, 137 Ga. 82, 92 S.E. 926 (1911); White v. Knapp, 31 Ga. App. 344, 120 S.E. 796 (1923); Stewart v. Avery, 38 Ga. App. 431, 144 S.E. 218 (1928); Johnson v. Roberson, 88 Ga. App. 548, 77 S.E.2d 232 (1953); Morris v. State, 228 Ga. 39, 184 S.E.2d 82 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1050, 92 S. Ct. 1511, 31 L. Ed. 2d 786 (1972).

Trial court did not err in failing to allow the defendant to testify as to a prior inconsistent statement made by the victim during a preliminary inquiry hearing where the foundation requirement of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83 was not met, since the victim was not questioned about the victim's prior inconsistent statement, and thus was afforded no opportunity to explain or deny the statement before it was offered at trial to impeach the victim. Horne v. State, 204 Ga. App. 81, 418 S.E.2d 441 (1992); Searcy v. State, 214 Ga. App. 620, 448 S.E.2d 468 (1994).

Impeachment with recorded statement not permitted. — Trial court did not err in refusing to allow impeachment of plaintiff with a statement made in a tape recorded interview after the investigator who conducted the interview was not available to testify, the transcript contained many indications of omissions and indecipherable speech, and the tape itself was barely audible. Georgia Ports Auth. v. Harris, 243 Ga. App. 508, 533 S.E.2d 404 (2000).

Police report of an investigating officer, which allegedly contained prior inconsistent statements of witnesses, was not allowed into evidence because defense counsel failed to lay the proper foundation for the admission of the report. Armour v. State, 265 Ga. App. 569, 594 S.E.2d 765 (2004).

Evidence of a victim's statement to the police, although not properly admitted as a prior inconsistent statement due to the failure to lay a proper foundation under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83, was properly admitted as part of the res gestae under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-3 because the victim's description of a distinctive jacket worn by one of the individuals who took a pickup truck was used by the police to search the defendant's residence. Stubbs v. State, 293 Ga. App. 692, 667 S.E.2d 905 (2008).

Foundation for impeachment by prior inconsistent statements is as follows: the cross-examiner will ask the witness whether the witness made the alleged statement, giving its substance, and naming the time, the place, and the person to whom made; if the witness denies the making of the statement, or fails to admit the statement, then the requirement of “laying the foundation” is satisfied and the cross-examiner, at the next stage of giving evidence, may prove the making of the alleged statement. Carter v. State, 244 Ga. 803, 262 S.E.2d 109 (1979); Sell v. State, 156 Ga. App. 333, 274 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

When prior inconsistent statement becomes admissible. — Prior inconsistent statement of a witness becomes admissible when the witness denies having made the statement. Pembroke Mgt., Inc. v. Cossaboon, 157 Ga. App. 675, 278 S.E.2d 100 (1981).

Prior contradictory statement of a witness does not become contradictory or exculpatory until the witness testifies. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

State properly questioned defendant’s mother as to whether the mother believed that the crimes defendant was on trial for were gang-related as the question was asked for the purpose of laying a foundation to introduce the mother’s prior inconsistent statement after the mother had testified in response to a defense question that the mother did not believe that defendant was involved in gang activity, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-9-81 and 24-9-83. Garrett v. State, 280 Ga. 30, 622 S.E.2d 323 (2005).

There was no requirement under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83 that the witness deny making any statement at all, and a trial court properly allowed the state to introduce a videotape of a pretrial statement given by the state’s own witness who admitted during the witness’s testimony that the witness made the statement, but testified that the witness lied to the police when doing so; the prior inconsistent statement was admissible as substantive evidence, and no instruction that the statement was admitted solely for purposes of impeachment, but not as substantive evidence, would have been appropriate. Cummings v. State, 280 Ga. 831, 632 S.E.2d 152 (2006).

Trial court did not err in allowing hearsay testimony from the defendant’s siblings regarding their father’s prior inconsistent statements about the incidents leading up to the charges filed, and the state laid the proper foundation for this testimony as: (1) the statements at issue contradicted the victim’s in-court testimony and were certainly relevant; (2) the victim denied making these statements; and (3) the victim’s explanation of the incident as an accident was elicited on cross-examination, and hence, such was sufficient to provide the foundational requirement that the witness be given the opportunity to admit, explain, or deny the prior statements. Therefore, the three requirements for admissibility were met. Buchanan v. State, 282 Ga. App. 298, 638 S.E.2d 436 (2006).

With regard to a defendant’s convictions for murder, felony murder, aggravated assault, and armed robbery, the trial court did not err by admitting certain prior inconsistent statements made by a witness with regard to seeing the defendant with a gun as both impeachment and substantive evidence because the witness was presented with the witness’s prior contradictory statement and was allowed to fully review it after being reminded of the time, place, person, and circumstance of the statement. After that review, the witness testified that the witness was both familiar with the statement and that the statement was fair and accurate, although the witness continued to question the statement’s contents; therefore, under those circumstances, an adequate foundation was laid for the statement to be used as impeachment evidence, and, since the witness was available at trial for cross-examination, the statement was also properly admitted as substantive evidence for the jury’s consideration. McKnight v. State, 283 Ga. 56, 656 S.E.2d 830 (2008).

Statement need not be introduced prior to questioning. — It is not necessary to admit the alleged inconsistent statement into evidence before questioning the witness about the statement. Harden v. State, 166 Ga. App. 536, 304 S.E.2d 748 (1983).

Trial court erred by limiting defendant’s cross-examination of a witness by not allowing the use of an alleged prior inconsistent statement contained in a document which defendant refused to tender into evidence.

Duckworth v. State, 268 Ga. 566, 492 S.E.2d 201 (1997).

Trial court's error in requiring defendant to tender statements of victims into evidence before using prior inconsistencies allegedly contained therein for impeachment purposes was harmless since the subsequently tendered statements were used in cross-examination of the victims. Maxwell v. State, 233 Ga. App. 419, 503 S.E.2d 668 (1998).

In order to lay the foundation for impeaching a witness with a prior inconsistent statement, the cross-examiner must show the written contradictory statement to the witness or read the statement in his or her hearing; the attorney need not introduce the prior written statement into evidence before using the statement to impeach the witness. Robinson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 481, 594 S.E.2d 696 (2004).

Requirements as to laying of foundation fulfilled. — See Peterson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 719, 305 S.E.2d 447 (1983); Meschino v. State, 259 Ga. 611, 385 S.E.2d 281 (1989); Ward v. State, 271 Ga. 648, 520 S.E.2d 205 (1999).

Proper foundation was laid before evidence impeaching defendant admitted. Eller v. State, 183 Ga. App. 724, 360 S.E.2d 53 (1987).

Trial court properly admitted a portion of a witness's written statement as a prior inconsistent statement under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83 because the state laid the appropriate foundation for the admission of the statement and the witness attempted to explain the inconsistency. Howell v. State, 278 Ga. App. 634, 629 S.E.2d 398 (2006).

Foundation for the use of a prior videotaped statement by a defendant's accomplice to impeach the accomplice's trial testimony was established by the accomplice when the accomplice testified that the accomplice had in fact given a videotaped statement in which the accomplice stated that the defendant was the one who shot and killed a community service officer, and there was no requirement that the accomplice actually reviewed the videotape before the videotape was used to impeach the accomplice. Byrum v. State, 282 Ga. 608, 652 S.E.2d 557 (2007).

Trial court's admission of the victim's prior inconsistent statement to a police investigator regarding the events surrounding the crime charged was proper as the prosecutor questioned the victim at considerable length regarding the statement, a tape recording of the victim's 9-1-1 call was played, and then, the prosecutor questioned the victim in detail regarding the contents of the earlier statement which the victim denied making. Gooch v. State, 289 Ga. App. 74, 656 S.E.2d 214 (2007).

No proper foundation was laid for proof of contradictory statement. Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 168 Ga. App. 202, 308 S.E.2d 547 (1983).

Although witness one, who made a prior inconsistent statement was present and available for cross-examination, introduction of the prior inconsistent statement through witness two was improper because witness one testified before the issue of the alleged statement to witness two had been raised, and witness one was never questioned with the specificity necessary to establish the foundation for admission of the alleged prior inconsistent statement. Edmond v. State, 283 Ga. 507, 661 S.E.2d 520 (2008).

Defendant failed to properly impeach defendant's witness by proof of previous contradictory statement, for while defendant put another witness on the stand who professed that the witness overheard the allegedly inconsistent statement, the defendant never, on direct examination, asked the original witness questions concerning the time, place, or circumstances attending the former statement, nor did the defendant bring the witness back to the witness stand for further questioning along this line. Smith v. State, 171 Ga. App. 758, 321 S.E.2d 213 (1984).

Failure to lay proper foundation to impeach witnesses not ineffective assistance of counsel because different outcome would not result. — Although a trial counsel's attempts to impeach two witnesses revealed a clear misunderstanding as to the steps necessary for proper impeachment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83, such that the impeachment evidence was not allowed by the trial court, that did not establish ineffective assistance of counsel as defendant failed to show that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Lemming v. State, 272 Ga.

App. 122, 612 S.E.2d 495 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Miller v. State, 285 Ga. 285, 676 S.E.2d 173 (2009).

Failure to challenge evidence of non-adjudicated crime was ineffective assistance of counsel. — Defendant's convictions for armed robbery, aggravated assault, and kidnapping of a couple in a residence were reversed on appeal as evidence that one victim was ordered from a standing to a lying position and that another was dragged around the home was insufficient to establish asportation to support the kidnapping counts since the movement was short in duration and incidental to the crimes of armed robbery and aggravated assault. The defendant's convictions for armed robbery and aggravated assault were reversed, however, as the defendant established that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel based on trial counsel's failure to object to the inadmissible hearsay statements of two witnesses, and the admission of improper impeachment evidence against the defendant regarding a crime for which the defendant was never adjudicated guilty for as a result of being a first offender at the time. Rayshad v. State, 295 Ga. App. 29, 670 S.E.2d 849 (2008).

It is not error to exclude a preliminary hearing transcript offered to impeach a witness where a proper foundation is not laid. Sosebee v. State, 169 Ga. App. 370, 312 S.E.2d 853 (1983).

Circumstances attending statement. — If the witness had made a contradictory statement, it was proper for counsel for defendants to call to the witness's attention the name of the person or company to whom made, and the circumstances attending the statement. Sweet v. Awtrey, 70 Ga. App. 334, 28 S.E.2d 154 (1943).

Personal opinions of witnesses. — Because the personal opinions of three potential witnesses were based on the defendant's work, and the limited interactions attendant thereto, and the witnesses could not offer any opinion and had no personal knowledge of the defendant's general reputation in the community, the failure to call the witnesses at trial for that purpose did not prejudice defendant's case. Thomas v. State, 282 Ga. 894, 655 S.E.2d 599 (2008).

Recall of witness to lay foundation. — Trial court erred in refusing to allow the defense to recall a prosecution witness to lay a foundation for admission of prior contradictory statements; the court's ruling forced defendant to choose between testifying personally or foregoing the admission of relevant evidence. Childress v. State, 266 Ga. 425, 467 S.E.2d 865 (1996).

Submitting writing to witness. — Statute was violated after counsel questioned the witness concerning contents of a letter prior to the letter's exhibition to the witness. Stamper v. Griffin, 12 Ga. 450 (1853).

Reading statement to witness. — Though a written statement not under oath must be read in the hearing of the witness, one under oath and made in connection with some judicial proceeding need not be read to the witness. Wilkerson v. State, 73 Ga. 799 (1884); Washington v. State, 124 Ga. 423, 52 S.E. 910 (1905).

To lay the proper foundation for the admission of a prior written inconsistent statement, it must be shown to the witness, or read in the witness's hearing. Davis v. State, 235 Ga. App. 256, 510 S.E.2d 537 (1998).

After counsel read five sentences from a police officer's report during cross-examination of that witness, it was held not to be evidence, but foundational language as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83. Davis v. State, 235 Ga. App. 256, 510 S.E.2d 537 (1998).

Court would reject the contention that the defendant had two deputies read paragraphs from their police reports into evidence simply to lay the required evidentiary foundation for impeaching the deputies with their prior inconsistent statements since defense counsel went beyond "mere cross-examination" and did more than recall a contradiction to the deputies by reading their prior inconsistent statements to them where counsel had each deputy read into evidence paragraphs taken from police reports that had been marked and handled before the jury as defense exhibits and, further, those paragraphs contained information addressing matters other than the challenged contradictory statements. Aldridge v. State, 237 Ga. App. 209, 515 S.E.2d 397 (1999).

Technical variance in the name stated by the witness as that of the person to whom a statement had been made and the witness's name when introduced for purposes of impeachment will not prevent the laying of a proper foundation when there is no real doubt that the two names belong to the same person. Taylor v. State, 135 Ga. 622, 70 S.E. 237 (1911).

Witness failing to recall previous statements. — Proof that a witness made previous statements contradictory to the statements the witness made while testifying is admissible, though the witness testifies the witness does not remember whether or not the witness made such previous contradictory statements. Waycaster v. State, 136 Ga. 95, 70 S.E. 883 (1911); Estill v. Citizens & S. Bank, 153 Ga. 618, 113 S.E. 552 (1922); Lexington Developers, Inc. v. O'Neal Constr. Co., 145 Ga. App. 309, 243 S.E.2d 577 (1978).

Impeaching evidence not called to witness's mind. — When a written statement of a witness is introduced in evidence by agreement of counsel, admitting not that the statement is true, but that the writing shows what the witness would testify at the trial if present, the statement is subject to impeachment even though the impeaching evidence cannot be called to the witness's mind on cross-examination in the manner provided by statute. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Miller, 104 Ga. App. 554, 122 S.E.2d 268 (1961).

No contradictory statement. — When no statement was made by the witness which could be contradicted, no foundation could be laid for impeachment purposes. Casey v. State, 133 Ga. App. 161, 210 S.E.2d 375 (1974); Hardeman v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 157 Ga. App. 271, 277 S.E.2d 65 (1981).

Since the police officer made no statement on an audiotape that differed materially from the officer's in-court testimony, and the officer did not deny any statement made earlier, the foundation for the admission of the audiotape was not made, and it was properly excluded. Ow v. State, 255 Ga. App. 98, 564 S.E.2d 512 (2002).

Inaccessibility of witness at the time it is sought to lay this foundation does not justify a departure from statute. Georgia, Fla. & Ala. Ry. v. Sasser, 4 Ga. App. 276, 61 S.E. 505 (1908).

Testimony only by deposition. — When the plaintiff testified only by deposition, and plaintiff had not been examined in respect to the statements contained in document, and plaintiff had not been confronted with the document by which it was sought to impeach plaintiff's testimony, or apprised of the contention that its effect was to contradict plaintiff's statements, the rule forbidding use of contradictory statements to impeach evidence taken by deposition is applicable. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Saul, 189 Ga. 1, 5 S.E.2d 214 (1939).

Inconsistency established via medical records. — In a personal injury action, if defendant is able to demonstrate that plaintiff, in fact, was the source of the statements in plaintiff's medical records, so that the statements constitute prior inconsistent statements, the medical records would be admissible to attack plaintiff's credibility as prior inconsistent statements under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83. Barone v. Law, 242 Ga. App. 102, 527 S.E.2d 898 (2000).

Time. — When the foundation has been laid for impeaching a witness, the witness called to prove the different statements will not be confined to any particular time. Thomasson v. Driskell, 13 Ga. 253 (1853).

Jury should be sent out. — If it is necessary to read the statement in order to determine whether the witness signed the statement, the jury should be sent out while the reading takes place. Robinson v. State, 120 Ga. 311, 47 S.E. 968 (1904).

Harmless error. — When the time, place, person, and circumstances attending a former contradictory statement made by a witness is not called to the witness's mind with as much certainty as possible, the subsequent statement cannot be impeached; however, when this evidence was admissible as a matter of substantive law, though the procedure through which it was admitted was not correct, its improper admission was harmless error. Felts v. State, 244 Ga. 503, 260 S.E.2d 887 (1979).

Reversible error not found. — Even though defendant failed to lay a foundation prior to using contradictory statements to impeach plaintiff's expert witness, it was not reversible error because the questioning complained of was elicited by plaintiff during cross-examination of the witness. Spearman v. Georgia Bldg. Auth., 224 Ga. App. 801, 482 S.E.2d 463 (1997).

Sustaining Witness

Introduction of entire former statement.

— When it is sought to impeach a witness by proving contradictory statements made by the witness under oath, it is competent to bring out all the testimony given by the witness on the former hearing, upon the point in question, in order to show that on the whole it is not inconsistent with the testimony of the witness given at the trial in progress. Lowe v. State, 97 Ga. 792, 25 S.E. 676 (1896); Wynes v. State, 182 Ga. 434, 185 S.E. 711 (1936).

No variance in testimony. — It is a defense to the witness to show there is no variance in the testimony. Brantley v. State, 133 Ga. 264, 65 S.E. 426 (1909), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1020, 106 S. Ct. 1208, 89 L. Ed. 2d 321 (1986).

Prior consistent statements. — Witness sought to be impeached by proof of contradictory statements cannot be supported by proof that the witness made elsewhere other statements consistent with the witness's testimony on the stand. Fussell v. State, 93 Ga. 450, 21 S.E. 97 (1893); Cook v. State, 124 Ga. 653, 53 S.E. 104 (1906); Smith v. State, 7 Ga. App. 252, 66 S.E. 556 (1909), later appeal, 7 Ga. App. 802, 68 S.E. 334 (1910); Cobb v. State, 11 Ga. App. 52, 74 S.E. 702 (1912); Douglas v. Herringdine, 117 Ga. 72, 159 S.E.2d 711 (1967).

Admission of testimony by an officer who spoke with a child molestation victim was proper to show that the victim's prior statement of what occurred that was made to the officer was consistent with the dates the victim testified to on direct examination and which were directly challenged during cross-examination; the officer's testimony was limited to the credibility issue raised in the victim's cross-examination and was not a bolstering of the victim's general credibility. Joines v. State, 264 Ga. App. 558, 591 S.E.2d 454 (2003).

Testimony by one officer regarding what a witness told another officer was admissible under the prior consistent statement exception to the hearsay rule since the witness's veracity was placed in issue and the witness was subject to cross-examination. Johnson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 777, 595 S.E.2d 625 (2004).

When evidence of good character admissible. — When it is sought to impeach a witness by proof of contradictory statements, this renders admissible in the witness's favor testimony as to the witness's general good character. Bell Bros. v. Aiken, 1 Ga. App. 36, 57 S.E. 1001 (1907); Georgia Life Ins. Co. v. McCranie, 12 Ga. App. 855, 78 S.E. 1115 (1913); Ricks v. State, 70 Ga. App. 395, 28 S.E.2d 303 (1943).

Reputation for truth and veracity.

— When evidence of contradictory statements by a witness is offered by way of impeaching the witness's veracity, general evidence that the witness is a man of truth and veracity may be admitted, controverted, and denied. Stamper v. Griffin, 12 Ga. 450 (1853).

Evidence of veracity where credibility not attacked.

— Until the adverse party attacks the credibility of a witness, either for bad character or because of contradictory statements, the party calling the witness cannot introduce evidence in support of the witness's character for veracity. P.D. v. State, 151 Ga. App. 662, 261 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

Proof of good character. — See Price v. State, 72 Ga. 441 (1884); Clark v. State, 117 Ga. 254, 43 S.E. 853 (1903); Gordon v. State, 10 Ga. App. 35, 72 S.E. 544 (1911); Haywood v. State, 12 Ga. App. 240, 76 S.E. 1077 (1913).

Testimony under oath from witness who accepted plea bargain.

— With regard to defendant's conviction for trafficking in methamphetamine, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial, and did not err by allowing the testimony of a defense witness taken under oath when that witness entered into a plea agreement as, although the trial court initially determined that some of the defense witness's statements were inadmissible, the statements regarding prior drug dealings between the defense witness and defendant became admissible for impeachment purposes since the defense witness personally contradicted the witness's own testimony. Corn v. State, 290 Ga. App. 792, 660 S.E.2d 782 (2008).

Instructions

Charging statute not required. — There is no error in failing to charge this statute in the absence of an appropriate written request. Western & Atl. R.R. v. Holt, 22 Ga. App. 187, 95 S.E. 758 (1918); Carson v. State, 22 Ga. App. 743, 97 S.E. 202 (1918); Lee v. State, 37 Ga. App. 632, 141 S.E. 317 (1928);

Instructions (Cont'd)

Smith v. State, 79 Ga. App. 595, 54 S.E.2d 378 (1949); Hinton v. State, 85 Ga. App. 249, 69 S.E.2d 116 (1952); Hand v. State, 90 Ga. App. 452, 83 S.E.2d 276 (1954) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83).

Failure to charge all modes of impeachment. — When the judge having charged correctly upon one of the modes or methods of impeachment, to wit, impeachment by contradictory statements, the judge's failure to charge also upon the other modes of impeachment of disproving facts testified to by the witness, and also on the method of impeachment when a witness's testimony shall be disregarded entirely, is not reversible error in the absence of a request. Hall v. Burpee, 176 Ga. 270, 168 S.E. 39 (1933); Milwaukee Mechanics Ins. Co. v. Davis, 79 Ga. App. 70, 52 S.E.2d 643 (1949).

Failure to give pattern instruction on impeachment proper. — In a married couple's personal injury case, the trial court did not err in not giving parts of the pattern charge on impeachment requested by an insurance carrier on the ground that the couple's trial testimony contradicted their previous statements or actions. Because the carrier did not offer evidence that disproved the facts to which the couple testified, the portion of the charge that pertained to impeachment by disproving facts was not applicable, and the trial court was thus authorized to refuse the entire charge; furthermore, the trial court's charge to the jury that the jury could consider the witnesses' manner of testifying and demeanor as well as the probability or improbability of their testimony and their personal credibility adequately covered the necessary principles. Ga. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Turpin, 294 Ga. App. 63, 668 S.E.2d 518 (2008).

No evidence of good character. — Charge may omit the part of this statute which relates to sustaining the witness by proof of general good character, since there was no such evidence of general good character of a witness thus attacked. Reeves v. State, 22 Ga. App. 628, 97 S.E. 115 (1918); Geer v. State, 184 Ga. 805, 193 S.E. 776 (1937); Jones v. State, 193 Ga. 449, 18 S.E.2d 844 (1942); Knight v. State, 92 Ga. App. 785, 90 S.E.2d 46 (1955).

No evidence of bad character. — In charging upon the law of impeachment of witnesses, where the court charges as to impeachment by disproving facts testified to, and by contradictory statements, it is not error, but is proper, to omit to charge the law of impeachment by proof of general bad character, since there is no evidence seeking to impeach any witness upon that ground. Smithwick v. State, 199 Ga. 292, 34 S.E.2d 28 (1945), overruled on other grounds, Milton v. State, 245 Ga. 20, 262 S.E.2d 789 (1980).

Charge on relevant testimony not required. — Charge need not be qualified by a statement that only relevant testimony could be contradicted where impeachment of irrelevant evidence was not attempted. Tucker v. Central of Ga. Ry., 122 Ga. 387, 50 S.E. 128 (1905); Goldberg v. State, 22 Ga. App. 122, 95 S.E. 541 (1918).

Lack of convictions insufficient for charge. — Merely having no convictions or a clean record was insufficient for defendant to invoke good character; consequently, the trial court did not err by refusing to give defendant's requested charge. Godsey v. State, 271 Ga. App. 663, 610 S.E.2d 634 (2005).

Corroboration unnecessary. — When instructing the jury on the method of impeachment provided for by statute it is error for the court to instruct the jury that, if the jury believes a witness has made previous statements contradictory to the witness's testimony delivered on the trial, such testimony should be disregarded, unless the testimony is corroborated by other credible evidence, or is corroborated by the proven circumstances in the case. Ricks v. State, 70 Ga. App. 395, 28 S.E.2d 303 (1943).

Former trial. — In criminal prosecution, court's charge to the effect that jury should not consider anything said or done in former trial of case was not an infringement and invasion of the province of the jury trying the case, notwithstanding contention that had the jury been allowed to consider testimony from former trial, jury could have concluded that the evidence in the present trial was inconsistent and contradictory to evidence and statements made by prosecution witness previously and thus could have believed the statement of the defendant. Crosby v. State, 92 Ga. App. 335, 88 S.E.2d 523 (1955).

Charge alluding to particular witness. — When there exists a difference between opposing counsel as to whether there is a discrepancy between the testimony of a witness and a previous statement alleged to be contradictory of the testimony, the court in the charge may allude to the particular witness. Walker v. State, 137 Ga. 398, 73 S.E. 368 (1912).

Curative instruction. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a mistrial based on a claim that a friend's testimony improperly interjected character evidence as a curative instruction given by the trial court was an adequate remedy. Reid v. State, 281 Ga. App. 640, 637 S.E.2d 62 (2006).

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial after a state's witness impermissibly interjected the defendant's character into evidence by referring to the defendant's prior arrest record. Although the trial court gave the jury a curative instruction informing them that the testimony regarding the defendant's prior arrest history was improper, could not be considered in determining guilt or innocence in the case, and was required to be disregarded; the trial court further polled the jury to determine whether they could abide by the curative instructions and render a verdict based upon the competent evidence duly admitted, and all of the jurors indicated that they could follow the curative instructions. Kohler v. State, 300 Ga. App. 692, 686 S.E.2d 328 (2009).

Limiting instruction required for Miranda-violating prior statements. — When prior inconsistent statements are used to impeach trial statements, a limiting instruction is required even absent a request. The significance of not so limiting the jury's consideration would be to allow a Miranda-violating statement to be used as substantive evidence. However, if the statement is found by the trial court not to have been obtained in violation of the defendant's rights against self-incrimination, the court need not give a limiting instruction absent defendant's request. Fussell v. State, 187 Ga. App. 134, 369 S.E.2d 511 (1988).

Function of Jury

Impeachment and credibility are questions for jury when a witness is sought to be impeached by reason of having previously made contradictory statements out of court as to matters relevant to the witness's testimony and to the case. King v. State, 163 Ga. 313, 136 S.E. 154 (1926); United Motor Freight Term Co. v. Hixon, 78 Ga. App. 638, 51 S.E.2d 679 (1949); Champion v. State, 84 Ga. App. 163, 65 S.E.2d 280 (1951); Wynn v. Johns, 97 Ga. App. 605, 104 S.E.2d 150 (1958); Travelers Ins. Co. v. Miller, 104 Ga. App. 554, 122 S.E.2d 268 (1961).

Question for jury or court. — When contradictory statements are established as having been made by a witness, it then becomes a question for the jury as to whether or not such witness has been successfully impeached; if such contradiction is not on matters relevant to the witness's testimony and to the case, or if the prior statement fails to amount to a contradiction at all, the question of whether or not the witness has been successfully impeached is then one of law for the court. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 76 Ga. App. 698, 47 S.E.2d 103 (1948).

Testimony need not be excluded. — When a state's witness is impeached, the effect of the impeaching evidence is to be determined by the jury, and the testimony of the witness need not be excluded. Henrich v. McCouley, 151 Ga. 138, 106 S.E. 94 (1921); Griffin v. State, 123 Ga. App. 820, 182 S.E.2d 498 (1971).

Jury may believe witness. — Question of credibility is always for the jury, and though a witness swore falsely on the other trial, the witness's contention that it was under duress may cause the jury to believe the witness. Williams v. State, 69 Ga. 11 (1882).

Accepting part of testimony. — Jury may believe part of the testimony and disbelieve other parts. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Heyward, 82 Ga. App. 337, 60 S.E.2d 641 (1950).

When testimony is disregarded, the jury must place that testimony in the same category as if the witness had not testified at all. Harper v. State, 85 Ga. App. 252, 69 S.E.2d 102 (1952).

When prior statement fails to amount to contradiction, the fact-finding tribunal cannot disregard the testimony of the witness, and when facts sufficient to support an issue have thus been testified to, such issue has, prima facie, been established. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 76 Ga. App. 698, 47 S.E.2d 103 (1948).

24-9-84. How witness impeached — Reputation as bad character; limitations; procedure; how witness sustained; when particular transactions or individual opinions may be inquired of.

Any party may impeach the credibility of a witness by offering evidence of the witness's bad character in the form of reputation, but subject to the following limitations:

(1) The evidence may refer only to character for truthfulness or untruthfulness;

(2) Evidence of truthful character is admissible only after the character of the witness for truthfulness has been attacked by reputation evidence or otherwise;

(3) In a criminal case, the character for untruthfulness of the defendant may be introduced in evidence only if the defendant testifies and offers evidence of his or her truthful character; and

(4) The character witness should first be questioned as to his or her knowledge of the general character of the witness, next as to what that character is, and lastly the character witness may be asked if from that character he or she would believe him or her on his or her oath. The witness may be sustained by similar proof of character. The particular transactions or the opinions of single individuals shall not be inquired of on either side, except upon cross-examination in seeking for the extent and foundation of the witness's knowledge. (Orig. PROOF OF GOOD CHARACTER

General Consideration

In general. — General character of a witness, when that character is put in issue, is a proper mode of ascertaining that weight that should be attached to the witness's testimony. Simpson v. State, 78 Ga. 91 (1886).

Any witness, other than an accused, may be discredited by evidence of bad character and by convictions involving moral turpitude. Beasley v. State, 168 Ga. App. 255, 308 S.E.2d 560 (1983); Nelson v. State, 190 Ga. App. 142, 378 S.E.2d 186 (1989).

Scope of section. — Statute specifies the questions to be propounded and "impliedly excludes all others." Barnwell v. Hannegan, 105 Ga. 396, 31 S.E. 116 (1898); Gordon v. Gilmer, 141 Ga. 347, 80 S.E. 1007 (1914); Rudolph v. State, 16 Ga. App. 353, 85 S.E. 365 (1915); Taylor v. State, 17 Ga. App. 787, 88 S.E. 696 (1916); Cameron v. State, 66 Ga. App. 414, 18 S.E.2d 16 (1941) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 prescribes a specific progression of questions to be asked when inquiring into the general reputation of a witness for impeachment purposes. Harper v. State, 157 Ga. App. 480, 278 S.E.2d 28 (1981).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 requires that the impeaching witness should be first asked as to the impeaching witness's knowledge of the general character of the witness, and next as to what that character is, and lastly the impeaching witness may be asked if, from that character, the impeaching witness would believe the witness on the witness's oath. Ailstock v. State, 159 Ga. App. 482, 283 S.E.2d 698 (1981).

Character means reputation. — Person's character is not to be proved by asking a witness what kind of a man that person is but the person's "character," as used in legal parlance, is to be proved by asking about the person's "reputation." P.D. v. State, 151 Ga. App. 662, 261 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

Evidence as to character is irrelevant and inadmissible unless it is used to show the character of the witness for veracity or intended specifically to be used in the impeachment of witnesses for bad character, or equally to rebut an attempt at impeachment by a showing of good character. Edwards v. Simpson, 123 Ga. App. 44, 179 S.E.2d 266 (1970).

Contradictory statements as to reputation as affecting witness's credibility. — When witness testified as to defendant's reputation in community, any subsequent contradiction simply went to the witness's credibility with the jury, and it was error for the court to strike such witness's testimony in toto. Hudson v. State, 163 Ga. App. 845, 295 S.E.2d 123 (1982).

Limitation of question. — Direct examination to prove the character of the accused must be limited to questions concerning the accused's general reputation in the community in which the accused lives. Overby v. State, 125 Ga. App. 759, 188 S.E.2d 910 (1972).

Fact that the witness's "neighborhood" was the penal institution in which the witness was incarcerated and which was composed of the witness's fellow inmates did not negate the fact that the penal institution was the place where people had the best opportunity to form a correct estimate of the witness's character. Martinez v. State, 189 Ga. App. 69, 375 S.E.2d 123 (1988).

Nothing in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 indicates that the impeaching testimony is limited solely to the reputation of the challenged witness in a neighborhood composed of law abiding citizens. Martinez v. State, 189 Ga. App. 69, 375 S.E.2d 123 (1988).

Community was not community at large. — "Classroom community" comprised of students who were removed from the general school population because of special educational needs may not be the "community at large" contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84. Clark v. State, 225 Ga. App. 851, 485 S.E.2d 543 (1997).

Testimony based on personal opinion. — If, under the entire testimony of a witness, it had appeared that the witness's testimony as to the character and reputation of a party was based entirely on the witness's personal opinion, the trial judge could properly have excluded the witness's testimony. Gravitt v.

State, 220 Ga. 781, 141 S.E.2d 893 (1965).

Admission for jury to consider conflicts in evidence. — Expired decal authorizing defendant's use of the wrecker's emergency rotational lights was relevant as going to the likelihood of defendant's pre-collision activation of those lights, as claimed; thus, the evidence was admissible for whatever weight the jury wished to give it in resolving conflicts in the evidence. Crowe v. State, 259 Ga. App. 780, 578 S.E.2d 134 (2003).

Character witness gives nonexpert opinion testimony and on cross-examination has the right of all such witnesses to give reasons for the witnesses's opinions. Banks v. State, 113 Ga. App. 661, 149 S.E.2d 415 (1966).

Instructions. — When plaintiff introduced evidence as to the bad character of a witness for the defendant to show the witness unworthy of belief and when the court charged the jury that a witness could be impeached by bad character, it was error for the court to fail to charge without request that a witness could be sustained by proof of good character, there being evidence of the witness's good character. Haynes v. Phillips, 69 Ga. App. 524, 26 S.E.2d 186 (1943).

If a defendant wishes to have the jury charged that the defendant would not be subject to impeachment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84, the defendant should request such a charge. Absent such a request, the appellate court need not decide whether the defendant was entitled to a jury charge on that issue. King v. State, 195 Ga. App. 865, 395 S.E.2d 1 (1990).

Trial court's inclusion in the court's general charge on the various methods of impeachment of a reference to impeachment by proof of a witness's conviction of an offense involving moral turpitude was erroneous since defendant had not put defendant's own character in issue; however, the charge was harmless where, immediately following the reference to impeachment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84, the jury was given extensive instructions as to impeachment by other methods. Francis v. State, 266 Ga. 69, 463 S.E.2d 859 (1995).

Trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury regarding impeachment by general bad character pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 since neither side relied on that method of impeachment at defendant's trial. Stinson v. State, 256 Ga. App. 902, 569 S.E.2d 858 (2002).

Failure to charge statute. — It is not reversible error to fail to charge the law of credibility of witnesses without a written request. Summerour v. State, 85 Ga. App. 94, 68 S.E.2d 158 (1951) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84).

Failure to impeach not grounds for reversal. — Even assuming defense counsel's failure to impeach prison rape victim with proof of general bad character as evinced by prior felony convictions fell below a presumed level of competence, the omission did not require reversal and a new trial. Scott v. State, 223 Ga. App. 479, 477 S.E.2d 901 (1996).

Alternate objection raised first on appeal. — When defendant contended that the testimony exceeded the proper scope of good character evidence permissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84, but at trial defendant objected to the testimony only on the ground that the testimony was irrelevant, the testimony was not excluded because an alternate objection may not be raised for the first time on appeal. Reed v. State, 248 Ga. App. 107, 545 S.E.2d 655 (2001).

Proof of Bad Character

Bad character means bad moral character.

— General bad character, as a ground of impeachment, refers to general bad moral character, the word “moral” being used in the word’s broadest sense. Sparks v. Bedford, 4 Ga. App. 13, 60 S.E. 809 (1908). See also Allred v. State, 126 Ga. 537, 55 S.E. 178 (1906).

Bad character does not render a witness incompetent; but the witness’s credibility is for the jury, who may find a verdict on the sole testimony of such witness, unless the Code expressly requires corroboration. Stone v. State, 118 Ga. 705, 45 S.E. 630, 98 Am. St. R. 145 (1903). See also Franklin v. State, 69 Ga. 36 (1882).

Bad character evidence properly excluded when witness had not yet testified. — Trial court did not err in not allowing a defendant to impeach an inmate witness by showing the inmate’s bad character for truthfulness when the inmate had not yet testified; furthermore, the jail shift supervisor through whom the defendant sought to introduce the impeachment testimony had testified that the supervisor did not know about the inmate’s general character or reputation within the jail community. Felder v. State,

286 Ga. App. 271, 648 S.E.2d 753 (2007).

How state may prove bad character. — When defendant, in the trial of a criminal case, puts defendant's character in issue, the state (a) may cross-examine the witnesses offered by the defendant in order to test the witness's knowledge of the defendant's character; (b) may also offer witnesses to prove defendant's general bad character; and (c) the state may, when the defendant has been previously convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude, introduce the record of such conviction in the manner provided by law. Ailstock v. State, 159 Ga. App. 482, 283 S.E.2d 698 (1981); Cunningham v. State, 182 Ga. App. 591, 356 S.E.2d 542 (1987).

Conviction of an offense involving moral turpitude or a felony is a proper method of showing bad character and tends to impeach the credibility of that witness. McNeely v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 246 Ga. App. 852, 542 S.E.2d 575 (2000).

Specific acts may not be shown. — General bad character of a witness may be shown for the purpose of impeachment, but specific acts cannot be shown for that purpose. Andrews v. State, 118 Ga. 1, 43 S.E. 852 (1903); Haynes v. Phillips, 67 Ga. App. 574, 21 S.E.2d 261 (1942); Security Life Ins. Co. v. Newsome, 122 Ga. App. 137, 176 S.E.2d 463 (1970); McCarty v. State, 139 Ga. App. 101, 227 S.E.2d 898 (1976); Colvin v. State, 155 Ga. App. 736, 272 S.E.2d 516 (1980). See also Johnson v. State, 61 Ga. 305 (1878); Black v. State, 119 Ga. 746, 47 S.E. 370 (1904); Rudolph v. State, 16 Ga. App. 353, 85 S.E. 365 (1915); Taylor v. State, 17 Ga. App. 787, 88 S.E. 696 (1916); Ailstock v. State, 159 Ga. App. 482, 283 S.E.2d 698 (1981); Heaton v. State, 214 Ga. App. 460, 448 S.E.2d 49 (1994); Wetta v. State, 217 Ga. App. 128, 456 S.E.2d 696 (1995); Venson v. Georgia, 74 F.3d 1140 (11th Cir. 1996); Jones v. State, 226 Ga. App. 420, 487 S.E.2d 56 (1997); Johnson v. State, 244 Ga. App. 128, 534 S.E.2d 480 (2000).

Trial court did not err by not disclosing a disciplinary report in a police officer's personnel file as: (1) no attempt was made to impeach the officer by disproving the facts testified to by the officer under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82; (2) there was no showing that any of the documents disallowed contained any contradictory statements previously made by the officer as to matters relevant to the officer's testimony and the case under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-83; (3) there was no contention that the officer had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude; and (4) the evidence was, at best, related solely to specific bad acts and not to the general bad character of the officer, which was not admissible as impeachment material under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 178, 598 S.E.2d 898 (2004).

In response to defendant's claim of self-defense, although evidence of one victim's prior violent acts were excluded because the victim was not the aggressor, the other victim's general reputation for violence was admitted in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84. Quillian v. State, 279 Ga. 698, 620 S.E.2d 376 (2005).

Precluding defendant's wife from testifying as to specific instances of a child victim's dishonesty was proper since the wife attempted to testify regarding the child's specific problems at school and with discipline, as well as instances of the child's lying and stealing. Frazier v. State, 278 Ga. App. 685, 629 S.E.2d 568 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Trial court did not commit reversible error under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 in prohibiting defense counsel from asking the state's witness specifically about a prior drug offense when the witness had testified that the witness had not previously been in trouble; generally, questioning a witness about a crime unrelated to the case was impermissible, and the defendant was afforded ample avenues for portraying the witness as biased and motivated to lie. Curtis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 322, 638 S.E.2d 773 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 203 (Ga. 2007).

Foundation. — References to the impeaching witness's "personal knowledge" of or "association" with the witness that is being impeached serve only to develop a foundation upon which to base the witness's statement as to reputation. Such a foundational line of questioning is not only permitted, but is mandated by statute. Ballenger Corp. v. Dresco Mechanical Contractors, 156 Ga. App. 425, 274 S.E.2d 786 (1980).

Knowledge of impeaching witness. — It is error to exclude testimony of a witness introduced for the purpose of impeaching another witness when the impeaching witness testifies that the impeaching witness knows that the witness's general reputation, and that that reputation is not good, and, from the impeaching witness's knowledge of the witness's reputation, the impeaching witness would not believe the witness upon the witness's oath. Dent v. State, 14 Ga. App. 269, 80 S.E. 548 (1914).

Opinion based on personal observation inadmissible. — Witness's opinion of a party's character which is based solely upon the witness's personal observation of the party is not an approved mode of character evidence and is subject to being struck. Gresham v. State, 169 Ga. App. 525, 314 S.E.2d 111 (1984).

Trial court properly excluded testimony of probation officer's personal opinion as to victim's reputation for general character based upon personal observation coupled with unspecified reports received from unidentified law enforcement officials rendered under undisclosed circumstances. Bogan v. State, 206 Ga. App. 696, 426 S.E.2d 392 (1992).

Opinion of single individuals not sufficient. — Person's general bad character and reputation cannot be proved on the opinions of single individuals. Haynes v. Phillips, 67 Ga. App. 574, 21 S.E.2d 261 (1942).

Trial court did not err in striking the testimony of a character witness in an assistant professor's action against the Board of Regents (BOR) of the University System of Georgia for breach of an employment contract because there was no abuse of discretion in determining that the testimony that the witness did not know whether the witness would believe the professor under oath did not meet the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84; the BOR's counsel acquiesced in the trial court's final ruling on the matter. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Ambati, 299 Ga. App. 804, 685 S.E.2d 719 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0086, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 34 (Ga. 2010).

Ill feeling will not impeach. — Witness can be impeached only by proof of general bad character, such as would cause the impeaching witness to disbelieve the witness on oath. A witness cannot be impeached on the ground that the impeaching witness has ill feeling toward the witness it is sought to impeach because the latter owes the former money and will not pay the impeaching witness. Haynes v. Phillips, 67 Ga. App. 574, 21 S.E.2d 261 (1942).

Reputation at place of employment. — When it is sought to impeach a witness by proof of bad character by means of the statutory questions as set forth in statute, a witness who is familiar with the witness's reputation in the place where the witness pursues the witness's regular daily vocation or work may testify as to the witness's reputation in such place, although not familiar with the community in which the witness lives. Pethel v. State, 89 Ga. App. 8, 78 S.E.2d 428 (1953); Bennett v. George, 105 Ga. App. 527, 125 S.E.2d 122 (1962).

Even though a rebuttal witness had stopped working at the General Motors plant ten years before the trial took place, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing the witness to testify regarding a party's reputation at that plant because the witness worked there for 42 years, and kept in touch with the General Motors community since the witness retired by continuing to attend union meetings. MacGibbon v. Akins, 245 Ga. App. 871, 538 S.E.2d 793 (2000).

No evidence of bad character. — When there was no evidence before the court which attacked the witness for defendant either for bad character or for contradictory statements, it was not error for the court to refuse to allow the defendant's witness to testify as to the witness's own character for veracity. P.D. v. State, 151 Ga. App. 662, 261 S.E.2d 413 (1979).

Admission of first offender record. — In both civil and criminal cases, unless there is an adjudication of guilt, a witness may not be impeached on general credibility grounds by evidence of a first offender record. Matthews v. State, 268 Ga. 798, 493 S.E.2d 136 (1997).

Copy of record of conviction must be introduced. — Witness cannot be discredited even by the witness's own testimony that the witness was convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude, rather, it is necessary that a copy of the record of conviction be introduced; accordingly, the testimony of a witness that the witness has done some act that the law makes a crime is not a legal method of impeachment. Richards v. State, 157 Ga. App. 601, 278 S.E.2d 63 (1981).

Testimony by investigating officer. — When defendant placed defendant's character in issue, the investigating police officer, though not a member of the defendant's community, could be an impeaching witness since the officer testified that the officer possessed personal knowledge of the defendant's character and reputation in the community. Catchings v. State, 256 Ga. 241, 347 S.E.2d 572 (1986).

Conviction may be introduced even though appeal pending. — Prior conviction of a witness for a crime involving moral turpitude is admissible for impeachment purposes when, at the time of the proffer thereof, the judgment of conviction is the subject of a pending appeal. James v. State, 160 Ga. App. 185, 286 S.E.2d 506 (1981).

Defendant's testimony regarding never being in trouble. — It was not error to admit evidence of defendant's prior assault conviction because the conviction was offered as impeachment evidence rather than evidence of bad character since defendant testified, and defendant's counsel emphasized, that defendant had "never been in trouble." Walker v. State, 260 Ga. App. 241, 581 S.E.2d 295 (2003).

Conviction of misdemeanor. — Proof of conviction of a misdemeanor, if it is a crime of moral turpitude, is a proper method of showing "bad character." Ailstock v. State, 159 Ga. App. 482, 283 S.E.2d 698 (1981).

Misdemeanor crime not involving moral turpitude. — Witnesses could not be impeached by proof of convictions for simple battery and for misdemeanor possession of marijuana which are not crimes involving moral turpitude. Ely v. State, 272 Ga. 418, 529 S.E.2d 886 (2000).

Misdemeanor issuance of bad checks is crime of moral turpitude as a matter of law. Carruth v. Brown, 202 Ga. App. 656, 415 S.E.2d 470 (1992).

Offense of simple assault is not crime involving moral turpitude. Polk v. State, 202 Ga. App. 738, 415 S.E.2d 506 (1992).

Conviction for giving false name admissible to negate good character. — Certified copy of an accusation which shows that the defendant pled guilty to having given a false name to a law enforcement officer is admissible as impeachment evidence against the defendant when the defendant places the defendant's character in issue by presentation of evidence of good character. Hicks v. State, 169 Ga. App. 542, 314 S.E.2d 113 (1984).

Crime of moral turpitude. — Misdemeanor of issuing a bad check in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-9-20(a) is a crime of moral turpitude and the jury may consider evidence of a witness's guilty plea to such a crime as proof of general bad moral character which tends to impeach the credibility of that witness within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84. Paradise v. State, 212 Ga. App. 166, 441 S.E.2d 497 (1994).

When a codefendant is not a witness in the case, the codefendant is not subject to impeachment, and the trial court does not err in refusing to permit another codefendant to impeach the codefendant by a previous conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude. Moss v. State, 275 Ga. 96, 561 S.E.2d 382 (2002).

Prior interest in drug trafficking admissible. — When a defendant was charged with marijuana trafficking, testimony that, two years prior to the subject sale of marijuana, the defendant expressed an interest in trafficking in illegal drugs logically tended to disprove the defendant's defense, and thus was clearly relevant as rebuttal, even though the testimony did not allege participation in the crime at bar and was inadmissible as impeachment testimony. Kraus v. State, 169 Ga. App. 54, 311 S.E.2d 493 (1983).

Juvenile arrest records are not admissible to show general bad character, but may be used to impeach defendant's testimony that the defendant had never been in trouble before. Williams v. State, 171 Ga. App. 927, 321 S.E.2d 423 (1984).

Whether victim is a "bad" person is irrelevant because it is as unlawful to commit a crime against a "bad" person as against a "good" one. Ailstock v. State, 159 Ga. App. 482, 283 S.E.2d 698 (1981).

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, to the extent that the defendant sought to attack the victim's character through testimony about the victim's use of alcohol during pregnancy, whether the victim hid the defendant from the police, and the victim's alleged jealousy over the defendant's new relationship, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in limiting the scope of cross-examination to the issues directly related to the incidents. Massey v. State, 278 Ga. App. 303, 628 S.E.2d 706 (2006).

Impeachment of the victim. — Jury instruction on impeachment of the victim by evidence of bad character was properly refused under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 because there was no testimony as to the victim's general reputation for truthfulness in the community or whether the witness would believe the victim under oath, so the victim's credibility was not impeached. Callahan v. State, 256 Ga. App. 482, 568 S.E.2d 780 (2002).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to introduce evidence of defendant's victim's reputation for violence; defendant failed to make a prima facie showing that shooting the victim, defendant's supervisor, was justified or in self-defense; the evidence revealed that the initial altercation had been over for at least ten minutes before defendant initiated the chase which ended with the victim's shooting. Bryant v. State, 283 Ga. App. 295, 641 S.E.2d 277 (2007).

Defense counsel's failure to redact bad character evidence from a defense exhibit was deficient performance and based on the evidence against the defendant, as well as the prejudice caused by the unredacted defense exhibit, there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been different but for counsel's deficiency, and therefore the conviction was reversed. Whitaker v. State, 276 Ga. App. 226, 622 S.E.2d 916 (2005).

Sexual offenses. — Impeachment evidence of prior bad acts of victims in a child abuse prosecution was properly excluded. Duncan v. State, 232 Ga. App. 157, 500 S.E.2d 603 (1998).

Victim need not be shown to be assailant before victim can be impeached. — O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 does not require that before a victim-witness in a battery case may be impeached by evidence of the victim's bad character there must be a prima-facie showing that the victim was the assailant. Ailstock v. State, 159 Ga. App. 482, 283 S.E.2d 698 (1981).

Cross-examination scope limited. — Witness who has been impeached by the introduction of a certified copy of a previous felony conviction, but who has not attempted to rehabilitate the witness's character by explaining the circumstances of the conviction, cannot be cross-examined concerning the facts surrounding the conviction. Vincent v. State, 264 Ga. 234, 442 S.E.2d 748 (1994).

State was properly held not to be entitled to question an expert witness about matters that bore no relation to the scientific issues about which the witness testified at trial in order to show that the witness's professional credentials were in jeopardy. King v. State, 273 Ga. 258, 539 S.E.2d 783 (2000), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 957, 122 S. Ct. 2659, 153 L. Ed. 2d 834 (2002).

Cross-examination concerning specific facts. — It is not permissible to prove specific facts, except on cross-examination for the purposes of testing the knowledge of the witness and of impeaching knowingly false statements. Mimbs v. State, 189 Ga. 189, 5 S.E.2d 770 (1939); Haynes v. Phillips, 67 Ga. App. 574, 21 S.E.2d 261 (1942); Mills v. State, 71 Ga. App. 353, 30 S.E.2d 824 (1944).

Cross-examination as to agreement between witness and state. — When defendant failed to prove either that there had been a deal or that the witness had any expectation of a deal, the trial court did not impermissibly abridge defendant's sixth amendment rights by limiting defendant's cross-examination concerning charges against the witness. Wright v. State, 266 Ga. 887, 471 S.E.2d 883 (1996).

Redirect examination. — When on cross-examination the impeaching witness is questioned as to the impeaching witness's feeling toward the witness it is sought to impeach and testifies that the impeaching witness entertains ill feeling toward the witness, the impeaching witness may be questioned on redirect examination as to why the impeaching witness entertains such feeling toward the other witness. Haynes v. Phillips, 67 Ga. App. 574, 21 S.E.2d 261 (1942).

Indictment against witness. — After a witness has testified, an indictment charging the witness with embezzlement is inadmissible in evidence for the purpose of impeaching the witness. Gardner v. State, 81 Ga. 144, 7 S.E. 144 (1888); McCray v. State, 134 Ga. 416, 68 S.E. 62, 20 Ann. Cas. 101 (1910); Beach v. State, 138 Ga. 265, 75 S.E. 139 (1912), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. State, 235 Ga. 470, 219 S.E.2d 756 (1975).

While a witness may be discredited by proof of general bad character or conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude, it is not competent to discredit the witness by showing that the witness has committed, been arrested for, confined for, or even indicted for such an offense, and neither may general bad character be proved by individual acts. Richards v. State, 157 Ga. App. 601, 278 S.E.2d 63 (1981).

Error to consider testimony of witness as to conviction of crime in sentencing defendant. — Although it was harmless error to admit, erroneously, a witness's own testimony that the witness was convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude, it was error for the trial court to consider such testimony in determining an appropriate sentence for defendant. Richards v. State, 157 Ga. App. 601, 278 S.E.2d 63 (1981).

Secondary evidence admitted without objection. — When two witnesses testified that the witnesses pled guilty to the larceny for which defendant was on trial, and while, over proper objection, this would not have been sufficient proof of bad character of itself to impeach the witnesses since there was no objection on the ground that the record of conviction would be the highest and best evidence of this fact, the secondary evidence admitted without objection could be considered by the jury, which would, under the circumstances, have a right to disbelieve that part of the testimony tending to exonerate the defendant from complicity in the theft. Roach v. State, 90 Ga. App. 44, 81 S.E.2d 886 (1954).

Failure to object to prior conviction waived. — Defendant's failure to object to proof of a prior conviction introduced by defendant's testimony in response to a prosecutorial cross-examination waived any "best evidence rule" objections to this testimony on appeal. Howard v. State, 206 Ga. App. 610, 426 S.E.2d 181 (1992).

Attacked witness may be believed. — Witness who is attacked for general bad character may be believed by the jury regardless of whether there is any evidence to sustain the witness's good character or any corroborating evidence. Rowe v. State, 68 Ga. App. 161, 22 S.E.2d 210 (1942).

Charge when no evidence of bad character. — In charging upon the law of impeachment of witnesses, when the court charges as to impeachment by disproving facts testified to, and by contradictory statements, it is not error, but is proper, to omit to charge the law of impeachment by proof of general bad character since there is no evidence seeking to impeach any witness upon that ground. Smithwick v. State, 199 Ga. 292, 34 S.E.2d 28 (1945), overruled on other grounds, Milton v. State, 245 Ga. 20, 262 S.E.2d 789 (1980).

Charge in connection with conviction of crime. — Charge of the trial court was not error requiring reversal because of the use of the term "general bad character" in connection with the charge of impeachment of certain witnesses because of convictions of crimes involving moral turpitude. Tyler v. State, 91 Ga. App. 87, 84 S.E.2d 843 (1954).

Questioning of witness about nolle prossed crime. — Trial court did not commit reversible error under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84 in declining to allow defense counsel to question the state's witness about the specific crime that was nolle prossed in exchange for the witness's testimony against the defendant; defense counsel was permitted to bring out that a charge against the witness had been dismissed and that the witness had faced 10 years in prison on the charge. Curtis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 322, 638 S.E.2d 773 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 203 (Ga. 2007).

Proof of witness's reputation for violence is not a proper method of impeachment. Peters v. State, 55 Ga. App. 870, 192 S.E. 84 (1937).

Character evidence inadmissible in the following cases: Long v. State, 22 Ga. 40 (1857) (gambling); Smithwick v. Evans, 24 Ga. 461 (1858) (prostitution); McDowell v. Preston, 26 Ga. 528 (1858) (drug addiction); Weathers v. Barksdale, 30 Ga. 888 (1860) (bastardy); Pulliam v. Cantrell, 77 Ga. 563, 3 S.E. 280 (1886) (embezzlement); Gordon v. Gilmer, 141 Ga. 347, 80 S.E. 1007 (1914) (character as to truthfulness).

Proof of Good Character

Evidence of good character admissible when the general character of a witness is impeached. Stamper v. Griffin, 12 Ga. 450 (1853).

Evidence of good character inadmissible. — When not impeached otherwise than by disproving the truth of the witness's evidence, or by testimony tending to disprove the evidence, the witness cannot be supported by proof of the witness's general good character. Miller v. Western & Atl. R.R., 93 Ga. 480, 21 S.E. 52 (1893).

Rebuttal by proof of good character. — When, in order to discredit a witness, the witness's reputation has been assailed, the party by whom the witness was introduced has the right to introduce rebutting evidence to show that the witness's character and reputation are good, even though the attempt to discredit was made on examination of the witness personally. Gazaway v. State, 15 Ga. App. 467, 83 S.E. 857 (1914). See also Suddeth v. State, 112 Ga. 407, 37 S.E. 747 (1900).

Character for veracity irrelevant. — When the statutory questions are asked to sustain the character of a witness sought to be impeached by evidence of general bad character, other questions, such as the character of the witness for veracity, may not be asked. Edwards v. Simpson, 123 Ga. App. 44, 179 S.E.2d 266 (1970).

Direct and cross-examination. — Witness, in testifying as to the defendant's good character, must categorically answer the questions impliedly included in statute and no others. On cross-examination, the solicitor (now district attorney) may bring out specific facts for the purpose of testing the witness's knowledge, and may ask as a hypothetical question whether, if the witness knew certain facts, the witness's opinion would still be that the defendant's character was good. Banks v. State, 113 Ga. App. 661, 149 S.E.2d 415 (1966).

Cross-examination of defendant's character witness in child molestation case, that consisted of questions inquiring whether witness was aware defendant had pled guilty to practicing law without a license, was admissible for the purpose of testing the witness's familiarity with the defendant. Davidson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 605, 499 S.E.2d 697 (1998).

Evidence not in compliance with statute. — When the only evidence in any way tending to sustain a witness is the testimony of another witness that the impeaching witness knew the witness to be honest, industrious, and well-liked by the customers of the latter witness, such evidence is not a compliance with the requirement that an impeached witness may be sustained by proof of general good character. Jackson v. Middlebrooks, 86 Ga. App. 259, 71 S.E.2d 462 (1952).

Evidence in mitigation of capital punishment. — Constitution requires that evidence which would be inadmissible under an evidentiary rule must not automatically be excluded if tendered in a capital case in mitigation of punishment, rather, the potentially mitigating influence of the testimony must be weighed against the harm resulting from the violation of the evidentiary rule, and in close cases the doubt should be resolved in favor of admissibility. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. 538, 285 S.E.2d 3 (1981); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895 (1993), overruled on other grounds, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82 (2002).

Failure to charge concerning character. — Proper instruction should be given in every case when the accused puts the accused's character in issue; but, in the absence of a timely request, an omission to give a specific charge on the subject will not require a new trial. It is only in exceptional cases where the court fails to charge relative to the good character of the accused that a new trial should be granted. Taylor v. State, 83 Ga. App. 735, 64 S.E.2d 598 (1951).

Character witnesses excluded. — Trial court did not err by refusing to allow two of defendant's character witnesses to explain their answers since the transcript showed that the testimony sought exceeded the permissible scope of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84. Collar v. State, 206 Ga. App. 448, 426 S.E.2d 43 (1992).

24-9-84.1. How witness impeached — Prior convictions.

(a) General rule. For the purpose of attacking the credibility of a witness, or of the defendant, if the defendant testifies:

(1) Evidence that a witness has been convicted of a crime shall be admitted if the crime was punishable by death or imprisonment of one year or more under the law under which the witness was convicted if the court determines that the probative value of admitting the evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect to the witness;

(2) Evidence that the defendant has been convicted of a crime shall be admitted if the crime was punishable by death or imprisonment of one year or more under the law under which the defendant was convicted if the court determines that the probative value of admitting the evidence substantially outweighs its prejudicial effect to the defendant; and

(3) Evidence that any witness or the defendant has been convicted of a crime shall be admitted if it involved dishonesty or making a false statement, regardless of the punishment that could be imposed for such offense.

(b) Time limit. Evidence of a conviction under subsection (a) of this Code section is not admissible if a period of more than ten years has elapsed since the date of the conviction or of the release of the witness or the defendant from the confinement imposed for that conviction, whichever is the later date, unless the court determines, in the interest of justice, that the probative value of the conviction supported by specific facts and circumstances substantially outweighs its prejudicial effect. However, evidence of a conviction more than ten years old, as calculated in this subsection, is not admissible unless the proponent gives to the adverse party sufficient advance written notice of intent to use such evidence to provide the adverse party with a fair opportunity to contest the use of such evidence.

(c) Effect of pardon or annulment. Evidence of a conviction is not admissible under this Code section if:

(1) The conviction has been the subject of a pardon or annulment based on a finding of the rehabilitation of the person convicted and such person has not been convicted of a subsequent crime that was punishable by death or imprisonment for one year or more; or

(2) The conviction has been the subject of a pardon, annulment, or other equivalent procedure based on a finding of innocence.

(d) Juvenile adjudications. An adjudication of delinquency in juvenile court shall be inadmissible against a defendant in a criminal case. An adjudication of delinquency in juvenile court shall be presumed to be inadmissible against a witness in a criminal case; however, this presumption may be rebutted only if it is shown that:

(1) The factual basis for the proven allegations of delinquency would have constituted a crime under the laws of the state of the juvenile court if committed by an adult at the time they were committed by the juvenile;

(2) The probative value of the evidence substantially outweighs the prejudicial effect of its admission; and

(3) The court finds that admission of the adjudication into evidence is necessary for a fair determination of the issue of guilt or innocence of the defendant.

(e) Pendency of appeal. The pendency of an appeal from a conviction does not render evidence of a conviction inadmissible. Evidence of the pendency of an appeal shall be admissible. (Code 1981, § 24-9-84.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 16/HB 170; Ga. L. 2006, p. 72, § 24/SB 465.)

Ga. L. 2005, p. 20, § 17, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that this Code section shall apply to all trials which commence on or after July 1, 2005.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Based on the slight probative value of over-age convictions, the fact that O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(b) permits use of such convictions on a showing of specific facts and circumstances establishing the probative value of the particular conviction, and the fact that § 24-9-84.1 does not preclude all inquiry on a subject with respect to which a defendant is entitled to a reasonable cross examination, § 24-9-84.1 is not unconstitutional as a violation of the confrontation clause. Hinton v. State, 280 Ga. 811, 631 S.E.2d 365 (2006).

Redaction not required. — Neither case law nor O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(2) requires redaction of portions of a validly admitted felony conviction. Wilkes v. State, 293 Ga. App. 724, 667 S.E.2d 705 (2008).

Obstructing or hindering law enforcement officers. — In a parent's tort action arising from an accusation by store employees that the parent's child stole from the store, the trial court properly refused to strike evidence of an employee's conviction for violating O.C.G.A. § 16-10-24 by obstructing or hindering law enforcement officers submitted in the parent's motion for summary judgment response even though the conviction was not used to impeach the employee at the employee's deposition. The conviction could be used for impeachment at trial under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(1) because the violation was a felony punishable by imprisonment for not less than one nor more than five years and similarly may be submitted in the summary judgment motion even though it was not presented to the witness at the deposition. Todd v. Byrd, 283 Ga. App. 37, 640 S.E.2d 652 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Ferrell v. Mikula, 295 Ga. App. 326, 672 S.E.2d. 7 (2008).

Crimes involving dishonesty. — For impeachment purposes, crimes of "dishonesty" are limited to those crimes that bear upon a witness's propensity to testify truthfully; accordingly, misdemeanor theft by receiving stolen property is not a crime involving dishonesty within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(3). Adams v. State, 284 Ga. App. 534, 644 S.E.2d 426 (2007).

Impeachment for conviction in civil tort action. — In an intentional tort action against a retailer and one of the retailer's employees, the employee could be impeached with a conviction under O.C.G.A. § 16-10-24 which occurred after that employee gave a deposition as the length of punishment that could be imposed thereunder satisfied the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(1) for impeachment with a conviction, and no other evidence was presented which prohibited the employee's impeachment. Todd v. Byrd, 283 Ga. App. 37, 640 S.E.2d 652 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Ferrell v. Mikula, 295 Ga. App. 326, 672 S.E.2d. 7 (2008); Chandler v. State, 281 Ga. 712, 642 S.E.2d 646 (2007).

In a personal injury suit filed by a car driver against a truck driver, because the trial court erred by admitting evidence of the car driver's prior DUI charges and testimony by the investigating officer about charges filed against the car driver in traffic court, and by excluding an admission by the car driver's treating emergency room physician, a new trial was ordered. Laukaitis v. Basadre, 287 Ga. App. 144, 650 S.E.2d 724 (2007).

Convictions did not show dishonesty. — In a trial for aggravated assault, the trial court did not err in barring the defendant from introducing evidence about a third person's misdemeanor convictions for criminal trespass and family violence battery; the convictions did not involve dishonesty and did not support the defendant's self-defense theory as the third person remained behind as the defendant advanced on the victim. Fields v. State, 285 Ga. App. 345, 646 S.E.2d 326 (2007).

Because defendant made no effort to show that the conviction defendant intended to use to impeach an accomplice who testified involved fraud or deceit, the trial court did not err in excluding that conviction for use for impeachment purposes under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(3). Clements v. State, 299 Ga. App. 561, 683 S.E.2d 127 (2009).

Conviction did not show fraud and deceit. — Because the defendant did not show that a misdemeanor shoplifting conviction involved fraud and deceit, the trial court properly refused to allow the defendant to use the conviction to impeach a witness under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(3). Martin v. State, 300 Ga. App. 39, 684 S.E.2d 111 (2009).

Trial court must establish that it balanced use of defendant's prior conviction against risk of prejudice. — With regard to defendant's conviction for aggravated assault, which was reversed on appeal as a result of the trial court erring in recharging the jury on a question it asked, the appellate court was unable to determine whether the trial court engaged in any meaningful analysis of the relevant factors of the evidence of defendant's prior felony conviction for possession of cocaine or whether the trial court balanced the probative value against the prejudicial effect to the accused. In the event of retrial, the trial court was directed to balance the probative value of defendant's prior felony conviction against its prejudicial effect and to make a finding on the record as to whether the former substantially outweighed the latter, subject to appellate review for an abuse of discretion. Quiroz v. State, 291 Ga. App. 423, 662 S.E.2d 235 (2008).

Defendant's conviction for possession of methamphetamine was reversed on appeal as the trial court erred by failing to perform the required balancing test, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(2), prior to permitting the state to impeach the defendant with a prior conviction for entering an automobile. The trial court also failed to consider the prejudicial effect of the impeachment evidence after only finding that the evidence did not have probative value. Abercrombie v. State, 297 Ga. App. 522, 677 S.E.2d 719 (2009).

Balancing test applied during motion for new trial sufficient. — The trial court engaged in the required balancing test and made express findings in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(2), which supported the admission of a defendant's prior conviction for enticing a child for indecent purposes in an aggravated assault trial. The statute was satisfied even though these findings were not made until the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial. Carter v. State, No. A10A0426, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 302 (Mar. 25, 2010).

Remand required to address admissibility of prior convictions. — There was sufficient evidence to support a defendant's conviction for manufacturing methamphetamine as it was for the jury to reject the defendant's defense that others had equal access to the contraband found in the defendant's home and vehicle. However, the conviction was conditionally affirmed and the case was remanded to the trial court for the court to set forth an express ruling on the record as to whether the probative value of the evidence of the defendant's prior conviction substantially outweighed the prejudicial effect of the evidence as the record failed to contain any such findings. Miller v. State, 298 Ga. App. 792, 681 S.E.2d 225 (2009).

Prior convictions properly admitted for both impeachment and sentencing purposes. — Trial court properly admitted certified copies of the defendant's two prior convictions of aggravated assault and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony as: (1) it carefully balanced the competing interests; (2) the prior offenses had a substantial probative value which outweighed their prejudicial effect; and (3) nothing prevented the use of a defendant's convictions for both impeachment and sentencing purposes. Moreover, the court rejected the defendant's claim that by adding the word "substantially" to the balancing test, the Georgia legislature meant to incorporate the standard for admissibility embodied in Fed. R. Evid. 609(b). Newsome v. State, 289 Ga. App. 590, 657 S.E.2d 540 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. 2008).

Prior conviction properly admitted to impeach defendant's credibility. — Trial court did not err in admitting evidence of the defendant's 1993 interference with government property conviction; a new trial was properly denied because the evidence was properly admitted, not as substantive evidence of the offense at issue, but only as to the issue of credibility, providing support for the admission of the evidence. Tate v. State, 289 Ga. App. 479, 657 S.E.2d 531 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 386 (Ga. 2008).

In a prosecution for entering an automobile with the intent to commit theft, the trial court allowed the state to impeach the defendant's testimony with evidence of a burglary conviction that was over 10 years old. Admission of this evidence did not violate O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1 as the defendant testified on direct examination about the sentence the defendant served for that crime. Love v. State, 293 Ga. App. 499, 667 S.E.2d 656 (2008).

In convictions of felony murder and robbery in connection with a fatal assault upon an elderly man, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(b), a trial court properly admitted evidence of defendant's prior manslaughter conviction in order to impeach defendant on the issue of defendant's veracity. Treadwell v. State, 285 Ga. 736, 684 S.E.2d 244 (2009).

Given that a defendant's defense to charges of burglary and criminal trespass was that the defendant believed the defendant had permission to remove a television and DVD player from an apartment, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting two prior convictions for burglary and attempted burglary, which indicated a probable lack of veracity by the defendant. Love v. State, 302 Ga. App. 106, 690 S.E.2d 246 (2010).

Trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's prior felony conviction because the court did not abuse its discretion in concluding that the probative value of admitting the evidence substantially outweighed its prejudicial effect since the prior conviction's probative value went to the defendant's credibility and the likelihood or not that someone convicted of a felony would disregard the duty to testify truthfully; the trial court instructed the jury that the prior felony conviction was to be considered only for impeachment purposes, and, because the defendant testified and denied knowledge that the co-defendant had a gun, the defendant's credibility was highly relevant to the jury's decision. Cobb v. State, 302 Ga. App. 821, 692 S.E.2d 65 (2010).

Prior convictions admitted when defendant placed character in evidence. — Trial court properly admitted impeachment evidence of the defendant's convictions of vehicular homicide that were over 10 years old. Defendant's testimony regarding the defendant's charitable activities resulted in the defendant's placing the defendant's character into issue. McNabb v. State, 292 Ga. App. 395, 664 S.E.2d 800 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 927 (Ga. 2008).

Prior conviction properly admitted. — Trial court did not err in admitting evidence of a defendant's prior felony conviction under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1. Neither case law nor the statute required redaction of the conviction to remove a reference to misdemeanor charges arising out of the same transaction; furthermore, the trial court determined that the probative value of the conviction outweighed the conviction's prejudicial effect. Wilkes v. State, 293 Ga. App. 724, 667 S.E.2d 705 (2008).

Prior convictions properly excluded. — Trial court did not err when the court declined to permit the defendant to impeach a witness under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1 with prior convictions because more than ten years had elapsed since the witness was released from the confinement resulting from the convictions, and defense counsel had not provided specific facts and circumstances demonstrating that the probative value of the convictions outweighed their prejudicial effect; probation does not qualify as confinement under § 24-9-84.1(b), and the legislature has distinguished "confinement" from release on parole and suspended and probated sentences. Allen v. State, 286 Ga. 392, 687 S.E.2d 799 (2010).

Failure to apply balancing test was harmless error. — During a defendant's trial for obstruction of a police officer and other related crimes, a trial court erred by failing to consider the balancing test required under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(1) with regard to allowing the state to impeach all of the defendant's defense witnesses with prior convictions. However, the error was harmless since the convictions involved moral turpitude and were admissible regardless. Whitley v. State, 296 Ga. App. 72, 673 S.E.2d 510 (2009).

No duty to conduct balancing test absent objection. — Absent an objection by the defendant, the trial court had no duty to conduct the balancing test of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(1) sua sponte. Moreover, since the jury was authorized to believe the testimony of officers over that of the witnesses in question, there was no reasonable probability that the verdict would have been different had the trial court conducted the balancing test. Thomas v. State, 291 Ga. App. 795, 662 S.E.2d 849 (2008).

Questioning defendant about convictions allowed. — Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion in limine, which sought to prevent the state, for the purpose of impeachment, from questioning defendant, if defendant testified at trial, regarding defendant's prior convictions for burglary, statutory rape, and failure to register as a sex offender as O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1 specifically applied to the situation and permitted the questioning regarding defendant's prior convictions. Whitaker v. State, 283 Ga. 521, 661 S.E.2d 557 (2008).

Effective assistance of counsel. — Defense counsel did not perform deficiently when defense counsel failed to make a meritless objection to the evidence of defendant's conviction for giving false information that was less than 10 years old because O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(3) and (b) authorized the admission of convictions 10 years old or less for crimes involving dishonesty or making a false statement, and the trial court did not have to weigh the probative value of the old conviction against the prejudicial effect since the conviction at issue was less than 10 years old. Habersham v. State, 289 Ga. App. 718, 658 S.E.2d 253 (2008).

Defense counsel's failure to object or move for a mistrial based on the state's introduction of evidence relating to a witness's misconduct that fell short of a conviction was not ineffective assistance under circumstances in which counsel's decisions not to object to the state's pursuit of the topic of the witness's misdemeanor driving violations, and to attempt to rehabilitate the defendant by showing the minor nature of one of the violations, were objectively reasonable. Defense counsel could not have been faulted for failing to complete the state's work for it, or for declining to highlight any of this testimony. Noellien v. State, 298 Ga. App. 47, 679 S.E.2d 75 (2009).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for aggravated assault, although the prosecutor was impermissibly permitted to impeach a defense witness by asking the witness about a recent guilty plea to two counts of theft by taking, which was not a felony or a crime which involved dishonesty or making a false statement, the defendant failed to establish that defense counsel's failure to object rendered defense counsel ineffective. At the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial, defense counsel was not questioned on whether the failure to object was strategic and, given the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, the defendant failed to show that there was a reasonable probability that the verdict would have been different if defense counsel had objected. Jacobs v. State, 299 Ga. App. 368, 683 S.E.2d 64 (2009).

Counsel not ineffective. — While trial counsel might have been deficient by failing to contend that the probative value of admitting the defendant's prior convictions for impeachment purposes did not substantially outweigh the prejudicial effect of the evidence, given that the defendant failed to show prejudice, this claim failed. Miller v. State, 283 Ga. 412, 658 S.E.2d 765 (2008).

Defense counsel properly advised a defendant in the defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, malice murder that, if the defendant testified at trial, the state could attempt to introduce prior convictions into evidence as the state was permitted to do so under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(2), even if the defendant's character was not placed in issue, so long as the probative value of admitting the evidence substantially outweighed the prejudicial effect of the evidence. Brooks v. State, 285 Ga. 246, 674 S.E.2d 871 (2009).

Defendant failed to demonstrate ineffective assistance of counsel in the defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, robbery by force because it was a reasonable strategy to agree to the admission under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(b) of a prior 1992 Texas conviction for possession of cocaine, even though the conviction was over 10 years old, as the defendant testified on the defendant's own behalf and wanted to put it all out there. Everett v. State, 297 Ga. App. 351, 677 S.E.2d 394 (2009).

Limiting instruction on prior convictions not required. — In a defendant's prosecution for malice murder and armed robbery, the trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury without request that the jurors limit their consideration of the defendant's prior convictions to the purpose of impeachment only under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a) as information regarding the defendant's prior convictions was not obtained in violation of the defendant's constitutional rights against self-incrimination under U.S. Const., amend. 5. Phillips v. State, 285 Ga. 213, 675 S.E.2d 1 (2009).

Jury charge not required if impeached witness was not primary witness. — A trial court did not err in refusing a defendant's requested charge on impeachment of an accomplice witness by proof of a crime of moral turpitude pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(1), although an instruction on impeachment by proof of a prior conviction was warranted. Any failure to give such an instruction was harmless because the witnesses were not "primary" witnesses; the defendant was the primary witness. Stewart v. State, 286 Ga. 669, 690 S.E.2d 811 (2010).

24-9-85. Credit of impeached witness for jury generally; when testimony of impeached witness must be corroborated.

(a) When a witness shall be successfully contradicted as to a material matter, his credit as to other matters shall be for the jury. The credit to be given a witness's testimony where impeached for general bad character or for contradictory statements out of court shall be for the jury to determine.

(b) If a witness shall willfully and knowingly swear falsely, his testimony shall be disregarded entirely, unless corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence. (Civil Code 1895, § 5295; Civil Code 1910, § 5884; Code 1933, § 38-1806.)

Statute is applicable to criminal as well as civil cases. Waycaster v. State, 136 Ga. 95, 70 S.E. 883 (1911); Rouse v. State, 136 Ga. 356, 71 S.E. 667 (1911).

Word "impeached" is synonymous with "attacked" or "assailed" and has the same effect. Smith v. State, 109 Ga. 479, 35 S.E. 59 (1900); Ector v. State, 120 Ga. 543, 48 S.E. 315 (1904).

Expression "successfully impeached" is inappropriate because it is confusing to use it in place of the words "successfully contradicted," as used in the statute. Reed v. State, 163 Ga. 206, 135 S.E. 748 (1926).

Impeachment and attempt to impeach distinguished in Powell v. State, 101 Ga. 9, 29 S.E. 309, 65 Am. St. R. 277 (1897).

Contradiction or Bad Character1. In General

Immaterial matter. — Witness may not be impeached simply for the reason that the witness's testimony concerning a wholly immaterial matter may not be in accord with the truth. Mann v. State, 124 Ga. 760, 53 S.E. 324 (1906); Waits v. Hardy, 214 Ga. 495, 105 S.E.2d 719 (1958).

In a personal injury action, the trial court did not err in refusing to give the defendant's requested charge on impeachment when the request was based on an exchange during cross-examination of the plaintiff that did not relate to a material matter and other instructions on the credibility of witnesses adequately covered the necessary principles. Sharp v. Fagan, 215 Ga. App. 44,

449 S.E.2d 648 (1994).

Credibility of child's statement of sexual abuse. — Although a defendant presented evidence contradicting parts of a child's sexual abuse testimony, there was no showing that the child's testimony was willfully and knowingly false. Accordingly, trial counsel was not deficient for failing to request a charge on the principles contained in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85(b). Bruce v. State, 268 Ga. App. 677, 603 S.E.2d 33 (2004).

Restoration of credibility. — Witness impeached for general bad character, or for contradictory statements out of court, may be restored to credit. Watson v. State, 13 Ga. App. 181, 78 S.E. 1014 (1913).

Summary judgment based on credibility. — When, on motion for summary judgment, the credibility of a witness or witnesses is at issue in the case, neither the trial court nor the Court of Appeals is concerned with the credibility but will leave this matter to the jury, rather than grant summary judgment based on the "uncontradicted" area of the testimony of the witness. Raven v. Dodd's Auto Sales & Serv., Inc., 117 Ga. App. 416, 160 S.E.2d 633 (1968).

Test on appeal. — On appeal, the appellate tribunal does not determine the credibility of witnesses or the preponderance of the evidence, but rather uses the "any evidence test," which is not available to the trier of facts in deciding disputed factual issues. Crawley v. Marta, 147 Ga. App. 293, 248 S.E.2d 555 (1978).

2. Function of Jury

Question of impeachment. — Credibility of witnesses is a matter so entirely for the jury that the question as to whether a witness has or has not been successfully impeached is a matter for their exclusive determination. Smith v. State, 17 Ga. App. 298, 86 S.E. 660 (1915); Hagin v. Rogers, 17 Ga. App. 515, 87 S.E. 769 (1916); Preston v. State, 42 Ga. App. 280, 155 S.E. 774 (1930); Jones v. State, 52 Ga. App. 83, 182 S.E. 527 (1935); Andrews v. State, 196 Ga. 84, 26 S.E.2d 263, cert. denied, 320 U.S. 780, 64 S. Ct. 87, 88 L. Ed. 468 (1943), overruled on other grounds, Frady v. State, 212 Ga. 84, 90 S.E.2d 664 (1955); Turner v. Hardy, 198 Ga. 626, 32 S.E.2d 483 (1944); Whitener v. Baly Tire Co., 98 Ga. App. 257, 105 S.E.2d 775 (1958); Cartin v. Boles, 155 Ga. App. 248, 270 S.E.2d 799 (1980); Garner v. Driver, 155 Ga. App. 322, 270 S.E.2d 863 (1980); Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Evidence provided by the victim that defendant was the man who threatened her with a knife and then raped her was sufficient to support both the rape and aggravated assault with intent to rape convictions; whether the victim was successfully impeached by proof of contradictory statements was also a question for the jury. Wilson v. State, 267 Ga. App. 491, 600 S.E.2d 440 (2004).

Credence to testimony. — It is the jury's prerogative to ascertain if a witness has been impeached and then determine what credence to give the witness's testimony. Ussery v. Koch, 115 Ga. App. 463, 154 S.E.2d 879 (1967); Raven v. Dodd's Auto Sales & Serv., Inc., 117 Ga. App. 416, 160 S.E.2d 633 (1968), overruled on other grounds, Raven v. Dodd's Auto Sales & Serv., Inc., 117 Ga. App. 416, 160 S.E.2d 633 (1968).

It is within the power and right of jury to believe any witness, no matter what effort may have been made to impeach the witness, or what testimony has been presented for that purpose, and even though the witness is not corroborated. Hayes v. State, 168 Ga. App. 710, 309 S.E.2d 843 (1983).

Jury may disregard testimony. — If a jury determines that a witness has been impeached as to a material fact in the case, the jury can disbelieve the witness's entire testimony. Burke v. State, 205 Ga. App. 520, 51 S.E.2d 693, rev'd on other grounds, 205 Ga. 520, 54 S.E.2d 348 (1949); Gulf Life Ins. Co. v. Moore, 90 Ga. App. 791, 84 S.E.2d 696 (1954); Swift & Co. v. Lawson, 95 Ga. App. 35, 97 S.E.2d 168 (1957); Ritchie v. Dillon, 103 Ga. App. 7, 118 S.E.2d 115 (1961) (judge as trier of fact); St. Paul Ins. Co. v. Henley, 141 Ga. App. 581, 234 S.E.2d 159 (1977).

Testimony which must be disregarded in its entirety is only that testimony which is willfully and knowingly false. Fugitt v. State, 251 Ga. 451, 307 S.E.2d 471 (1983), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1070, 107 S. Ct. 963, 93 L. Ed. 2d 1011 (1987); Jones v. State, 265 Ga. 84, 453 S.E.2d 716 (1995).

If a witness has been successfully impeached by evidence of conviction of a felony, then the credit to be accorded the witness's statement, if any, is for the jury to determine under proper instructions from the trial court. McNeely v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 246 Ga. App. 852, 542 S.E.2d 575 (2000).

Rejection of part of testimony. — Jury is the sole judge of the credibility of the witnesses and may believe part of the testimony of each witness and reject part of each witness's testimony. Brown v. O'Neal, 59 Ga. App. 560, 1 S.E.2d 601 (1939); Davis v. State, 205 Ga. 248, 53 S.E.2d 545 (1949); Strickland Motors Inc. v. State, 81 Ga. App. 824, 60 S.E.2d 254 (1950).

Jury may impute perjury. — When a witness is sought to be impeached by disproving facts testified to by other witnesses which results only in a conflict between their testimony and the witness, it is the province of the jury to determine which of the witnesses has spoken the truth, even if in order to do so it is necessary to impute perjury to one or the other. Champion v. State, 84 Ga. App. 163, 65 S.E.2d 280 (1951).

Jury may reject impeaching testimony. — Effort to impeach does not always result in impeachment; the jury may accept the testimony of a witness whom it is sought to impeach, rather than that of the impeaching witness. Taylor v. State, 5 Ga. App. 237, 62 S.E. 1048 (1908); Jolly v. State, 5 Ga. App. 454, 63 S.E. 520 (1909); Smith v. State, 7 Ga. App. 710, 67 S.E. 1048 (1910); Hudgins v. State, 7 Ga. App. 785, 68 S.E. 336 (1910); Simmons v. State, 9 Ga. App. 552, 71 S.E. 876 (1911); Griggs v. State, 17 Ga. App. 301, 86 S.E. 726 (1915).

Witness who is attacked for general bad character may be believed by the jury regardless of whether there is any evidence to sustain the witness's good character or any corroborating evidence. Preston v. State, 42 Ga. App. 280, 155 S.E. 774 (1930); Rowe v. State, 68 Ga. App. 161, 22 S.E.2d 210 (1942).

Witness's manner of testifying. — It is for the jury to observe the witness's manner of testifying to decide whether the witness swore positively falsely and ought not to be believed in any particular, or whether the witness was confused and the witness's testimony, though highly inconsistent, was worthy of credit and to be given weight in determining the issues to which it related. Griffin v. Ross, 93 Ga. App. 407, 91 S.E.2d 815 (1956).

Contradiction or Bad Character (Cont'd)

2. Function of Jury (Cont'd)

Interested witness may be disbelieved. — Interest of a witness in the result of the suit may always be considered in passing upon the witness's credibility, and, if there are circumstances inconsistent with the truth of the witness's testimony, the jury is not obliged to believe the witness, even though the witness is not contradicted by any other witness. Hinchcliffe v. Pinson, 87 Ga. App. 526, 74 S.E.2d 497 (1953).

Purchaser of stolen goods. — It was a jury question as to whether or not the defendant's explanation that the defendant was an innocent purchaser of stolen goods was credible, and the jury was authorized but not required to disbelieve the state's witness who denied selling the tires to the defendant, since the credit given the testimony of one impeached for general bad character is for the jury to determine. Stephens v. State, 94 Ga. App. 366, 93 S.E.2d 623 (1956).

Testimony by owner of stolen property as to value for purposes of restitution. — When an owner of stolen property is attempting to establish value for purposes of restitution by the thief, if there is any doubt as to whether the witness has shown a sufficient basis or foundation for the witness's opinion as to value, there are particularly sound reasons of justice why the evidence ought to be admitted and its weight and credibility, and indeed the question of whether the witness has given sufficient foundation, should be left to the trier of fact. Maddox v. State, 157 Ga. App. 696, 278 S.E.2d 480 (1981).

Contradictory statement given under coercion. — Because subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 requires that the false swearing be willful, evidence that a witness gave in to coercive threats at the time of giving a contradictory statement allowed the jury to find the witness did not act willfully, but involuntarily. Gurr v. State, 238 Ga. App. 1, 516 S.E.2d 553 (1999).

3. Instructions

Charge on impeachment is not required in the absence of a timely written request. Spence v. State, 52 Ga. App. 383, 183 S.E. 339 (1936); Martin v. State, 53 Ga. App. 213, 185 S.E. 387 (1936); Aycock v. State, 188 Ga.

551, 4 S.E.2d 221 (1939); Georgia Power Co. v. Burger, 63 Ga. App. 784, 11 S.E.2d 834 (1940); Hyde v. State, 196 Ga. 475, 26 S.E.2d 744 (1943); Grier v. State, 196 Ga. 515, 26 S.E.2d 889 (1943); Fuller v. State, 197 Ga. 714, 30 S.E.2d 608 (1944); Cady v. State, 198 Ga. 99, 31 S.E.2d 38, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 323 U.S. 676, 65 S. Ct. 190, 89 L. Ed. 549 (1944); Stone v. State, 80 Ga. App. 557, 56 S.E.2d 835 (1949); Summerour v. State, 85 Ga. App. 94, 68 S.E.2d 158 (1951); Hilburn v. Hilburn, 210 Ga. 497, 81 S.E.2d 1 (1954); Bentley v. State, 131 Ga. App. 425, 205 S.E.2d 904 (1974); Duke v. State, 147 Ga. App. 101, 248 S.E.2d 176 (1978); Apgar v. State, 159 Ga. App. 752, 285 S.E.2d 89 (1981).

Failure to charge statute not error in the absence of a timely request since the court charged the principles of law relating to credibility of witnesses generally. Aycock v. State, 188 Ga. 550, 4 S.E.2d 221 (1939); Smaha v. George, 195 Ga. 412, 24 S.E.2d 385 (1943); Milwaukee Mechanics Ins. Co. v. Davis, 79 Ga. App. 70, 52 S.E.2d 643 (1949); McDonald v. State, 89 Ga. App. 759, 81 S.E.2d 303 (1954); Bentley v. State, 131 Ga. App. 425, 205 S.E.2d 904 (1974).

Court did not err by failing to charge the jury on subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 since defense counsel made no written or oral request for such a charge. Blackstock v. State, 270 Ga. 117, 506 S.E.2d 130 (1998).

Trial court was not required to charge a jury on false swearing, under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85(b), due to false statements made by a prosecution witness to investigators and the witness's signatures on false applications because none of the statements or signatures were made under oath, and the witness did not admit the witness swore falsely. Brown v. State, 268 Ga. App. 629, 602 S.E.2d 158 (2004).

Charge need not be in exact language of the statute. Southern Ry. v. Peek, 6 Ga. App. 43, 64 S.E. 308 (1909); Jeffers v. State, 145 Ga. 74, 88 S.E. 571 (1916); Dean v. State, 154 Ga. 533, 114 S.E. 809 (1922). See also Powell v. State, 101 Ga. 9, 29 S.E. 309, 65 Am. St. R. 277 (1897); Harris v. State, 1 Ga. App. 136, 57 S.E. 937 (1907). In addition see Mitchell v. State, 110 Ga. 272, 34 S.E. 576 (1899); Elliot v. State, 138 Ga. 23, 74 S.E. 691 (1912).

Charge must be complete. — While it is not incumbent upon the judge, in the absence of a timely and appropriate written request, to charge upon the subject of the impeachment of witnesses, yet, where that subject is referred to in the charge, all of it that is material and applicable to the facts of the case should be given. Moore v. State, 55 Ga. App. 157, 189 S.E. 551 (1937).

Charge includes substance of § 24-9-82.

— Charge of the court in the language of former Code 1933, § 38-1806 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85) that when a witness shall be successfully contradicted as to a material matter the witness's credit as to other matters is for the jury, includes the substance of former Code 1933, § 38-1802 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82) which provided that a witness may be impeached by disproving facts testified to by the witness. Aiken v. Glass, 95 Ga. App. 849, 99 S.E.2d 426 (1957).

Refusal of request for instruction. — It is error, in a case in which the determination of the issue depends almost entirely upon the credibility of a witness whom it is sought to impeach, to refuse a request that the statute be given in charge to the jury, the request being in the exact language of the statute. Pelham & H.R.R. v. Elliott, 11 Ga. App. 621, 75 S.E. 1062 (1912).

It is error for court to instruct jury that if the jury believes a witness has made previous statements contradictory to the witness's testimony delivered on the trial, such testimony should be disregarded unless it "is corroborated." Waycaster v. State, 136 Ga. 95, 70 S.E. 883 (1911); Henrich v. McCauley, 154 Ga. 855, 115 S.E. 655 (1923).

Contradictory statement in deposition. — It was not error to charge the provisions of the statute, including those on impeachment of witnesses for "general bad character or for contradictory statements out of court," when appellant made two statements under cross-examination which could be found to be contradictory of statements previously made in a deposition. Savannah Ice Delivery Co. v. Ayers, 127 Ga. App. 560, 194 S.E.2d 330 (1972).

Consideration of evidence in former trial.

— In criminal prosecution, court's charge that jury should not consider anything said or done in former trial of case was not an infringement and invasion of the province of the jury trying the case, notwithstanding contention that had the jury been allowed to consider testimony from former trial, it would have concluded that the evidence in the present trial was inconsistent with evidence and statements made by prosecution witness previously and thus could have believed the statement of the defendant. Crosby v. State, 92 Ga. App. 335, 88 S.E.2d 523 (1955).

False Swearing

1. In General

General rule. — Before this rule of total rejection is applicable, the false swearing must be made in the identical case on trial, and not upon the trial of some other case no matter how closely related; it must be willfully and knowingly false; the witness must admit that the witness willfully and knowingly swore falsely, or the nature and character of the witness's own testimony must be such as to render the purpose to falsify "plainly manifest"; and also, the false testimony may relate to a matter which is merely "collateral" to the main issue, although it must be relevant and incidentally material thereto. Jones v. State, 70 Ga. App. 431, 28 S.E.2d 373 (1943).

Willful and knowing false swearing. — Before the principle of total rejection of a witness's testimony is applied, it must manifestly appear that not only has the witness on one or the other occasion sworn falsely to a material matter, but that the witness has done so willfully and knowingly. McLendon v. Johnson, 71 Ga. App. 424, 31 S.E.2d 89 (1944); Teague v. Keith, 214 Ga. 853, 108 S.E.2d 489 (1959); Henderson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 114, 245 S.E.2d 437 (1978); Duke v. State, 147 Ga. App. 101, 248 S.E.2d 176 (1978); Burrell v. State, 171 Ga. App. 648, 320 S.E.2d 810 (1984); Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1987); overruled on other grounds, Manzano v. State, 282 Ga. 557, 651 S.E.2d 661 (2007); Yebra v. State, 206 Ga. App. 12, 424 S.E.2d 318 (1992).

In order to make O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 applicable, it must appear, among other things, that the witness admits, on the trial, that the witness willfully and knowingly swore falsely, or the testimony must be such as to render manifest the purpose to falsify. Hill v. State, 159 Ga. App. 489, 283 S.E.2d 703 (1981).

Testimony which must be disregarded in the testimony's entirety is only that testimony which is willfully and knowingly false. Fugitt v. State, 251 Ga. 451, 307 S.E.2d 471 (1983), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1070, 107 S. Ct. 963, 93 L. Ed. 2d 1011 (1987); Warnock v. State, 195 Ga. App. 537, 394 S.E.2d 382 (1990).

False Swearing (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

As to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85, it must be understood that the testimony which must be disregarded in the testimony's entirety is only that testimony which is willfully and knowingly false. Grant v. State, 197 Ga. App. 878, 399 S.E.2d 743 (1990).

An inconsistency does not necessarily imply an intentional lie; thus, it did not necessarily follow that a deputy intentionally lied because the deputy added details of the arrest at trial that were not indicated in the police report. Tri Huynh v. State, 239 Ga. App. 62, 518 S.E.2d 920 (1999).

Inconsistencies did not rise to the level of "willfully and knowingly swearing falsely" so as to support a charge under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 since there was no showing that the victim's testimony was willfully and knowingly false or that the testimony was such as to render the purpose to falsify manifest. Turner v. State, 245 Ga. App. 294, 536 S.E.2d 814 (2000), overruled on other grounds, Miller v. State, 285 Ga. 285, 676 S.E.2d 173 (2009).

Lying to police does not constitute false swearing and, therefore, the credibility of the testimony of an accomplice who admitted lying to the police is a matter for the jury to resolve. Brown v. State, 187 Ga. App. 557, 370 S.E.2d 818 (1988).

False swearing in same case. — Before application of the rule of total rejection of testimony by a witness who swears falsely, the false swearing must be made in the case on trial. Jones v. State, 70 Ga. App. 431, 28 S.E.2d 373 (1943); Milwaukee Mechanics Ins. Co. v. Davis, 79 Ga. App. 70, 52 S.E.2d 643 (1949); Taylor v. State, 83 Ga. App. 735, 64 S.E.2d 598 (1951); Gellis v. B.L.I. Constr. Co., 148 Ga. App. 527, 251 S.E.2d 800 (1978).

Applicability. — When there is no evidence that a witness was ever confronted with or asked to explain certain evidence or that false swearing was made on the trial of the case, this statute is not applicable. Gellis v. B.L.I. Constr. Co., 148 Ga. App. 527, 251 S.E.2d 800 (1978).

Subsection (b) is not applicable when a witness is attacked for general bad character. Rowe v. State, 68 Ga. App. 161, 22 S.E.2d 210 (1942) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85).

Inconsistencies in the testimony of witnesses do not in and of themselves authorize a conclusion that some of the testimony was perjured. It is for the jury to resolve the conflicts. Howard v. State, 200 Ga. App. 188, 407 S.E.2d 769, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 896, 407 S.E.2d 769 (1991).

Mistake or failure of memory. — Subsection (b) does not extend to situations where it is shown to be reasonably possible that the discrepancy was occasioned by mistake or the failure of memory. Smaha v. George, 195 Ga. 412, 24 S.E.2d 385 (1943); McLendon v. Johnson, 71 Ga. App. 424, 31 S.E.2d 89 (1944); Roach v. Carroll, 110 Ga. App. 636, 139 S.E.2d 523 (1964); Yebra v. State, 206 Ga. App. 12, 424 S.E.2d 318 (1992) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85).

Testimony of child victim. — Credibility of the testimony of a child victim of sexual abuse who gave false or contradictory testimony was a question for the jury. Perguson v. State, 221 Ga. App. 212, 470 S.E.2d 909 (1996).

False statement must be material. — This stringent rule has been modified somewhat in that what is falsely sworn to must be material. Holbrook v. Rodgers, 105 Ga. App. 219, 124 S.E.2d 443 (1962).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for aggravated assault and other crimes, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a new trial, which was based on the victim allegedly testifying falsely that the victim was leaving the defendant for personal reasons and not because of any alleged affair with another on the defendant's part as, assuming the reasons the victim was leaving the defendant was material to the case, no showing was made by the defendant that the testimony was false as compared to a divorce complaint the victim subsequently filed, which listed adultery as one of the reasons for seeking the divorce. Hardy v. State, 293 Ga. App. 265, 666 S.E.2d 730 (2008).

False testimony not found. — In finding that an incident was not a traffic violation, the trial court did not find that an officer testified falsely about the incident under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85(b); the court disagreed only with the officer's characterization of the incident. The trial court believed that an earlier incident occurred as the officer described the incident, and the court held that the first incident constituted a violation sufficient to justify the traffic stop. Floyd v. State, 297 Ga. App. 736, 678 S.E.2d 181 (2009).

Hearsay evidence as corroboration. — Hearsay evidence will not support a verdict, or afford corroboration of a witness who has testified willfully and knowingly falsely, but the language of the witness may indicate that it rested on actual facts. Bull & Son v. Carpenter, 32 Ga. App. 637, 124 S.E. 381 (1924).

2. Function of Jury

In general. — Credibility of a witness is exclusively for determination by the jury and, although a witness may have been successfully impeached, it is left to the discretion of the jury to decide whether the witness's testimony has been corroborated; and, while it would be their duty to disregard entirely the testimony of an impeached witness, unless corroborated, yet they have the right to believe the evidence of a witness, notwithstanding the impeachment, and in the absence of any corroboration. Edwards v. State, 55 Ga. App. 187, 189 S.E. 678 (1937); Fulmer v. State, 74 Ga. App. 298, 39 S.E.2d 732 (1946).

Statute not intended as abridgement of absolute right of jury to determine the credibility of witnesses. Brown v. State, 10 Ga. App. 50, 72 S.E. 537 (1911); Solomon v. State, 10 Ga. App. 469, 73 S.E. 623 (1912); Edwards v. State, 55 Ga. App. 187, 189 S.E. 678 (1937). See also Rice v. City of Eatonton, 15 Ga. App. 505, 83 S.E. 868 (1914); Ware v. State, 18 Ga. App. 107, 89 S.E. 155 (1916). In addition see Bishop v. State, 18 Ga. App. 714, 90 S.E. 369 (1916); Hunter v. State, 19 Ga. App. 615, 91 S.E. 927 (1917).

False swearing and contradictory statements distinguished. — Effect in the case of a prior contradictory statement is to leave the witness's credibility to the jury; in the case of willfully and knowingly swearing falsely, the testimony must be entirely disregarded unless there is corroboration from other sources. Hall v. Burpee, 176 Ga. 270, 168 S.E. 39 (1933); Eberhart v. State, 121 Ga. App. 663, 175 S.E.2d 73 (1970).

When defendant contended that the victim's recitations of the events were so inconsistent and implausible as to require that the victim's testimony be rejected, but the record did not disclose that the victim swore willfully and knowingly falsely, the question of the victim's credibility was for the jury to determine. Williams v. State, 180 Ga. App. 365, 349 S.E.2d 253 (1986).

Whether testimony willfully false is jury question. — It is for the jury to determine whether any witness testifies willfully and knowingly falsely, and if so, to discredit entirely unless corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence. Sutton v. State, 18 Ga. App. 28, 88 S.E. 744 (1916); Scoggins v. State, 23 Ga. App. 366, 98 S.E. 240, cert. denied, 23 Ga. App. 813 (1919).

Corroboration is jury question. — Nature and extent of corroboration necessary to prove the perjury must in each case be determined by the jury. Jones v. State, 70 Ga. App. 431, 28 S.E.2d 373 (1943).

Amount of corroboration needed is that amount of corroborative evidence which will convince the jury that a certain state of facts is true. Crowe v. State, 83 Ga. App. 325, 63 S.E.2d 682 (1951).

Effect of corroboration. — Whenever a witness has been successfully impeached in any of the manners provided by law, the jury has the right to disregard the testimony of such witness, and exclude it entirely, provided the testimony of such witness is uncorroborated; on the other hand, if the testimony of such witness is corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence, the jury is authorized to consider the testimony of such witness. Kicklighter v. State, 76 Ga. App. 246, 45 S.E.2d 719 (1947).

Jury may believe corroborated witness. — If a witness had been impeached and thereby rendered totally unworthy of credit, the jury might still believe the witness, if the witness was corroborated by other witnesses. Grant v. State, 118 Ga. 804, 45 S.E. 603 (1903).

Jury may believe uncorroborated witness. — It is within the power and right of a jury to believe a witness, no matter what effort may have been made or testimony presented to impeach the witness, and even though the witness was not corroborated. Sutton v. State, 18 Ga. App. 28, 88 S.E. 744 (1916); Robinson v. State, 52 Ga. App. 106, 182 S.E. 417 (1935).

Testimony disregarded when uncorroborated. — If a witness swears willfully and knowingly false, the witness's testimony is to be disregarded entirely when it is not corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence. Humphreys v. Smith, 133 Ga. 456, 66 S.E. 158 (1909); Smaha v. George, 195 Ga. 412, 24 S.E.2d 385 (1943); Champion v. State, 84 Ga. App. 163, 65 S.E.2d 280 (1951); Roach v. Carroll, 110 Ga. App. 636, 139 S.E.2d 523 (1964).

Explanation by witness. — On the question of the willfulness of false swearing, the witness is entitled to explain the witness's reasons for doing so, and the jury may consider this explanation in passing on the witness's credibility. Montgomery v. State, 224 Ga. 845, 165 S.E.2d 145 (1968).

Witness may be believed. — Even though a witness may admit having previously sworn falsely, the witness may still be believed by the jury if an explanation of the reasons for the false testimony is reasonable and satisfactory to the jury. Jolly v. State, 5 Ga. App. 454, 63 S.E. 520 (1909); Chatman v. State, 8 Ga. App. 842, 70 S.E. 188 (1911); Brown v. State, 17 Ga. App. 402, 87 S.E. 155 (1915).

Evidence that a witness gave in to coercive threats allowed the jury to find that the witness did not act willfully, but involuntarily. Gurr v. State, 238 Ga. App. 1, 516 S.E.2d 553 (1999).

Repudiation and reaffirmation of testimony. — After a witness repudiated the witness's earlier testimony and, in the course of being further interrogated, reaffirmed the witness's original version of the matter, and this testimony was contradicted by the positive and plausible evidence of several witnesses, the jury was thoroughly warranted in disbelieving the witness altogether. Griffin v. Ross, 93 Ga. App. 407, 91 S.E.2d 815 (1956).

3. Instructions

In general. — Rule that when the judge charges correctly on one or more of the methods of impeachment, the judge's failure to charge also upon another method raised by the evidence is not reversible error in the absence of a request to charge is subject to the single exception embraced in this statute in regard to false swearing. Milwaukee Mechanics Ins. Co. v. Davis, 79 Ga. App. 70, 52 S.E.2d 643 (1949); Taylor v. State, 83 Ga. App. 735, 64 S.E.2d 598 (1951).

Failure to charge statute not error. — There is authority for the proposition that under certain circumstances, a charge on subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 should be given even absent a request, but when the record shows that such circumstances did not exist in the instant case, there was no error in failing to give the charge. Bouldin v. State, 179 Ga. App. 394, 346 S.E.2d 871 (1986).

Trial court correctly denied the defendant's request to charge on false swearing because, while the witness made inconsistent statements to an investigator of a domestic abuse incident, they did not constitute an admission to false swearing nor lead to the conclusion that the witness subsequently willfully and knowingly lied under oath to a magistrate. Grant v. State, 245 Ga. App. 652, 538 S.E.2d 540 (2000).

Jury charge on false swearing under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85(b) was properly refused because the victim did not admit to swearing falsely, and speculation that the victim had a motive to swear falsely did not render the victim's purpose to falsify testimony manifest. Callahan v. State, 256 Ga. App. 482, 568 S.E.2d 780 (2002).

During a defendant's trial for malice murder and other crimes, because the defendant never requested a jury charge on false swearing, the trial court did not err by failing to give the charge; further, a review of the jury instructions, which included instructions on the credibility of witnesses and impeachment, established that had there been any error in the trial court's failure to give such a charge, it would have been harmless. Hunter v. State, 281 Ga. 693, 642 S.E.2d 668 (2007).

Harmless error. — Considering the charge in the charge's entirety and the fact that the court charged the jury on impeachment and the credibility of witnesses, any error in failing to give a charge based on subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 was harmless. Evans v. State, 209 Ga. App. 340,

433 S.E.2d 426 (1993).

Instruction required. — Failure to charge the provisions of the statute is error, even in the absence of a request, if a witness swears at the trial to a certain state of facts in a material matter, and the witness has previously sworn to the contrary in the same case. Payne v. Reese, 28 Ga. App. 180, 110 S.E. 740 (1922); Martin v. State, 53 Ga. App. 213, 185 S.E. 387 (1936); Smith v. State, 74 Ga. App. 777, 41 S.E.2d 541, cert. denied, 332 U.S. 772, 68 S. Ct. 86, 92 L. Ed. 357 (1947); Martin v. State, 93 Ga. App. 580, 92 S.E.2d 233 (1956).

Under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85, if a witness swears at the trial to a certain state of facts in a material matter, and the witness has previously sworn to the contrary in the same case, and when the witness admits that the witness's testimony was false, this constitutes a willful and knowing false swearing, and requires the jury to reject the witness's testimony entirely, unless the testimony be corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence. In such a case the judge should so charge the jury, even without a request. Hill v. State, 159 Ga. App. 489, 283 S.E.2d 703 (1981).

Motive to testify falsely does not require charge. — An instruction to the jury under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85(b) is not required by the existence of a motive to testify falsely. Steele v. State, 248 Ga. App. 441, 546 S.E.2d 547 (2001).

Charge unnecessary when false swearing denied. — It is not reversible error for a judge, in the absence of a request, to fail to charge to the jury the rule of impeachment, which provides that the testimony of a witness, who shall "swear willfully and knowingly falsely" as to a material matter, shall be "disregarded entirely, unless corroborated by circumstances or other unimpeached evidence," where witnesses, though admitting an inaccuracy in the witnesses' previous depositions with respect to an incidental question, denied any intentional falsity, and sought to explain the discrepancy as due to a failure to refresh the witnesses' recollection on a matter which was not impressed on the witnesses' minds, or due to the confusion caused by the circumstances of cross-examination in the witnesses' previous depositions, and since the nature and character of the testimony is not such as would render the purpose to falsify plainly manifest. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Flynt, 93 Ga. App. 514, 92 S.E.2d 330 (1956).

When the witness's statement to the police was unsworn and the witness denied that the witness was lying both on direct and cross-examination, the trial court did not err in failing to charge the jury that the jury must disregard the testimony of a witness who knowingly and willfully swears falsely, and as the credibility of the witness was placed in issue, the trial court correctly charged the jury that the jury was the judge of the credibility of witnesses. Abrams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 609, 278 S.E.2d 37 (1981).

Trial counsel's decision not to request a charge under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 was proper since the witness did not admit to swearing falsely and the evidence did not render the witness's purpose to falsify manifest; the witness's credibility was for the jury under proper instructions regarding credibility and impeachment. Ney v. State, 227 Ga. App. 496, 489 S.E.2d 509 (1997).

No duty to charge when possibility of mistake or failure of memory shown. — For a trial court to have a duty to charge O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85, it must manifestly appear not only that the witness has on another occasion sworn falsely to a material matter but the witness has done so willfully and knowingly, but this rule does not extend to situations where it is shown to be reasonably possible that the discrepancy was occasioned by mistake or the failure of memory. Abrams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 609, 278 S.E.2d 37 (1981); Wozniuk v. Kitchin, 229 Ga. App. 359, 494 S.E.2d 247 (1997).

When a discrepancy in testimony appears to have been caused by mistake or failure of memory due to the lapse of time, the trial court does not err in refusing to charge subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85. Mauldin v. State, 167 Ga. App. 789, 307 S.E.2d 689 (1983); Williams v. State, 195 Ga. App. 376, 393 S.E.2d 506 (1990).

Failure to charge in exact language of statute not error. — When the language of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 is substantially given by the judge, wherein the judge instructs in detail about the believability of witnesses and disbelieving a discredited witness, and there is no exception made to the charge as given in this regard, the failure to charge in the exact language of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 is not error. Poteat v. State, 251 Ga. 87, 303 S.E.2d 452 (1983).

Better practice is to include word "entirely" in an instruction on subsection (b). Garland v. State, 124 Ga. 832, 53 S.E. 314 (1906) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85).

Statute must be charged. — When witness testified in a conflicting manner and assigned as a reason that the witness's testimony before the grand jury was false, that the witness was at that time a friend of the accused but was at the time of the trial an enemy of the accused, it was error for the court to fail to charge this statute. Plummer v. State, 111 Ga. 839, 36 S.E. 233 (1900) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85).

Charge authorized. — When there are admitted discrepancies in the testimony of the plaintiff's witnesses on material matters in the interrogatories taken for use in the case, and in the verbal testimony delivered in the trial, as well as the discrepancies in the verbal testimony in the trial itself, the court was authorized to charge on total rejection which is provided for by statute. Beardsley v. Suburban Coach Co., 83 Ga. App. 381, 63 S.E.2d 911 (1951).

Reversal due to prejudicial charge. — When the harm resulting from the inclusion of a wilful and false swearing instruction was exacerbated by an improper attack by plaintiff's counsel upon the character of defendant's sole witness, the trial court's failure to rebuke counsel or to endeavor to remove the improper impression left in the minds of the jurors was reversible error. All Risk Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 182 Ga. App. 190, 355 S.E.2d 465 (1987).

Trial court's refusal to give requested charge on O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85 was reversible error after appellant produced a sworn affidavit by prosecutor that there had been no rape or other sexual contact between appellant and prosecutor, but prosecutor repudiated this evidence on the stand, because the credibility of the prosecutor, the only witness to the alleged assault, was so material that without it the conviction could not be sustained. Blount v. State, 172 Ga. App. 120, 322 S.E.2d 323 (1984).

Instruction proper when testimony irreconcilable with state's evidence. — Trial court did not err in instructing the jury on falsely sworn testimony since defendant's testimony was irreconcilable with the state's evidence, and thus the jury was authorized to conclude that defendant had sworn falsely to a material matter. Hanvey v. State, 186 Ga. App. 690, 368 S.E.2d 357, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 918, 368 S.E.2d 357 (1988).

24-9-100. State policy.

It is the policy of the State of Georgia to secure the rights of hearing impaired persons who, because of impaired hearing, cannot readily understand or communicate in spoken language and who consequently cannot equally participate in or benefit from proceedings, programs, and activities of the courts, legislative bodies, administrative agencies, licensing commissions, departments, and boards of the state and its subdivisions unless qualified interpreters are available to assist them. (Code 1981, § 24-9-100, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2; Ga. L. 2010, p. 878, § 24/HB 1387.)

The 2010 amendment, effective June 3, 2010, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted “commissions” for “commission” near the end of this Code section.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Failing to object to presence of interpreters. — With regard to two defendants’ convictions for murder, the defendants failed to show that the defendants received ineffective assistance of counsel based on the defendants’ respective trial counsel failing to object to the presence of two sign language interpreters in the jury room as the trial court had the two interpreters take an oath swearing that, during jury deliberations, the interpreters would merely interpret and not interject the interpreters’ personal opinions, conclusions, or comments. The defendants failed to present a shred of evidence that the interpreters did anything other than comply fully with the oath taken and that trial counsel had any reasons to suspect the interpreters did otherwise. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 599, 669 S.E.2d 98 (2008).

Adequate accommodation for defendant’s hearing loss. — Defendant’s claim of a due process violation because the defendant’s hearing impairment prevented the defendant from comprehending the witnesses’ testimony was properly rejected. The trial court accommodated the defendant by moving the defendant closer to the witness stand and obtaining a hearing device for the defendant to use, and the defendant’s conduct during the trial and statements to defense counsel indicated that the defendant was able to understand the testimony. Neugent v. State, 294 Ga. App. 284, 668 S.E.2d 888 (2008).

24-9-101. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) “Agency” means any agency, authority, board, bureau, committee, commission, court, department, or jury of the legislative, judicial, or executive branch of government of the state or any political subdivision thereof.

(2) “Department” means the Department of Labor.

(3) “Hearing impaired person” means any person whose hearing is totally impaired or whose hearing is so seriously impaired as to prohibit the person from understanding oral communications when spoken in a normal conversational tone.

(4) “Intermediary interpreter” means any person, including any hearing impaired person, who is able to assist in providing an accurate interpretation between spoken English and sign language or between the variance of sign language by acting as an intermediary between a hearing impaired person and a qualified interpreter.

(5) “Proceeding” means any meeting, hearing, trial, investigation, or other proceeding of any nature conducted by an agency.

(6) “Qualified interpreter” means any person certified as an interpreter by the National Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf or approved as an interpreter by the Georgia Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf. (Code 1981, § 24-9-101, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2; Ga. L. 2009, p. 453, § 2-13/HB 228.)

The 2009 amendment, effective July 1, for “Department of Human Resources” in 2009, substituted “Department of Labor” paragraph (2).

24-9-102. Appointment of interpreters for hearing impaired persons interested in or witness at agency proceedings; hearing impaired persons to make requests for interpreters.

(a) The agency conducting any proceeding shall provide a qualified interpreter to the hearing impaired person:

(1) Whenever the hearing impaired person is a party to the proceeding or a witness before the proceeding; or

(2) Whenever a person below the age of 18 years whose parents are hearing impaired persons is a party to the proceeding or a witness before the proceeding conducted by an agency.

(b) The hearing impaired person shall notify the agency not less than ten days, excluding weekends and holidays, prior to the date of the proceeding of the need for a qualified interpreter. If the hearing impaired person receives notice of the proceeding less than ten days, excluding weekends and holidays, prior to the proceeding, he shall notify the agency as soon as practicable after receiving such notice. Upon receiving a request for a qualified interpreter, the agency shall immediately forward such request to the department. Upon receiving a request from an agency, the department shall provide a qualified interpreter for the proceeding specified in the request. (Code 1981, § 24-9-102, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2; Ga. L. 1985, p. 149, § 24.)

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Hearing impaired juror. — Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 24-9-102 does not require that a court provide an interpreter for a hearing impaired prospective juror. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-11.

24-9-103. Procedure for interrogation and taking of statements from hearing impaired persons when arrested; interpreters to be provided upon arrest of hearing impaired persons.

(a) The arresting law enforcement agency shall provide a qualified interpreter to any hearing impaired person whenever the hearing impaired person is taken into custody for allegedly violating any criminal law or ordinance of the state or any political subdivision thereof.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the law enforcement agency shall immediately request a qualified interpreter from the department, and the department shall provide a qualified interpreter. No interrogation, warning, informing of rights, taking of statements, or other investigatory procedures shall be undertaken until a qualified interpreter has been provided; and no answer, statement, admission, or other evidence acquired from the hearing impaired person shall be admissible in any criminal or quasi-criminal proceeding unless such was knowingly and voluntarily given through and in the presence of a qualified interpreter. No hearing impaired person who has been taken into custody and who is otherwise eligible for release shall be detained because of the unavailability of a qualified interpreter.

(2) If a qualified interpreter is not available one hour after the hearing impaired person has been taken into custody and a request has been forwarded to the department, the arresting officer may interrogate or take a statement from such person, provided that such interrogation and answers thereto shall be in writing and shall be preserved and turned over to the court in the event such person is tried for the alleged offense. (Code 1981, § 24-9-103, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Hearing impaired person arrested for driving under the influence was not entitled to a qualified interpreter before the person’s rights under the implied consent law were conveyed to the person by the arresting officer. State v. Webb, 212 Ga. App. 872, 443 S.E.2d 630 (1994).

Giving implied consent card inadequate. — Qualified interpreter was required to be present to convey implied consent warnings and rights to an impaired person before any questioning or advice was given and an officer’s giving the person an “implied consent card” to read and writing an explanation were not sufficient. Allen v. State, 218 Ga. App. 844, 463 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Impact of one-hour waiting period. — When police have made a request for an interpreter and one has been provided, after the one-hour waiting period elapses, the police may proceed with their investigation under the implied consent laws. If, however, the impaired person intelligently waives the one-hour requirement, the police may proceed with written interrogatories and the person should answer in writing, and then the police may proceed under the implied consent law. Allen v. State, 218 Ga. App. 844, 463 S.E.2d 522 (1995).

Arresting officer failed to comply with statutory procedures. — DUI conviction was reversed when the arresting officer failed to comply with the statutory procedures for communicating with a hearing-impaired detainee because the requirements in the statute are mandatory, and if not met, the evidence acquired is not admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-103. Yates v. State, 248 Ga. App. 35, 545 S.E.2d 169 (2001).

Non hearing-impaired defendant’s equal protection argument failed when the defendant could not meet the defendant’s burden to show that O.C.G.A. § 24-9-103 is arbitrary or otherwise not rationally related to a legitimate state interest. Sisson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 61, 499 S.E.2d 422 (1998).

Failing to object to presence of interpreters. — With regard to two defendants’ convictions for murder, the defendants failed to show that the defendants received ineffective assistance of counsel based on the defendants’ respective trial counsel failing to object to the presence of two sign language interpreters in the jury room as the trial court had the two interpreters take an oath swearing that, during jury deliberations, the interpreters would merely interpret and not interject the interpreters’ personal opinions, conclusions, or comments. The defendants failed to present a shred of evidence that the interpreters did anything other than comply fully with the oath taken and that trial counsel had any reasons to suspect the interpreters did otherwise. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 599, 669 S.E.2d 98 (2008).

Impact of failure to comply with procedure. — When the arresting officer failed to comply with the procedure in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-103, such failure rendered blood test results inadmissible. State v. Woody, 215 Ga. App. 448, 449 S.E.2d 615 (1994).

Application to Spanish speaking people. — Defendant’s constitutional claims to the implied consent statutes were without merit since defendant, a Spanish speaking person, was not similarly situated to a hearing impaired person and, although similarly situated to an English-speaking person, there was a rational basis for requiring the implied consent warnings to be read in English. Rodriguez v. State, 275 Ga. 283, 565 S.E.2d 458 (2002).

24-9-104. Indigent hearing impaired defendants to be provided with interpreters.

(a) A court shall provide a qualified interpreter to any hearing impaired person whenever the hearing impaired person has been provided with a court appointed legal counsel. The court shall request a qualified interpreter from the department, and the department shall provide a qualified interpreter.

(b) The qualified interpreter authorized by this Code section shall be present at all times when the hearing impaired person is consulting with legal counsel. (Code 1981, § 24-9-104, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2.)

24-9-105. Waiver of right to interpreter.

Whenever a hearing impaired person shall be authorized a qualified interpreter, such person may waive the right to the use of such interpreter. Any such waiver shall be in writing and shall be approved by the agency, law enforcement agency, or court before which the hearing impaired person is to appear. In no event shall the failure of a hearing impaired person to request an interpreter be deemed to be a waiver. (Code 1981, § 24-9-105, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

24-9-106. Replacement of interpreters unable to communicate accurately with hearing impaired persons; appointment of intermediary interpreters; qualified interpreter list.

(a) Whenever a hearing impaired person shall be authorized a qualified interpreter, the agency, law enforcement agency, or court shall determine whether the qualified interpreter so provided is able to communicate accurately with and translate information to and from the hearing impaired person. If it is determined that the qualified interpreter cannot perform these functions, the agency, law enforcement agency, or court shall request another qualified interpreter from the department or shall appoint an intermediary interpreter to assist the qualified interpreter in communicating with the hearing impaired person.

(b) The department shall prepare and maintain a list of qualified interpreters and qualified intermediary interpreters from which such interpreters shall be provided. (Code 1981, § 24-9-106, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2.)

24-9-107. Oath of interpreters; privileged communications; situation of interpreters during proceedings; taping and filming of hearing impaired persons' testimony.

(a) Prior to providing any service to a hearing impaired person, any qualified interpreter or intermediary interpreter shall subscribe to an oath that he will interpret all communications in an accurate manner to the best of his skill and knowledge.

(b) Whenever a hearing impaired person communicates with any other person through the use of an interpreter and under circumstances which make such communications privileged, the presence of the interpreter shall not vitiate such privilege and the interpreter shall not be required to disclose the contents of such communication.

(c) Whenever an interpreter is required by this article, the agency, law enforcement agency, or court shall not begin the proceeding or take any action until the interpreter is in full view of and spatially situated so as to assure effective communication with the hearing impaired person.

(d) The agency, law enforcement agency, or court may, upon its own motion or upon motion of any party, witness, or participant, order that the testimony of the hearing impaired person be electronically and visually taped or filmed. Any such tape or film may be used to verify the testimony given by the hearing impaired person. (Code 1981, § 24-9-107, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2.)

24-9-108. Compensation of interpreters; fee schedule; fee may be assessed as cost in civil proceeding.

(a) Any qualified interpreter or intermediary interpreter providing service under this article shall be compensated by the agency, law enforcement agency, or court requesting such service. Compensation shall be as provided in the fee schedule developed by the department.

(b) The department shall develop a fee schedule to be used in determining the compensation to be paid interpreters under this article. The schedule shall include reasonable fees commensurate with the services provided and shall include travel expenses and subsistence allowances as are authorized for state employees.

(c) The expenses of providing a qualified interpreter or intermediary interpreter in any civil proceeding may be assessed by the court or agency as costs in such proceeding. (Code 1981, § 24-9-108, enacted by Ga. L. 1983, p. 852, § 2.)

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Expenditure for interpreter for indigent criminal defendant. — When the superior court exercises the court's discretion to appoint an interpreter for an indigent criminal defendant who neither speaks nor understands English, the court has inherent power to assess the cost of the interpreter against the county. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-24.

ARTICLE 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

24-10-1. Freedom of witnesses from arrest.

A witness shall not be arrested on any civil process while going to or returning from and attending on any court. An officer who holds him imprisoned after seeing his subpoena or being satisfied of the fact shall be liable for false imprisonment. (Laws 1799, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 463; Code 1863, § 3770; Code 1868, § 3794; Code 1873, § 3850; Code 1882, § 3850; Civil Code 1895, § 5265; Civil Code 1910, § 5854; Code 1933, § 38-1506.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In general. — Nonresident witness or suitor in attendance upon the trial of any case in court is exempt from service of any writ or summons while so attending and in going to or returning from the court. Ewing v. Elliott, 51 Ga. App. 565, 181 S.E. 123 (1935); Ausbon v. Ausbon, 131 Ga. App. 530, 206 S.E.2d 546 (1974).

Service is voidable. — Service of process in violation of this statute is not void, but voidable upon proper action in proper time by the person served. Thornton v. American Writing Mach. Co., 83 Ga. 288, 9 S.E. 679, 20 Am. St. R. 320 (1889) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-1).

Officer's satisfaction. — It was not essential that a witness show any subpoena to the sheriff, all that is required is that the officer be "satisfied of the fact." Turner v. McGee, 217 Ga. 769, 125 S.E.2d 36 (1962).

Nonjudicial proceedings. — Privilege of exemption from service is not only assured while a nonresident is attending upon strictly judicial proceedings, but upon any tribunal whose business has reference to or is intended to affect judicial proceedings. Ewing v. Elliott, 51 Ga. App. 565, 181 S.E. 123 (1935).

Inapplicable to criminal defendant. — Privilege is limited to witnesses and does not apply to a defendant in a criminal case. Rogers v. Rogers, 138 Ga. 803, 76 S.E. 48 (1912); Warren v. Hiers, 105 Ga. App. 202, 124 S.E.2d 445 (1962).

Applicable to criminal defendant. — Immunity from civil process extends to a nonresident defendant who voluntarily appears in answer to a criminal charge or who appears in compliance with a bail bond, because the defendant's appearance saves the state the expense, delay, and uncertainty of extradition and promotes the orderly, expeditious, and unobstructed administration of justice. White v. Henry, 232 Ga. 64, 205 S.E.2d 206 (1974), for comment, see 26 Mercer L. Rev. 317 (1974).

Parties. — Suitors are exempted from arrest while going to, attending on, or returning from court and the fact that one of the suitors resided out of the state and has previously had the suitors adversary arrested under bail process does not justify a departure from the practice. Lomax v. Lomax, 176 Ga. 605, 168 S.E. 863 (1933).

Deposition. — If a person is present in a county other than that of the person's residence for the sole purpose of attending the taking of depositions therein in a case to which the person is a party, and advantage is taken of the person's presence to serve process on the person in another action, to compel the person to defend it in a jurisdiction other than that of the person's residence, the service of such process should be quashed. Ewing v. Elliott, 51 Ga. App. 565, 181 S.E. 123 (1935).

Service of habitual-violator notice. — O.C.G.A. § 24-10-1 did not immunize defendant from service of notice that the defendant was a habitual violator under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58 while defendant was being tried on an unrelated offense, since § 24-10-1 pertains to civil process, and service of notice of revocation under § 40-5-58 is not service of a civil process. Hill v. State, 162 Ga. App. 637, 292 S.E.2d 512 (1982).

24-10-2. Female witnesses.

Female witnesses in civil cases pending in the courts of this state shall be required to attend in person under the same conditions and requirements that apply to male witnesses. (Ga. L. 1953, Nov-Dec. Sess., p. 212, § 1.)

24-10-2.1. Procedure for claiming of fees by witnesses; effect of continuance upon fees.

A witness in making a claim or proof of a claim for fees for attendance shall indicate the date on which he attended and, in the event of a continuance, shall not claim or receive fees for any day after the date to which the docket shows the case was continued nor for any day before the continuance was granted on which he did not attend. (Ga. L. 1895, p. 41, § 2; Civil Code 1895, § 5141; Civil Code 1910, § 5727; Code 1933, § 81-1422.)

24-10-3. Forfeiture of fees for causing continuance or absence from trial; no double fees.

(a) A witness shall not receive any fees whatever for attendance on a subpoena if he is absent from the trial, or if the trial is continued at any time for his absence, where his absence did not arise from providential cause.

(b) No witness shall receive fees from both parties in the same case; the fees of a witness for both parties shall be apportioned equally between the parties unless the costs are all taxed against one party. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3771; Code 1868, § 3795; Code 1873, § 3851; Code 1882, § 3851; Civil Code 1895, § 5266; Civil Code 1910, § 5855; Code 1933, § 38-1507.)

24-10-4. Forfeiture of witness's fees for excessive claim; penalty.

A witness who claims more than is due to him shall forfeit all his fees and shall pay to the injured party, in addition thereto, four times the amount so unjustly claimed. (Orig. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Attendance pursuant to subpoena. — Expert, who was asked to conduct a preliminary review of evidence in order to better give an opinion as an expert, was entitled to demand extra compensation for attendance in court pursuant to a subpoena. Kent v. Brown, 238 Ga. App. 607, 518 S.E.2d 737 (1999).

24-10-5. Production of transcript of books sought by subpoena or notice — When allowed; oath.

When any person is served with a subpoena for the production of evidence or a notice to produce, seeking books in his possession to be used as testimony on the trial of any cause, if the person makes oath that he cannot produce the books required without suffering a material injury in his business and also makes or causes to be made out a full transcript from the books of all the accounts and dealings with the opposite party, has the transcript examined and sworn to by an impartial witness, and produces the same in court, he shall be deemed to have complied with the notice to produce or subpoena for the production of evidence. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3446; Code 1868, § 3466; Code 1873, § 3517; Code 1882, § 3517; Civil Code 1895, § 5258; Civil Code 1910, § 5847; Code 1933, § 38-1001.)

24-10-6. Production of transcript of books sought by subpoena or notice — Procedure when adverse party dissatisfied.

When the transcript provided for in Code Section 24-10-5 is produced in court, if the adverse party is dissatisfied therewith and swears that he believes that the books contain entries material to him which do not appear in the transcript, the court will grant him a commission directed to certain persons named by the parties and approved by the court. The commission shall cause the person with possession of the books to produce the books required, the person swearing that the books produced are all that he has or had that answer to the description in the subpoena or notice to produce. The commission shall examine the books and transmit to the court a full and fair statement of the accounts and entries between the parties under their hand. When received by the court, the statement of the commission shall be deemed a compliance with the notice to produce or subpoena for the production of evidence. (Orig. Code 1863, § 3447; Code 1868, § 3467; Code 1873, § 3518; Code 1882, § 3518; Civil Code 1895, § 5259; Civil Code 1910, § 5848; Code 1933, § 38-1002.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Notice to insurance company. — When notice was served on defendant insurance company to produce all the records of the company's dealings in Georgia, and the defendant furnished a transcript of the defendant's dealings with the plaintiff, this was sufficient. If the plaintiff was dissatisfied, plaintiff had a remedy under this statute.

Grant v. Alabama Gold Life Ins. Co., 76 Ga. 575 (1886).

Merchant's books. — Transcript from merchant's books, made out and produced under notice, and inspected by the party giving the notice, should be allowed to go to the jury as evidence in the case. Fielder & Bros. & Co. v. Collier, 13 Ga. 496 (1853).

24-10-7. Withdrawal of originals introduced in evidence; substitution of copies; discretion of court.

Parties interested and participating in the trial of all cases tried in the courts are authorized and empowered, on the order of the court trying the case, to withdraw from the court and record of the case all original deeds, maps, blueprints, notes, papers, and documents belonging to them and which are introduced in evidence on the trial, on substituting therefor, when required by the court, copies thereof, verified as such by the parties or their agents, representatives, or attorneys. However, if any such deeds, maps, blueprints, notes, papers, or documents shall be attacked by any party to the case as forgeries, or as not being genuine originals, it shall be in the discretion of the court to require the original deeds, maps, blueprints, notes, papers, or documents so attacked to remain on file in the court as a part of the record in the case. (Ga. L. 1919, p. 235, § 1; Code 1933, § 38-1003; Ga. L. 1995, p. 10, § 24.)

(b) The clerk shall issue a subpoena, or a subpoena for the production of documentary evidence, signed and sealed but otherwise in blank, to a party requesting it, who shall fill it in before service. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Use of word "shall" in this statute indicates that the subpoena must be issued by the clerk, signed by the clerk, and under the seal of the court; the word "shall" is in its ordinary signification a word of command. State v. Brantley, 147 Ga. App. 569, 249 S.E.2d 365 (1978).

Signature by clerk. — Subpoena commanding the presence of a person in court as a witness is a judicial writ, and to be valid must, when there is a clerk, be signed and issued by that officer. Horton v. State, 112 Ga. 27, 37 S.E. 100 (1900).

Signature by attorney. — Subpoena to which the attorney for a defendant has signed the name of the clerk, under a general direction from that officer to "prepare" the subpoenas in the case, is not valid. Horton v. State, 112 Ga. 27, 37 S.E. 100 (1900).

Signing and sealing are ministerial acts. — Signing and sealing of a subpoena amount to nothing more than ministerial acts which add nothing of substance to the subpoena, the only purpose of which is to give notice to a witness to appear in court; a statute is regarded as directory when no substantial rights depend on it, no injury can result from ignoring it, and the purpose of the legislature can be accomplished in a manner other than that prescribed, with substantially the same results. State v. Brantley, 147 Ga. App. 569, 249 S.E.2d 365 (1978).

Defendant's responsibility to ensure presence of witnesses. — When defendant elected to represent oneself it was the defendant's responsibility, not the trial court's, to ensure the presence of witnesses by the issuance of subpoenas. Kegler v. State, 267 Ga. 147, 475 S.E.2d 593 (1996).

As the defendant, who was proceeding pro se during a criminal trial, failed to request issuance of subpoenas pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-10-20(b) and 24-10-21, there was no violation of the right to compulsory process. Sheppard v. State, 297 Ga. App. 806, 678 S.E.2d 509 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1575, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 795 (Ga. 2009).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Issuing blank subpoena to requesting party proper. — Under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-20, clerk of superior court may properly issue to requesting party in pending case a subpoena which is blank except as to signature of clerk and seal of court. 1981 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U81-37.

Clerks of county recorder’s courts may issue in blank subpoenas to police officers to be completed by the officers and served upon witnesses in pending cases. 1983 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U83-41.

Information required by subsection (a) may be filled in by requesting party. — Since subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 24-10-20 authorizes the clerk to issue a subpoena signed and sealed “but otherwise in blank,” the information contained in subsection (a) of § 24-10-20 could be filled in before service by party requesting the subpoena, thus providing witness with subpoena complete with all information required by § 24-10-20. 1981 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U81-37.

If a police officer has just issued a traffic citation, there would be a pending case for purposes of subpoena issuance. 1983 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U83-41.

At the request of any party, subpoenas for attendance at a hearing or trial shall be issued by the clerk of the court in which the hearing or trial is held. A subpoena requiring the attendance of a witness at a hearing or trial may be served at any place within the state. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 502, § 1; Ga. L. 1980, p. 70, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Statute is not unconstitutional as applied to a habeas corpus proceeding. Hooten v. State, 245 Ga. 250, 264 S.E.2d 192, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 942, 100 S. Ct. 2168, 64 L. Ed. 2d 797 (1980).

Expenses. — Statute does not contemplate that the public shall bear the expense of bringing witnesses into court because the residents of other counties can be examined by depositions (oral examination or written interrogatories) if the defendant so desires. Neal v. Smith, 226 Ga. 96, 172 S.E.2d 684 (1970).

Habeas corpus proceeding. — Sixth amendment guarantee to the accused of compulsory process to obtain the testimony of witnesses has no application in the context of habeas corpus proceedings, which are civil in nature. Pulliam v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 99, 263 S.E.2d 123, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 927, 100 S. Ct. 3023, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1121 (1980).

Argument to jury. — When a witness is not amendable to subpoena, the witness’s failure to testify in person is not a proper subject matter of argument by counsel. Floyd v. Colonial Stores, Inc., 121 Ga. App. 852, 176 S.E.2d 111 (1970).

Charge to jury that any accused has a right to subpoena any witnesses to testify that the accused wishes, but that the accused has no burden to produce any witnesses, and that jury should arrive at a decision from the evidence presented without speculating about other matters, was without error. Miller v. State, 155 Ga. App. 54, 270 S.E.2d 466 (1980).

Trial court did not impermissibly shift the burden of proof when the court charged the jury that defendant had the right to subpoena witnesses. The jury charge was an accurate statement of the law and provided no ground for reversal. Green v. State, 298 Ga. App. 17, 679 S.E.2d 348 (2009).

Criminal defendant's right to compulsory process. — Trial court erred in making a determination that a prospective witness was incompetent to testify based on ex parte statements made by the administrator of the institution where the prospective witness was confined. When this error is not harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, if it is determined that one was competent, then defendant's right to compulsory process was abridged and a new trial must be ordered. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530 (1981).

Defendant's responsibility to ensure presence of witnesses. — When defendant elected to represent defendant's it was one's self responsibility, not the trial court's, to ensure the presence of witnesses by the issuance of subpoenas. Kegler v. State, 267 Ga. 147, 475 S.E.2d 593 (1996).

As the defendant, who was proceeding pro se during a criminal trial, failed to request issuance of subpoenas pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 24-10-20(b) and 24-10-21, there was no violation of the right to compulsory process. Sheppard v. State, 297 Ga. App. 806, 678 S.E.2d 509 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1575, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 795 (Ga. 2009).

Prior deposition. — Trial court's sua sponte determination that the existence of a prior deposition rendered the presence of a material witness subpoenaed by the plaintiff superfluous and that, hence, that witness would be excused, but no continuance would be granted, denied the plaintiff the right to present plaintiff's case to the jury in the manner in which plaintiff chose. Ricketson v. Blair, 171 Ga. App. 714, 320 S.E.2d 788 (1984).

24-10-22. Subpoena for production of documentary evidence; motion to quash or modify; denial on condition.

(a) A subpoena may also command the person to whom it is directed to produce the books, papers, documents, or tangible things designated therein.

(b) The court, upon written motion made promptly and in any event at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance therewith, may:

(1) Quash or modify the subpoena if it is unreasonable and oppressive; or

(2) Condition denial of the motion upon the advancement by the person in whose behalf the subpoena is issued of the reasonable cost of producing the books, papers, documents, or tangible things. (Laws 1829, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 278; Code 1863, §§ 3443, 3444; Code 1868, §§ 3463, 3464; Code 1873, §§ 3514, 3515; Ga. L. 1877, p. 21, § 1; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Relevance. — While admissibility is a matter to be determined when records, documents, or other items are tendered in evidence and is not a test for determining whether an order requiring production should be entered, pertinence or relevance is. Horton v. Huiet, 113 Ga. App. 166, 147 S.E.2d 669 (1966).

Required prima facie showing of relevancy under statute entails proof of: (1) the existence of a grand jury investigation; (2) a general characterization of the subject matter and purpose of the investigation; and (3) the fact that each general category of the subpoenaed documents bears some relevance to the investigation being pursued. Morris v. State, 246 Ga. 510, 272 S.E.2d 254 (1980).

“Unreasonable and oppressive” standard is tested by the peculiar facts arising from the subpoena itself and other proper sources. Kamensky v. Southern Oxygen Supply Co., 127 Ga. App. 343, 193 S.E.2d 164 (1972); Aycock v. Household Fin. Corp., 142 Ga. App. 207, 235 S.E.2d 578 (1977), cert. dismissed, 240 Ga. 570, 241 S.E.2d 835 (1978); Washburn v. Sardi’s Restaurants, 191 Ga. App. 307, 381 S.E.2d 750, cert. denied, 191 Ga. App. 923, 381 S.E.2d 750 (1989).

Applicable only to court proceedings. — Statute providing for quashing or modifying a subpoena upon stated grounds, is applicable only to court proceedings and not to investigative procedures. Southeastern Adjusters, Inc. v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 4, 189 S.E.2d 76 (1972).

Parties. — Subpoena duces tecum never issues to any one who is a party to the cause. Ex parte Calhoun, 87 Ga. 359, 13 S.E. 694 (1891).

Grand jury. — In a proper case, a subpoena duces tecum may issue in a cause pending before the grand jury to be brought before that body. In re Lester, 77 Ga. 143 (1886).

Necessity for production. — Court, before requiring the peremptory order to produce the books or papers of the adverse party, should satisfy itself of the necessity for such production. Fluker v. Bank of Union Point, 178 Ga. 297, 173 S.E. 149 (1934).

Inauguration of suit. — Subpoena duces tecum is not process by which to inaugurate a suit, or by which to connect a new party with a pending suit. Ex parte Calhoun, 87 Ga. 359, 13 S.E. 694 (1891).

Burden of proof. — An individual moving to quash a grand jury subpoena duces tecum as unreasonable has the general burden of persuasion. Morris v. State, 246 Ga. 510, 272 S.E.2d 254 (1980).

Burden of going forward. — Regarding the relevancy component of reasonableness, since the secrecy of grand jury deliberations insures that the party moving to quash a subpoena duces tecum has not precompliance knowledge of the subject matter of the investigation, the party who causes a subpoena duces tecum to issue has the burden of going forward, to make a prima facie showing that the subpoenaed documents are relevant to a legitimate grand jury investigation. Morris v. State, 246 Ga. 510, 272 S.E.2d 254 (1980).

Pleadings. — An abstract company cannot be compelled by a subpoena duces tecum to make discovery of the contents of lost public records in a proceeding to establish a copy of such records since the pleadings do not allege or set out anything whatever as the specific contents to be proved. Ex parte Calhoun, 87 Ga. 359, 13 S.E. 694 (1891).

Sufficiency of subpoena. — After a document has been produced under a subpoena duces tecum, the sufficiency of the subpoena as a means of compelling is not a material question in the case. Starr v. Mayer & Co., 60 Ga. 546 (1878).

Deletion of privileged matter. — When any document sought to be produced contains a mixture of privileged and nonprivileged communication or information, ample remedy is provided to delete privileged matter, and this also would be within the inherent power of the court. Cranford v. Cranford, 120 Ga. App. 470, 170 S.E.2d 844 (1969).

Subpoena directed to corporation. — It was proper to issue a subpoena directed simply to a named company, and to have it served upon the general manager of such corporation; the documents called for being in the possession of the manager at the time, it was the manager's duty to respond to the subpoena duces tecum and produce the documents before the grand jury unless the manager desired to test the validity and sufficiency of the subpoena duces tecum by legal means. Jones v. State, 99 Ga. App. 858, 109 S.E.2d 859 (1959).

Interference by third party in ordering individual in possession of corporate documents sought by subpoena duces tecum to turn the documents over to the party for the purpose of concealing, destroying, or otherwise withholding the information therein contained from the grand jury would be an act of contempt which the court would be well authorized to punish. Jones v. State, 99 Ga. App. 858, 109 S.E.2d 859 (1959).

Identical subpoenas served on president and employee of corporation. — When identical subpoenas directed to a corporation were served upon the president in control of the corporation and an employee having actual custody of the papers, it was perfectly proper for the president to demand and acquire custody of the documents from the president's employee for the purpose of producing the papers in compliance with the subpoena served upon the individual as such president; it did not constitute a contempt of court that the defendant, before complying with the subpoena, saw fit to test its sufficiency by means of a motion to quash, since the defendant did in fact, upon obtaining a ruling by the court adverse to the defendant's contentions, surrender the documents called for by the subpoena. Jones v. State, 99 Ga. App. 858, 109 S.E.2d 859 (1959).

Agent of receiver. — Fact that the person directed to produce evidence was the agent of the receiver for a railway did not exempt the person from the enforcement of the order for the production of the freight-bills and receipts in the person's possession, where they were material evidence in the investigation of criminal charges against the accused named in certain cases pending before the grand jury. Blitch v. State, 145 Ga. 882, 90 S.E. 42 (1916).

An entire record cannot be removed from one court to another by a notice to the officers to produce the record, or by a subpoena duces tecum directed to and served upon them. In re Lester, 77 Ga. 143 (1886).

Cell phone records not discoverable. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in quashing a subpoena for the appellee's cell phone records as those cell phone records were not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22 or information relevant to the intrusiveness nature of the behavior alleged to be tortious. Anderson v. Mergenhagen, 283 Ga. App. 546, 642 S.E.2d 105 (2007).

Continuance on ground of absence of witness. — When the postponement of a case was requested on the ground of the absence of a witness served with a subpoena duces tecum, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse the request in view of this statute, when it appeared that the witness was a resident of the county and was not served with the subpoena duces tecum ten days prior to the trial of the case. Frost v. Pennington, 6 Ga. App. 298, 65 S.E. 41 (1909) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22).

Post-judgment discovery. — It is clear that any forfeiture will not result from the answering of the questions or production of documents, but rather, as a result of a judgment already entered. Any other interpretation of this privilege would make the Georgia post-judgment discovery rules meaningless. Kushner v. Mascho, 143 Ga. App. 801, 240 S.E.2d 290 (1977).

Mayor, who is ex-officio the presiding judge of a court of record, is not subject to the subpoena duces tecum, commanding the mayor to bring into the superior court "the information docket" of this court, to be used in evidence before the grand jury, either in a specific case or generally. In re Lester, 77 Ga. 143 (1886).

Request for records of homicides overbroad. — Request for statistical information contained in notes, books, records, writings, and/or documents pertaining to any and all homicides both solved and unsolved, either committed within the city limits of Atlanta, Fulton County or the surrounding counties in which bodies were found covering a period of almost a decade was overbroad rendering it unreasonable and oppressive. Williams v. State, 251 Ga. 749, 312 S.E.2d 40 (1983).

Subpoena for irrelevant evidence. — In the personal injury action filed by plaintiff against the pawn shop, the trial court did not err in granting the pawn shop's motion to quash a subpoena for production of the saw that caused the injury at the hearing on the summary judgment motion; the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22(b)(1) in quashing the subpoena since the manner in which the saw was functioning three years after the accident was not relevant. Walker v. Bruhn, 281 Ga. App. 149, 635 S.E.2d 322 (2006).

Court committed reversible error in quashing subpoena for former police officer's personnel file, where anything in the file tending to show training the former officer received which would enable the officer to commit and cover up the crimes of murder, arson, and rape was relevant to defendant's contention that the former officer committed the crimes. Henderson v. State, 255 Ga. 687, 341 S.E.2d 439 (1986).

Quashing of subpoena for gas chromatograph results reversible error. — Defendant had right to discovery of printed results from gas chromatograph test of defendant's blood alcohol level, and the trial court's quashing of a subpoena seeking such discovery was reversible error. Price v. State, 269 Ga. 222, 498 S.E.2d 262 (1998).

In a prosecution for driving with an unlawful blood-alcohol level, defendant was entitled to subpoena from the state's forensic chemist the chain of custody documents and other documents which pertained to the actual test of defendant's blood, including gas chromatograph results. Bazemore v. State, 244 Ga. App. 460, 535 S.E.2d 830 (2000).

Documents which pertained to the qualifications of the person who drew defendant's blood and the certification documentation on the machine were not sufficiently relevant to be discovered by defendant in defendant's prosecution for driving with an unlawful blood-alcohol level. Bazemore v. State, 244 Ga. App. 460, 535 S.E.2d 830 (2000).

Attorney fees for quashing subpoena not permitted. — Trial judge in a criminal case is not authorized to award attorney fees as compensation in conjunction with an order quashing a subpoena duces tecum pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22. Garcia v. Allen, 202 Ga. App. 529, 414 S.E.2d 742 (1992).

Motion to quash improperly denied. — When attorneys for a defendant in a capital case served a subpoena regarding the funding of indigent services on the Executive Director of the Georgia Public Defender Standards Council, it was error to deny the Council's motion to quash the subpoena. The documents had no bearing on the defendant's guilt or innocence and were irrelevant to the criminal case; moreover, the general funding that other capital defendants might have received had nothing to do with the funding of the present defendant's specific defense. Britt v. State, 282 Ga. 746, 653 S.E.2d 713 (2007).

ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE STATE BAR

Subpoena issued pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22(a) should only be issued for actual hearings and trials and should not be requested when in fact no hearing or trial has been scheduled. Likewise, a subpoena issued pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-45 of the Civil Practice Act should be requested and issued only for depositions which have been actually scheduled by agreement between parties or when a notice of deposition has been filed and served upon all parties, and should not be issued when no deposition has been scheduled. Adv. Op. No. 84-40 (September 21, 1984).

There is no need for notice of a subpoena issue pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22(a) because all parties receive notice of hearings and trials, so long as they are real hearings and real trials. Adv. Op. No. 84-40 (September 21, 1984).

24-10-23. Service of subpoenas.

A subpoena may be served by any sheriff, by his deputy, or by any other person not less than 18 years of age. Proof may be shown by return or certificate endorsed on a copy of the subpoena. Subpoenas may also be served by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, and the return receipt shall constitute prima-facie proof of service. Service upon a party may be made by serving his counsel of record. (Laws 1792, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 353; Laws 1799, Cobb's 1851 Digest, p. 276; Code 1863, § 3764; Code 1868, § 3788; Ga. section is applicable to notices delivered on or after July 1, 2000.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Invalid subpoena. — When service of the subpoenas was not effected either by personal service or by certified mail, the only two modes authorized by this statute, the lack of service invalidates the legal force and effect of the subpoena; therefore, the subpoena cannot serve as the basis for a conviction as a defaulting witness. Edenfield v. State, 147 Ga. App. 502, 249 S.E.2d 316 (1978) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-23).

Actual receipt immaterial. — With respect to subpoenas which must be served upon an adversary party, it is immaterial that the party actually received the pleading or other matter when service was otherwise improper. Heard v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 617, 212 S.E.2d 797 (1975); Edenfield v. State, 147 Ga. App. 502, 249 S.E.2d 316 (1978); Lake v. Hamilton Bank, 148 Ga. App. 348, 251 S.E.2d 177 (1978).

Incompetent witness. — Defendant's offer to prove service of the subpoena in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 24-10-23 was foreclosed and its necessity mooted by the trial court's ruling, communicated to the jury, that the person upon whom the subpoena was purportedly served was incompetent to testify. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530 (1981).

Inability of witness to appear. — When the failure to hand the subpoena to the witness personally appears to have had nothing to do with the absence of the witness, a motion for continuance should be granted. Waters v. State, 85 Ga. App. 79, 68 S.E.2d 233 (1951).

Informal notice of hearing date change sufficient. — Witness's duty to testify after the witness was properly served with the initial witness subpoena, was not dissolved merely because the witness received notice of a change in the hearing date from the witness's receptionist rather than by the means authorized for service of subpoenas under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-23. Mijajlovic v. State, 179 Ga. App. 506, 347 S.E.2d 325 (1986).

Nonparties. — Although O.C.G.A. § 24-10-23 permits service on a party by service on that party's attorney, it does not provide for such service on nonparties. Haywood v. Aerospec, Inc., 193 Ga. App. 479, 388 S.E.2d 367 (1989).

Cited in Graham v. Newsome, 174 Ga. App. 351, 330 S.E.2d 98 (1985); Hankinson v. Rackley, 177 Ga. App. 734, 341 S.E.2d 231 (1986).

24-10-24. Fees and mileage; when tender required.

The witness fee shall be $25.00 per diem, and execution shall be issued by the clerk upon affidavit of the witness to enforce payment thereof. The payment of fees shall not be demanded as a condition precedent to attendance; but, when a witness resides outside the county where the testimony is to be given, service of the subpoena, to be valid, must be accompanied by tender of the fee for one day's attendance plus mileage of 20¢ per mile for traveling expenses for going from and returning to his or her place of residence by the nearest practical route. Tender of fees and mileage may be made by United States currency, postal money order, cashier's check, certified check, or the check of an attorney or law firm. When the subpoena is issued on behalf of the state, or an officer, agency, or political subdivision thereof, or a defendant in a criminal case, fees and mileage need not be tendered. Tender of fee and mileage. — Mileage and per diem required by statute for out of county residents must be tendered before their attendance may be compelled. Neal v. Smith, 226 Ga. 96, 172 S.E.2d 684 (1970).

Determination of mileage. — Nonresident witness is entitled to mileage from the county treasurer for the whole distance traveled from and returning to the witness's home. Dutcher v. Justices of Inferior Court, 38 Ga. 214 (1868).

Continuance. — Witness cannot charge for attendance rendered after the case has been postponed or continued, whether the witness happens to hear the announcement of the postponement or continuance or not. Robison v. Banks, 17 Ga. 211 (1855).

Expert witnesses. — No statute in Georgia allows or prohibits fees to expert witnesses, and while there can be no charge beyond the legal fees of ordinary witnesses for attendance on the court in obedience to subpoena, still, as a physician cannot be required to make any examination or preliminary preparations, or to listen to the testimony, in order the better to give the expert's opinion as an expert, the expert may for such services demand extra compensation. Schofield v. Little, 2 Ga. App. 286, 58 S.E. 666 (1907).

Lodging and airfare costs. — There is no specific statutory authorization for assessing a criminal defendant for the lodging and airfare costs of witnesses for the state. Smith v. State, 272 Ga. 83, 526 S.E.2d 59 (2000), reversing Smith v. State, 236 Ga. App. 548, 512 S.E.2d 19 (1999).

Rackley*, 177 Ga. App. 734, 341 S.E.2d 231 (1986); Walden v. State, 185 Ga. App. 413, 364 S.E.2d 304 (1987); Kent v. Brown, 238 Ga. App. 607, 518 S.E.2d 737 (1999).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Legislative intent of this statute was to eliminate witness fees in justice courts. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. U70-234 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-24).

Applicability. — Statute applies to both civil and criminal cases. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U72-55 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-24).

Criminal cases. — County must pay the per diem witness fee to witnesses summoned in criminal cases as well as to those summoned in civil cases; the source of funds for witness fees is from county taxes. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-11.

Resident of county from which the subpoena originates is entitled to payment of the witness fee, but, the resident cannot demand prepayment as a condition to the resident's appearance in court. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-311.

Peace officer who, required by subpoena, attends court on behalf of the state during any hours except regular duty hours, was entitled to mileage as provided by former Code 1933, §§ 38-1502 and 38-1902 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-24); under these conditions, the officer was also entitled to per diem as provided in Ga. L. 1968, p. 434, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-27). 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-57.

State officer or agent is to be treated as an ordinary witness and will follow the same procedure and payment as is set forth in statute. However, if the state officer is a witness for the state, an officer, agency, or political subdivision thereof, or a defendant in a criminal case, fees and mileage need not be tendered as a condition precedent to appearance; as for the average citizen, service of the subpoena must be accompanied by tender of the above payment to a non-county resident or the subpoena is invalid; with respect to the rights of a county resident, this class of witness still has a right to the per diem witness fee, but the exact time of such payment is within the discretion of the court. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-311.

aminers of questioned documents or handwriting experts for serving and testifying, 86 ALR2d 1283.

24-10-25. Enforcement of subpoenas; continuance; secondary evidence of books, papers, or documents.

(a) Subpoenas may be enforced by attachment for contempt and by a fine not exceeding $300.00 and imprisonment not exceeding 20 days. In all cases under this Code section, the court shall consider whether under the circumstances of each case the subpoena was served within a reasonable time, but in any event not less than 24 hours prior to the time that appearance thereunder was required.

(b) The court may also in appropriate cases grant continuance of the cause. Where subpoenas were issued in blank, no continuance shall be granted because of failure to respond thereto when the party obtaining them fails to present to the clerk the name and address of the witness so subpoenaed at least six hours before appearance is required.

(c) When books, papers, or documents are unsuccessfully sought, secondary evidence thereof shall be admissible. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Service. — In order to compel the attendance of a witness by attachment, it must be shown that the witness has been served with the precept of the court. Harrison v. Langston & Woodson, 100 Ga. 394, 28 S.E. 162 (1897).

Witness not served. — When the defendant's motion for continuance is based upon the absence of a material witness for whom a subpoena was not issued by the defendant until the morning the trial was to begin and who had not been served therewith at the time the motion was made, there is no error in overruling the motion. Eady v. State, 129 Ga. App. 656, 200 S.E.2d 767 (1973).

Service less than 24 hours. — Trial court cannot impose sanctions upon a witness who fails or refuses to appear in answer to a subpoena served less than 24 hours before the required appearance. Eubanks v. Brooks, 139 Ga. App. 166, 227 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Trial court did not err in failing to enforce defendant's subpoenas because the subpoenas were not served more than 24 hours prior to trial. Byron v. State, 229 Ga. App. 795, 495 S.E.2d 123 (1998).

In a personal injury action, because a driver waited until the eve of trial to serve the doctor with a subpoena for the doctor's testimony, the trial court: (1) did not abuse the court's discretion in determining that such service was not reasonable under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-25(a); and (2) did not err in refusing to grant the driver a continuance or citing the physician in contempt for failing to appear in court; moreover, since the subpoena was unenforceable, evidence surrounding the doctor's failure to appear became irrelevant under O.C.G.A. § 24-2-1. Buster v. Poole, 279 Ga. App. 828, 632 S.E.2d 680 (2006).

Discretion of court. — An important exercise of discretion on the part of the trial judge is necessary under the statute, and it is only when this discretion is abused that it should be controlled by the reviewing court. Carter & Co. v. Southern Ry., 3 Ga. App. 34, 59 S.E. 209 (1907).

Circumstances of each case. — Statute allows the trial court to consider the circumstances of each case in determining whether the period between service of the subpoena and the required appearance was sufficient. Eubanks v. Brooks, 139 Ga. App. 166, 227 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Trial court can extend length of notice when it believes preparation is required but trial court cannot arbitrarily reduce the notice requirement below 24 hours. Eubanks v. Brooks, 139 Ga. App. 166, 227 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Contempt power of imprisonment applies only in the event that the witness, after having been cited, refuses to testify in the case. Moody v. State, 131 Ga. App. 355, 206 S.E.2d 79 (1974).

Subpoenas may be enforced by attachment for contempt, but this means citation, notice, hearing, and assistance of counsel, as in contempts generally, and not the punishment meted out for courtroom incidents under the court's inherent power to maintain order. Moody v. State, 131 Ga. App. 355, 206 S.E.2d 79 (1974).

Challenge to subpoena to produce gun waived by production of gun. — In a prosecution against a defendant for aggravated assault and other charges arising out of a road rage incident, the defendant waived a challenge under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-25 to the timeliness of a subpoena directing the production of the defendant's gun by producing the gun prior to moving to quash the subpoena, and the defendant failed to provide a means of appellate review by including the subpoena or any service affidavit in the record; the defendant's motion to quash the subpoena under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-25(a) was therefore properly denied. Adams v. State, 282 Ga. App. 819, 640 S.E.2d 329 (2006).

Interference by third party in ordering individual in possession of corporate documents sought by subpoena duces tecum to turn the documents over to the third party for the purpose of concealing, destroying, or otherwise withholding the information therein contained from the grand jury would be an act of contempt which the court would be well authorized to punish. Jones v. State, 99 Ga. App. 858, 109 S.E.2d 859 (1959).

Identical subpoenas served on president and employee of corporation. — When identical subpoenas directed to a corporation were served upon the president in control of the corporation and an employee having actual custody of the papers, it was perfectly proper for the president to demand and acquire custody of the documents from the employee for the purpose of producing the documents in compliance with the subpoena served upon the individual as such president; it did not constitute a contempt of court that the defendant, before complying with the subpoena, saw fit to test the subpoena's sufficiency by means of a motion to quash, since the defendant did in fact, upon obtaining a ruling by the court adverse to the defendant's contentions, surrender the documents called for by the subpoena. Jones v. State, 99 Ga. App. 858, 109 S.E.2d 859 (1959).

Continuance. — When the court offers to issue an attachment to compel the attendance of a witness, and the witness's counsel declines to take the same, but instead thereof relies upon the service of a second subpoena, which latter the witness likewise disobeys, there is not abuse of discretion in refusing a continuance on account of the absence of the witness. Brady v. State, 120 Ga. 181, 47 S.E. 535 (1904).

Waiver. — Subpoenaed witness may waive the 24 hour notice requirement. Eubanks v. Brooks, 139 Ga. App. 166, 227 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Notice period waived by witness testifying. — Subpoenaed witness waived the 24-hour notice requirement when the witness refused the trial court's offer of continuance and voluntarily testified at trial. Stein v. Cherokee Ins. Co., 169 Ga. App. 1, 311 S.E.2d 220 (1983).

Motions to compel and for sanctions are not proper vehicles for the enforcement of a notice to produce. Bergen v. Cardiopul Medical, Inc., 175 Ga. App. 700, 334 S.E.2d 28 (1985).

Motion to produce filed on morning of trial is too late. Williams v. State, 142 Ga. App. 764, 236 S.E.2d 893 (1977).

Secondary evidence admissible. — When a party to a cause serves on the opposite party, who is presumably in possession of a once existing material writing, a notice to produce such writing, and the party served responds that the writing is lost, or fails to produce it at the trial, secondary evidence as to the contents of the original writing becomes admissible. Middlebrooks v. Cabaniss, 193 Ga. 764, 20 S.E.2d 10 (1942).

24-10-26. Notice to produce.

Where a party desires to compel production of books, writings, or other documents or tangible things in the possession, custody, or control of another party, in lieu of serving a subpoena under this article, the party desiring the production may serve a notice to produce upon counsel for the other party. Service may be perfected in accordance with Code Section 24-10-23, but no fees or mileage shall be allowed therefor. Such notices may be enforced in the manner prescribed by Code Section 24-10-25, and Code Section 24-10-22 shall also apply to such notices. The notice shall be in writing, signed by the party seeking production of the evidence, or his attorney, and shall be directed to the opposite party or his attorney. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

CRIMINAL CASES

1. IN GENERAL
2. ITEMS NOT SUBJECT TO NOTICE TO PRODUCE
3. ITEMS SUBJECT TO NOTICE TO PRODUCE

General Consideration

Purpose of statute. — Notice under this statute is the appropriate means of procuring the primary evidence, or of laying the foundation for secondary evidence. McAdam v. Weikel & Smith Spice Co., 64 Ga. 441 (1879) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26).

Notice to produce applies only to parties. — Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 111 Ga. App. 144, 141 S.E.2d 112 (1965).

Subpoena duces tecum and notice distinguished. — Papers are produced under notice, when directed to parties or their counsel; when in the possession of others, they must be reached by a subpoena duces tecum. Wright v. Central R.R. & Banking Co., 21 Ga. 345 (1857); Ex parte Calhoun, 87 Ga. 359, 13 S.E. 694 (1891).

Equitable and legal cases. — Provisions of statute are applicable to all cases, whether the relief prayed for be legal or equitable. Georgia Iron & Coal Co. v. Etowah Iron Co., 104 Ga. 395, 30 S.E. 878 (1898).

General description sufficient. — There is no necessity for a technical description of the papers to have them produced; a very general description will be effectual. Fletcher v. Faust, 22 Ga. 559 (1857).

Specificity of notice. — Notice to produce should be specific enough in its demands to relate the documents sought to the questions at issue. Horton v. Huiet, 113 Ga. App. 166, 147 S.E.2d 669 (1966).

Sufficiency of description. — Description is sufficiently definite if the party who is called on to produce or to give an inspection will be enabled to know what to produce or what the party must give an inspection of. Fluker v. Bank of Union Point, 178 Ga. 297, 173 S.E. 149 (1934).

Material not in possession of party. — Failure to produce material not in possession, control, or custody does not constitute a failure to comply with notice to produce. Gibson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 718, 258 S.E.2d 537 (1979).

Materiality of evidence question for court.

— Determination of the materiality of evidence involves the exercise of a judicial function; the conclusion of a witness that the contents of a paper are material, when there is no proof as to what the paper contains, is no proof that the papers sought to be produced are in fact necessary, and can not relieve the court from the duty of passing upon the question of materiality. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Lewis, 2 Ga. App. 428, 58 S.E. 674 (1907).

Term to term. — Notice to produce is not defective in that the notice does not specifically call for the production of the paper from "term to term," and the party served therewith is not relieved from compliance with the notice because the trial occurs at a term subsequent to the term at which such party was notified to produce the paper. Carrington v. Brooks, 121 Ga. 250, 48 S.E. 970 (1904).

All books covered by the notice to produce must be produced. American Nat'l Bank v. Brunswick Light & Water Co., 100 Ga. 92, 26 S.E. 473 (1896).

Books which are irrelevant, though produced under notice, are not admissible. Gow v. Charlotte, C. & A.R.R., 68 Ga. 54 (1881).

Motion to produce filed on morning of trial is too late. Williams v. State, 142 Ga. App. 764, 236 S.E.2d 893 (1977).

Motion to produce timely despite expiration of time under Superior Court Rule 5.1.

— Plaintiff who served a notice to produce approximately 20 days prior to trial was entitled to have documents produced even though the six-month discovery period provided by Superior Court Rule 5.1 had expired. Gaffron v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 229 Ga. App. 426, 494 S.E.2d 54 (1997).

Quashing or enforcement of notice. — Motions pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26, 9-11-34, and 9-11-37 for a protective order or sanctions are not proper vehicles for the quashing or the enforcement of a O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 notice to produce. Joel v. Duet Holdings, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 705, 353 S.E.2d 548 (1987).

Motions to compel and for sanctions are not proper vehicles for the enforcement of a notice to produce. Bergen v. Cardiopul Medical, Inc., 175 Ga. App. 700, 334 S.E.2d 28 (1985).

Trial court did not have the discretion to hold that a notice to produce under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 had been converted into a request for production under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-34. Bergen v. Cardiopul Medical, Inc., 175 Ga. App. 700, 334 S.E.2d 28 (1985).

App. 171, 329 S.E.2d 312 (1985); White v. Dilworth, 178 Ga. App. 226, 342 S.E.2d 709 (1986); Strawder v. State, 207 Ga. App. 365, 427 S.E.2d 792 (1993).

Criminal Cases

1. In General

Statute is applicable in criminal cases. — See Brown v. State, 238 Ga. 98, 231 S.E.2d 65 (1976); Phillips v. State, 146 Ga. App. 423, 246 S.E.2d 438 (1978); Natson v. State, 242 Ga. 618, 250 S.E.2d 420 (1978); Watson v. State, 147 Ga. App. 847, 250 S.E.2d 540 (1978); Crosby v. State, 150 Ga. App. 804, 258 S.E.2d 593 (1979); Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980); Jackson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 530, 281 S.E.2d 252 (1981) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26).

Use of statute by state. — Statute applies not only to the obligation of the state to produce certain items, but also applies to any party who desires to compel production of books, writings, or other documents or tangible things in the possession, custody, or control of another party; accordingly, the state has as much right to utilize this statute as a defendant. Phillips v. State, 146 Ga. App. 423, 246 S.E.2d 438 (1978) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26).

Constitutionality of use by state. — Sanctioning the state's resort to this statute in compelling a defendant to produce specific property for use as evidence against the defendant would be unconstitutional. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Unconstitutional self-incrimination. — State may not use a notice to produce to re seize property and red vest defendant of custody and possession by retaining the property and using the property as evidence in a criminal proceeding; unconstitutional self-incrimination would be the result of compliance with the state's notice. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Omission of evidence of reasonable doubt is commission of constitutional error. — Proper standard of materiality must reflect the overriding concern with the justice of the finding of guilt. Such a finding is permissible only if supported by evidence establishing guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. It necessarily follows that if the omitted evidence creates a reasonable doubt that did not otherwise exist, constitutional error has been committed. This means that the omission must be evaluated in the context of the entire record. If there is no reasonable doubt about guilt whether or not the additional evidence is considered, there is no justification for a new trial. On the other hand, if the verdict is already of questionable validity, additional evidence of relatively minor importance might be sufficient to create a reasonable doubt. Smith v. State, 248 Ga. 507, 284 S.E.2d 406 (1981).

No discovery in criminal cases. — Although an accused may utilize the notice to produce provision of this statute to compel the production of tangible objects and documents at trial, discovery as such is not available to an accused in criminal cases in Georgia. Howard v. State, 144 Ga. App. 208, 240 S.E.2d 908 (1977); Pryor v. State, 238 Ga. 698, 234 S.E.2d 918, overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 935, 98 S. Ct. 422, 54 L. Ed. 2d 294 (1977);

Toole v. State, 146 Ga. App. 305, 246 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Notice to produce not used to circumvent discovery reciprocity. — Notice to produce under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 cannot be used as a discovery tool to circumvent discovery reciprocity under the discovery act. Farmer v. State, 222 Ga. App. 506, 474 S.E.2d 711 (1996); McGuire v. State, 243 Ga. App. 899, 534 S.E.2d 549 (2000).

Compared with Civil Practice Act. — Notice to produce in a criminal case is not as all-inclusive as a request to produce discoverable evidence under the Civil Practice Act. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

There is no absolute right to examine original evidence; the motion for an independent examination must be timely made, and the accused must show that the original evidence is materially favorable to the accused. Brooks v. State, 141 Ga. App. 725, 234 S.E.2d 541 (1977).

Criminal defendant has burden of showing how defendant's case has been materially prejudiced by failure to produce even when trial court declines to make an in camera inspection. Patterson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 877, 270 S.E.2d 86 (1980).

In camera inspection. — On motion for production of specific material, the defendant must be furnished exculpatory information; i.e., information favorable to the defendant and material either to guilt or punishment. When a motion is made and the prosecutor does not make the specified material available to defense counsel, the trial judge should make an in camera inspection of the material sought. On motion by the defendant the material examined in camera should either be sealed and filed, or an inventory or record of the examined material made so as to permit appellate review. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

Refusal to search for evidence. — Prosecution does not suppress evidence by refusing to conduct a search for the evidence, even though the evidence may be more accessible to the state than to the defense. Baker v. State, 245 Ga. 657, 266 S.E.2d 477 (1980).

Right of victim prevails over right of defendant. — Fourth amendment right of the victim of a crime to be secure against an unreasonable search must prevail over the right of the accused to obtain evidence for the accused's defense. State v. Haynie, 240 Ga. 866, 242 S.E.2d 713 (1978).

Confidential informant. — It is within the sound discretion of a trial court whether to require the state to disclose to the defendant the name and address of a confidential informant. Clayton v. State, 145 Ga. App. 541, 244 S.E.2d 67 (1978).

2. Items Not Subject to Notice to Produce

Material not in state's possession is not subject to a notice to produce. — Ferrell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 405, 254 S.E.2d 404 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1021, 100 S. Ct. 679, 62 L. Ed. 2d 653 (1980); Patterson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 877, 270 S.E.2d 86 (1980).

When the materials sought by defendant were not types of items reasonably expected to be found in the custody of the solicitor (now district attorney) preparing the case against defendant and such evidence could have been obtained only if the prosecution actively sought the evidence, thereby causing the state to investigate the case for the defense, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to produce such evidence or in denying the motion for continuance based upon the absence of the materials in the courtroom at the time of trial. Fletcher v. State, 157 Ga. App. 707, 278 S.E.2d 444 (1981).

In a prosecution for homicide by vehicle, it was not error to deny the defendant's motion to produce the deceased's automobile, absent a showing that the automobile was in the state's possession, custody, or control. Wheat v. State, 171 Ga. App. 583, 320 S.E.2d 808 (1984).

State was not required to produce documents pursuant to defendants' motions, since the materials sought were not of the type reasonably expected to be found in the custody of the solicitor (now district attorney) preparing the case. Dixon v. State, 196 Ga. App. 15, 395 S.E.2d 577 (1990).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence, the state was not required to comply with defendant's notice to produce documents relating to the Intoxilyzer because such materials are not reasonably expected to be found in the possession, custody, or control of the prosecutor. Maurer v. State, 240 Ga. App. 145, 525 S.E.2d 104 (1999).

District attorney's work product. — Notice to produce cannot be used in a criminal case to require the production of the district attorney's work product; reports, memoranda, and documents in the files of law enforcement officers; addresses and telephone numbers of the state's witnesses; or the names and addresses of other persons with knowledge of the facts. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

File of district attorney. — Defendant in a criminal case does not have the right to inspect the file of the district attorney before the defendant is put on trial. White v. State, 230 Ga. 327, 196 S.E.2d 849, appeal dismissed, 414 U.S. 886, 94 S. Ct. 222, 38 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1973).

Notice to produce cannot be used to enable defense counsel to examine, in advance of trial or evidentiary hearing, the contents of the district attorney's file. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

Defendant's diaries, which were in the state's possession, were not proper subject of discovery under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26. Sims v. State, 251 Ga. 877, 311 S.E.2d 161 (1984).

Statement of defendant. — State was under no duty to provide defense counsel a prior contradictory statement of defendant which impeached defendant because the statement was neither exculpatory nor likely to be used in evidence by the defense. Farmer v. State, 222 Ga. App. 506, 474 S.E.2d 711 (1996).

Photos of the crime scene not presented in evidence by the state and not exculpatory were not subject to discovery. Sims v. State, 251 Ga. 877, 311 S.E.2d 161 (1984).

Statements of witnesses in the prosecutor's files, if nothing more appears, may not be reached by statutory provisions on notice to produce. Stevens v. State, 242 Ga. 34, 247 S.E.2d 838 (1978); Spain v. State, 243 Ga. 15, 252 S.E.2d 436 (1979); Holton v. State, 243

Ga. 312, 253 S.E.2d 736 (1979); Hamby v. State, 243 Ga. 339, 253 S.E.2d 759 (1979); Stanley v. State, 153 Ga. App. 42, 264 S.E.2d 533 (1980); Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980); Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982); Hill v. State, 161 Ga. App. 346, 287 S.E.2d 779 (1982); Holbrook v. State, 162 Ga. App. 400, 291 S.E.2d 729 (1982); Ivester v. State, 252 Ga. 333, 313 S.E.2d 674 (1984); Pittman v. State, 175 Ga. App. 50, 332 S.E.2d 356 (1985).

Witness statements have never been subject to a notice to produce, although exculpatory witness statements are subject to disclosure, if requested under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963). Welch v. State, 251 Ga. 197, 304 S.E.2d 391 (1983); Ivester v. State, 252 Ga. 333, 313 S.E.2d 674 (1984).

Pretrial statements of state's witnesses are not within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 notice to produce. Ford v. State, 256 Ga. 375, 349 S.E.2d 361 (1986).

Evidence used on behalf of state and not needed for defense. — Failure to produce a photo array which was displayed to an eyewitness before the array was introduced at trial did not violate O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 since the array and the identification pursuant to it were used as evidence on behalf of the state, and were not needed by defendant as evidence in support of the defendant's defense. Gilstrap v. State, 256 Ga. 20, 342 S.E.2d 667 (1986).

Trial court did not err in admitting two photographs of a rape victim when, although the state had not supplied the photographs in response to defendant's pretrial notice to produce, the photographs were used as evidence on behalf of the state and were not needed by defendant as evidence in support of defendant's defense. Sweetenburg v. State, 197 Ga. App. 36, 397 S.E.2d 451 (1990).

Police surveillance videotape was not subject to discovery since the tape was not needed for use as evidence on the defendant's behalf and was only introduced on re-direct examination to rehabilitate the testimony of a witness. Deal v. State, 199 Ga. App. 184, 404 S.E.2d 343 (1991).

Statement of nonwitness. — When no exculpatory material is suppressed, there is no requirement that the prosecution allow discovery of a statement of a person who is not a trial witness. Crosby v. State, 150 Ga. App. 804, 258 S.E.2d 593 (1979).

Tape recordings of drug transaction. — Tape recording of a drug transaction was not discoverable pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 nor under § 17-7-210 [repealed], since the recording was not of any taped statement given by the defendant while in police custody, nor under former § 17-7-211, since the tape recording did not constitute a written scientific report. Weldon v. State, 204 Ga. App. 221, 419 S.E.2d 59 (1992).

Police and investigation reports. — Statute does not require a district attorney to open the district attorney's files to the attorney for the accused, nor is the accused entitled as a matter of right to receive copies of police reports and investigation reports made in the course of preparing the case against the client. Stevens v. State, 242 Ga. 34, 247 S.E.2d 838 (1978), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 891, 101 S. Ct. 251, 66 L. Ed. 2d 118 (1980).

There is no Georgia procedure requiring the district attorney to open the district attorney's files to the accused, nor is the accused entitled as a matter of right to receive copies of police reports and investigation reports made in the course of preparing the case against the accused. Baker v. State, 245 Ga. 657, 266 S.E.2d 477 (1980).

Reports and summaries made by police investigators are not the types of "books, writings or other documents or tangible things" subject to a notice to produce. Carter v. State, 150 Ga. App. 119, 257 S.E.2d 11 (1979); Bennett v. State, 158 Ga. App. 421, 280 S.E.2d 429 (1981).

Scientific reports. — Motion to produce pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26, which included inter alia, a demand for production of all reports and the results and copies of all reports of any scientific tests, experiments, or studies made in connection with the defendant's case, was not adequate pursuant to former § 17-7-211 for production of scientific reports. Murray v. State, 203 Ga. App. 858, 418 S.E.2d 624 (1992).

Intoximeter data. — Computer data upon which an intoximeter test was based were not the types of items reasonably expected to be found in the "custody" of the solicitor (now district attorney) preparing the case against defendant. Ross v. State, 192 Ga. App. 850, 386 S.E.2d 721 (1989).

Improper use of notice to produce. — Defendant having "moved to suppress" the evidence by virtue of contesting the libel for condemnation of former Code 1933, § 79A-828 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49) and the state having failed to meet the state's burden in that regard, the state may not use the notice to produce to "re-seize" the property for evidentiary purposes. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Possession of bullet in body of victim. — State cannot, under any theory, be deemed to have in the state's possession a bullet lodged in the body of a victim of a crime, and the state does not have any more right to require the removal of a bullet from the body of a living victim than does the accused. State v. Haynie, 240 Ga. 866, 242 S.E.2d 713 (1978).

3. Items Subject to Notice to Produce

Admissible and necessary evidence. — Notices to produce can be used in a criminal case "to compel production of books, writings or other documents or tangible things in the possession, custody or control" of the opposite party (district attorney and investigating officers), for use at trial or at a pretrial evidentiary hearing, when such books, etc., would be admissible and are needed for use as evidence on behalf of the defendant. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

Tangible objects and documents. — Accused may use the notice to produce provision to compel the production of tangible objects and documents at trial. Brooks v. State, 141 Ga. App. 725, 234 S.E.2d 541 (1977).

More than list of witnesses. — Notice to produce is available in criminal cases for more than the limited purpose of obtaining a copy of the accusation and list of witnesses already available under § 17-7-110 [repealed]. Brown v. State, 238 Ga. 98, 231 S.E.2d 65 (1976).

Exculpatory matter. — Defendant is entitled to discovery of all exculpatory matter and anything in the district attorney's file which is favorable to defendant's defense.

Criminal Cases (Cont'd)3. Items Subject to Notice to*Produce (Cont'd)

Maddox v. State, 136 Ga. App. 370, 221 S.E.2d 231 (1975).

Material creating reasonable doubt. —

Prosecutor is under a duty to furnish the defendant, without request, material which creates a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Law enforcement officer who is covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 would not be entitled to the witness fee established by O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 for testifying during "off-duty" hours. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-26.

24-10-27. Witness fees for police officers, deputy sheriffs, or members of campus police.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision in this article, any member of a municipal or county police force or any deputy sheriff or any campus policeman as defined in Code Section 20-8-1 or a member of a local fire department who shall be required by writ of subpoena to attend any superior court, other courts having jurisdiction to enforce the penal laws of this state, municipal court having jurisdiction to enforce the penal laws of this state as provided by Code Section 40-13-21, juvenile court, or grand jury, or hearing or inquest held or called by a coroner, or magistrate court involving any criminal matter, as a witness on behalf of the state during any hours except the regular duty hours to which the officer is assigned, may be paid for such attendance at a fixed rate to be established by the governing authority, but not less than $20.00 per diem. The claim for the witness fees shall be endorsed on the subpoena showing the dates of attendance and stating that attendance was required during the hours other than the regular duty hours to which the claimant was assigned. The claimant shall verify this statement. The dates of attendance shall be certified by the judge or the prosecuting attorney of the court attended. The chief of police, the sheriff, the director of public safety of a college or university, or the local fire chief shall certify that the claimant has not received any overtime pay for his attendance and that his attendance was required during hours other than regular duty hours. The amount due may be paid by the governing body authorized to dispense public funds for the operation of the court. However, no such officer may claim or receive more than one witness fee per day for attendance in any court or before the grand jury regardless of the number of subpoenas which the officer may have received requiring him to appear in such court or before the grand jury on any one day.

(b)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision in this article except paragraph (2) of this subsection, any member of a municipal or county police force or any deputy sheriff or any campus policeman as defined in Code Section 20-8-1 or any arson investigator of the state fire marshal's office or a member of a local fire department who shall be required by writ of subpoena to attend any court of this state with respect to any civil case, as a witness concerning any matter relative to the law enforcement duties of such officer during any hours except the regular duty hours to which the officer is assigned, may be paid for such attendance at a fixed rate to be established by the governing authority, but not less than $20.00 per diem. Any such officer shall also be entitled to the mileage allowance provided in Code Section 24-10-24 when such officer resides outside the county where the testimony is to be given. The claim for the witness fees shall be endorsed on the subpoena showing the dates of attendance and stating that attendance was required during the hours other than the regular duty hours to which the claimant was assigned. The claimant shall verify this statement. The dates of attendance shall be certified by the party obtaining the subpoena. The chief of police, the sheriff, the director of public safety of a college or university, or the local fire chief shall certify that the claimant has not received any overtime pay for his attendance and that his attendance was required during hours other than regular duty hours.

(2) Any officer covered by paragraph (1) of this subsection who is required by writ of subpoena to attend any court with respect to any civil case, as a witness concerning any matter which is not related to the duties of such officer, shall be compensated as provided in Code Section 24-10-24.

(c) The fee specified by subsections (a) and (b) of this Code section shall not be paid if the officer receives any overtime pay for time spent attending such court pursuant to the writ of subpoena.

(d) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "regular duty hours" means the daily shift of duty to which such officer is assigned and shall not include paid or unpaid vacation, paid or unpaid sick leave, paid or unpaid holiday or any other paid or unpaid leave status established pursuant to the personnel regulations or scheduling practices of the employing agency. (Ga. L. 1968, p. 434, § 1; Ga. L. 1978, p. 925, § 1; Ga. L. 1980, p. 439, § 1; Ga. L. 1982, p. 982, §§ 1, 2; Ga. L. 1983, p. 3, § 17; Ga. L. 1983, p. 884, § 3-24; Ga. L. 1984, p. 964, § 1; Ga. Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1991, p. 773, § 1, which amended this Code section, pur-ported to amend only subsection (a) but also amended paragraph (b)(1).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Failure of proof that fee accrued. — When a police officer did not in the officer's affidavit verify that the officer's attendance was required during hours which were other than the officer's regularly assigned duty hours and there was no certification from the officer's superior that the officer was neither paid additional compensation nor given time off on account of the officer's service, there was a failure of proof that a witness fee had accrued. Walden v. State, 185

Ga. App. 413, 364 S.E.2d 304 (1987), rev'd on other grounds, 258 Ga. 503, 371 S.E.2d 852 (1988), aff'd, 189 Ga. App. 896, 378 S.E.2d 418 (1989).

Lodging and airfare costs. — There is no specific statutory authorization for assessing a criminal defendant for the lodging and airfare costs of witnesses for the state. Smith v. State, 272 Ga. 83, 526 S.E.2d 59 (2000), reversing Smith v. State, 236 Ga. App. 548, 512 S.E.2d 19 (1999).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Purpose of this statute is to ensure that witness fees are not denied certain officers in cases involving penal statutes when those officers are connected with the enforcement of those statutes in such a way that testimony at a trial during off-duty hours might nevertheless be considered within their regular duties and therefore already compensated for by their salaries. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-157.

Criminal as well as civil cases. — County must pay the per diem witness fee to witnesses summoned in criminal cases, as well as to those summoned in civil cases; the source of funds for witness fees is from county taxes. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-11.

Word "member" in statute does not include fingerprint experts employed by the Division of Investigation. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-157.

Peace officer who, required by subpoena, attended court on behalf of the state during any hours except regular duty hours, was entitled to mileage as provided by O.C.G.A. § 24-10-24; under these conditions, the peace officer was also entitled to per diem as provided in Ga. L. 1968, p. 434, § 1 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-27). 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-57.

State trooper is entitled to be compensated separately from each court in which the trooper appears as a witness under subpoena; however, the trooper may not receive more than one witness fee per day for appearing as a witness under subpoena in any single court. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-4.

Attendance at justice court commitment hearing does not entitle an officer to a fee. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-234.

University officers not entitled to fees. — University system law enforcement officers may enforce municipal ordinances of all kinds within 500 yards of the Board of Regents' property and may prosecute those cases in any court of this state. However, such officers are not entitled to the statutory witness stipend provided under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 24-10-27. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-20.

Endorsement of claim for fees. — Under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 24-10-27, a post commander may endorse a state trooper's claim for witness fees stating that attendance was required during hours other than the trooper's regular duty hours. However, only the commanding officer of the division to which the trooper is assigned is authorized to certify that the claimant has been paid no additional compensation and has been given no time off on account of the claimant's court appearance. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-28.

Subpoena of duty records by grand juries. — Grand juries do not have the power to subpoena duty records of the state patrol or city police to determine the accuracy of disbursement of witness fees by the clerk's office. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-28.

24-10-27.1. Witness fees for member of Georgia State Patrol or Georgia Bureau of Investigation, law enforcement officer of Department of Natural Resources, correctional officer, or arson investigator of state fire marshal's office.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision in this article, any member of the Georgia State Patrol or Georgia Bureau of Investigation, any correctional officer, any person employed by the Department of Natural Resources as a law enforcement officer, or any arson investigator of the state fire marshal's office who shall be required by writ of subpoena to attend any superior court, other courts having jurisdiction to enforce the penal laws of this state, municipal court having jurisdiction to enforce the penal laws of this state as provided by Code Section 40-13-21, juvenile court, or grand jury or hearing or inquest held or called by a coroner or magistrate court involving any criminal matter, as a witness on behalf of the state during any hours except the regular duty hours to which the officer is assigned, shall be paid for such attendance at a fixed rate to be established by the governing authority, but not less than $20.00 per diem. The claim for the witness fees shall be endorsed on the subpoena showing the dates of attendance and stating that attendance was required during the hours other than the regular duty hours to which the claimant was assigned. The claimant shall verify this statement. The dates of attendance shall be certified by the judge or the prosecuting attorney of the court attended. The director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or his or her designees, the commanding officer of the Georgia State Patrol or his or her designees, the commissioner of natural resources or his or her designees, the superintendent of the institution, or the state fire marshal shall certify that the claimant has not received any overtime pay for his or her attendance and that his or her attendance was required during hours other than regular duty hours. The amount due shall be paid by the governing body authorized to dispense public funds for the operation of the court. However, no such officer may claim or receive more than one witness fee per day for attendance in any court or before the grand jury regardless of the number of subpoenas which the officer may have received requiring him or her to appear in such court or before the grand jury on any one day.

(b)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision in this article except paragraph (2) of this subsection, any member of the Georgia State Patrol, Georgia Bureau of Investigation, any correctional officer, any person employed by the Department of Natural Resources as a law enforcement officer, or any arson investigator of the state fire marshal's office who shall be required by writ of subpoena to attend any court of this state with respect to any civil case, as a witness concerning any matter relative to the law enforcement duties of such officer during any hours except the regular duty hours to which the officer is assigned, shall be paid for such attendance at a fixed rate to be established by the governing authority, but not less than $20.00 per diem. Any such officer shall also be entitled to the mileage allowance provided in Code Section 24-10-24 when such officer resides outside the county where the testimony is to be given. The claim for the witness fees shall be endorsed on the subpoena showing the dates of attendance and stating that attendance was required during the hours other than the regular duty hours to which the claimant was assigned. The claimant shall verify this statement. The dates of attendance shall be certified by the party obtaining the subpoena. The director of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation or his or her designees, the commanding officer of the Georgia State Patrol or his or her designees, the commissioner of natural resources or his or her designees, the superintendent of the institution, or the state fire marshal shall certify that the claimant has not received any overtime pay for his or her attendance and that his or her attendance was required during hours other than regular duty hours.

(2) Any officer covered by paragraph (1) of this subsection who is required by writ of subpoena to attend any court with respect to any civil case, as a witness concerning any matter which is not related to the duties of such officer, shall be compensated as provided in Code Section 24-10-24. (Code 1981, § 24-10-27.1, enacted by Ga. L. 1991, p. 773, § 2; Ga. L. 1996, p. 315, § 1; Ga. L. 2010, p. 878, § 24/HB 1387.)

The 2010 amendment, effective June 3, 2010, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, revised punctuation in the first sentence of subsection (a).

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to

Code Section 28-9-5, in 1996, “commissioner of natural resources” was substituted for “Commissioner of Natural Resources” in the fifth sentence of subsection (a) and in the last sentence of paragraph (b)(1).

24-10-28. Legislators’ exemption.

No member of the General Assembly of Georgia shall be compelled to attend and give testimony at any hearing or trial or to produce books, papers, documents, or other tangible things while the General Assembly is in regular or extraordinary session. (Ga. L. 1968, p. 1200, § 1.)

24-10-29. Applicability.

This article shall apply to all civil cases and, insofar as consistent with the Constitution, to all criminal cases. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 502, § 2.)

For note, “Criminal Discovery: The Use of Notices to Produce,” see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 331 (1978).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Limitation on use by state. — Words “insofar as consistent with the Constitution” constitute a limitation on the state’s use of subpoenas and notices to produce more than a limitation on its use by an accused. Brown v. State, 238 Ga. 98, 231 S.E.2d 65 (1976); Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Unconstitutional self-incrimination. — State may not use a notice to produce to reseize property and redvest defendant of custody and possession by retaining the property and using the property as evidence in a criminal proceeding; unconstitutional self-incrimination would be the result of compliance with the state’s notice. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Notice to produce. — Pursuant to Ga. L. 1966, p. 502, § 2 and former Code 1933, §§ 38-801—38-807 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26), providing for notices to produce writing and tangible objects in lieu of subpoena, is applicable to criminal cases. Goldsmith v. State, 148 Ga. App. 786, 252 S.E.2d 657 (1979); Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

Discovery as such not available to accused in criminal cases in Georgia, but a motion to produce books, writings, or other documents or tangible things pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-10-26 is applicable to criminal cases. Pryor v. State, 238 Ga. 698, 234 S.E.2d 918, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 935, 98 S. Ct. 422, 54 L. Ed. 2d 294 (1977), reh’g denied, 434 U.S. 1003, 98 S. Ct. 650, 54 L. Ed. 2d 500 (1977), overruled on other grounds by Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006).

Exculpatory matter. — Defendant is entitled to discovery of all exculpatory matter and anything in the district attorney’s file which is favorable to defendant’s defense. Maddox v. State, 136 Ga. App. 370, 221 S.E.2d 231 (1975).

Material creating reasonable doubt. — Prosecutor is under a duty to furnish the defendant, without request, material which creates a reasonable doubt as to the defendant’s guilt. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 62, 268 S.E.2d 895 (1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1103, 101 S. Ct. 901, 66 L. Ed. 2d 830 (1981).

Confidential informant. — It is within the sound discretion of a trial court whether to require the state to disclose to the defendant the name and address of a confidential informant. Clayton v. State, 145 Ga. App. 541, 244 S.E.2d 67 (1978).

Reports and summaries made by police investigators are not the types of books, writings, or other documents or tangible things subject to a notice to produce. Bennett v. State, 158 Ga. App. 421, 280 S.E.2d 429 (1981).

Improper use of notice to produce. — Defendant having “moved to suppress” the evidence by virtue of contesting the libel for condemnation of former Code 1933, § 79A-828 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49) and the state having failed to meet the state’s burden in that regard, the state may not use the notice to produce to “reseize” the property for evidentiary purposes. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Corporate document not protected by self-incrimination privilege. — Defendant in a criminal case, an attorney who was the sole shareholder of a professional corporation, was properly held in civil contempt for not producing a noncompetition agreement between the corporation and a former employee. The agreement was a corporate document, and the defendant had been subpoenaed to produce the document as a corporate agent; thus, the defendant could not assert the defendant’s personal right against self-incrimination and the small size of the corporation was immaterial. Thompson v. State, 294 Ga. App. 363, 670 S.E.2d 152 (2008).

PART 2

SECURING TESTIMONY OF WITNESSES IN CASES TRIED ON AFFIDAVITS

24-10-40. Application for subpoena; hearing; use of written questions.

(a) Any party to an application for injunction, motion for new trial, or other case tried only on affidavits who desires to introduce into evidence the affidavit of any witness not a party to the record and who is unwilling to make affidavit may apply to the clerk of the superior court where the action is pending for a subpoena to compel the attendance of such witness at the hearing, subject to the rules applicable to the case of ordinary witnesses. Written questions may be prepared by the party desiring the evidence; and the witness shall answer such questions in the presence of the judge or of some person to be designated as commissioner by the judge, who may swear the witness to testify truly in answer to the questions propounded. The answers of the witness shall be written down, sworn to, and subscribed by the witness at the hearing. If the witness at the hearing consents, an affidavit containing the facts may be prepared and may then be sworn to by the witness. No cross-examination shall be allowed.

(b) When any application for injunction, motion for new trial, or other case tried only on affidavits is heard in any county other than the county in which the action is pending, any party to such injunction, motion for new trial, or other case who desires to introduce into evidence the affidavit of any witness not a party to the record and unwilling to make affidavit may prepare written questions to elicit the information he desires. On application, the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the action is pending and in which the witness resides shall issue a subpoena requiring the witness to attend before some officer of the county named therein, authorized to administer oaths, on a day therein fixed, to answer the questions. The answers shall be reduced to writing and sworn to by the officer who shall forward or deliver the questions and answers to the clerk of the court in which the case is pending, as in the case of interrogatories. It shall be the duty of the clerk to enter on the questions and on the answers a certificate of the date of receipt and from whom or in what manner he received them, to sign the same, and, on application of the party or his counsel interrogating the witness, to deliver the same to him. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Motion for new trial in criminal case. — Statute does not apply to a motion for a new trial in a criminal case which is set for hearing in a county other than that in which the trial was had. Thompson v. State, 138 Ga. 267, 75 S.E. 357 (1912); Thompson v. State, 139 Ga. 592, 77 S.E. 811 (1913).

Oral testimony at motion for new trial. — In a hearing on an extraordinary motion for a new trial, when the witnesses are present, and do not object, the presiding judge has discretion as to whether the judge will hear affidavits or oral testimony. Herrin v. State, 71 Ga. App. 384, 31 S.E.2d 124 (1944).

Oral examination at interlocutory injunction hearing. — While generally at the hearing of an application for an interlocutory injunction, the testimony is introduced by means of affidavits, the rule is not inflexible, and where witnesses are present, without objection on their part, for the purpose of testifying, the presiding judge may, in the judge's discretion, allow the witnesses to be examined orally, due care being taken that no injustice is worked thereby. Chattanooga & C.I. Ry. v. Morrison, 140 Ga. 769, 79 S.E. 903 (1913); Cassidy v. Howard, 140 Ga. 844, 80 S.E. 1 (1913).

24-10-41. Procedure when witness resides out of county in which case is pending.

If the witness whose affidavit is desired resides out of the county in which the case is pending or falls within any of the classes for whom interrogatories must be taken in ordinary cases, the party desiring to use such witness's testimony in the cases referred to in Code Section 24-10-40 may prepare written questions to elicit the information he desires. On application, the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the witness resides shall issue a subpoena requiring the witness to attend before some officer of the county, named therein, authorized to administer oaths, on a day therein fixed, to answer the questions. The answers shall be reduced to writing and sworn to before the officer who shall forward or deliver the questions and answers to the clerk of the court where the case is pending, as in cases of interrogatories. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Motion for new trial in criminal case. — Statute does not apply to a motion for a new trial in a criminal case which is set for hearing in a county other than that in which the trial was had. Thompson v. State, 138 Ga. 267, 75 S.E. 357 (1912); Thompson v. State, 139 Ga. 592, 77 S.E. 811 (1913).

24-10-42. Questioning of witness at residence.

If, due to the condition of his health or the nature of his business, it is not possible to secure the attendance of the witness without manifest inconvenience to the public and to himself, on the day named in the subpoena the officer shall proceed to the residence of the witness and take the answers to the questions. (Ga. L. 1882-83, p. 96, § 2; Civil Code 1895, § 5325; Civil Code 1910, § 5920; Code 1933, § 38-2403; Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 288, § 2.)

24-10-43. Fees of officer.

The fees of the officer shall be paid by the party desiring the testimony and may be taxed against the party against whom costs are taxed on the final trial. (Ga. L. 1882-83, p. 96, § 2; Civil Code 1895, § 5326; Civil Code 1910, § 5921; Code 1933, § 38-2404.)

24-10-44. Production of evidence.

The provisions of this chapter in relation to subpoenas for the production of evidence and notices to produce shall be applicable to the cases specified in Code Section 24-10-40. (Ga. L. 1882-83, p. 96, § 3; Civil Code 1895, § 5327; Civil Code 1910, § 5922; Code 1933, § 38-2405.)

24-10-45. Penalty for default of witness.

Any witness summoned under Code Sections 24-10-40 through 24-10-44 who fails or refuses to obey the subpoena shall be liable for the penalties prescribed in the case of defaulting witnesses in the superior court. (Ga. L. 1882-83, p. 96, § 4; Civil Code 1895, § 5328; Civil Code 1910, § 5923; Code 1933, § 38-2406.)

ARTICLE 3SECURING ATTENDANCE OF PRISONERS*24-10-60. Order requiring prisoner's delivery to serve as witness or criminal defendant generally; expenses; prisoner under death sentence as witness.

(a) When a prisoner confined in any state prison, county correctional institution, or other penal institution under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections, other than a prisoner under a death sentence, is needed as a witness in any civil or criminal proceeding in any court of record in this state or when it is desired that such person stand trial on an indictment or accusation charging him with commission of a felony or misdemeanor, the judge of the court wherein the proceeding is pending is authorized to and shall issue an ex parte order, directed to the Board of Corrections, requiring his delivery to the sheriff of the county where the prisoner is desired as a witness or defendant. The sheriff or his deputies shall take custody of the prisoner on the date named in the order, safely keep him pending the proceeding, and shall return him to the original place of detention after his discharge by the trial judge.

(b) If the prisoner was desired as a witness by the state in a criminal proceeding or if the prisoner's release to the sheriff was for the purpose of standing trial on criminal charges, the county wherein the case was pending shall pay all expenses of transportation and keeping, including per diem and mileage of the sheriff, jail fees, and any other proper expense approved by the trial judge.

(c) If the prisoner was desired as a witness by the defendant in a criminal proceeding, or by either party to a civil proceeding, the costs and expenses referred to in subsection (b) of this Code section shall be borne by the person requesting the prisoner as a witness. The court shall require a deposit of money sufficient to defray same, except where the judge, after examining into the matter, determines that the prisoner's presence is required by the ends of justice and that the party requesting it is financially unable to make the deposit, in which case the expenses shall be taxed as costs of court.

(d) If a prisoner under a death sentence is needed as a witness for either the prosecution or the defense in any felony case, the requesting party may interview the proposed witness. Following such interview, the requesting party may move for a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum. Such motion shall be accompanied by a proffer of the testimony of the proposed witness. The requesting party shall make such motion and proffer as soon as possible but shall not make such motion later than 20 days prior to the date of the trial. Nothing in this Code section shall limit the right of a party from presenting a material witness at a hearing or trial and to have compulsory process for that purpose. (Ga. L. 1882-83, p. 106, §§ 1, 2; Penal Code 1895, §§ 1187, 1188, 1189, 1190, 1191; Penal Code 1910, §§ 1180, 1181, 1182, 1183, 1184; Code 1933, §§ 38-2001, 38-2002, 38-2003, 38-2004, 38-2005; Ga. Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to substituted for “amd” near the end of sub-
Code Section 28-9-5, in 1988, “and” was section (b).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Some showing of need is contemplated in the production of convicts as witnesses. Reid v. State, 119 Ga. App. 368, 166 S.E.2d 900 (1969); Brand v. State, 154 Ga. App. 781, 270 S.E.2d 206 (1980).
Trial judge must exercise discretion in determining whether the presence of the witnesses is "required by the ends of justice." In the exercise of the judge's discretion, the trial judge may require this to be shown by affidavits or depositions. Phillips v. Hopper, 237 Ga. 68, 227 S.E.2d 1 (1976).

Defendant has burden of satisfying the trial court that the defendant is unable to pay the expenses of having prisoners produced as witnesses and that the presence of the prisoners as witnesses is required by the ends of justice before the defendant can secure an order requiring the production of the prisoners as witnesses and taxing the expenses thereof as costs of courts. Phillips v. Hopper, 237 Ga. 68, 227 S.E.2d 1 (1976).

Habeas corpus. — Law does not require the court to subpoena witnesses at the request of the petitioner for habeas corpus. Phillips v. Hopper, 237 Ga. 68, 227 S.E.2d 1 (1976).

Prisoner not required to pay prisoner's expenses. — Prisoner confined in the state penitentiary under a prior conviction is not required to pay expenses involved in the prisoner's transportation from the state penitentiary to the county of the superior court for trial of a pending indictment or indictments against the prisoner therein, or the expenses of the prisoner's return from the county of the prisoner's trial to the state penitentiary; these expenses are a proper charge of the county of that trial court. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967).

Court has no compulsory process powers without state. — Reid v. State, 119 Ga. App. 368, 166 S.E.2d 900 (1969).

Some showing of need is contemplated. Brand v. State, 154 Ga. App. 781, 270 S.E.2d 206 (1980).

Dismissal of inmate's mandamus action was error. — Trial court erred when the court dismissed an inmate's mandamus action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-6-20, wherein the inmate sought additional jail time credit, upon the inmate's failure to appear at a hearing in the matter, as the trial court had failed to rule on the inmate's motion for habeas corpus ad testificandum under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-62 and, accordingly, the inmate had no ability to appear in court on the hearing date. Rozar v. Donald, 280 Ga. 111, 622 S.E.2d 850 (2005).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Hearsay rule not eliminated. — Statutory provisions on production of medical records deal with the method of authenticating records which are otherwise admissible and does not contain new rules of admissibility eliminating the hearsay rule. Moody v. State, 244 Ga. 247, 260 S.E.2d 11 (1979).

ble. — Rowland v. State, 73 Ga. App. 729, 37 S.E.2d 923 (1946), clearly a solitary aberration, holding that records containing opinions, diagnoses, and other hearsay are inadmissible, is expressly overruled. Moody v. State, 244 Ga. 247, 260 S.E.2d 11 (1979).

Admissibility of contents of hospital records is governed by the rules of admissi-

Records containing hearsay are inadmissi-

Records not absolutely confidential. — Hospital records, being obtainable in legal proceedings by subpoena and other means, are obviously not absolutely confidential in the sense that the records cannot be used. Dennis v. Adcock, 138 Ga. App. 425, 226 S.E.2d 292 (1976).

24-10-70. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Institution" shall have the meaning set forth in paragraph (4) of Code Section 31-7-1 and shall also include a psychiatric hospital as defined in paragraph (7) of Code Section 37-3-1.

(2) "Medical records" means all written clinical information which relates to the treatment of individuals when such information is kept in an institution.

(3) "Patient" means any natural person to whom information contained in medical records relates directly, whether or not the person has been discharged from the institution keeping medical records. (Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, § 1; Ga. L. 1984, p. 22, § 24; Ga. L. 1991, p. 94, § 24; Ga. L. 2008, p. 12, § 2-5/SB 433.)

24-10-71. Production of substitutes in lieu of medical records; when authorized; order for production of originals for good cause.

(a) Where it appears that medical records for which a subpoena or order for production has been issued should be kept in an institution as reasonably necessary for the treatment of a patient, the court in which admission is sought shall order that reproduction of the medical records shall be made, the reproduction when duly certified to be admissible in place of the medical records.

(b) Where it does not so appear that medical records should be kept in an institution, an institution upon request at any time shall be permitted to substitute reproductions for medical records, provided such reproductions shall be accompanied by a certificate executed by the person responsible for keeping medical records that the reproductions are true and accurate copies of the medical records.

24-10-72. Compliance with subpoena or order; custodian's appearance excused by certificate; when sanctions applied.

(a) An institution, as such, and its personnel shall be in compliance with a subpoena or order for production if it shows timely delivery of the medical records or substitutes and certificate to the clerk of court or other authorized person (by way of illustration, counsel seeking production in discovery proceedings) by any means, including, but not limited to, certified or registered mail or statutory overnight delivery.

(b) A certificate signed before a notary public or other officer authorized to administer oaths shall excuse the personal appearance of any person responsible for keeping medical records. No sanction or remedy for contempt shall be applied against any such person or institution unless a subpoena or order expressly commanding the person's presence has been issued by authority of the court or body for good cause shown, such cause and authority appearing of record and on the face of the subpoena or order. (Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, § 2; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1589, § 4.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2000, p. 1589, section is applicable to notices delivered on § 16, not codified by the General Assembly, or after July 1, 2000. provides that the amendment to this Code 24-10-73. Payment of costs in advance; pauper's affidavit; tender prerequisite to contempt sanction; when costs deferred.

The court or agency compelling the production of medical records or of reproductions thereof pursuant to subsections (a) and (c) of Code Section 24-10-71 shall in civil cases and administrative proceedings, except upon pauper's affidavit, provide for payment in advance to the institution keeping the records of the reasonable costs of reproduction and reasonable costs incident to the transportation of the records. No institution or person shall be held in contempt or otherwise penalized for failure of production unless it appears of record that the costs provided in this Code section have been established and tendered. When the institution, at the time of service of a subpoena or order for production, is a party to the proceeding, the court or agency may in its discretion defer such costs and award them with the other costs in the proceeding. (Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, § 2.)

24-10-74. Custody of medical records; inspection; return.

When medical records are removed from any institution to the custody of a court pursuant to a subpoena or order, the records so removed shall be kept in the custody of the clerk of the court or the clerk or secretary of an administrative agency and shall be open to inspection according to the terms of the subpoena or order or modification thereof. Upon completion of the necessity for their use, the records shall be promptly returned by the party compelling production to the institution from which they came. (Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, § 2.)

24-10-75. Applicability.

This article applies to all situations for which subpoenas may issue or for which production may be sought, including, but not limited to, trials, hearings, and discovery. (Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, § 3.)

24-10-76. Construction.

(a) Nothing in this article shall be deemed to restrict the admissibility of evidence heretofore determined admissible by law nor to be in derogation of the right of a person on trial for an alleged criminal offense to confront and cross-examine witnesses against him when such right is asserted.

(b) Nothing contained in this article shall be deemed to abrogate or repeal any law or rule of evidence respecting the use of confidences, such as that provided in Code Section 24-9-21, relating to communications between psychiatrist and patient. (Ga. L. 1971, p. 441, §§ 4, 5.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Subpoena duces tecum request not sufficiently specific. — Trial court properly denied a child molestation defendant's motion for a subpoena duces tecum to obtain out-of-state records pertaining to the victims. The defendant failed to identify any specific person, entity, agency, or records custodian who should be directed to produce the records and thus did not satisfy the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State, O.C.G.A. § 24-10-90 et seq. French v. State, 288 Ga. App. 775, 655 S.E.2d 224 (2007).

Defendant failed to show evidence sought was material to defendant's case. — A trial court did not err in finding that a defendant had not made a sufficient showing that evidence of adjustments made in the Intoxilyzer 5000 source code for asthma sufferers was material to the defendant's case, which was the defendant's burden under the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses From Without the State, O.C.G.A. § 24-10-90 et seq. *Davenport v. 24-10-91. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Penal institution" means a jail, prison, penitentiary, house of correction, or other place of penal detention.

(2) "State" means any state or territory of the United States and the District of Columbia.

(3) "Summons" means a subpoena, order, or other notice requiring the appearance of a witness.

(4) "Witness" means a person whose testimony is desired in any proceeding or investigation by a grand jury or in a criminal action, prosecution, or proceeding held by the prosecution or the defense, including a person who is confined in a penal institution in any state. (Ga. L. 1976, p. 1366, § 2.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

No counsel error in failing to secure witness for trial. — Because the only testimony in a hearing on a motion for a new trial with regard to defendant's murder conviction regarding the content of defendant's sister's potential testimony showed that it would have merely reiterated defendant's mother's testimony, the trial court did not err by failing to secure the attendance of the sister through an interstate subpoena. Tollette v. State, 280 Ga. 100, 621 S.E.2d 742 (2005).

24-10-92. Criminal or grand jury proceeding in foreign state — Certificate of need for testimony; hearing; summons; custody and delivery; expenses; punishment for failure to attend and testify.

(a) If a judge of a court of record in any state which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within that state to attend and testify in this state certifies under the seal of such court that there is a criminal prosecution pending in such court or that a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, that a person within this state is a material witness in such prosecution or grand jury investigation, and that his presence will be required for a specified number of days, upon presentation of such certificate to any judge of a court of record in the county in which the person is found, such judge shall fix a time and place for a hearing and shall make an order directing the witness to appear at a time and place certain for the hearing. The witness shall at all times be entitled to counsel.

(b) If at a hearing the judge determines that the witness is material and necessary, that it will not cause undue hardship to the witness to be compelled to attend and testify in the prosecution or a grand jury investigation in the other state, and the laws of the state in which the prosecution is pending, or grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, will give to him protection from arrest and the service of civil and criminal process, he shall issue a summons, with a copy of the certificate attached, directing the witness to attend and testify in the court where the prosecution is pending or, where a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, at a time and place specified in the summons. In any such hearing the certificate shall be prima-facie evidence of all the facts stated therein.

(c) If such certificate recommends that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting state to assure his attendance in the requesting state, such judge may, in lieu of notification of the hearing, direct that the witness be forthwith brought before him for the hearing; and the judge at the hearing being satisfied of the desirability of such custody and delivery, for which determination the certificate shall be prima-facie proof of such desirability, may, in lieu of issuing subpoena or summons, order that the witness be forthwith taken into custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting state.

(d) If the witness, who is summoned as above provided, after being paid or tendered by some properly authorized person the sum of 12¢ a mile for each mile by the ordinarily traveled route to and from the court where the prosecution is pending and $25.00 for each day that he is required to travel and attend as a witness, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he shall be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any witness who disobeys a summons issued from a court of record in this state. (Ga. L. 1976, p. 1366, § 3.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Scope of statute. — Statute does not provide for the issuance of a subpoena, but is rather a process for obtaining a court order for the production of the witness, who may also appear in the jurisdiction where the witness is found and convince the court to deny or quash the subpoena. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-10-92).

No absolute right to witness. — Party requesting the presence of an out-of-state witness does not have an absolute right to obtain the witness. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Party requesting the presence of an out-of-state witness does not have an absolute right to obtain the witness sought under O.C.G.A. Art. 5, Ch. 10, T. 24. It must be shown that the witness sought is a necessary and material witness to the case, and the party desiring the witness must carry the burden of establishing those facts. Chesser v. State, 168 Ga. App. 195, 308 S.E.2d 589 (1983).

Defendant lacked standing to complain of any procedural irregularities involved in obtaining a witness whom the state had procured by means of O.C.G.A. Art. 5, Ch. 10, T. 24. Moon v. State, 258 Ga. 748, 375 S.E.2d 442 (1988), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 982, 111 S. Ct. 1638, 113 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1991), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Zant v. Moon, 264 Ga. 93, 440 S.E.2d 657 (1994).

No guarantee of appearance. — Right to compulsory process does not amount to a guarantee by the state that the witness requested by a defendant will in fact appear at trial, but only relates to the issuance of the process. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Witness must be necessary and material. — In order to satisfy the requirements of due process, it must be shown that the witness sought is a necessary and material witness to the case, and the party desiring the witness must carry the burden of establishing those facts. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

When the assistant state's attorney in Maryland presented evidence sufficient to persuade the requesting court that the Georgia resident was essential to the grand jury's investigation and the local Georgia trial court found the facts similarly persuasive, the Georgia resident, having presented no evidence, failed to convince the superior court to deny the state's petition to grant Maryland's request. Wollesen v. State, 242 Ga. App. 317, 529 S.E.2d 630 (2000).

To meet the demands of due process, law requires the presentation of enough facts to enable both the court in the demanding state and the court in the state to which the requisition is directed to determine whether the witness should be compelled to travel to a trial in a foreign jurisdiction. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Judicial discretion. — Implicit in law is the precept that the decision whether to grant the process is a matter for determination by the trial judge in the exercise of the judge's sound discretion. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Unlocated witness. — Neither the Georgia nor the United States Constitution obligates the state to compel the attendance of witnesses who cannot be located within the state's jurisdiction. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Attendance of district attorney. — Assistant district attorney has both a right and a duty to attend a hearing and to represent the state's interest, as well as to question whether the party seeking the witness made a proper showing of necessity and materiality. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Order to testify encompasses production of documents. — Power to order a witness to travel to a foreign state for the purpose of testifying at a grand jury hearing implicitly encompasses the power to order the witness to produce relevant documents. Wollesen v. State, 242 Ga. App. 317, 529 S.E.2d 630 (2000).

24-10-93. Criminal or grand jury proceeding in foreign state — Certificate of need for prisoner's testimony; hearing; order and conditions; entry of order by judge in requesting state; applicability.

(a) A judge of a state court of record in another state which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons confined in penal institutions within that state to attend and testify in this state may certify that there is a criminal proceeding or investigation by a grand jury or a criminal action pending in the court, that a person who is confined in a penal institution in this state is a material witness in the proceeding, investigation, or action, and that his presence will be required during a specified time. Upon presentation of the certificate to any judge having jurisdiction over the person confined and upon notice to the Attorney General, the judge in this state shall fix a time and place for a hearing and shall make an order directed to the person having custody of the prisoner requiring that the prisoner be produced before him at the hearing.

(b) If at the hearing the judge determines that the witness is material and necessary, that his attending and testifying are not adverse to the interest of this state or to the health and legal rights of the witness, that the laws of the state in which he is required to testify will give him protection from arrest and the service of civil and criminal process because of any act committed prior to his arrival in the state under the order, and that as a practical matter the possibility is negligible that the witness may be subject to arrest or to the service of civil or criminal process in any state through which he will be required to pass, the judge shall issue an order, with a copy of the certificate attached, directing the witness to attend and testify, directing the person having custody of the witness to produce him in the court where the criminal action is pending or where the grand jury investigation is pending at a time and place specified in the order, and prescribing such conditions as the judge shall determine. The judge, in lieu of directing the person having custody of the witness to produce him in the requesting jurisdiction's court, may direct and require in his order that the requesting jurisdiction shall come to the Georgia penal institution in which the witness is confined to accept custody of the witness for physical transfer to the requesting jurisdiction; that the requesting jurisdiction shall provide proper safeguards on his custody while in transit; that the requesting jurisdiction shall be liable for and shall pay all expenses incurred in producing and returning the witness, including, but not limited to, food, lodging, clothing, and medical care; and that the requesting jurisdiction shall promptly deliver the witness back to the same or another Georgia penal institution as specified by the Department of Corrections at the conclusion of his testimony.

(c) The order to the witness and to the person having custody of the witness shall provide for the return of the witness at the conclusion of his testimony, proper safeguards on his custody, and proper financial reimbursement or prepayment by the requesting jurisdiction for all expenses incurred in the production and return of the witness and may prescribe such other conditions as the judge thinks proper or necessary. If the judge directs and requires the requesting jurisdiction to accept custody of the witness at the Georgia penal institution in which the witness is confined and to deliver the witness back to the same or another Georgia penal institution at the conclusion of his testimony, no prepayment of expenses shall be necessary. The order shall not become effective until the judge of the state requesting the witness enters an order directing compliance with the conditions prescribed.

(d) This Code section does not apply to any person in this state confined as insane or mentally ill or under sentence of death. (Ga. L. 1976, p. 1366, § 4; Ga. L. 1977, p. 847, § 1; Ga. L. 1985, p. 283, § 1.)

24-10-94. Criminal or grand jury proceeding in this state — Issuance of certificate; presentation; tender of expenses; how long witness detained; punishment for failure to attend and testify.

(a) If a person in any state which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within its borders to attend and testify in criminal prosecutions, or grand jury investigations commenced or about to commence, in this state is a material witness in a prosecution pending in a court of record in this state or in a grand jury investigation which has commenced or is about to commence, a judge of such court may issue a certificate under the seal of the court stating these facts and specifying the number of days the witness will be required. The certificate may include a recommendation that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of this state to assure his attendance in this state. This certificate shall be presented to a judge of a court of record in the county in which the witness is found.

(b) If the witness is summoned to attend and testify in this state, he shall be tendered the sum of 12¢ a mile for each mile by the ordinarily traveled route to and from the court where the prosecution is pending and $25.00 for each day that he is required to travel and attend as a witness. A witness who has appeared in accordance with the provisions of the summons shall not be required to remain within this state for a longer period of time than the period mentioned in the certificate, unless otherwise ordered by the court. If such witness, after coming into this state, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he shall be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any witness who disobeys a summons issued from a court of record in this state. (Ga. L. 1976, p. 1366, § 5.)

As to out-of-state witnesses to whom the court's subpoena power is inapplicable, the decision whether to utilize the provisions of the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State is purely discretionary. Ealy v. State, 251 Ga. 426, 306 S.E.2d 275 (1983).

Unlocated witness. — Neither the Georgia nor the United States Constitution obligates the state to compel the attendance of witnesses who cannot be located within the state's jurisdiction. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to take the steps necessary to try to secure an alibi witness, after counsel made attempts to locate the witness, and based on the testimony of both of defendant's accomplices, and the evidence corroborating that testimony, it was unlikely that the trial would have been different had this alleged alibi witness been found, specially subpoenaed, and testified. Ziegler v. State, 270 Ga. App. 787, 608 S.E.2d 230 (2004), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 1019, 126 S. Ct. 656, 163 L. Ed. 2d 532 (2005).

Attendance of district attorney. — Assistant district attorney has both a right and a duty to attend a hearing and to represent the state's interest, as well as to question whether the party seeking the witness made a proper showing of necessity and materiality. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979).

Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for a ruling that the source code for the Intoxilyzer machine on which the defendant's breath was tested was evidence relevant to the defense because the motion was not in compliance with the Uniform Act to Secure Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State, O.C.G.A. § 24-10-90 et seq.; the defendant's motion sought a relevancy ruling solely to facilitate production of the source code from a corporation in the State of Kentucky, but there was nothing in the record showing that the defendant identified or sought to obtain testimony from a witness who had to be compelled to produce the evidence. *Yeary v. 24-10-97. Construction; applicability.

This article shall be so interpreted and construed as to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of the states which enact it and shall be applicable only to such states as shall enact reciprocal powers to this state relative to the matter of securing attendance of witnesses as provided in this article. (Ga. L. 1976, p. 1366, § 8; Ga. L. 2010, p. 878, § 24/HB 1387.)

The 2010 amendment, effective June 3, 2010, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted “such states” for “such state”.

DEPOSITIONS TO PRESERVE TESTIMONY IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Use, in federal criminal prosecution, of deposition of absent witness taken in foreign country, as affected by Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 15(b) and (d) requiring presence of accused and that deposition be taken in manner provided in civil actions, 105 ALR Fed. 537.

24-10-130. When deposition to preserve testimony in criminal proceedings may be taken; order of court.

(a)(1) At any time after a defendant has been charged with an offense against the laws of this state or an ordinance of any political subdivision or authority thereof, upon motion of the state or the defendant, the court having jurisdiction to try the offense charged may, after notice to the parties, order that the testimony of a prospective material witness of a party be taken by deposition and that any designated book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material not privileged be produced at the same time and place.

(2) At any time after a defendant has been charged with an offense of child molestation, aggravated child molestation, or physical or sexual abuse of a child, upon motion of the state or the defendant, the court having jurisdiction to try the offense charged may, after notice to the parties, order that the testimony of any physician whose testimony is relevant to such charge be taken by deposition and that any designated book, paper, document, record, recording, or other material not privileged be produced at the same time and place.

(b) The court shall not order the taking of the witness's testimony, except as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section, unless it appears to the satisfaction of the court that the testimony of the witness is material to the case and the witness:

(1) Is in imminent danger of death;

(2) Has been threatened with death or great bodily harm because of the witness's status as a potential witness in a criminal trial or proceeding;

(3) Is about to leave the state and there are reasonable grounds to believe that such witness will be unable to attend the trial;

(4) Is so sick or infirm as to afford reasonable grounds to believe that such witness will be unable to attend the trial; or

(5) Is being detained as a material witness and there are reasonable grounds to believe that the witness will flee if released from detention.

(c) A motion to take a deposition of a material witness, or a physician as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section, shall be verified and must state:

(1) The nature of the offense charged;

(2) The status of the criminal proceedings;

(3) The name of the witness and an address in Georgia where the witness may be contacted;

(4) That the testimony of the witness is material to the case or that the witness is a physician as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section; and

(5) The basis for taking the deposition as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section.

(d) A motion to take a deposition shall be filed in the court having jurisdiction to try the defendant for the offense charged; provided, however, if the defendant is charged with multiple offenses, only the court having jurisdiction to try the most serious charge against the defendant shall have jurisdiction to hear and decide the motion to take a deposition.

(e) The party moving the court for an order pursuant to this Code section shall give not less than one day's notice of the hearing to the opposite party. A copy of the motion shall be sent to the opposing party or his or her counsel by any means which will reasonably ensure timely delivery including transmission by facsimile or by digital or electronic means. A copy of the notice shall be attached to the motion and filed with the clerk of court.

(f) If the court is satisfied that the examination of the witness is authorized by law and necessary, the court shall enter an order setting a time period of not more than 30 days during which the deposition shall be taken.

(g) On motion of either party, the court may designate a judge who will be available to rule on any objections to the interrogation of the witness or before whom the deposition shall be taken. The judge so designated may be a judge of any court of this state who is otherwise qualified to preside over the trial of criminal cases in the court having jurisdiction over the offense charged. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Any technical violation of the notice provision of O.C.G.A. § 24-10-130 was harmless since defendant did in fact receive notice of the date, time, and place of the deposition and did not request a predeposition hearing on the propriety or necessity of taking a deposition. Burrell v. State, 258 Ga. 841, 376 S.E.2d 184 (1989).

Defendant's pretrial request to depose victims after the victims refused to talk with defense counsel was properly denied by the trial court. Evans v. State, 233 Ga. App. 85, 503 S.E.2d 344 (1998).

Introduction of material witness's sworn statement improper. — Because the state never filed a motion to take a material witness's deposition as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-10-130, the trial court never held a hearing, never found grounds for the deposition, and never ordered that the deposition be taken during a particular time period; therefore, defendant's conviction for financial transaction card fraud under O.C.G.A. § 16-9-33(a) was reversed and the case was remanded for a new trial. Evans v. State, 275 Ga. App. 621, 621 S.E.2d 584 (2005).

Victim's deposition properly taken. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing 80-year-old victim's deposition to be taken under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-130(b)(4) because the victim had a brain tumor, which predisposed the victim to dizziness and vertigo, and a generalized anxiety disorder, which sometimes caused the victim to suffer chest pains, shortness of breath, blurred vision, confusion, and loss of consciousness when the victim was exposed to unfamiliar or stressful public situations. Austin v. State, 275 Ga. App. 560, 621 S.E.2d 546 (2005).

Deposition of allegedly ineffective counsel. — When a habeas court found an inmate's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel was not procedurally barred, under O.C.G.A. § 9-14-48(d), for failing to raise the issue on direct appeal because the allegedly ineffective counsel could not, due to illness, attend a hearing held on remand during the inmate's direct appeal, and, thus, could not be cross-examined, this was error because, even if the claim was different enough from barred claims to fall within a defaulted-claim analysis, it overlooked the readily available legal remedy of a court order to obtain counsel's sworn testimony for use at the remand hearing, under O.C.G.A. § 24-10-130, so counsel's absence from the hearing did not establish cause for failure to raise the ineffective assistance claim. Schofield v. Meders, 280 Ga. 865, 632 S.E.2d 369 (2006), cert. denied, 127 S. Ct. 958, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 257, 166 L.Ed.2d 729 (2007).

24-10-131. Notice of deposition; presence of defendant at examination; effect of defendant's failure to appear; child witness.

(a) The party at whose instance a deposition is to be taken shall give to every party reasonable written notice of the time and place for taking the deposition. The notice shall state the name and address of each person to be examined.

(b) On motion of a party upon whom the notice is served, the court for cause shown may extend or shorten the time or change the place for taking the deposition.

(c) The officer having custody of a defendant shall be notified of the time and place set for the examination and shall, unless the defendant waives in writing the right to be present, produce the defendant at the examination and keep the defendant in the presence of the witness during the examination unless, after being warned by the judge that disruptive conduct will cause the defendant's removal from the place where the deposition is being taken, the defendant persists in conduct which would justify exclusion from that place.

(d) A defendant not in custody shall have the right to be present at the examination; but failure of the defendant, absent good cause shown, to appear, after notice and tender of expenses, shall constitute a waiver of that right and of any objection to the taking and use of the deposition based upon that right.

(e) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsections (c) and (d) of this Code section, if the witness is a child, the court may order that the deposition be taken in accordance with Code Section 17-8-55. (Code 1933, § 38-1301a, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 426, § 1; Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 6.)

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 1994, “24-10-131” was substituted for “124-10-131” as the designation for this Code section.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Interviews not depositions. — In a prosecution for child molestation, audio and videotapes of interviews with the victims were not depositions, and O.C.G.A. § 24-10-131 did not require that the state notify defendant before the interviews were conducted. Price v. State, 223 Ga. App. 185, 477 S.E.2d 353 (1996).

24-10-132. Appointment of counsel; payment of costs and expenses.

(a) If a defendant is financially unable to employ counsel, the court shall appoint counsel as provided in the uniform rules of the courts, unless the defendant elects to proceed without counsel.

(b) Whenever a deposition is taken at the instance of the state, the cost of any such deposition shall be paid by the state in the same manner as is provided by law for the payment of costs in the appellate courts.

(c) Depositions taken at the instance of a defendant shall be paid for by the defendant; provided, however, that, whenever a deposition is taken at the instance of a defendant who is eligible for the appointment of counsel as provided in the uniform rules of the courts, the court shall direct that the reasonable expenses for the taking of the deposition and of travel and subsistence of the defendant and the defendant's attorney, not to exceed the limits established pursuant to Article 2 of Chapter 7 of Title 45, for attendance at the examination be paid for out of the fine and forfeiture fund of the county where venue is laid. (Code 1933, § 38-1301a, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 426, § 1; Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 7.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, section is applicable to all cases docketed on § 13, not codified by the General Assembly, or after January 1, 1995. provides that the amendment to this Code

24-10-133. Manner of taking and filing deposition.

Except as provided in Code Section 24-10-137, a deposition shall be taken and filed in the manner provided in civil actions, provided that (1) in no event shall a deposition be taken of a party defendant without his or her consent and (2) the scope of examination and cross-examination shall be such as would be allowed in the trial itself. On request or waiver by the defendant, the court may direct that a deposition be taken on written interrogatories in the manner provided in civil actions. Such request shall constitute a waiver by the defendant of any objection to the taking and use of the deposition based upon its being so taken. If a judge has been designated to rule on objections or to preside over the deposition, objections to interrogation of the witness shall be made to and ruled on by such judge in the same manner as at the trial of a criminal case. (Code 1933, § 38-1301a, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 426, § 1; Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 8.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, section is applicable to all cases docketed on § 13, not codified by the General Assembly, or after January 1, 1995. provides that the amendment to this Code

24-10-134. Availability to defendant of deponent's previous statements.

The state shall make available to the defendant, for his examination and use at the taking of the deposition, any statement of the witness being deposed which is in the possession of the state and which the state would be required to make available to the defendant if the witness were testifying at the trial. (Code 1933, § 38-1301a, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 426, § 1.)

24-10-135. Admissibility and use of deposition.

At the trial or upon any hearing, a part or all of a deposition, so far as otherwise admissible under the rules of evidence, may be used if the witness is unavailable. Any deposition may also be used by any party for the purpose of contradicting or impeaching the testimony of the deponent as a witness. If only a part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require the offering of all of it which is relevant to the part offered and any party may offer other parts. A witness is not unavailable if the exemption, refusal to testify, claim of lack of memory, inability, or absence of such witness is due to the procurement or wrongdoing of the party offering the deposition at the hearing or trial for the purpose of preventing the witness from attending or testifying. (Code 1933, § 38-1301a, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 426, § 1; Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 9.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 13, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that the amendment to this Code section is applicable to all cases docketed on or after January 1, 1995.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Prosecuting attorney's agreement to cooperate with defense counsel in videotaping of a deposition did not constitute an agreement of stipulation that the deposition could be admitted at trial. Hullender v. State, 256 Ga. 86, 344 S.E.2d 207 (1986).

Victim's deposition at retrial. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in allowing a deposition of an 80-year-old victim, who had a brain tumor and a generalized anxiety disorder, to be offered in lieu of the victim's testimony at defendant's retrial because the trial court had overruled defendant's O.C.G.A. § 24-10-135 objection in defendant's first trial and stood on the court's earlier ruling in defendant's retrial; while it would have been better to make an explicit finding of unavailability in the retrial, the finding was implicit in the trial court's ruling and was authorized by the evidence. Austin v. State, 275 Ga. App. 560, 621 S.E.2d 546 (2005).

24-10-136. Objections to admission of deposition.

Objections to receiving in evidence a deposition or part thereof may be made as provided in civil actions. (Code 1933, § 38-1301a, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 426, § 1.)

24-10-137. Recordation of deposition.

(a) Any party shall have the right to require that the deposition be recorded and preserved by the use of audio-visual equipment in addition to a stenographic record. The audio-visual recording shall be transmitted to the clerk of the court which ordered the deposition and shall be made available for viewing and copying only to the prosecuting attorney and defendant's attorney prior to trial. An audio-visual recording made pursuant to this Code section shall not be available for inspection or copying by the public until such audio-visual recording has been admitted into evidence during a trial or hearing in the case in which such deposition is made.

(b) An audio-visual recording made pursuant to this Code section may be admissible at trial or hearing as an alternative to the stenographic record of the deposition.

(c) A stenographic record of the deposition contemplated in this Code section shall be made pursuant to Code Section 9-11-28. (Code 1933, § 38-1301a, enacted by Ga. L. 1980, p. 426, § 1; Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 10.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, section is applicable to all cases docketed on § 13, not codified by the General Assembly, or after January 1, 1995. provides that the amendment to this Code

24-10-138. Agreement of parties to deposition.

Nothing in this article shall preclude the taking of a deposition, orally or upon written questions, or the use of a deposition by agreement of the parties with the consent of the court. (Code 1981, § 24-10-138, enacted by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 11.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, section is applicable to all cases docketed on § 13, not codified by the General Assembly, or after January 1, 1995. provides that the amendment to this Code

24-10-139. Depositions taken only in exceptional circumstances; misuse of procedures.

It is the intent of the General Assembly that depositions shall be taken in criminal cases only in exceptional circumstances when it is in the interest of justice that the testimony of a prospective witness be taken and preserved for use at trial. If the court finds that any party or counsel for a party is using the procedures set forth in this article for the purpose of harassment or delay, such conduct may be punished as contempt of court. (Code 1981, § 24-10-139, enacted by Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, § 11.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 1994, p. 1895, section is applicable to all cases docketed on § 13, not codified by the General Assembly, or after January 1, 1995. provides that the amendment to this Code

24-10-150. When proceedings to perpetuate testimony may be had.

Superior courts may entertain proceedings for the perpetuation of testimony in all cases in which the fact to which the testimony relates cannot immediately be made the subject of investigation at law and in which, for any cause, the common-law proceeding authorized under this Code is not as available, or as completely available, as a proceeding in equity. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Discovery must be necessary. — For equity to take jurisdiction on the ground of discovery, it must appear that the discovery is necessary, not merely that discovery is desirable or may be useful or that the complainant can more satisfactorily prove the complainant's case with than without discovery. Lucas v. Neidlinger, 210 Ga. 557, 81 S.E.2d 825 (1954).

Pleading. — Pleadings must set forth facts which show either that the matter to which the testimony will apply can not be immediately investigated in a court of law; or if it can be so investigated, that the sole right of action belongs to the other party; or that the opposite party has interposed some impediment to an immediate trial of the suit, so that there is danger of a loss of the evidence before trial. Booker v. Booker, 20 Ga. 777 (1856).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Witness available. — When a witness is alive and capable of examination at the time of trial, the testimony can not be read. Booker v. Booker, 20 Ga. 777 (1856), compare, Howard v. Crawford, 15 Ga. 423 (1854).
